PREFACE

The Library of the National Archives of India has in its custody some of the very rare collections of publications viz., Fort William College Collection, Confidential Publications, Proscribed Publications. The last collection comprises publications in prose and verse as also pamphlets and posters. These books were banned by the British Raj which judged them 'dangerous' to the 'security' of the country.

Four major collections of such proscribed material are preserved, two each in U.K. and India. In England a collection each is found in the India Office Library and the British Museum, while in India one is found in the Home (Political) Proceedings housed in the National Archives of India and another, in the Library of the National Archives of India.

The material in the National Archives of India has remained almost untapped by scholars with the exception of Dr. N. Gerald Barrier, who brought out in 1976 his Banned Controversial Literature and Political Control in British India 1907—1947 but its canvass is limited to North India and its coverage is confined to books in English, Hindi, Urdu, Punjabi.

II

Potentially serious alliance between the Indian revolutionaries and Pan-Islamists with Germany during the First World War as also the confrontations with Mahatma Gandhi during the Khilafat and Non-cooperation Movements unnerved the Raj which not only resorted to repressive legislation but also developed strategies to contain the movements. The world Economic Crisis of 1929 hit hard the Indian economy and as a consequence intensified social tensions. Finding the time appropriate the extreme nationalists succeeded in unfurling the flag of Purna Swaraj on 31st December, 1929 at the Lahore Session of the Congress presided over by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. Bullet and bomb became the cult of the revolutionaries. Bhagat Singh, Sukhdev and Rajguru were executed. In order to give vent to the pent up feelings of the people, Mahatma Gandhi dramatically launched the Salt Satyagraha and Civil Disobedience Movements which after his arrest went underground resulting in the armed uprising against the Raj at Peshawar, Chittagong and Sholapur. Support to the Congress had spread more quickly than anyone could imagine. Boycott and street demonstration became common. What worried the Raj more was the inflammatory writings circulating freely in many parts of India. Dozens of publishing houses specializing in anti-British Propaganda sprang up.

III

The contents of these writings unnerved the Raj because their authors' clothed attacks in historical garb so as to evade existing legal constraints. Numerous poems eulogized Bal Gangadhar Tilak, Motilal Nehru, Mahatma Gandhi, Bhagat Singh, Rajguru, Sukhdev, Jawaharlal Nehru, Rajagopalachari, and others. Moreover, Socialist and Communist writings increased manifold. The writers produced a barrage of tracts inciting workers and peasants. The Raj responded to these challenges by censorship, security demands and proscription of inflammatory literature, both in prose and poetry.

IV

The present volume contains patriotic poetry written in almost all the Indian languages and published from different parts of the country. They span about three decades of the most militant phase of our freedom struggle commencing from Jallianwala Bagh tragedy in 1919, and culminating in the Quit India Movement of 1942. The language-wise break up of the poetry is detailed hereunder :—
