A seminar was conducted under the auspices of the Institute at 4-15 P.M. on Monday, the 20th April 1981 in Room No. 17, University Departmental Buildings, on "ARCHIVES AND HISTORY". The following is a report of the seminar.

Chairman: Dr. K. K. Pillay, M.A., D.Litt., D.Phil (Oxon), Director, Institute of Traditional Cultures.

Leader: Thiru S. Singarajan, M.A., M.Litt., Director of Archives.

The Chairman introduced the leader and called upon him to speak:

a. Documentary Evidence

Thiru S. Singarajan: It is generally said that "the action of a Statesman is anticipatory, the solution of a politician is temporary, the description of a poet is imaginary but the verdict of an historian is declaratory". It is the documentary evidence or reference to the record, whether Archival or non Archival which naturally offers the authenticity to their declaration.

Archival collections may be private or public; they serve as the richest source for documentation. It is well known that it is the temple records which had helped in the reconstruction of the history of South India in the ancient, mediaeval or modern period of Indian history to a large extent. The Work of Dr. K. K. Pillay on Suchindram temple stands as a model to bring out specifically Local history. It must be known that the elaborate description of the practice of "Kaimukke" reveals how chastity of women are safeguarded in the Indian Society. These materials are preserved only on the plea of historians to consult them and reproduce them as proof of their findings.

Thus, if the archival collections are preserved for centuries in every country today and not destroyed, it is primarily the historians who are responsible for it. It is worthwhile to mention that without proper documentation there cannot be any authentic history. No doubt, Archives serve the primary purpose of supplying evidence to Government during the period of their currency. But more important they supply the basic material for historical research.

The Indian Historical Records Commission of late has laid emphasis on records available with mutts, churches, mosques or temples and the private collections in the hands of freedom fighters and public men as one of the primary source materials and considered as a corrective to the public records in Government custody. They are complementary and at the same time offer corroborative evidence to the official version of history. Large collections of private papers are nowadays handed over to the National Archives of India. There are Regional Committees for Survey of Historical Records in every State, who list and publish the existence of private records in the National Register of Records. Tamil Nadu Archives have also acquired many valuable collections and listed records in private custody. We have the additional source of the contemporary and oral evidence furnished by statesmen, politicians, social reformers and freedom fighters, which are conveniently utilised by foreign researchers in their dissertations.

A study of the revolutions in Europe would tell us clearly that history is a record of struggle of humanity in the social, political, economic, industrial, agricultural, educational or scientific fields. It is a struggle for the realisation of the rights of the people; it is a struggle for the rights and liberties of the people; rights, whether they are public or private. The Magna Carta, 1215, the Petition of Rights, 1642, the Bill of Rights, 1688, the Declaration of Rights, 1776 by the colonies which formed the United States of America, the Declaration of Rights of Man in France, 1789, the Rights of the Working Class in Russia after the October Revolution of 1917, the Human rights in the United Nation's Charter, the Fundamental Rights enshrined in the Indian Constitution are some of the documents which would illustrate this. Revolutions themselves are exported from one country to another in the order stated above. After independence India is undergoing many silent revolutions as from 1909-1935 in every sphere of human activity and historians take a note of the emergence of the rights of the people involved. Centuries have passed by but the writings of Voltaire, Rousseau or Karl Marx still remain potent factors as their philosophies have been based on historical material.

b. The birth of Madras as the commercial capital of East India company

Tamil Nadu Archives is one of the richest store house of such historical information from 1649 when Francis, Day landed in Madras. The name Chennapattinam has been derived from Chennappa Naick, Raja of Chandragiri, an obscure successor of the Raja of Vijayanagar on whose behalf the Firman dt. 22nd July 1649 was granted to Francis Day. By this grant, English gained  $3\frac{1}{2}$  square miles of territory on the sandy beach on the Marina for £ 5000 of annual quit rent. But it is from this dreary waste that the English built up an Indian Empire. Madras was declared as the commercial capital of the East India Company for all its trade between Bantang and Java in the East upto Maritus in the Middle East. Before long it developed into the political capital of the East India Company. It must be remembered that Clive with 300 Sepoys proceeded to Bengal from Madras. By the beginning of the 19th century Britain has laid the foundation for a mighty empire in the East. an empire to supplement loss of America where its principles of colonisation underwent a great eclipse. Madras remained the intellectual capital of India, though the political capital of the country was shifted to Bengal and later to Delhi. Madras is on the Coramandel coast and the word Coramandel. according to historians refers either to Chozhamandalam or Korkaimandalam. The name Madras marred our vision. The English ruled over the country for more than 300 years,

c. Classification of the Pre-Mutiny Records in Tamil Nadu Archives.

The Pre-Mutiny records admit broadly the following classification:

1. Consultations, 1672, 2. General Letters 3. Country Correspondences, 1753-1829 4. Special Correspondence and Minutes 5. Special Consultations 6. Consultations and Correspondence connected with outstations 7. Negotiations with Foreign Powers and Treaties 8. Committees on Finance 9. Committees and Proceedings as regards individuals 10. Miscellaneous Letters 11. Reports 12. Journals and Narratives 1757 13. Political Intelligence 14. Law, Justice and Police 15. Records respecting establishments 16. Cowle Books, Registers of grants, Land Customs etc. 17. Returns 18. Memorials and Petitions 19. Covenants and Oaths 20. General Standing Orders 21. Gazettes and Newspapers.

The Consultations comprise a full record of the formal consultations of the President and Council at Madras from the year 1672. The early proceedings are in the nature of chronicles. At that time all the events of the colony, commercial, political and administrative were recorded in the same series, though in later years some of the miscellaneous matters came to be recorded separately. The general Letters are letters interchanged between the Government of Madras and the Board of Directors Those "to England" contain full information in England. respecting the affairs of this Presidency and those "from England" contain the instructions of the Board of Directors and its approval or non-approval of the Government Proceedings. They are invested with considerable interest, besides possessing high literary value. The ' Country Correspondence'' comprises the whole of the correspondence which passed between the Military and Political Departments with the native powers from 1753 to 1829 and its historical importance need not be dilated The special correspondence and minutes contain corresupon. pondence with the French. The relationship with the French, Surajood Dowla, Monichand, Mir Jaffar, Omichand, Muhammad Ali and others can be gleaned from them. These special correspondence include correspondence on wars with Tippu, Land Settlement of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, Poligar wars, Mysore and Maharatta affairs, Clive's defence of his administration, private debts of the carnatic Nawab and general administration of territories seized from the Dutch. Special consultations refer to special occurrences which are of historical value. Cession of the Northern Circars, Mr. Humphrey's deportation for having published revolutionary articles in the 'Herald of India' edited by him and his escape, collision between the Government and the Supreme Court, Madras Government Bank and expeditions and mutinies, correspondence connected with outstations and negotiations with foreign powers, need no description. 'Committees and Proceedings as regards individuals' throw light on corruption, indiscipline and mischief. The Miscellaneous letters contain letters of minor importance not recorded in the Consultation. The Reports contain information on troops, zamindaries, export, secrecy, botanical reports and the like. Journals and narratives are journals of Military Proceedings and other similar records and contain accounts of Revolution in Bengal (1757), narrative of voyages and an account on the Hindus. Political intelligence, Law, Justice and Police, Cowle Books, Registers of Grants, Land Customs, Memorials and Petitions, Covenants and oaths, General Standing Orders and Gazettes and Newspapers explain themselves.

d: Non Secretariat Records in Tamil Nadu Archives

Non-Secretariat Records are a good source. Materials: The records of the Board of Revenue, District Collectors, Mayor's Court, the Dutch Records, the Persian Records, the Danish Records, the Factory Records etc. are classified as non-Secretariat records. The records of the Board and the District Collectors give a mine of detailed information about the local conditions and the day to day administration of the district which are not obtainable among the Secretariat records. The records of the Mayor's court give valuable information on the early administration of judicial practices in Madras. The Dutch occupied Cochin and the Danish Tranquebar in the Madras Presidency. The records left by them contain good material for authentic history. The Persian records mirror the internal administration and the correspondence of the Nawab of the Carnatic during the eighteenth century and as such contain good source material. Among the books registered at the office of the Registrar of Books which are in about 17 languages, a mine of published information relating to history, sociology, religion, science and politics can be collected for those interested in any particular subject, besides providing material for the study of linguistics and the growth of contemporary literature.

e. A description of the Post Mutiny Records

The Post Mutiny Records are arranged in Departmental and chronological order. The records of each department contain information on as many subjects as the department had dealt with. It is difficult to indicate them in a short note. But the names of the Departments themselves under which the records are classed would give a broad idea of the subjects themselves.

This vast mine of information may be fully exploited by historians to bring to light the vicissitudes of fortunes of B-15

South India. The historians may work to make Tamil Nadu Archives a Research Centre to re-write the history of South East Asia and the Far East Asia as well. The Institute of Traditional Culture may rise to the occasion to offer a number of fellowships to researchers to bring out our tradition and preserve our culture in the light of the archival material available in Tamil Nadu Archives.

In conclusion, the Chairman thanked the leader and other participants for their interesting speeches.
