

THE · ADVENTURES

RODERIC RANDOM

We depart for Europe—a mifunder/tanding arifes between the captain and furgeon, through the fcandalous afperfions of Crampley—the captain dies—Crampley tyrannifes over the furgeon, who falls a within to his cruelty. —I am alfo ill-ujed—the fibip firikes—the behaviour of Crampley, and the feamen on that occafion—I get on flore, challenge the captain to fingle combat—am treacheroufly knocked down, wounded and robbed.

NOW that I could return to my native country in a creditable way, I felt exceflive pleasure in finding myfelf out of fight of that fatal ifland, which has been the grave of io many Europeans; and as I was accommodated with every thing to render the paffage agreeable, I refolved to enjoy myielf as much as the infolence of Crampley would permit .- This infid ous flanderer had found means already to caufe a mifunderstanding between the furgeon and captain, who by his age and infirmities was rendered intolerably peevifh, his difpofition having also been foured by a long course of difanpointments. He had a particular aversion to all young men, efpecially to furgeons, whom he confidered as unneceffary animals on board of a fhip; and in confequence of these fentiments, never confulted the doctor, notwithstanding his being feized with a violent fit of the gout and gravel; but applied to a cafk of Holland gin, which was his fovereign prefcription against all diftempers : Whether he was at this time too fparing, or took an over dofe of his cordial, certain it is, he departed in the night, without any ceremony, which indeed was a thing he always defpifed, and was found fliff, next morning, to the no fmall fatisfaction of Crampley, who receeded to the command of the veficl. For that very reatin Mr. Tombins and I had not aufe to rejoice at this event.

event, fearing that the tyranny of our new commander would now be as unlimited as his power .- The first day of his command justified our apprehension : For on pretence that the decks were too much crowded, he ordered the Turgeon's hen-coops, with all his fowls to be thrown overboard : and at the fame time prohibited him and me from appearing on the quarter-deck. Mr. Tomlins could not help complaining of thefe injuries, and in the courfe of his expoftulation dropped fome hafty words, of which Crampley taking hold, confined him to his cabin, where, in few days, for want of air, he was attacked by a fever, which foon put an end to his life, after he had made his will, by which he bequeathed all his eftate, perfonal and real, to his fifter; and left to me his watch and inftruments as memorials of his friendfhip .- I was penetrated with grief on this melancholy occafion ; the more becaufe there was nobody on board, to whom I could communicate my forrows, or of whom I could receive the leaft confolation or advice.----Crampley was to far from difcovering the leaft remorfe for his barbarity, at the news of the furgeon's death, that he infulted his memory in the most abusive manner, and affirmed he had poiloned himfelf out of pure fear, dreading to be brought to a court-martial for mutiny; for which reason, he would not fusfer the fervice of the dead to be read over his body, before it was thrown over-board.

Nothing but a fpeedy deliverance could have fupported me under the brutal iway of this bafnaw, who, to render my life the more irkfome, fignified to my mefsmates, a defire that I fhould be expelled from their fociety.—This was no fooner hinted, than they granted his requeft; and I was fain to eat in a folitary manner by myfelf during the reft of the paffage, which, however foon drew to a period.

We had been feven weeks at fea, when the gunner told the captain, that by his reckoning we muft be in foundings, and defired he would order the lead to be heaved.—Crampley fwore, he did ont know how the

keep

keep the flup's way, for we were not within a hundred leagues of foundings, and therefore he would not give himfelf the trouble to caft the lead.-ficcordingly we continued our courfe all that afternoon and night, without fhortening fail, although the gunner pretended to difcover Scilly light; and next morning protested in form against the captain's conduct; for which conduct he was put in confinement .- We difcovered no land all that day, and Crampley was still fo infatuated as to neglect founding; but at three o'clock in the morning, the fhip ftruck, and remained fast on a fand-bank. This accident alarmed the whole crew : the boat was immediately hoifted out, but as we could not difcern which way the fhore lay, we were obliged to wait -for day-light. In the mean time, the wind encreafed, and the waves beat against the floop with fuch violence, that we expected the would have gone to pieces. The gunner was releafed and confulted : He advifed the captain to cut away the maft, in order to lighten her; this expedient was performed without fuccefs: the failors leeing things in a defperate fituation, according to cuftom, broke up the chefts belonging to the officers, dreffed themfelves in their clothes, drank their liquors without ceremony; and drunkennefs, tumult and confution enfued .- In the midft of this uproar, I went below to fecure my own effects ; and found the carpenter's mate hewing down the purfer's cabin with his hatchet, whiftling all the while with great compositive. When I asked his intention in fo doing, he replied very calmily, " I only want to tafte the purfer's rum, that's all, mafter."-At that inftant the purfer coming down, and feeing his effects going to wreck, complained bitterly of the injuffice done to him, and afked the fellow, what occasion he had for liquor, when, in all likelihood, he fhould be in eternity in a few minutes. " All's one for that (iaid the plunderer) let us live while we can." -" Miferable wretch that thou art, (cried the purfer) what must be thy lot in the other world, if thou dieft in the commission of rabbery?"-" Why hell, I fuppole

6

pofe," replied the other, with great deliberation; while the purfer fell on his knees, and begged of heaven that we might not all perifh for the fake of one Jonas .- During this dialogue, I cloathed myfelf in my best apparel, girded on my hanger, fluck my piftols loaded in my belt, difpofed of all my valuable moveables about my perfon, and came upon deck with a refolution of taking the first opportunity to get on shore, which when the day broke, appeared at the diffance of three miles a-head .- Crampley, finding his efforts to get the fhip off ineffectual, determined to confult his own fafety, by going into the boat, which he had no fooner done, than the fhip's company followed fo fait, that the would have funk along fide, had not fome one wiler than the reft, cut the rope and put off .- But before this happened, I had made leveral attempts to get in, and was always baulked by the captain, who was fo eager in excluding me, that he did not mind the endeavours of any other body .- Enraged at this inhuman partiality, and feeing the rope cut, I pulled one of my piftols from my belt, and cocking it, fwore I would fhoot any man who fhould prefume to obstruct my entrance. So faying, I leaped with my full exertion, and got on board of the boat with the lofs of the fkin of my Thins .- I chanced in my defcent to overturn Crampley, who no fooner got up than he ftruck at me feveral times with a cutlafs, and ordered the men to throw me over-board; but they were too anxious about their own fafety to mind what he faid .- Though the boat was very deeply loaded, and the fea terribly high, we made fhift to get upon dry land in lefs than an hour after we parted from the floop.-As foon as I fet foot on terra firma, my indignation, which had boiled to long within me, broke out against Crampley, whom I immediately challenged to fingle combat, prefenting my piftols that he might take his choice : He took one without hefitation, ind, before I could cock the other, fired in my face, throwing the piftol after the flot :- I felt myfelf flunned and, imagining the bullet hadeentered my brain, flifcharged charged mine as quick as poffible, that I might not die unrevenged : then, flying upon my antagonist, knocked out feveral of his fore teeth with the out end of the piece, and would certainly have made an end of him with that inftrument, had he not diffengaged himfelf, and feized his cutlafs which he had given to his fervant, when he received the piftol. Seeing him armed in this manner, I drew my hanger, and, having flung my piftol at his head, clofed with him in a transport of fury, and thruft my weapon into his mouth which enlarged it on one fide to his ear .- Whether the fmart of this wound difconcerted him, or the unevennels of the ground made him reel, I know not; but he ftaggered fome paces back : I followed clofe, and with one ftroke cut the tendons on the back of his hand, upon which the cutlats dropped, and he remained defencelefs .- I know not with what cruelty my rage might have inspired me, if I had not at that inftant been felled to the ground by a blow on the back part of my head, which deprived me of all fenfation .- In this deplorable fituation, exposed to the rage of an incensed barbarian, and rapine of an inhuman crew, I remained for fome time; and whether any difputes arole among them, during the fate of my annihilation, I cannot pretend to determine; but in one particular they feem to have been unanimous and acted with equal dexterity and difpatch; for, when-I recovered the use of understanding, I found myself alone in a defolate place, ftript of my clothes, money, watch, buckles, and every thing but my fhoes, flockings, breeches and thirt .- What a diffeovery muft this have been to me, who, but an hour before, was worth fixty guineas in each ! I curfed the hour of my birth, the parents that gave me being, the fea that did not fwallow me up, the poniard of the enemy, which could not find the way to my heart, the villainy of those who had left me in that milerable condition; and, in the extacy of defpair, refolved to lie ftill where I was and perifh.

CHAP.

THE ADVENTURES. OF C H A P. II.

8

I get up, and creatinto a barn, where I am in danger of peri/bing through the fear of the country people-their indumanity-I am fuccoured by a reputed witch-ber flory-ber advice-be recommends me as a valet to a large leady, autofe character fle explains

RUT as I lay ruminating, my paffion infenfibly abated; I confidered my fituation in quite another light from that in which it appeared to me at first, and the refult of my deliberation, was to rife if I could, and crawl to the next inhabited place for affiftance .- With fome difficulty I got upon my legs, and, having examined my body, found I had received no other injury than two large contused wounds, one on the fore, and another on the hinder part of my head, which feemed to be occafioned by the fame weapon : namely, the but end of a piftel. I looked towards the fea, but could differn no remains of the fhip ; fo that I concluded the was gone to pieces, and that those who remained in her, had periffied : But, as I afterwards learned, the gunner, who had more fagacity than Crampley, obferving that it was flood when he left her, and that fhe would probably float at high water, made no noise about getting on thore, but continued on deck, in hopes of bringing her fafe into fome harbour, after the commander fhould have deferted her, for which piece of fervice he expected, no doubt, to be handfomely rewarded. This icheme he accordingly executed, and was promifed great things by the admiralty for faving his Majelty's fhip; but I never heard he reaped the fruits of his expectation .- As for my own part, I directed my courie towards a finall cottage I perceived, and in the road picked up, a feaman's old jacket, which I iuppole the thief who dreffed himfelf in my clothes had thrown away ; this was a very comfortable acquisition to me, who was almost stiff with cold : I therefore put it on, and as my natural heat re vived, my wounds, which had left off bleeding, burft out airefh : fo that finding myfelf exceffively exhaufted, I was about to lie down in the fields, when I difcovered a barn

a barn on my left hand, within a few yards of me : thither I made thift to ftagger, and, finding the door open, went in, but faw nobody; however, threw myfelf upon a trufs of ftraw, hoping to be toon relieved by fome perfon or other .- I had not lain here many minutes, when I faw a countryman coming in with a pitchfork in his hand, which he was on the point of thruling into the firaw that concealed me, and in all probability, would have done my bufinefs, had I not uttered a dreadfal groan, after having effayed in vain to fpeak .--This melancholy note alarmed the clown, who frarted back, and, difcovering a body all befmeared with blocd. food trembling, with the pitch-fork extended before nim, his hair briftling up, his eyes ftaring, his nofbrils dilated, and his mouth wide open .- At another time I fhould have been much diverted by this figure, which which time I made many unfuccefsful efforts to implore his compafiion and affiftance ; but my tongue failed me, and my language was only a repetition of groans : at length an old man arrived, who, leeing the other in fuch a pofture, cried, " Mercy upon un! the lead's bewitched ;--why Dick, beeft thou befayd chyfelf !"-Dick, without moving his eyes from the object that terrified him; replied, "O vather! vather! here be either the devil or a dead mon : I doan't know which on'un, but a groans woundily."-The father, whole eye fight was none of the beft, pulled out his fpectacles, and, having applied them to his note, reconnoitered me over his fon's thoulder: But no fooner did he behold me, than he was feized with a fit of fhaking, even more violent than Dick's, and with a broken accent addreffed me thus : " In the name of the Vather, Zun, and Holy Ghoft, I charge you an you been Satan to be gone to the Red Zea; but an you be a moodered mon, fpeak, that you may have Christom burial."-As I was not in a condition to fatisfy him in this particular, he repeated his conjuration to no purpole; and they continued a good while in the agomes of feat.-At length the fa-VCL. II. 18.

IO

ther proposed that the fon should draw nearer, and take a more diffinct view of the apparition; but Dick was of opinion that his father fhould advance firft, as being an old man paft his labour, and, if he received any mifchief, the lofs would be the finaller ; whereas he himfelf might efcape and be useful in his generation .- This prudential reason had 'no effect upon the fenior, who ftill kept Dick between me and him .- In the mean time I endeavoured to raife one han s a fignal of diffrefs, but had only firength fufficie to produce a ruitling among the firaw, which difcom, sfed the young peafant fo much, that he f rung out at the door, and overthrew his father in his flight .- The old gentleman would not fpend time in getting up, but crawled backwards like a crab, with great speed, till he had got over the threshold, mumbling exorcifins all the way .-- I was exceedingly mortified to find myfelf in danger of perifking through the ignorance and cowardice of these clowns : and felt my fpirits decay apace, when an old woman entered the barn, followed by the two fugitives, and with great intrepidity advanced to the place where I lay, faying, if it be the devil I fearen not, and for a dead mon, a can do us no harm."-When the faw my condition, the cried, " Here be no devil, but in your fool's head .--Here be a poor miferable wretch, bleeding to death, and if a dies, we must be at the charge of burying him; therefore, Dick, go wetch the old wheel-barrow, and puten in, and carry en to Goodman Hodge's back-door, he is more eable than we to lay out money upon poor vagrants."-Her advice was taken, and immediately put in execution : I was rolled to the other farmer's door, where I was tumbled out like a heap of dung; and would certainly have fallen a prey to the hogs, if my groans had not diffurbed the family, and brought fome of them out to view my fituation. But Hodge refem bled the Jew more than the good Samaritan, and ordered me to be carried to the house of the parson, whose bufinefs it was to practile as well as to preach charity : Observing, that it was fulficient for him to pay his quota towards the maintenance of the poor belonging to his own parifh .- When I was let down at the vicar's gate, he fell into a mighty paffion, and threatened to excommunicate him who fent, as well as the who brought me, unlefs they would move me immediately to another place .- About this time I fainted with the fatigue I had undergone, and afterwards underflood that I was bandied from door to loor through a whole village, nobody having humani Enough to administer the leaft relief to me, until and woman, who was fufpected of witchcraft by the neighbourhood, hearing of my diffrefs, received me into her house, and, having dreffed my wounds, brought me to mylelf with cordials of her own preparing .- I was treated with great care and tendernels by this grave matron, who, after I had recovered fome frrength, defired to know the particulars of my laft This piece of farisfaction I could not refule to one who had faved my life, therefore related all my adventures without exageration or referve .- She feemed furprifed at the viciffitudes I had undergone, and drew a happy prefage of my future life from my paft fufferings, then launched out into the praife of advertity with with fo much ardour and good fense, that I concluded the was a perfon who had feen better days, and conceived a longing defire to hear her flory .- She perceived my drift by fome words I dropped, and, finiling told me, there was nothing either entertaining or extraordinary in the · course of her fortune; but, however, the would communicate to me, in confideration of the confidence I had reposed in her .- " It is of little confidence, (fhe faid) to tell the names of my parents, who are dead many years ago : Let it fuffice to affure you, they were wealthy, and had no other child than me; fo that I was looked upon as heirefs to a confiderable effate, and teized with addreffes on that account. Among the number of my admirers, there was a young gentleman of no fortune, whole fole dependance was on his pronotion in the army, in which, at that time, he bore a lieutenant's commission .- I correived an affection for amiable officer, which in a fhort time encreafed to a violent paffion, and without entering into minute circumfrances, merried him privately .- We had not enjoyed one another long in stolen interviews, when he was ordered with his regiment to Flanders ; but, before he fet out, it was agreed between us, that he should declare our marriage to my father by letter, and implore his pardon for the ftep we had taken without his approbation .- This difcovery was m te while I was abroad vifiting, and just as I was about to return home, I received a letter from my father, importing, that fince I had acted fo undutifully and meanly as to marry a beggar, without his privity or confent, to the difgrace of his family, as well as the diappointment of his hopes, he renounced me to the miferable fate I had entailed upon myfelf, and charged me never to fet foot within his doors again .- This rigid fentence was confirmed by my mother, who, in a politicript, gave me to understand, that her fentiments were exactly conformable to those of my father, and that I might fave myfelf the trouble of making any applications, for her refolutions were unalterable .- Thunderfruck with my evil fortune, I called a coach, and drove to my hufband's lodgings, where I found him waiting the event of his letter .--- Though he could eafily divine by my looks the iffue of his declaration, he read with great iteadiness the epiftle I had received; and with a finile full of tendernets, which I shall never forget, embraced me, faying, I believe the good lady, your mother, might have spared herfelf the trouble of the last part of her postfcript .- Well, my dear Betty, you must lay afide all thoughts of a coach, till I can procure the command of a regiment .- This unconcerned behaviour, while it enabled me to fupport my reverse of fortune, at the fame time endeared him to me the more, by convincing me of his difinterefted views in efpousing me .- I was next day boarded in company with the wife of another officer, who had long been the friend and confident of my hufband, at a village not far from London, wherea they parted from us in the most melting melting manner, went to Flanders, and were killed in fight of one another, at the battle of the Wood .- Why fould I tire you with a defcription of our unutterable forrow at the fatal news of this event, the remembrance of which now fills my aged eyes with terrs !-- When our grief fulfiled a little, and reflection came to our aid, we found ourfelves deferted by the whole world, and in danger of perifhing by want : Whereupon we made application for the penfi a, and were put upon the lift. Then yowing eternal friendship, fold our jewels and inputfluous clothes, retired to this place (which is the county of Suffex) bought this little house, where we lived many years in a folitary manner, indulging our mutual forrow, till it pleafed heaven to call away my compa-nion two years ago, fince which time I have lingered out an unhappy being, in hopes of a fpeedy diffolution, when I promise myfelf the eternal reward of all my cares .- In the mean time I must inform you of the character I bear among the neighbours :- My converfation being different from that of the inhabitants of the village, my recluie way of life, my fkill in curing diftempers, which I acquired from books fince I fettled here, and laftly, my age, have made the common people look upon me as fomething preternatural; and I am actually at this hour believed to be a witch. The parfon of the parish, whole acquaintance I have not been at much pains to cultivate, taking umbrage at my fuppoled difrespect, has contributed not a little towards the confirmation of this opinion, by dropping certain hints to my prejutice among the vulgar, who are alfo very much fcandalized at my entertaining this poor tabby cat with the collar about her neck, which was a favourite of my deceased companion."

quota

II

The whole behaviour of this venerable perfon was fo primitive, innocent, fentible, and humane, that I contracted a filial refpect for her, and begged her advice with regard to my future conduct, as foon as I was in a condition to act for myfelf .- She diffuaded me from a defign I had formed of travelling to London, in hopes of 8 3

13

74 retrieving my clothes and pay, by returning to my thip, which by this time, I read in the news-papers, was fafely arrived in the river Thames : " Becaufe (faid fhe) youerun the hazard of being treated not only as a deferter, in quitting the floop, but allo as a mutineer, in affaulting your commanding officer, to the malice of whofe revenge you will moreover be exposed."-She then promifed to recommend me as a fervant to a fingle lady of her acquaintance, who lived in the neighbourhood with her nephew, who was a young fox-hunter of great fortune, where I might be very happy, provided I could bear the difpolition and manners of my miltrefs, which were fomewhat whimfical and particular .- But above all things, the counfelled me to conceal my ftory, the knowledge of which would effectually poilon my entertainment; for it was a maxim amongle most people of condition, that no gentleman in diffress ought to be admitted into a family, as a domeffic, left he become proud, lazy, and infolent .- I was fain to embrace this humble propofal, becaufe my affairs were desperate, and in a few days was hired by this lady, to ferve in quality of her footman: having been represented by my hofters as a young man who was bred up to the fea by his relations against his will, and had fuffered shipwreck, which had encreated his difguft to that way of life io much, that he rather chofe to go to fervice on fhere, than enter himfelf on board of any other fhip .- Before I took poifeffion of my place, the gave me a fletch of my miltreis's character, that I might know better how to regulate my conduct. " Your lady (faid fhe) is a maiden of forty years, not fo remarkable for her beauty as her learning and tafte, which is famous all over the country : -Indeed fhe is a periect female virtuefo, and to eager after the purfuit of knowledge, that the neglests her perion even to a degree of fluttifhnefs; this negligence, together with her contempt of the male part of the creation, gives her nephew no great concern, as by thefe means, he will probably keep her fortune, which is confiderable, in the family. He therefore permits her to live in her own way, which is fomething extraordinary, and gratifies her in all her whimfical defires. Her apartment is at fome diftance from the other inhabited parts of the house; and confift of a dining-rock, bed-chamber, and fludy. She keeps a cook-maid, waiting-woman, and footman of her own, and feldom eats or converses with any of her family but her niece, who is a very lovely creature, and humours her aunt often to the prejudice of her own health, by fetting up with her whole nights together; for your miftrefs is too much of a philofopher to be fwayed by the cuftoms of the world, and never fleeps or eats like other people .- Among other odd notions, fhe profeffes the principles of Reficrucius, and believes the earth, air, and fea, are inhabited by invisible beings, with whom it is possible for the human fpecies to entertain correspondence and intimacy on the eafy condition of living chafte .- As the hopes one day to be admitted into an acquaintance of this kind, the no fooner heard of me and my cat, than the paid me a vilit, with a view, as fhe fince cwned, to be introduced to my familiar; and was greatly mortified to find herfelf difappointed in her expectation. Being, by this vilionary turn of mind, abstracted as it were from the world, she cannot advert to the common occurrences of life; and therefore is frequently to abfent as to commit very firange miltakes and extravagancies, which you will do well to rectify and repair, as your prudence shall fuggest."

CHAP. III.

My reception by that lady—I become enamouned of Narciffarecount the particulars of my last misfortune—acquire the good opinion of my miltrefs—an account of the young fjurre—I am made acquainted with more particulars of Narciffa's futuation—conceive a mortal hatred againfa Sir Timothy—examine my lady's library and performances—her extravorgant behaviour.

FRAUGH F with these useful infructions, I repaired to the place of her habitation, and was introduced by the wairing-woman to the preferce of my lady, who had not before feen me., She fat in her fludy, with one foot foot on the ground, and the other upon a high flool at fome diffance from her feat : her fandy locks hung down in a diforder cannot call beautiful, from her head, which was deplived of its coif, for the benefit of icratching with one hand, while the held the flump of a pen in the other. Her forehead was high and wrinkled; her eyes were large, grey, and prominent; her note was long, fharp, and aquiline; her mouth of vaft capacity; her vifage meagre and freckled, and her chin peeked like a flioe-maker's paring-knife; her upper lip contained a large quantity of plain Spanish, which, by continual falling, had embroidered her neck, that was not naturally very white, and the breaft of her gown, that flowed loofe about her with a negligence truly poetic, difcovering linen that was very fine, and, to'all appearance, never washed but in Caftalian freams .- Around her lay heaps of books, globes, quadrants, telescopes, and other learned apparatus. Her inuff-box itood at her right hand, at her left-hand lay her handkerchief fufficiently ufed, and a convenience to fpit in, appeared on one fide of her chair .- She being in a reverie when we entered, the maid did not think proper to diffurb her: fo that we waited fome minutes unobferved, during which time fhe bit the quill feveral times, altered her position, made many wry faces, and at length, with an air of triumph, repeated aloud :

16

" Nor dare th' immortal gods wy rage oppofe."

Having committed her fuccefs to paper, the turned to wards the door, and, perceiving us, cried, "What's the matter?"—"Here's the young man (replied my conductreis) whom Mrs. Sagely recommended as a footman to your ladythip." On this information the flared in my face a conliderable time, and then afked my name, which I thought proper to conceal under that of John Brown.—After having furveyed me with a curious eve, the broke out into "O! ay, thou waft thipwreek'd, I gemember.—Whether didft thou come on the back back of a whale or a dolphin?"---- To this I answered, I had fwam afhore without any affiftance. - Then the demanded to know if I had ever been at the Hellefpont, and swain from Seftos to Abydos. I replied in the negative. Upon which, fhe bade the maid order a fuit of new livery for me, and instruct me in the articles of my duty: fo faying, the fpit in her fhuff-box, and wiped her note with her cap, which lay on the table, inftead of an handkerchief. We returned to the kitchen, where I was regaled by the maids, who feemed to vie with each other, in expressing their regard for me: and from them I underitood that my bufinefs confifted in cleaning knives and forks, laying the cloth, waiting at table, carrying meffages, and attending my lady when the went abroad. There was a good fuit of livery in the house, which had belonged to my predeceffor deceafed, and fitted me exactly; fo that there was no occasion for employing a tailor on my account .-- I had not long been equipped in this manner, when my lady's bell rung; upon which, I ran up ftairs, and found her ftalking about the room in her thift and under-petticoat only. I would have immediately retired as became me, but fhe bid me come in, and air a clean fhift for her; which operation I having performed with fome backwardnefs, the put it on before me without any ceremony, and I verily believe was ignorant of my fex all that time, as being quite abforbed in contemplation .- About four o'clock in the afternoon, I was ordered to lay the cloth, and place two covers, which I underflood were for my miffrefs and her niece, whom I had not as yet feen. Though I was not very dextrous at this work, I performed it pretty well for a beginner: and when dinner was upon the table, faw my miftrefs approach, accompanied by the young lady, whole name for the prefent shall be Narcista .- So much fweetnels appeared in the countenance and carriage of this 118 amiable apparition, that my heart was captivated at first fight, at d, while dinner lafted, I gazed upon her without intermiflion .- Her age feemed to be feventeen, her ftahe ture tall, her fhape unexceptionable; her hair, that fell down upon her ivory neck in ringlets, black as jet: her arched eye-brows of the fame colour ; her eyes piercing, yet tender; her lips of the confiftence and hue of cherries; her complexion clear, delicate, and healthy; her afpect nobie, ingenuous, and humane; and the whole perfon to ravishingly delightful, that it was impossible for any creature, endued with fenfibility, to fee without admiring, and admire without loving her to excels! Thegan to curfe the fervile flation that placed me fo far beneath the regard of this idol of my adoration ! and yet1 bleffed my fate, that enabled me to enjoy daily the isglit of to much periestion! When the ipoke, I liftened with pleafure; but when the fpoke to me, my foul was thrilled with an extafy of tumultuous jog 1 I was even to happy as to be the fubject of their conversation. For Narcilla having observed me, faid to her aunt, " I fee your new footman is come." Then addreffing herielf to me, afked with ineffable complacency, if I was the perfor who had been to cruelly used by robbers ? When I iatisfied her in this, the expressed a defire of knowing the other particulars of my fortune both before and fince my being fhipwreck'd. Hereupon (as Mrs. Sagely had counfelled me) I told her that I had been bound apprentic to the mafter of a thip, contrary to my inclination, which fhip had foundered at fea ;- that I and four more, wh chanced to be on deck when the went down, made this to fwim to the fhore, when my companions, after har ing overpowered me, fiript me to the fhirt, and left me as they imagined, dead of the wounds I received in m own defence. Then I related the circumfrances of m being found in a barn, with the inhuman treatment met with from the country people and parion; the de fcription of which, I perceived, drew tears from the charming creature's eyes ?- When I had finished my r cital, my mistreis faid, " Ma foy! le garcon eff bie fait !" To which opinion Narcuffa affented, with compliment to my understanding in the same language that flattered my vanity extremely.

17

78

The convertation, among other Rubjects, turned up · the

the young fquire, whom my lady enquired after, under the title of the Savage; and was informed by her niece, that he was still in bed, repairing the fatigue of last night's debauch, and recruiting firength and tpivits to undergo a fox-chace tomorrow morning, in company with Sir Timothy Thicket, Squire Bumper, and a great many other centlemen of the lame framp, whom he had invited on that occasion; to that by day-break, the whole house would be in an uproar .- This was a very difagreeable piece of news to the wirtuojo, who protested the would fruff her ears with cotton when the went to bed, and take a dofe of opium to make her fleep the more found, that fhe might not be diffurbed and diftracted by the clamour of the buites.

When their dinner was over, I and my fellow-fervants fet down to ours in the kitchen, where I underfood that Sir Timothy Thicket was a wealing knight in the neighbourhood, between whom and Narciffa a match had been projected by her brother, who promifed at the fame time to effouse Sir Timothy's fifter; by which means, as their fortunes were pretty equal, the young ladies would be provided for, and their brothers be never the poorer : but that the ladies did not concur m the scheme, each of them entertaining a hearty contempt for the perfon allotted to her for a huiband, by this agreement .- This information begat in me a mortal averfion to Sir Timothy, whom I looked upon as my rival, and curfed in my heart for his prefumption .---Next morning by day-break, being awakened by the noife of the hunters and hounds, I role to view the ca-IN valcade, and had a light of my competitor, whole accomnt . de pliffiments (the effate excluded) did not feen brilliant, a the enough to give me much uncafinels with respect to Nary re chia, who, I flattered myfeif, was not to be won by qualihis fications as he was mafter of, either as to perion or ich amind .- My millrefs, notwithstanding her precaution, uage was fo much diffurbed by her nephew's company, that the did not rife till five o'clock in the afternoon ; So that upol had an opportunity of examining her fludy at leilure,

m

ny

ict

who

TOT

20 to which examination I was strongly prompted by my curiofity .--- Hare I found a thousand scraps of her own poetry, confifting of three, four, ten, twelve, and twenty lines, on an infinity of fubjects, which, as whim infpired, the had begun, without constancy or capacity to But what was bring to any degree of composition. very extraordinary in a female poet, there was not the leaft mention made of love in any of her performances. I counted fragments of five tragedies, the titles of which were, " The Stern Philosopher .- The Double Murder .- The Sacrilegious Traitor .- The Fall of Lucifer ;--- and the Laft Day." From whence I gathered that her disposition was gloomy, and her imagination delighted with objects of horror .- Her library was compofed of the best English historians, poets, and philolophers; of all the French critics and poets, and of a few books in Italian, chiefly poetry, at the head of which were Taffo and Ariofto, pretty much uled. Belides thefe, translations of the claffics into French, but not one book in Greek or Latin; a circumfrance that difcovered her ignorance in thefe languages .- After having taken a full view of this collection, I retired, and at the usual time was preparing to lay the cloth, when I was told by the maid that her miftrefs was still in bed, and had been fo affected with the notes of the hounds in the morning, that the actually believed herfelf a hare befet by the hunters; and begged a few greens to munch for breakfaft.-When I expressed my surprise at this unaccountable imagination, fhe gave me to understand, that her lady was very much fubject to whims of this nature; fometime fancying herfelf an animal, fometimes a piece of furne ure, during which conceited transformations, it wa -ery dangerous to come near her, efpecially when the represented a beaft; for that latly, in the character of cat, the had flown at her and foratched her face in a ter rible manner ; _____ that fome months ago, the prophetie the general conflagration was at hand, and nothing would be able to quench it but her water, which therefore in kept fo long that her life was in danger; and the ma needs have died of the retention, had they not found an expedient to make her evacuate, by kindling a bonfire under her chamber-window, and perfuading her that the house was in flames; upon which, with great deliberation, the bade them bring all the tubs and veffels they could find, to be filled, for the prefervation of the house, into one of which the immediately difcharged the caufe of her diffemper .---- I was allo informed, that nothing contributed to much to the recovery of her realon, as mutic, which was always administered on those occafions by Narcifla, who played perfectly well on the harpfichord, and to whom the (the maid) was just then going to intimate her aunt's diforder .- She was no fooner gone, than I was fummoned by the bell to my lady's chamber, where I found her fitting fount on her arms, on the floor, in the manner of puls when the liftens to the outcries of her purfuers .- When I appeared, the flarted up with an alarmed look, and fprung to the other fide e of the room to avoid me, whom without doubt, the mild took for a beagle thirfting after her life .- Perceiving her a extreme confusion, I retired, and on the ftair-cale met a the adorable Narcifia coming up, to whom I imparted the fituation of my miftrefs; She faid not a word, but imiling with unipeakable grace, went into her aunt's g, upartment, and in a little time my ears were ravified n- with the effects of her skill .---- She accompanied the in-- trument with a voice fo fweet and melodious, that I 12- did not wonder at the furprifing change it produced on the fpirits of my miftrefs, which were foon composed to 14 1:5 peace and fober reflection.

About feven o'clock, the hunters arrived, with the warkins of two foxes and one badger, carried before them field trophies of their fuccefs. And when they were about of to fit down at dinner (or fupper) Sir Timothy Thicket ter-defined that Nareiña would honour the table with her chorefence; But this requeft, notwithftanding her broom her's threats and intreaties, fhe refuted, on pretence of the thending her aunt, who was indifipofed; fo I enjoyed monthe fatisfaction of feeing my rival mortified : But this each Vol. II, 18.

23

di pointment made no great impreffion on him, who confoled martel with the b. ttle, of which the whole company became to enaphoured, that after a most horrid uproar of laughing, linging, fwearing, dancing, and fighting, they were all carried to bed in a flate of utter oblivion. -My duty being altogether detached from the 'Squire and his family, I led a pretty caly and comfortable life, drinking daily intoxicating draughts of love from the charms of Narciffa, which brightened on my contemplation every day more and more .- Inglorious as my prefent fration was, I became blind to my own unworthing nels, and even conceived hopes of one day enjoying this amiable creature, whole affability greatly encourage thele pretump uous thoughts.

My miftrefs is furprifed at my learning-communicate but performances to me-I in part forme of mine to beram mortified at ber juint preise-Norceffe approves ! my conduct-I gain an involuntary conquest over the cook-wench and driry-maid-their maint referimed

CHAP. IV.

TURING this leaton of love and tranquillity, m mufe which had him domant fo long, awoke, and produced feveral intell performances on the fubject d my flame : But as it concerned me nearly, to remain undifcovered in my real character and ientiments, I wa under a neceffity of wortifying my defire of praife, b confining my works to my own perulal and applaul -In the mean time I strove to infinitate invielf into good opinion of both ladies; and fucceeded to well, " my diligence and dutiful behaviour, that in a little tim I was at leaft a favourite fervant, and frequently er joyed the opportunity of hearing my name mentions in French and Italia, with fome degree of warmin at furprile, by the dear object of all my willies, as a periode who had to much of the gentleman in my appearance and diffeourie, that the could not for her foul, treat nom like a common lacquey .- My prudence and moden were not long proof against these bewitching comp INCLUS W

27.

ments. One day, while I waited at dinner, the converfation turned upon a knotty paffage of T allo's Gierutalem, which, it feems had puzzled them both: Atter a great many unfatistationy conjectures, my militels taking the book out of her pocket, turned up to the place in quettion, and read the fentence over and over without fuccels ; at length, defpairing of finding the author's meaning, the turned to me, faying " Come hither, Bruno, let us see what fortune will do for us ; I will interpret to thee what goes before and what follows this obscure paragraph, the particular words of which I will allo explain, that thou mayeft, by comparing one with another, guels the fenfe of that which perplexes us."-I was too vain to let flip this opportunity of difplaying my talents, therefore, without helitation, read and explained the whole of that which had difconcerted them, to the utter aftonifiment of both .- Narcifia's face and lovely neck were overfpread with blufhes, from which I drew a favourable omen ; while her aunt, after having flared at me a good while, with a look of amazement, exclaimed, " In the name of heaven ! Who art thou?"-I told her I had picked up a imattering of Italian, during a voyage up the fraits .- At this explaa nation fhe flook her head, and observed, that no finatterer could read as I had done .- She then defired to s know if I understood French ?- To which question I answered in the affirmative : She asked, if I was acal quainted with the Latin and Greek ? I replied, " A litthe the."-" Oho! (continued fhe) and with philosophy and mathematics, I fuppole ?"-I owned I knew fomein thing of each. Then the repeated her flare and interer rogation .- I began to repent of my vanity, and in orm der to repair the fault I had committed, faid it was not at to be wondered at if I had a tolerable education, for rallearning was fo cheap in my country, that every pealant and was a icholar ; but I hoped her ladyfhip would think t miny understanding no exception to my character-She der was pleafed to answer, " No, no, God forbid." But mp during the reft of the time they fat at table, they behaved end with remarkable referve. C 2 This

24 This alteration gave me great uneafinefs : and I paffel the night without fleep, in melancholy reflections on the vanity of young men, which prompts them to commit is many foolifh actions, contrary to their own fober judgment,-Next day, however, inftead of profiting by this felf-condemnation, I yielded still more to the dictates of the principle I had endeavoured to chaftife, and if fortune had not befriended me more than prudence could expest, I should have been treated with the contempt it deferved :----- After breakfaft, my lady, who was a true author, bade me follow her into the fludy, where the exprefied herfelf thus: "Since you are fo learned, you can not be void of tafte; therefore I am to defire your opinion of a imall performance in poetry, which I late compoled .- You must know I have planned a tragedy the jubject of which shall be the murder of a prince be fore the altar, where he is buly at his devotions .- Afte the deed is perpetrated, the regicide will harangue th people with the bloody dagger in his hand; and I har already composed a speech, which I think will fuit the character extremely-Here it is."-Then taking up fcrap of paper, the read with violent emphasis and ge ture, as fellows :

> "Thus have I fent the fimple king to hell, Without or coffin, firoud, or paffing bell: To me, what are divine and human laws? I court no fanction but my @wn applaule! Rapes, robb'ries, treafons, yield my foul delight; And human carnage gratifies my fight: I drag the parent by the hoary hair, And too's the iprawling infant on my fpear, While the fond mother's cries regale mine ear. I fight, I vanquifh, murder friends and foes; Nor dare th' immortal Gods my rage oppofe."

Though I did great violence to my underftanding praifing this unnatural rhapfody, I neverthelefs extenit as a production that of itielf deierved immortal fam and belought her fadythip to bless the world with f fruits of those uncommon talents heaven had bestowed upon her-She finiled with a look of felf. Jomplacency, and encouraged by the incenfe I had offered, communicated all her poetical works, which I applauded one by one, with as little candour as I had thewn at first .- Satiated with my flattery, which I hepe, my fituation juftified, fhe could not in confeience refuie me an opportunity of thining in my turn : and therefore, after a compliment to my nice differnment and tafte, observed, that doubtless I must have produced fomething in that way myfelf, which the defired to ice .- This was a temptation I could by no means refift .- I owned that while I was at college, I wrote fome finall detached pieces, at the defire of a friend who was in love; and at her request repeated the following veries, which indeed my love for Narciffa had inspired.

On Celia playing on the barpfabord and finging.

I

When Sappho ftruck the quiviring wire, The throbbing breaft was all on fire: And when the rais'd the vocal lay, The captive foul was charm'd away!

Ц.

But had the nymph, poffett with thefe, Thy fofter, chafter pow'r to pleafe; Thy beanteous air of fprightly youth, Thy native finiles of artlefs truth;

111

The worm of grief had never prey'd On the forlaken, love-fick maid : Nor had the mourn'd an haplefs flame, Nor dath'd on rocks her tender frame.

My miffret's paid me a cold compliment on my verfification, which, the faid, was elegant enough, but the ubject beneath the pen of a true poet. I was extremely nettled at her indifference, and looked at Narcifla, who y this time had joined us, for her approbation, but the 26 THE ADVENTION to the was no judge declined giving her opinion, protecting the was no judge of thele maters: So that I was forced to retire, very much baulked in my expectation, which was generally ælittle too tfaguine. In the afternoon, however, the vaiting-maid affured me, that Narciffa had exprefied her approbation of my performance with great warmth, and defined her to procure a copy of it, as for herfelf, that fa (Narciffa) might have an opportunity to perufe ita pleafure.—I was elated to an extravagant pitch at this intelligence, and immediately tranfcribed a fair copy of my Ode, which was carried to the dear charmer, toge ther with another on the fame fubject, as follows:

I.

Thy fatal fhafts unerring move, I how before thine altar, Love! I feel thy foft, relifiels flame, Glide fwift through all my vital frame!

11.

For while I gaze, my bofom glows, My blood in tides impetuous flows; Hope, fear, and joy alternate roll, And floods of transports whelm my foul!

My fault ring tongue attempts in vain, In foothing murmurs to complain; My tongue fome fecret magic ties, My murmurs fink in broken fighs!

IV.

Condenn'd to nurfe eternal care, And ever drop the filent tear, Unheard I mourn, unknown I figh, Unfriended live, unpity'd die!

Whether or not Narciffa difcovered my paffion, I con not learn from her behaviour, which though always b nevolent to me, was henceforth more referved and k cheerful.—While my thoughts afpired to a fphere for above me, I had unwittingly made a conqueft of cook-wench and dairy-maid, who became fo jealous

ge

ry Ilv

und fhe

at

ea

27 each other, that if their fentiments had been refined by education, it is probable one or other of them would have had recourse to poilon or steel, to be avenged of her rival; but as their minds were happily adapted to their humble station, their mutual ennity was confined to foolding and fifty-cuffs, in which exercises they were both well skilled. My good fortune did not long remain a fecret; for it was difclofed by the frequent broils of these heroines, who kept no decorum in their encounters. The coachman and gardener, who paid their devoirs to my admirers, each to his respective choice, alarmed at my fuccefs, laid their heads together, in order to concert a plan of revenge; and the former having been educated at the academy of Tottenham-court, undertook to challenge me to fingle combat. He accordingly, with many opprobrious invectives, bade me defiance, and offered to box me for twenty guineas .- I told him, that although I believed myfelf a match for him, even at that work, I would not defcend fo far below the dignity of a gentleman as to fight like a porter; but if he had any thing to fay to me, I was his man at blunderbufs, musket, piftol, fword, hatchet, fpit, cleaver, fork, or needle; nay, I fwore, that fhould he give his tongue any more faucy iberties at my expence, I would crop his ears without any ceremony .--- This rodomontade, delivered with a tern countenance, and refolute tone, had the defired efect upon my antogonist, who with some confusion, neaked off, and gave his friend an account of his recepion. The flory taking air among the fervants, procured or me the title of Gentleman John, with which I was ometimes honoured, even by my miftrefs and Narciffa, who had been informed of the whole affair by the chamer-maid .- In the mean time, the rival queens expreffed teir paffion by all the ways in their power: The cook ntertained me with choice bits, the dairy-maid with proakings; the first would often encourage me to difover myfelf by complimenting me upon my courage nd learning, and observing, that if she had a husband ke me to maintain order and keep accompts, fhe could make

28 niake a great deal of money by fetting up an eating. house in Loadon, for gentlemen's tervants on board wages .- The other courted my affection, by fhewing her own importance, and telling me that many a fubftantial turner in the neighbourhood would be glad to many her ; but the was reforred to please her eye, if the thould plague her heart .- Then the would launch out in praile of my proper perfon, and fay, the was fure I would make a good hufband, fer I was very good-natured -I began to be uncarry at the importunities of those inamoratas, whom, at another time, perhaps, I might have pleafed without the difagreeable fance of matrimeny; but at prefent, my foul was engrefied by Narcifa and I could not bear the thoughts of doing any thing derogatory of the paffion I entertained for her. CHAP. V.

Narcifa being danger from the brutality of Sir Timok is refeaed by me, who revenge myfelf on my rival-I declare my poffin, and reheat to the fa-fide-or farrounded by finnogler's, and carried to Bullogne-fimy uncle, Lieutenant Bowing, in great diffrefs, a relieve bin-war conversation.

A T cortain intervals my my ambition would revie I would defpife myielf for any tame refignation my fordid fate, and revolve an hundred fehemes for fuming the character of a gentleman, to which I thoug myfelf intrined by my birth and education. In the fruitlets fuggetitions time flole away unperceived, and had dready remained eight months in the fration of footman, when an accident happened that put an end my corputed, and for the prefent banifhed all hopes fucceeding in my love.

Nate fla went one day to vifit Mifs Thicket, with lived with her brother within lefs than a mile of the houle, and was perfuaded to waik home in the cool a the evening, accompanied by Sir Timothy, who have a good deal of the brute in him, was infligated to the fome unbecoming familiarities with her, encouraged by the folitarinefs of a field through which they palled by

29 The lovely creature was incenfed at his rude behaviour, for which the reproached him in fuch a manner that he loft all regard to decency, and actually offered violence to this pattern of innocence and beauty. But heaven would not fuffer fo much goodness to be violated; and fent me, who paffing by accident near the place, was alarmed with her cries, to her fuccour .- What were the emotions of my foul, when I beheld Narciffa, almost finking beneath the brutal force of this fatyr! I flew like lightning to her refcue, and he, perceiving me, quitted his prey, and drew his hanger to chaftife my prefumption .- My indignation was too high to admit one thought of fear, fo that, rufhing upon him, I ftruck his weapon out of his hand, and uled my cudgel to fucceisfully that he fell to the ground, and lay, to all appearance without tenfe .---- Then I turned to Narciffa, who had fwooned, and, fitting down by her, gently railed her head, and fupported it on my bofom, while with my hand around her waift, I kept her in that polition. My foul was thrilled with tumultuous joy, at feeling the object of my dearest withes within my arms; and, while the lay infentible, I could not refrain from applyng my cheek to her's and ravifning a kifs: In a little time, the blood began to revisit her face, she opened her enchanting eyes, and, having recollected her late fituation, faid, with a look full of tender acknowledgment, " Dear John, I am eternally obliged to you!" So faying, he made an effort to rife, in which I affifted her, and he proceeded to the house, leaning upon me all the ray. I was a thousand times tempted by this opporunity to declare my paffion, but the dread of difobliging er restrained my tongue. We had not moved an hunred paces from the icene of her diffrefs, when I pereived Sir Tinothy rife and walk homeward; a circumance which, though it gave me fome fatisfaction, inafmuch as I thereby knew I had not killed him, filled me with just apprehension of his refentment, which I found yielf in no condition to withftand : efpecially when I middered his intimacy with our 'fquire, to whom I knew knew he could justify humfelf for what he had done, by imputing it to his love, and defiring his brother Bruin to take the fame liberty with his fifter, without any fear of offience .- When we arrived at the houfe, Narciffa al fured me fhe would exert all her influence in protecting me from the revenue of Thicket, and likewife engage her aunt in ny favour. At the tame time, pulling out her purie, offered it as a small confideration for the fer vice I had done her. But I flood too much on the punctillos of love to incur the leaft furpicion of bein increantry, and refused the prefent, by faying, I had me rited nothing by barely doing my ducy .- She feend altonified at 'my diffatereftedness, and bluffied; I fe the im fuffulion, and, with a downcaft eye, an broken recent, told her, I had one request to make which if her generofity would grant, I should think my fell fully recompended for an age of milery .--- S changed colour at this preamble, and, with great confi tion, replied, the hoped my good fenfe would hinder B from alking any thing the was bound in nonour to refut and therefore bade me fignify my defire .- Upon which I kneeled, and begged to kils her hand. She imme diately, with an averted look, firetched it out; and imprinted on it an ardent kils, and, bathing it with m tears, cried, " Dear madam, I ain an unfortunate ge tleman, and love you to diffraction, but would have die a thousand deaths rather than make this declaration under fuch a fervile appearance, were I not determine to yield to the rigour of my fate, to fly from your b witching prefence, and bury my prefumptuous paffi in eternal filence." With these words I role and we away, before the could recover her fpirits to far as make any reply .- My first care was to go and cont Mrs. Sagely, with whom I had maintained a frien correspon ence ever fince I left her houfe. When underflood my fituation, the good woman with n concern. conduced me on my unhappy fate, and approv of my refolution to leave the country, as being perfect svell acquainted with the barbarous disposition of rival, " who, by this time, (faid fhe) has no doubt meditated a scheme of revenge .- Indeed, I cannot see how you will be able to elude his vengeance; being himfelf in the committion, he will immediately grant warrants for apprehending you; and as almost all the people in this country are dependent on him and his friend, it will be impoffible for you to find thelter among them : if you fhould be apprehended, he will commit you to jail, where you may poffibly inguish in great mifery till the next affizes, and then be transported for affaulting a magistrate."-While she thus warned me of my danger, we heard a knocking at the door, which threw us both into great confernation, as, in all probability, it was occaliened by my purifiers ; whereupon this generous old lady, putting two guineas into my hand, with tears in hereyes, bade me, for God's fake, get out at the back door, and confult my fafety as Providence flould cirect me .- There was no time for deliberation. I followed her advice, and elcaped, by the benefit of a dark night, to the lea tide, where, while I ruminated on my next excursion, I was all of a fudden furrounded by armed men, who, having bound my hond's and feer, bade me make no noife, on pain of being fliot, and carried me on board of a veffel, which I foon perceived to be a imuggling cutter .- This difcovery gave me fome fatislaction at firit, becaufe I concluded mytelf fafe from the reentment of Sir Timothy : But when I found myfelf in the hands of ruffians, who threatened to execute me for fpy, I would have thought myfeli happily quit for a ear's impriforment, or even transportation .- It was n vain for me to proteft my innocence : I could net berfuade them that I had taken a folitary walk to their aunt, at fuch an hour, merely for my own amufement, nd I did not think it my intereft to difclose the true aufe of my retreat, becaufe I was airaid they would ave made their peace with juffice, by furrencering me the penalty of the law .- What confirmed their fuficion, was, the appearance of a cultom-houfe yacht, bich gave them chace, and had well nigh made a prize of their veffel ; when they were delivered from their fean by a thick fog, which effectually fcreened them, and favoured their grrival at Bullogne .- But before they had got out of fight of their purfuer, they held a council of war about me, and fome of the most ferocious amour them, would have thrown me overboard as a traitor who had betrayed them to their enemies : but others, mon confiderate, alledged, that if they put me to death, and fhould afterwards be taken, they could expect no mere from the legislature, which would never pardon outlaw ry aggravated by murder .- It was therefore determine by a plurality of votes, that I fhould be fet on fhore France, and left to find my passage back to England : I should think proper, this being punishment fufficie for the bare fulpicion of a crime in itfelf not capital.-Although this favourable determination gave me gra pleafure, the apprchenfion of being robbed would m fuffer me to be perfectly at ease : To prevent this call mity, as foon as I was untied, in confequence of the forefaid decifion, I tore a finall hole in one of my flock ings, into which I dropped fix guineas, referving h a piece and fome filver in my pocket, that, finde fomething, they might not be tempted to make a further inquiry. This was a very necessary precauto for, when we came within fight of the French fhore, a of the finugglers told me, I must pay for my pash -To this declaration I replied, that my paffage w none of my own feeking; therefore they could not a peSt a reward from me for transporting me into a firm country by force. " Damme ! (faid the outlaw) no of your palaver; but let me fee what money you b got."-So faying, he thruft his hand into my peo without any ceremony, and emptied it of the conter Then caffing an eye at my hat and wig, which cap vated his fancy, he took them off, and, clapping own on my head, declared that a fair exchange was robbery .- I was fain to put up with the bargain, who was by no means favourable to me; and a little wher after we went all on fhore together.

I refolved to take my leave of these desperadoes, without much ceremony, when one of them cautioned me against appearing to their prejudice if ever I returned into England, unlefs I had a mind to be murdered; for which fervice, he affured me, the gang never wanted agents-I promifed to obferve his advice, and departed for the Upper Town, where I enquired for a cabaret or public house, into which I went, with an intention of taking fome refreshment .- In the kitchen, five Dutch failors fat at breakfaft, with a large loaf, a firkin of butter, and a cag of brandy, the bung of which they often applied to their mouths with great perfeverance and fatistaction .- At fome diftance from them I perceived another perion in the fame garb, fitting in a pentive folitary manner, entertaining himfelf with a whiff of tobacco, from the flump of a pipe as black as jet .- The appearance of diffreis never failed to attract my regard and compaffion : I approached this forlorn tar with a view to offer him my affiftance, and, notwithstanding the alteration of dreis, and dilguife of a long beard, I di covered in him my long-loft and lamented uncle and benelactor, Lieutenant Bowling ! Good heaven ! what were the agitations of my foul, between the joy of finding again such a valuable friend, and the forrow of feeing him in fuch a low condition! The tears gushed down my cheeks; I flood motionleis and filent for fome time! at length, recovering the use of speech, I exclaimed, " Gracious God! Mr. Bowling ! My uncle no fooner heard his name mentioned, than he frarted up, crying with fome furprife, " Holla !" and, after having looked at me ftedaltly, without being able to recollect me, faid, " Did you call me, brother ?" I told him I had iomething exd traordinary to communicate, and defired him to give me er the hearing for a few minutes in another room; but he a would by no means confent to this propotal, faying, g Y Avaft there, friend: none of your tricks upon travelas ers :----- if you have any thing to lay to me, do it above whooard;-you need not be afraid of being overheard ;where are none who understand our lingo."-Though I was loth to difcover myfelf before company, I could no longer Vol II. 18 .D

34 longer refrain from telling him, I was his own nephew, Roderic Random. On this information, he confidered me with great earnestness and aftonishment, and recalling my features, which, though enlarged, were not entirely aftered fince he had feen me, came up and fhook me by the hand very cordially, protefting he was glad to fee me well. After some pause, he went on thus : " And yet, my lad, I am forry to fee you under fuch colours; the more fo, as it is not in my power, at prefent, to change them for the better, times being very hard with me." With these words I could perceive a tear trick'e down his furrowed cheeks, which effected me fo much, that I wept bitterly .---- Imagining my forrow was the effect of my own misfortunes, he comforted me, with obferving, that life was a voyage in which we must exped to meet with all weathers; fometimes it was calm, fometimes rough; that a fair gale often fucceeded a florm; that the wind did not always fit one way, and that defpair fignified nothing; but refolution and fkill were better than a ftout veffel: for why? becaufe they require no carpenter, and grow ftronger the more labour they undergo. I dried up my tears, which I affured him were not fhed for my own diffrefs, but for his, and begged leave to accompany him into another room, where w could converte more at our eafe .- There I recounted a him the ungenerous ulage I had met with from Potion at which relation he flarted up, flaked across the room three or four times, in a great huory, and grafping his cudgel, cried, " I would I were along-fide of himthat's all-I would I were along-fide of him !"-I the gave him a detail of all my adventures and fufferings which affected him more than I could have imagined and concluded with telling him that Captain Oakhur was still alive, and that he might return to England when he would to folicit his affairs, without danger a moleftation .- He was wonderfully pleased with this pice of information, of which however he faid, he could no at prefent avail himfelf, for want of money to pay for b paffage to London. This objection I foon removed, h putting five guineas into his hand, and telling him though thought myfelf extremely happy in having an opportunity of manifesting my gratitude to him in his necessity. -But it was with the utmost difficulty I could prevail upon him to accept of two, which he affirmed were more than fufficient to defray the neceffary expence .-- After this friendly contest was over, he proposed we should have a mel's of fomething : " For (faid he) it has been banyan day with me a great while .-... You must know I was fhipwreck'd five days ago, near a place called Lifieux, in company with those Dutchmen who are now drinking below ; and having but little money when I came afhore, it was foon fpent, becaufe I let them have fhare and fhare while it lasted .- Howfomever, I should have remembered the old faying, Every hog his own apple : For when they found my hold unflowed, they went all hands to fhooling and begging, and, becaufe I would not take a fpell at the fame duty, refuied to give me the least affistance; fo that I have not broke bread these two days."-I was shocked at the extremity of his diffrefs, and ordered fome bread, cheefe, and wine to be brought immediately, to allay his hunger, until a fricaffee of chickens could be prepared. When he had recruited his fpirits with this homely fare, I defired to know the particulars of his peregrination fince the accident at Cape Tiberon; which were briefly these: The money he had about him being all fpent at Port Louis, the civility and hospitality of the French cooled to fuch a degree, that he was obliged to lift on board of one of their king's fhips as a common foremaft man, to prevent himfelf from ftarving on fhore. In this fituation he continued two years, during which the he had acquired fome knowledge of their language, and the reputation of a good feaman. The flip he belonged the reputation of a good feaman. to was ordered home to France, where the was laid up as unfit for fervice, and he was received on board of one • 0 of Monfieur D'Antin's fquadron, in quality of quarterico mafter; which office he performed in a voyage to the Weft Indies, where they engaged with our thip, as before related ; but his confcience upbraiding him for ferving the enemies of his country, he quitted the fhip at the tame place where he first listed, and got to Curafoa in a Dutch De

36 a Dutch veffel : there he bargained with a fkipper bound to Europe, to work for his paffage to Holland, from whence he was in hopes of hearing from his friends in England ; but was caft away, as he mentioned before, on the French coaft, and must have been reduced to the neceffity of travelling on foot to Holland, and begging for his fubfiftence on the road, or of entering on board of another French man of war, at the hazard of being treated as a deferter, if Providence had not fent me to his fuccour. .---- " And now, my lad, (continued he,) I think I shall steer my course directly to London, where I do not doubt of being replaced, and of having the R taken off me by the Lords of the Admiralty, to whom I intend to write a petition, fetting forth my cafe: IfI fucceed, I shall have wherewithal to give you some affitance, becaufe when I left the ship, I had two year's pay due to me; therefore I defire to know whither you an bound ; and befides, perhaps, I may have interest enough to procure a warrant appointing you furgeon's mate of the ship to which I shall belong .- For the beadle of the admiralty is my good friend; and he and one of the under-clerks are fworn brothers; and that under clerk has a good deal to fay with one of the upper clerks, who is very well known to the under fecretary, who, upon his recommendation, I hope, will recommend my affair to the first fecretary; and he again, will speak to one of the lords in my behalf : So that you fee I do not want friends to allift me on occasion. As for the fellow. Crampley, tho'f I know him not, I am fure he is neither feaman nor officer, by what you have told me, of elfe he could never be fo much mittaken in his reckoning, as to run the fhip on fhore on the coaft of Suffex before he believed himfelf in foundings; neither, whe that accident happened, would he have left the thip until fhe had been flove to pieces, efpecially when the tide wat making; wherefore, by this time, I do suppose he has been tried by a court martial, and executed for his cow ardice and mifconduct."----I could not help imiling a the description of my uncle's ladder, by which he pro poled to climb to the attention of the board of adm pt C

37

ralty; and though I knew the world too well, to confide in fuch dependance myfelf, I would not difcourage him with doubts; but afked if he had no friend in London who would advance a finall fum of money to enable him to appear as he ought, and make a finall prefent to the under fecretary, who might poffibly difpatch his bufinefs the fooner on that account .- He fcratched his head, and, after fome recollection, replied, " Why, yes, I believe Daniel Whipcord, the fhip-chandler in Wapping, would not refufe me fuch a finall matter-I know I can have what credit I want, for lodging, liquor, and clothes; but as to money, I won't be politive .- Had honeft Block been living, I should not have been at a lofs." I was heartily forry to find a worthy man fo deflitute of friends, when he had fuch need of them; and looked upon my own fituation as lefs miferable than his, becaufe I was better acquainted with the felfifhnefs and requery of mankind; confequently lefs liable to difappointment and impolition.

ĊHAP. VI.

He takes his paffage in a cutter for Deal—we are acopted by a prioft, who proves to be a Scotchman—his profession of friend/hip—he is affronted by the lieutenant, who afterwards appeales him by fubmilion—my uncle embarks—I am introduced by the prieft to a capuchin, in whoje company I fet out for Paris—the character of my fellow-traveller—an adventure on the road—I am flocked at his behaviour.

WHEN our repart was ended, we walked down to the harbour, where we found a cutter that was to fail or Deal in the evening, and Mr. Bowling agreed for his ailage: In the mean time, we famtered about therefore o fatisfy our curiofity, our convertation turking on the ubject of my defigns, which were not as yet fixed : Neiher can it be imposed that my mind was at call, when found my tell reduced almost to extreme powerty, in the hidft of foreigners, among whom I had not one acuaintance to active or hefriend me. My uncle was fenble of my foriora condition, and prefied me to accomany him to England, where he did not doubt of finding D 3 forme

38 fome fort of provision for me : But, befides the other reafons I had for avoiding that kingdom, I looked upon it at this time as the worft country in the universe for a poor honeft man to live in ; and therefore determined to remain in France at all events. I was confirmed in this refolution by a reverend prieft, who paffing by at this time, and overhearing us speak English, accosted us in the fame language, telling us he was our countryman, and withing it might be in his power to do us any fervice. We thanked this grave perfon for his courteous offer, and invited him to drink a glass with us, which he did not think proper to refuse, and we went all together into: tavern of his recommending. After having drank to our healths in a bumper of good Burgundy, he began to enquire into our fituation, particularly the place of our nativity, which we no fooner named, than he ftarted up and wringing our hands with great fervour, fhed a floor of tears, crying, " I come from the fame part of the country ! Perhaps you are my own relations." I was on my guard gainst his careffes, which I suspected verymuch, when I remembered the adventure of the money-dropper. but, without any appearance of diffidence, observed, that as he was born in that part of the country, he mult cer tainly know our families, which (howfoever mean out prefent appearance might be) were none of the molt of fcure or inconfiderable .- Then I difcovered our name to which I found he was no ftranger ; he had known m grandfather perfonally; and, notwithitanding an abfend of fifty years from Scotland, recounted fo many particu lars of the families in the neighbourhood, that my few ples were entirely removed, and I thought mylelf happ in his acquaintance.----In the courfe of our convers tion, I ditclosed my condition without referve, and de played my talents to fuch advantage, that the old fathe looked upon me with admiration, and affured me, the if I staid in France, and listened to reason, I could not fail of making my fortune, to which he would contr

My uncle began to be jealeds of the prieft's infinuation and very abruptly declared, that if ever I should renoun my religion, he would break off connection and correfpondence with me; for it was his opinion, that no honeft man would fiverve from the principles in which he was bred, whether Turk, Protestant, or Roman.-----The father, affronted at this declaration, with great vehemence, began a long difcourie, fetting forth the danger of obstinacy, and shutting one's eyes against the light. He faid, that ignorance would be no plea towards justification, when we had opportunities of being better informed; and that if the minds of people had not been open to conviction, the Christian religion could not have been propagated in the world; and we fhould now be in a flate of Pagan darkness and barbarity. He endeavoured to prove, by fome texts of fcripture, and many quotations from the fathers, that the Pope was the fucceffor of St. Peter, and vicar of Jefus Christ; that the church of Rome was the true holy, catholic church; and that the Protestant faith was an impious herefy, and damnable ichifm, by which many millions of fouls would fuffer everlafting perdition .---- When he had finished his fermon, which I thought he pronounced with more zeal than diferetion, he addreffed himfelf to my uncle, and defired to know his objections to what had been faid. The lieutenant, whose attention had been wholly engrossed by his own affairs, took the pipe out of his mouth, and replied, " As for me, friend, d'ye fee, I have no objection to what you fay; it may be either true or falfe for what I know: I'meddle with nobody's affairs but my own; the gunner to his linftock, and the fleeriman CU+ to the helm, as the faying is .- I truft to no creed but the compais, and do unto every man as I would be done by; fo that I defy the pope, the devil, and the pretender; dis and hope to be faved as well as another."-This affociathe tion of perfons gave great offence to the friar, who prothe telted in a mighty paffion, that if Mr. Bowling had not noppeen his countryman, he would have caufed him to be ntr unprisoned for his infolence .---- I ventured to difapprove of my uncle's rafhnefs, and appealed the old gentleman, atic by affuring him, there was no offence intended by my cun kiniman, who by this time, fentible of his error, fhook the an

0

30

40

the injured party by the hand, and afked pardon for the freedom he had taken.—Matters being anicably compromiled, he invited us to come and fee him in the aftergoon at the cotvent to which he belonged, and took his leave for the prefent; when my uncle recommended it ftrongly to me to perfevere in the religion of my forcfathers, whatever advantages I might propole to myfelf by a change, which could not fail of difgracing myfelf, and difhenouring my family.—I affured him no confidration fhould induce me to forfeit his friendfhip and good opinion on that fcore; at which affurance he difcovered great fatisfaction, and put me in mind of dimner, which we immediately belpoke, and when it was ready, ate together.

I imagined my acquaintance with the Scottifh prief, if properly managed, might turn out to my advantage, and therefore refolved to cultivate it as much as I could. With this view, we vifited him at his convent, according to his invitation, where he treated us with wine and fweetmeats, and fhewed us every thing that was remarkable in the monaftery.—Having been thus entertained, we took our leave, though not before I had promifed to fee him noxt day; and the time fixed for my uncle's embarking being come, I accompanied him to the harbour, and faw him on board.—We parted not without tears, after we had embraced and wifhed one another all manner of profperity; and he entreated me to write to him often, directing to Licutenant Bowling, at the fign of the Union Flag, near the Hermitage, London.

I returned to the houfe in which we had met, where I paffed the night in a very folitary manner, reflecting on the feverity of my fate, and endeavouring to project fome likely fehreme of life for the future; but my invertion failed me; I faw nothing but informountable dificulties in my way, and was ready to defpair at the miterable project! That I might not, however, neglect any probable means, I got up in the morning, and went directly to the father, whole advice and affiftance implored.— He referved me very lendly, and gave me to underfrand, that there was one way of life in which a perform a perion of my talents could not fail of making a great figure .- I gueffed his meaning, and told him once for all, I was fully determined against any alteration in point of religion; therefore, if his propofal regarded the church, he might fave himfelf the trouble of explaining it. He thook his head, and fighed, faving, " Ah! fon, fon, what a glorious prospect is here spoiled by your stubborn prejudice! Suffer yourfelf to be perfuaded by reafon, and confult your temporal welfare, as well as the concerns of your eternal foul .-- I can, by my intereft, procure your admiffion as a noviciate into this convent, where I will fuperintend and direct you with a truly paof a monaflic life, which no noife difturbs, no cares moleft, and no danger invades-where the heart is weaned and chaffifed, and the foul wafted to divine regions of philosophy and truth, on the wings of studious contemplation .- But his eloquence was loft upon me, whom two confiderations enabled to withftand his temptations; namely, my promife to my uncle, and my averlion to an ecclesialtical life; for as to the difference of religion, I looked upon it as a thing of too fmall moment to come in competition with a man's fortune .- Finding me immovable on this head, he told me, he was more forry than offended at my non-compliance, and ftill ready to employ his good offices in my behalf .- " The fame erroneous maxims (faid he) that obstruct your promotion in the church, will infallibly prevent your advancement in the army; but if you can brook the condition of a ferand vant, I am acquainted with fome people of rank at Verng ailles, to whom I can give you letters of recommenet dation, that you may be entertained by fome one of them, m quality of maitre de botel; and I do not doubt that your qualifications will foon intitle you to better provithe ion."-I embraced his offer with great eagernefs; and ne appointed me to come back in the afternoon, when and he would not only give me letters, but likewife introduce ce he to a capuchin of his acquaintance, who intended to e met out for Paris next morning, in whole company I might

41

12 travel, without being at the experice of one livre during the whole journey. This piece of good news gave me infinite pleafure; I acknowledged my obligation to the benevolent father in the most grateful expressions; and he performed his promife to a tittle, in delivering the letters, and making me acquainted with the capuchin, with whom I departed next morning by break of day. It was not long before I difcovered my fellow-travelle to be a merry facetious fellow; who, notwithstanding his profession and appearance of mortification, love good eating and drinking better than his rolary, and paid more adoration to a pretty girl than to the Virg Mary or St. Genevieve. He was a thick brawny your man, with red eye-brows, a hook-nole, a face covera with freckles; and his name was Frère Balthazar. H order did not permit him to wear linen, fo that havin little occation to undrefs himfelf, he was none of th cleanlieft animals in the world; and his conflictution wa naturally to ftrongly fcented, that I always thought convenient to keep to the windward of him in our march As he was perfectly well known on the road, we fan fumptuoufly without any coft; and the fatigue of a journey was much alleviated by the good humour of m companion, who fung an infinite number of catches the subjects of love and wine. We took up our lod ing the first night at a peafant's houle, not far fro Abbeville, where we were entertained with an excelle ragout, cooked by our landlord's daughters, one whom was very handfome. After having eaten heard and drank a sufficient quantity of small wine, we we conducted to a barn, where we found a couple of carp fpread upon clean firaw for our reception .- We had lain in this lituation above half an hour, when we her fomebody knock foftly at the door, upon which B thazar got up, and let in our hoft's two daughters, w wanted to have fome private convertation with hun the dark. When they had whifpered together fome to the capuchin came to me, and asked if I was intentible love, and to hard hearted as to require a fhare of my own, to my fhame, that I fuffered myfelf to be overcome by my paffion, and with great eagerness feized the occasion, when I understood that the amiable Nanette was to be my bedfellow. In vain did my reafon fuggeft the respect that I owed to my dear mistrel's Narcifia; the idea of that lovely charmer rather increased than allayed the ferment of my fpirits ; and the young Paifanne had no reason to complain of my remembrance. Early in the morning, the kind creatures left us to our repole, which lasted till eight o clock, when we got up, and were treated at breakfaft with chocolate and leau de vie by our paramours, of whom we took a tender leave, after my companion had confeffed and given them ablolution .- While we proceeded on our journey, the converlation turned upon the night's adventure, being inroduced by the capuchin, who asked me how I liked my lodging. I declared my fatisfaction, and talked in rapture of the agreeable Nanette; at which he shook his head, and fimiling faid, fhe was a morceau pour la conne bouche. " I never valued myfelf (continued he) upon any thing fo much as the conquest of Nanette; aid, anity apart, I have been pretty fortunate in my amours." -This information shocked me not a little, as I was vell convinced of his intimacy with her fifter; and though did not care to tax him with downright inceft, I proeffed my aftonishment at his last night's choice, when, fuppoied, the other was at his devotion .- To this hint e aniwered, that, befides his natural compliance to the ex, he had another reason to distribute his favours equally between them, namely, to preferve peace in the family, which could not otherwife be maintained; that moreover, Vanette had conceived an affection for me, and he loved er too well to baulk her inclination; more efpecially, then he had an opportunity of obliging his friend at he fame time .- I thanked him for this inflance of his iendihip, though I was extremely difguited at his want delicacy, and curied the occasion that threw me in s way .- Libertine as I was, I could not bear to fee a an behave fo wide of the character he affinned: I lookupon him as a perfon of very little worth or honesty, 0 and thould have even kept a wary eye upon my pocket, if I had though the could have any temptation to fical. —But I could not conceive the ufe of money to a capuchin, who is obliged, by the rules of his order, to appear like a beggar, and enjoys all other necellaries of life gratis; belides, my fellow-traveller iteemed to be of a complexion too carelefs and fanguine to give me any apprehension on that fcore; fo that I proceeded with great confidence, in expectation of being foon at my journey's end.

43

CHAP. VII.

We lodge at a houfe near Amiens, where I am robbed by the capuchin, who effcapes while I am afteep—I g to Noyons in fearch of him, but without fuccefs make my condition known to federal people, but find m relief—growdefperate—join a company of joldien —enlift in the regiment of Picardy—we are ordere into Germany—I find the fatigues of the march alm intolerable—quarrel with my comrade in a dipat about politics—he challenges me to the field, wound and difarms me.

THE third night of our pilgrimage we paffed at house near Amiens, where Balthazar being unknows we supped upon indifferent fare, and four wine, and we fain to lie in a garret upon an old mattrefs, which, I b lieve, had been in the poffeffion of ten thouland myrial of fleas time out of mind .- We did not invade the territory with impunity; in lefs than a minute we we attacked by ftings innumerable, in fpite of which, how ever, we fell falt alleep, being excellively fatigued will our day's march, and did not wake till near nine th next morning, when, feeing myfelf alone, I flarted " in a terrible fright, and, examining my pockers, four my prefaging fear too true! My companion had mad free with my cafh, and left me to feek my way to Part by myfelf! I ran down flairs immediately; and, with look full of grief and amazement, enquired for the m dicant, who, they gave me to underliand, had fet a four hours before, after having told them, I was a la indifposed, and defired I might not be diffurbed, but

45 informed, when I thould wake, that he had taken the read for Noyons, where he would wait for my coming at the Coq d'Or. I fpoke not a word, but with a heavy heart directed my courfe to that place, at which I arrived in the afternoon, fainting with weariness and hunger; but learned, to my utter confusion, that no fuch perfor had been there ! It was happy for me, that I had a good deal of refentment in my conflictution, which animated me on fuch occasions against the villainy of mankind, and enabled me to bear misfortunes otherwife intolerable .- Boiling with indignation, I di covered to the hoft my deplorable condition, and inveighed with great bitternels against the treachery of Balthazar; at which he flrugged up his fhoulders, and, with a peculiar grimace in his countenance, faid, he was forry for my misfortune; but there was no remedy like patience .- At that inftant fome guefts arrived, to whom he haftened to offer his fervice, leaving me mortified at his indifference, fully perfuaded that an inn-keeper is the fame fordid animal all the world over .- While I flood in the porch, forlorn and undetermined, venting ejaculations of curfes against the thief who robbed me, and the old prieft who recommended him to my friendship, a young gentleman, richly dreffed, attended by a valet de chambre and two fervants in livery, arrived at the inn. I thought I perceived a great deal of fweetness and good nature in his countenance ; therefore he had no fooner alighted than I accolted him, and in a few words explained my lituation. He liftened with great politenefs, and when I had made an end of my ftory, faid, "Well, monfieur, what would you have me to do?" I was effectually abashed at this interrogation, which'I believed no man of common fenfe or generofity could make, and made no other reply than a low bow. He returned the compliment still lower, and tript into an apartment, while the landlord let me know, that my flanding there to interrupt company, gave offence, and might do him infinite prejudice .- He had no occasion to repeat his infinuation; I moved from the place immediately; and was fo much transported with onger, and diidain, that a torrent of blood guihed from 30L. 11. 18 Ea

1.6 from my nostrils .- In this exitaly, I quitted Novons, and betook myfelf to the fields, where I wandered about like one diffracted, till my fpirits were quite exhaufted. and I was obliged to throw myfelf down at the root of a tree, to reft my wearied limbs .- Here my rage forfook me; I began to feel the importunate cravings of nature, and relapfedeinto filent forrow, and melancholy reflection. I revolved all the crimes I had been guilty of, and found them fo few and venial, that I could not comprehend the juffice of that Providence, which, after having exposed me to fo much wretchedness and danger, left me a prey to famine at laft in a foreign country, where I had not one friend or acquaintance to close my eyes, and do the last offices of humanity to my miferable carcafs .---- A thousand times I wished mylelf a bear, that I might retreat to woods and deferts, far from the inhospitable haunts of man, where I could live by my own talents, independent of treacherous friends and iupercilious fcorn.

As I lay in this manner groaning over my haples fate, I heard the found of a violin, and, raifing my head, perceived a company of men and women dancing on the grais at fome diffance from me .- I looked upon this to be a favourable feafon for diffrefs to attract compaffion, when every felfifh thought is banifhed, and the heart dilated with mirth and focial joy; wherefore I got up, and approached those happy people, whom I foca discovered to be a party of foldiers, with their wive and children, unbending and diverting themieives at this rate after the fatigue of a march. I had never before feen fuch a parcel of fcarecrows together; neither could I reconcile their meagre gaunt looks, their iqualid and ragged attire, and every other external lymptom of es treme woe, with this appearance of feilivity .-- I fainted them, however, and was received with great politeneist after which they formed a ring, and danced around me, This jullity had a wonderful effect upon my fpirits ! I was infected with their gaiety, and, in fpite of my difinalitua tion, forgot my cares, and joened in their estravaganes -When we had recreated ourfelves a good while at the diversion, the ladies spread their mantuas on the ground, upon which they emptied their knapfacks of fome onions, coarfe bread, and a few faiks of poor wine. Being invited to a fhare of the banquet, I fat down with the reft, and in the whole course of my life never made a more comfortable meal,-----When our repaft was ended, we got up again to dance ; and, now that I found myfelf refreshed, I behaved to the admiration of every body: I was loaded with a thousand compliments, and proteffions of friendship; the men commended my perfon and agility, and the women were loud in praife of my bonne grace : the ferjeant, in particular, expressed fo much regard for me, and defcribed the pleafures of a foldier's life with fo much art, that I began to liften to his propolal of enlifting me in the fervice ; and the more I conidered my own condition, the more I was convinced of the necessfity I was under to come to a speedy determination .- Having therefore maturely weighed the circumftances pro and con, I fignified my confent, and was admitted into the regiment of Picardy, faid to be the oldest corps in Europe .- The company to which this command belonged, was quartered at a village not far off, whither we marched next day, and I was preiented to my captain, who feemed very well pleafed with my appearance, gave me a crown to drink, and ordered me to be accommodated with clothes, arms, and accoutrements .- Then I fold my livery fuit, purchased linen, and, as I was at great pains to learn the exercise, in a very fhort time became a complete foldier.

47

It was not long before we received orders to join fereral more regiments, and march with all expedition into Germany, in order to reinforce Marciehal Duc de Noailles, who was then encamped with his army on the fide of the river Mayne, to watch the motions of the English, Hanoverians, Auftrians, and Heffnans, under the command of the Earl of Stair. We began our march accordingly, and then I became acquainted with that part of a foldier's life to which I had been hitherto a ftranger.—It is impofible to deferibe the hunger and thirft I iuftained, and the fatigue I underwest in a march of to many hundred miles; during which, I was to much chafed with the heat and motion of my limbs, that in a very thort time the infide of my thighs' and legs were deprived of fkin, and I proceeded in the utmost torture. This mifortune I owed to the plumpnels of my confitution, which I curfed, and envied the withered 'condition of my comrades, whole bodies could not ipare juice enough to lupply a common iffue, and were, indeed, proof againt all manner of friction. The continual pain I felt made me fretful, and my peevidhnels was increafed by the mortification of my pride, in feeing thole milerable wretches, whom a hard gale of wind would have feattered through the air like chaff, bear thole toils with alacrity, under which I was ready to fink.

4.8

One day, while we enjoyed a halt, and the foldiers with their wives were gone out to dance, according to cultom, my comrade flaid at home with me on pretence of friendship, and infulted me with his pity and confolation! He told me, though I was young and tender at prefent, I would foon be feafoned to the fervice; and he did not doubt but I fhould have the honour to contribute in fome measure to the glory of the king .-"Have courage, therefore, my child, (taid he,) and pray to God, that you may be as happy as I am, when have had the honour of ferving Lewis the Great, and of receiving many wounds in helping to eftablish his glory."-When I looked upon the contemptible objed that pronounced theie words, I was amazed at the infatuation that possefield him; and could not help expresfing my aftonishment at the abfurdity of a rational being, who thinks himfelf highly honoured in being permitted to encounter abject poverty, oppression, famine, difeafe, mutilation, and evident death, merely to grating the vicious ambition of a prince, by whom his fufferings were difregarded, and his name utterly unknown I observed, that if his fituation was the confequence of compulsion, I would praise his patience and fortitude in bearing his lot; if he had taken up arms in defence of he injured country, he was to be applauded for his patriotifin; or if he had fled to this way of life as a vefug from a greater evil, he was justifiable in his own confcience, (though I could have no notion of mifery more extreme than that he fuffered ;) but to put his condition on the footing of conducing to the glory of his prince, was no more than profeffing himfelf a delperate flave, who voluntarily underwent the utmost wretchedness and peril, and committed the most flagrant chimes, to footh the barbarous pride of a fellow-creature, his fuperior in nothing but the power he derived from the fubmiffion of fuch wretches as him. The foldier was very much affronted at the liberty I took with his king, which, he faid, nothing but my ignorance could excufe: He affirmed that the characters of princes were facred, and ought not to be prophaned by the cenfure of their fubjects, who were bound by their allegiance to obey their commands, of what nature foever, without fcruple or repining-And advised me to correct the rebellious principles I had imbibed among the English, who, for their infolence to their kings, were notorious all over the world, even to a proverb.

Ð

49

In vindication of my countrymen, I repeated all the arguments commonly ufed to prove that every man has a natural right to liberty; that allegiance and protection are reciprocal; that when the mutual tie is broken by the tyranny of the king, he is accountable to the people for his breach of contract, and fubject to the penalty of the law; and that those infurrections of the English, which are branded with the name of rebellion, by the f flaves of arbitrary power, were no other than glorious e efforts to refeue that independence which was their birthright from the ravenous claws of usurping ambition .-e. The Frenchman, provoked at the little deference I paid fo the kingly name, loft all patience, and reproached refine in fuch a manner, that my temper forfook me, and n. I clinched my fift, with an intention to give him a hearty or on the car .- Perceiving my defign, he ftarted back, in and demanded a parley; upon which I checked my inhis tignation, and he gave me to understand, that a Frenchto man never forgave a blow; therefore, if I was not ig yeary of my life, I would do well to fpare him that mortification, EA tification, and do him the honour of meafuring his fword with mine, like a gentleman .- I took his advice and followed him to the field hard by, where, indeed,] was afhamed at the pitiful figure of my antagonift, who was a poor, little, fhivering creature, decrepid with age and blind of one eye .- But I foon found the folly of judging from appearances; being at the fecond pair wounded in the fword hand, and immediately difarmed with such a jerk, that I thought the joint was diflocated -I was no lefs confounded than enraged at this even, efpecially as my adverfary did not bear his fuccels with all the moderation that might have been expected; for he inlifted upon my afking pardon for affronting his kin and him .- This propolal I would by no means comp with, but told him it was a mean condefcention, which no gentleman in his circumftances ought to propofe, no any in my fituation ought to perform ;--- and that if h perfifted in his ungenerous demand, I would in my tur claim fatisfaction with my mufket, when we thould b more upon a par than with the fword, of which le feemed to much mafter.

CHAP. VIII.

In order to be rewenged I learn the science of defens-We join the Mareschal Duc de Noailles—are engage with the allies at Dettingen, and put to flight the behaviour of the French foldiers on that occasion— I industriously feek another combat with the old Gasea and wanquish him in my turn—our regiment is fainto winter quarters at Rheims, where I find my frice. Stratp—our recognition—be supplies me with mony and procures my discharge—we take a trip to Parh from whence by the way of Flanders we set out fo London, where we schely crriwe.

HE was difconcerted at this declaration, to which made no reply, but repaired to the dancers, amon whom he recounted his victory with many exaggrations and galconades; while I, taking up my fword, well to my quarters, and examined my wound, which I foun was of no confequence.—The fame day, an Irifh drum mer, having heard of my misfortune, vifited me, a

after having condoled me on the chance of war, gave me to understand, that he was master of his iword, and would in a very fhort time inftruct me fo thoroughly in that noble fcience, that I should be able to chaitile the old Galcon for his infolent boafting at my expence.-This friendly office he proffered on pretence of the regard he had for his countrymen ; but Fatterwardslearnt the true motive was no other than a jealoufy he entertained of a correspondence between the Frenchman and his wife, which he did not think proper to refent in perfon .- Be this as it will, I accepted his offer, and practifed his leffons with fuch application, that I foon believed myfelf a match for my conqueror. In the mean time we continued our march, and arrived at the camp of Marefehal Nozilles, the night before the battle of Dettingen. Notwithstanding the fatigue we had undergone, our regiment was one of those that were ordered next day to crofs the river, under the command of the Due de Gramont, to take poffeilion of a narrow defile, through which the allies must of necessity have passed at a great difadvantage, or remain where they were, and perifh for want of provision, if they would not condeicend to furrender at differention .- How they fuffered themfelves to be pent up in this manner, it is not my province to relate; I shall only observe, that when we had taken poffeffion of our ground, I heard an old officer, in convertation with another, exprets a furprize at the conduct of Lord Sthir, who had the reputation of a good general .- But it feems, at this time, that nobleman was over-ruled, and only acted in an inferior character; to that no part of the blame could be imputed to him, who declared his difapprobation of the ftep, in confequence of which the whole army was in the utmost danger : but Providence or deftiny acted miracles in their behalf, by disposing the Duc de Gramont to quit his advantageous polt, pais the defile, and attack the English, who were drawn up in order of battle on the plain, and who handled us to roughly, that, after having loft a great number of men, we turned our backs without ceremony, and fled with fuch precipitation, that many many hundreds perifhed in the river, through pure fear and confusion; for the enemy were to generous, that they did not purfue us one inch of ground; and if our confternation would have permitted, we might have retreated with great order and deliberation .- But, notwithstanding the royal clemency of the king of Great Britain, who headed the allies in perfon, and, no doubt, put a ftop to the carnage, our loss amounted to 5000 men, among whom were many officers of diffinction. Our milcarriage opened a paffage for the foe to Hanau, whither they immediately marched, leaving their fick and wounded to the care of the French, who next day took poffelfion of the field of battle, buried the dead, and treated the living with humanity .----- This circumflance was a great confolation to us, who thence took occation to claim the victory: And the genius of the French nation never appeared more confpicuous than now, in the rodomontades they uttered on the fubject of their generofity and courage. Every man (by his own account) performed feats that eclipted all the heroes of antiquity. -One compared himfelt to a lion retiring at leifure from his cowardly purfuers, who keep at a wary diffance, and gall him with their darts .- Another likened himfelf to a bear that retreats with his face to the enemy, who dare not affail him; and the third affumed the character of a desperate ftag, that turns upon the hounds, and keeps them at bay .- There was not a private foldier engaged, who had not by the prowels of his fingle arm demolifhed a whole platoon, or put a foundron of horfe to flight; and, among others, the meagre Gafcon extolled his exploits above those of Hercules or Charlemagne .- As I Itill retained my refentment for the difgrace I fuffered in my laft rencontre with him, and now, that I thought myfelf qualified, longed for an opportunity to retrieve my honour, I magnified the valour of the English with all the hyperboles I could imagine, and decried the pufillanimity of the French in the fame file, comparing them to hares flying before greyhounds, or mice purfued by cats; and paffed an ironical compliment on the speed he exerted in his flight, which, confidering his age and infirmities, I faid was furprifing .- He was flung to the quick by this farcafm, and, with an air of threatening difdain, bade me know myfelf better, and remember the correction I had already received from him for my infolence; for he might not always be in the humour of fparing a wretch who abufed his goodnefs. To this inuendo I made no reply, but by a kick in the breech, which overturned hun in an inftant.-He ftarted up with wonderful agility, and, drawing his fword, attacked me with great fury. Several people interpoied; but when he informed them of its being an affair of honour, they retired, and left us to decide the battle by ourfelves. I fustained his onfet with little damage, having only received a finall fcratch on my right fhoulder, and, teeing his breath and vigour almost exhausted, affaulted him in my turn, closed with him, and wretted his fword out of his hand in the ftruggle .- Having thus acquired the victory, I defired him to beg his life; to which demand he made no aniwer, but fhrugged up his thoulders to his ears, expanded his hands, elevated the ikin on his forehead and eye-brows, and depreffed the corners of his mouth in fuch a manner, that I could fcarce refrain from laughing aloud at his grotelque appearance .- That I might, however, mortify his vanity, which triumphed without bounds over my misfortune, I thrust his iword up to the hilt in fomething (it was not a tanly) that lay moaking on the plain, and joined the reft of the foldiers with an air of tranquillety and indifference.

There was nothing more of moment attempted by tither of the armies during the remaining part of the campaign, which being ended, the English marched back to the Netherlands; part of our army was detached to Franch Flanders; and our regiment ordered into winter quarters in Champagne.—It was the fate of the grenadier company, to which T now belonged, to lie at Rheims, where I found mytelf in the drmoff want of every thing; my pay, which amounted to five fols a day, far from fupplying me with neceffaries, being fearce fufficient to procure a wretched fubfiftence to keep foul and body together; fo that I was, by hunger and hard duty, brought down to she meagre condition of my fellow. foldiers; and my linen reduced from three tolerable fhirts; to two pair of fleeves and necks, the bodies having been long ago converted into fpatterdafhes; and arter all, I was better provided than any private man in the regiment. In this urgency of my affairs, I wrote to my uncle in England, though my hopes from that quarter were not at all fanguine, for the reafons I have already explained, and in the mean time had recourfe to my old remedy, patience; confoling mytelf with the flattering fuggetions of a lively imagination, that never abandoned me in my diffrefs.

54

One day, while I flood centinel at a gate of a general officer, a certain nobleman came to the door, followed by a gentleman in mourning, to whom, at parting, I heard him fay, " You may depend upon my good offices."-This affurance was answered by a low bow of the perfon in black, who turning to go away, difcovered to me the individual countenance of my old friend and adherent Strap .- I was fo much aftonished at the fight that I loft the power of utterance, and before I could recollect myfelf he was gone, without taking any notice of me .- Indeed, had he staid, I fcarcely should have ventured to accost him; because, tho' I was perfectly well acquainted with the features of his face, I could not be politively certain as to the reft of his perion, which was very much altered for the better fince he left me at London; neither could I conceive by what means he was enabled to appear in the iphere of a gentleman, to which, while I knew him, he had not even the ambition to afpire .- But I was too much concerned in the affair to neglect further information, and therefore took the first opportunity of alking the porter if he knew the gentleman to whom the Marquis fpoke. The Swiis told me his name was Monfieur d'Effrapes, that he had been valet de chambre to an English gentleman iately deceafed, and that he was very much regarded by the marquis for his fidelity to his mafter, between whom and that nobleman a very intimate friendship had sublished. -Nothing could be more agreeable to me than this piece piece of intelligence, which banifhed all doubt of its being my friend, who had found means to Frenchify his name as well as his behaviour fince we parted .- As foon, therefore, as I was relieved, I went to his lodging, according to a direction given me by the Swifs, and had the good fortune to find him at home. That I might furprife him the more, I concealed my name and bufinels, and only defired the fervant of the houfe to tell Monfieur d'Estrapes, that I begged the honour of half an hour's conversation with him .- He was confounded and diffmayed at the meffage, when he underflood it was fent by a foldier. Though he was confcious to himfelf of no crime, all that he had heard of the Baltille appeared to his imagination with aggravated horror ; and it was not before I had waited a confiderable time, that he had refolution enough to bid the fervant fnew me up Itairs .- When I entered his chamber, he returned my bow with great civility, and endeavoured, with forced complaifance, to difguife his fear, which appeared in the paleneis of his face, the wildness of his looks, and the thaking of his limbs .---- I was diverted at his confernation, which redoubled, when I told him in French, I had bufinels for his private ear, and demanded a particular audience .- The valet being withdrawn, I afked in the fame language, if his name was d'Effrapes, to which he answered with a faultering tongue, " The fame, at your fervice."-" Are you a Frenchman?" (faid I)-" I have not the honour of being a Frenchman born, (replied he,) but I have an infinite veneration for the country."-I then defired he would do me the honour to look at me, which he no fooner did, than, firuck with my appearance, he flarted back, and cried in English, "O Jeius !- Sure it can't! No, 'tis impoffible !"-I finiled at his interjections, faying, " I suppose you are too much of a gentleman to own your triend in adversity,"-When he heard me pronounce thele words in our own language, he leaped upon me in a transport of joy, hung about my neck, killed me from ear to ear, and blubbered like a great fcheal-boy who had been whipt .- Then observing my dress, he set up his throat,

55

56 crying, " O Lord! O Lord! that ever I should live to fee my dearest friend reduced to the condition of a foot foldier in the French fervice ! Why did you confent to my leaving you ?-But I know the reason-you thought you had got more creditable friends, and grew ashamed of my acquaintance-Ah! Lord help us! though I was a little fhort-fighted, I was not altogether blind :- And though I did not complain, I was not the leis fenfible of your unkindnets, which was indeed the only thing that induced me to ramble abroad, the Lord knows whither: but I must own it has been a lucky ramble for me, and fo I forgive you, and may God forgive you. -O Lord ! O Lord ! is it come to this ?"-I was nettled at the charge, which, though juft, I could not help thinking unfeatonable, and told lim, with fome tartness, that, whether his fufpicions were ill or well grounded, he might have cholen a more convenient opportunity of introducing them : And that the queition now was, whether or no he found himfelf difposed to lend me any affiltance. " Disposed !. (replied he with great emotion.) I thought you had known me fo well, as to affine yourielf, without afking, that I, and all that belongs to me, are at your command .-- In the mean time, you shall diffe with me, and I will tell you fomething that, perhaps, will not be difuleafing unto you .- Then wringing my hand, he faid, " It makes my heart bleed to lee you in that garb,"-I thanked him for his invitation, which, I observed, could not be unwelcome to a perion who had not eaten a comfortable meal thele feven months : But I had another request to make, which I begged he would grant before dinner, and that was the loan of a fhirt: For, though my back had been many weeks a firanger to any comfort of that kind, my ikin was not yet familiarized to the want of it-He flared in my face, with a woeful countenance, at this declaration, which he could fearce believe, until I explained it, by unbuttoning my coat, and ducloing my naked body; 3 circumftance that flocked the tender-hearted Strap, who with tears in his eyes, ran to a cheft of drawers, and taking out fome linen, prefented to me a very fine rufiled Floliand

Holland fhirt, and cambrick neckcloth, affirring me, he had three dozen of the fame kind at my fervice .--- I was ravifhed at this piece of good news ; and having accommodated myfelf in a moment, hugged my benefactor for his generous offer, faying, I was overjoyed to find him undebauched by profperity, which feldom fails to corrupt the heart. He bespoke for dinner some soup and bouille, a couple of pullets roafted, and a difh of aiparagus, and in the interim entertained me with bifcuit and Burgundy; after which repair, he entreated me to gratify his longing defire of knowing every circumftance of my fortune fince his departure from London .- This requeft I complied with, beginning at the adventure of Gawky, and relating every particular event in which I had been concerned from that day to the prefent hour. During the recital, my friend was ftrongly affected, according to the various fituations defcribed : He flarted with furprife, glowed with indignation, gaped with curiolity, finiled with pleafure, trembled with fear, and wept with forrow, as the viciffitudes of my life infpired these different paffions : and when my flory was ended, fignified his amazement on the whole, by lifting up his eyes and hands, and protefting, that, though I was a young man, I had fuffered more than all the bleffed mar-

After dinner, I defired in my turn to know the particulars of his perigrination ; and he fatisfied me in a few words, by giving me to understand, that he had lived a year at Paris with his matter, who in that time having acquired the language, as well as the fashionable exercifes, to perfection, made a tour of France and Holland, during which excursion, he was to unfortunate as to meet with three of his own countrymen on their travels, in whole company he committed fuch excelles, that his confitution failed, and he fell into a confumption; that, by the advice of physicians, he went to Montpelier for the benefit of good air, and recovered to well in fix weeks, that he returned to Rheims, feemingly in good health, where he had not continued above a month, when he was feized with a loofenets that carried him off in ten days, to the VOL. II. F

12

the unspeakable forrow of all who knew him, and especially of Strap, who had been very happy in his fervice, and given fuch fatisfaction, that his mafter, on his deathbed, recommended him to feveral perfons of diffinction, for his diligence, fobriety, and affection, and left him by will, his wearing apparel, gold watch, fword, rings, ready money, and all the moveables he had in France, to the value of three hundred pounds, " which I now (faid he) in the fight of God and man furrender to your abfolute disposal : Here are my keys, take them, I beleech you, and God give you joy of the pofferfion."-My brain was almost turned by the fudden change of fortune, which I could fcarce believe real : however, I politively refused this extravagant proffer of my friend, and put him in mind of my being a foldier; at which hint he itarted, crying, " Odfo ! that's true-we must procure your discharge .- I have some interest with a nobleman who is able to do me that favour."-We confulted about this affair, and it was determined, that Monf. d'Effrapes should wait upon the marquis in the morning, and tell him he had by accident found his brother, whom he had not feen for many years before, a private foldier in the regiment of Picardy, and implore that nobleman's intereft for his difcharge .- In the mean time we enjoyed ourfelves over a bottle of good Burgundy, and fpent the evening in concerting schemes for our future conduct, in cale I should be fo lucky as to get rid of the army .- The bufinels was to make ourfelves cafy for life, by means of his legacy, a talk very difficult, and, in the usual methods of laying out money, altogether impracticable; fo that after much canvailing, we could come to no refolution that night, but, when we parted, recommended the matter to the ierious attention of each other. As for my own part, I puzzled my imagination to no purpole. When I thought of turning merchant, the imallness of our flock, and the rifk of feas, enemies, and markets, deterred me from that feheme .- If I should fettle as a furgeon in my own country, I would find the buinci already overflocked; or if I pretended to fet up in Eng land, mult labour under want of friends, and powerte opposition oppolition, obfacles informountable by the moft fining merit: neither flould I fucceed in my cycleavours to rike in the flate, inafinuch as I could neither flatter nor pimp for courtiers, nor profitute my pen in defence of a wicked and contemptible administration.—Before I could form any fealible project, I fell alleep, and my fancy was bleffed with the image of my dear Narciffa, who feemed to imile upon my paffion, and offer her hand as a reward for all my toils.

59

Early in the morning, I went to the lodging of my friend, whom I found exulting over his happy invention; for I no fooner entered his apartment, than he addreffed himfelf to me in these words, with a smile of selfapplaufe: "Well, Mr. Random, a lucky thought may come into a fool's head fometimes. I have hit it-I'll hold you a button my plan is better than your's, for all your learning .- But you fhall have the preference in this as in all other things; therefore proceed, and let us know the effects of your meditation-and then I will impart my own fimple excogitations."-I told him, that not one thought had occurred to me which delerved the least notice, and fignified my impatience to be acquainted with the fruits of his reflection .- " As we have not (faid he) money fufficient to maintain us during a tedious expectation, it is my opinion, that a bold puff muft be made; and I fee none to likely to fucceed as your appearing in the character of a gentleman, (which is your due,) and making your addreffes to fome lady of fortune who can render you independent at once .- Nay, don't flare-I affirm that this icheme is both prudent and honourable; for I would not have you throw yourfelf away upon an old toothlefs, wheezing dame, whole breath would fink you into a confumption in lefs than three months; neither would I advife you to allume the character of a wealthy fquire, as your common fortunehunters do, by which means many a poor lady is cheated into matrimony, and, inflead of enjoying the pomp and grandeur that was promifed, fees her dowry feized by her hufband's rapacious creditors, and herfelf reduced to mifery and defpair .- No, I know you have a foul that Fa difdains fuch imposition ; and are master of qualifications both of mird and body, which alone intitle you to a match that will fet you above the world.----I have clothes in my pofferfion that a duke need not be afhamed to wear .-- I believe they will fit you as they are; if not, there are plenty of taylors in France.-Let us take a fhort trip to Paris, and provide ourfelves with all other neceffaries, then let out for England, where I intend to do myfelf the honour of attending you in quality of a valet .- This expedient will lave you the expence of a fervant, fhaving and dreffing; and I doubt not but, by the bleffing of God, we shall bring matters to a speedy and fortunate iffue."-Extravagant as this proposal was, I listened to it with pleasure, because it flattered my vanity, and indulged a ridiculous hope I began to entertain of my infpiring Narciffa with a mutual flame.

After breakfaft, Monfieur d'Eftrapes went to pay his devoirs to the marquis, and was to fuccelsful in his application, that I obtained a discharge in a few days; upon which we let out for Paris .- Here I had time to reflect and congratulate myfelf upon this fudden transition of fate, which to bear with moderation required fone degree of philosophy and self-denial.— This truth will be more obvious, if I give a detail of the particulars, to the quiet poficition of which I was railed in an inftant, from the most abject milery and contempt .- My ward robe confifted of five fashionable coats, full mounted two of which were plain, one of Jut velvet, one trimmed with gold, and another with filver lace : two frocks ; one of white drab with large plate buttons, the other of blue with gold binding : one wantcoar of gold brocade; one of blue latin, embroidered with filver; one of green filk, trimmed with broad-figured gold-lace; one of black filk, with fringes; one of white latin; one of black cloth, and one of fcarlet: fix pair of cloth breeches; one pair of crimfon, and another of black velvet: twelve pair of white filk flockings, as many of black filk, and the fame number of fine cotton; one hat laced with gold point d effort ne, another with Ever lace (colloped, a third with good binding, and a fourth plain; three dozen of fine ruff hirts, as many neckeleths; one dozen of cambrick handkerchiefs, and the like number of filk. The other moreables, which I poliefied by the generofity and friendfhip of Strap, were a gold watch with a chated cafe, two valuable diamond rings, two mourning ivoids, one with a filver handle, and a fourth cut field inlaid with gold; a diamond flock-buckle, and a fet of flore buckles for the knees and floces; a pair of filver mounted piftols with rich houfings; a gold-headed cane; and a fnuff-box of tortoife-fhell mounted with gold, having the picture of a lady in the top.—The gentleman left many other things of value, which my friend had converted into cafh before I met with him; fo that, over and above thefe particulars, our flock in ready money amounted to fomething more than two hundred pounds.

61

Thus equipt, I put on the gentleman of figure, and, attended by my honeft friend, who was contented with the station of my valet, visited the Louvre, examined the gallery of Luxemburgh, and appeared at Verfailles, where I had the honour of feeing his Molt Chriftian Majefty eat a confiderable quantity of olives .- During the month I fpent at Paris, I went feveral times to court, the Italian comedy, opera, and play-houle, danced at a malquerade, and, in thort, faw every thing remarkable in and about that capital .- Then we let out for England by the way of Flanders, paffed through Bruffels, Ghent, and Bruges, and took inipping at Oftend, from whence in fourteen hours we arrived at Deal, hired a poff-chaife, and in twelve hours more got fate to London; having difpoted of our heavy baggage in the waggon. CHAP. IX.

I enquire for my uncle, and underfland he is gone to fea —take lotlgings at Charing-crofs—go to the play, where I meet with an advenuire—dine at an ordinary: the guefts defiribed—become acquainted with Mediar and doitor Wagiail.

A^S fcon as we alighted at the inn, I difpatched Strap to enquire for my uncle, at the Union Flag in Wapping; and he returned in a little time, with an account of Mr. Bowling's having gone to fea, mate of a merchant-fhip, after a long and unfuccet/sful application and F^2 attendance attendance at the admiralty; where, it feems, the intereft he depended upon was not fufficient to reinflate him, or recover the pay that was due to him when he quitted the Thunder.

Next day I hired very handfome lodgings not far from Charing-crofs; and in the evening dreffed mylelf in a plain fuit of the true Paris cut, and appeared in a front box at the play, where I faw a good deal of company, and was vain enough to believe, that I was obferved with an uncommon degree of attention and applaufe. This filly conceit intoxicated me to much, that I was guilty of a thousand ridiculous coquetries; and I dare fay, how favourable foever the thoughts of the company might be at my first appearance, they were foon changed, by my abfurd behaviour, into pity or contempt .-- I role and lat down, covered and uncovered my head twenty times between the acts; pulled out my watch, clapped it to my ear, wound it up, fet it, gave it the hearing again ;---difplayed my fnuff-box, affected to take fnuff, that I might have an opportunity of thewing my brilliant, and wiped my note with a perfumed handkerchief;-then dangled my cane, and adjutted my fword knot, and acted many more fooleries of the faine kind, in hopes of attaining the character of a pretty fellow, in the acquiring of which, I found two confiderable obstructions in my disposition; namely, a natural referve and jealous tentibility. Fain would I have entered into conversation with the people around me; but I was reftrained by the fear of being centured for my affurance, as well as by reflecting that I was more entitled to a compliment of this kind from them, than they to fuch condefcention from a ftranger like me .- How often did I redden at the frequent whilpers and loud laughter of my fellow beaux, which I imagined were excited by me! and how often did I envy the happy indifference of those choice spirits who beheld the diffrels of the icene, without difcovering the least symptom of approbation or concern! My attention was engaged in fpite of myfelf, and I could not help weeping with the heroine of the stage; though I practified a great many fhifts to conceal this piece of unpolite weaknefs .- When the play was ended, I fat waiting for an opportunity of handing fome lady to her coach; but every one was attended by fuch a number of officious gallants, that for a long time I was baulked in my expectation .---- At length, however, I perceived a very handfome creature, genteely dreffed, fitting by herfelf in a box, at fome distance from me; upon which I went up to her, and offered my fervice .- She feemed to be in tome confution, thanked me for my complaifance, and with a tender look declined giving me the trouble; looking at her watch, and teltifying her furprife at the negligence of her footman, whom the had ordered to have a chair ready for her at that hour .- I repeated my entreaty with all the eloquence and compliment I was malter of; and in the event, the was prevailed upon to accept of a propofal I made, to fend my fervant for a chair or coach : Accordingly, Strap was detached for that purpole, and returned without fuccets. By this time the play-houle was quite empty, and we were obliged to retire. As I led her through the paffage, I observed five or fix young fellows of fashion standing in a corner, one of whom, as I thought, tipt my charmer the wink; and when we were past I heard them fet up a loud laugh .- This note arouled my attention, and I was refolved to be fully fatisfied of this lady's character before I should have any nearer connection with her .- As no convenience appeared, I proposed to conduct her to, a tavern, where we might ftay a few minutes, till my fervant could fetch a coach from the Strand .- She feemed particularly fhy of truffing herielf in a tavern with a ftranger; but at laft yielded to my pathetic remonstrances, rather than endanger her health, by remaining in a cold damp thoroughfare .- Having thus far fucceeded, I begged to know what wine fhe would be pleated to drink a glafs of; but the proteffed the greatelt avertion to all forts of ftrong liquors; and it was with much difficulty that I could perfuade her to eat a jelly .- In the mean time, I endeavoured to alleviate the uncafine's the difcovered, by laying all the agreeable things I could think of; at

64 which the would often figh, and regard me with a languifhing look, that feemed however too near a-kin to the lewd leer of a courtezan.-This difcovery added to my former fuspicion, while it put me upon my guard against her arts, divested me of referve, and enabled me to entertain her with gaiety and freedom .- In the course of her convertation, I proffed her to allow me the honour of waiting upon her next day at her lodgings, a request which she, with many apologies, refused, left it fhould give umbrage to Sir John, who was of a disposition apt to be fretted with trifles .- This information, by which I was to underfrand that her hufband was a knight, did not check my addreffes, which became more and more importunate, and I was even hardy enough to ravifh a kifs .- But, O heaven's! inflead of banquetting on the ambrofial flavour that her delicacy of complexion promifed, I was almost fuffocated with the fteams of Geneva! An exhalation of this kind from a mouth which had just before declared an utter abhorrence of all fpirituous liquors, not only changed my doubts into certainty, but my raptures into loathing; and it would have been impoffible for me to have preferved common complaifance five minutes longer, when my fervant returned with the coach. I took the advantage of this occasion, and prefented my hand to the lady, who put in practice against me the whole artillery of her charms, ogling, languifhing, fighing, and iqueezing, with to little referve, that Strap perceived her tendernels, and rubbed his hands with joy as he followed us to the door;-but I was proof against all her endearments, and handed her into the coach with an intention to take my leave immediately. She gueffed my defign, and invited me to her house, whilpering, that now Sir John was gone to bed, flie could have the pleafure of my conversation for half an hour without interruption. I told her there was no mortification I would not undergo rather than endanger the repole of her ladylhip; and bidding the coachman drive on, withed her a good night She loft all temperat my indifference; and fropping th coach at the diffance of about twenty yards from me popped popped out her head, and bawled with the lungs of a fift-woman, "Damn you, you dog, won't you pay the coach hire?" As I made no answer, file held forth against me with an eloquence peculiar to hericit; calling me pitiful fellow, icoundrei, and an hundred fuch appellations; concluding with an oath, that, for all my appearance, file believed I had goe no money in my pocket.

Having thus vented her indignation, the ordered the coachinan to proceed, and I returned to the tavern, where I belioke fomething for fupper, very well pleafed at the iffue of this adventure .--- I difpended with the attendance of the waiter at table, on pretence that my own fervant was prefent; and when we were alone, faid to Strap, "Well, Monfieur d'Estrapes, what do you think of this lady ?"-My friend, who had not opened his mouth fince her departure, could make no other reply than the monofyllable " Think ;" which he pronounced with a note of fear and altonifament .--- Surprifed at this emphasis, I furveyed my valet, and perceiving a wildness in his looks, afked if he had seen his grandfather's ghoft? "Ghoft! (faid he.) I am fure I have feen a devil incarnate! Who would have thought that fo much devilifh malice and Billingigate could lurk under fuch fweetness of countenance and modulty of behaviour? Ah! God help us! Fronti nulla fides-nimium ne crede colori-but we ought to down on our knees and blefs God for delivering us from the jaws of that painted fepulchre."-I was pretty much of Strap's opinion ; and though I did not believe myfelf in any danger from the allurements of that fifterhood, I determined to act with great circumfpection for the future, and thun all commerce of that kind, as equally prejudicial to my purle and constitution.

My next care was to introduce mylelf into a fet of good acquaintance; for which purpole I frequented a certain coffee-houle, noted for the refort of good company, English as well as foreigners, where my appearance procured all the civilities and advances I could defire. As there was an ordinary in the fame house, I

66 went up flairs to dinner with the other gueffs, and found myfelf at a table with thirteen people, the greatest part of whom were better dreffed than myfelf .- The converfation, which was mostly carried on in the French, turned chiefly on politics ; and I foon found the whole company was in the French interest, myfelf excepted, and a teffy old gentleman, who contradicted every thing that was advanced in favour of his Moft Christian Majefty, with a furlinefs truly English .- But this truly patriot, who had never been out of his own country, and drew all his maxims and notions from prejudice and hearfay, was very unequal to his antagonists, who were fuperior to him in learning and experience, and often took the liberty of travellers, in afferting things which were not firifily true, becaufe they thought themfelves The claim of in no danger of being detected by him. the queen of Spain to the Auftrian dominions in Italy, was fully explained and vindicated, by a perfon who fat opposite to me, and by the folemnity of his manner, and the richness of his apparel, feemed to be a foreign ambaffador.-This differtation produced another on the pragmatic fanction, handled with great warmth by a young gentleman at my right hand, dreffed in a green frock trimmed with gold, who juftified the French king for his breach of that contract; and affirmed that he could not have observed it, without injuring his own glory. Although I was not at all convinced by this gentleman's arguments, I could not help admiring his vivacity, which I imagined muft be the effect of his illuftrious birth and noble education, and accordingly rated him in my conjecture as a young prince on his travels .- The difcourfe was afterwards fhifted by an old gentleman, of a very martial appearance, to the lall campaign, when the battle of Dettingen was fought over again, with to many circumfrances to the honour of the French, and difadvantage of the allies, that I began to entertain fome doubts of my having been there in perfon, and took the liberty to mention fome objections to what he advanced .- This freedom introduced a difpute, which lasted a good while, to the mortification of all prefent; and was as last referred to the determination of a grave perfon, whom they filed doctor, and who, under a fnew of great moderation, decided it against me, with fo little regard to truth, that I taxed him with partiality in pretty fevere terms, to the no finall entertainment of the true English politician, who rejoiced at my defence of a caufe he had to often efpoufed without fuccels. My opponent, pleafed with the victory he had gained, affected a great deal of candour, and told me, he thould not have been to politive, if he had not been at great pains to inform himfelf of each particular .- " Indeed (faid he) I am convinced that, the previous fteps confidered, things could not happen otherwife; for we generals who have feen fervice, though we may not be on the fpot ourfelves, know by the leaft fketch of the difpolition what must be the event."-----He then cenfured, with great freedom, every circumfance of the conduct of those who commanded the allies; from thence made a transition to the ministry, which he honoured with many invectives, for employing people who had neither experience nor capacity, to the prejudice of old officers who had been diftinguished for both ; dropt many hints of his own importance; and concluded with observing, that the French and Spaniards know better how to value generals of merit; the good effects of which were feen in the conqueits they gain, and the admirable discipline of their troops, which are at the fame time better clothid and paid than any foldiers in the universe. These remarks furnished the green knight with an opportunity of launching out in the praife of the French government in general, civil as well as military; on which occasion he made many odious comparifons to the difadvantage of the English. Every body, almost, affented to the observations he made ; and the doctor gave his fanction, by faying, the people in France were undoubtedly the happiest subjects in the world .- I was fo much altonithed and confounded at their infatuation and effrontery, that I had not power to utter one word in opposition to their affertions; but my morole affociate could not put up with the indignity that was offered to Old England, and therefore with a fatirical grin addreffed himfelf to the general in thefe words: " Sir, Sir, I have often heard it faid, She's a willainous bird that befouls her own neft. As for what those people, who are foreigners, fay, I don't mind it, they know no better; but you, who were bred and born, and have got your bread under the English government, fhould have more regard to gratitude as well as truth, in centuring your native country .- If the minifly have thought fit to lay you afide, I fuppose they have their own reasons for io doing; and you ought to remember that you still live on the bounty of this nation. for these gentlemen (meaning the prince and ambassador) who make to free with our conftitution, laws, and genus of our people, I think they might fhew a little more refpect for their benefactors, who, I must own, are to blame in harbouring, protecting, and encouraging fuch ungrateful vagrants as they are."-At thele words the chevalier in green flarted up in a great paffion, and laying his hand on the hilt of his hanger, exclaimed, "Ha, foutre !"---- The Englishman, on the other hand, grafping his cane, cried, " Don't foutre me, firrah, or by G-d, I'll knock you down."-The company interpofed, the Frenchman fat down again, and his antagonia proceeded -. Lookee, Monfieur, you know very well, that had you dared to fpeak to freely of the administration of your own country in Paris, as you have done of ours in London, you would have been fent to the Baftille without ceremony, where you might have rotted in a dungeon, and never feen the light of the fun again--Now, Sir, take my word for it, although our confitution fcreens us from fuch opprefion, we want not laws to chaffile the authors of feditious difcourie; and if I hear another fyllable out of your mouth, in contempt or prejudice of this kingdom, I will give you a convincin proof of what I advance, and have you laid by the heels for your prefumption."-This declaration had an effect on the company as fudden as furpriling. The young princi became (upple as a fpaniel, the am baffador trenabled, the general fat filent and abaffied and the doctor, who, it teems, had felt the rod of power, grew pale as death, and affored us all, that he had no intention to affront any perfon or people, ----- "Your principles, doctor, (refumed the old gentleman,) are no secret .---- I have nothing to fay upon that head; but am very much furprifed that a man, who defpifes us fo much, thould notwithftanding live among us, when he has no visible motive for fo doing .---- Why don't you take up your habitation in your beloved France, where you may rail at England without centure."-To this remonstrance the doctor thought proper to make no reply; and an unfocial filence enfued; which I perceiving, took notice, that it was pity fuch idle difputes, maintained very often through whim or diversion, should create any mifunderstanding among gentlemen of good lenfe; and proposed to drink down all animofity in another bottle .---- This motion was applauded by the whole company: The wine was brought; and the English champion declaring he had no fpleen against any man for differing in opinion from him, any more than for difference of complexion, drank to the good health of all prefent : the compliment was returned, and the conversation once more became unreferved, though more general than before. Among other topics, the fubject of war was introduced, on which the general declaimed with great eloquence, recounting many of his own exploits by way of illustration. In the course of his harangue he happened to mention the word epaulement, upon which the telly gentleman afked the meaning of that term .- " I'll tell you what an epaulement is, (replied he.)-I never law an epaulement but once-and that was at the fiege of Namur-In a council of war, Monfieur Cohorn, the famous engineer, affirmed the place could not be taken." - Yes (taid the prince of Vaudemont) it may be taken by an epaulement."-This was immediately put in execution, and in twenty-four-hours, Marefehal Boutflers was fain to capitulate. Here he made a fuil ftop; and the old gentleman repeated the queition, "But pray what is an epaulement ?"-To this interrogation the officer made no immediate reply, but rung the bell, and Vol. H. 3

67

68

THE ADVENTURES OF 70 called for a bill, which being brought, he threw down his proportion of the reckoning, and telling the company, he would fnew them an epaulement when his Majefty should think fit to entrust him with the command of our army abroad, firutted away with great dignity. I could not imagine why he was to fly of explaining one of the most fimple terms of fortification; which I forthwith defcribed as a fide-work, composed of earth, gabions, or fafcines; but I was very much furprized when I afterwards underftood that his referve proceeded from his ignorance .- Having paid our bill, we adjourned to the coffee-room, where my fellow-labourer infilted on treating me with a difh, giving me to underftand at the fame time, that I had acquired his good opinion, both with respect to my principles and understanding .--thanked him for his compliment; and profeffing myield an utter franger in this part of the world, begged he would have the goodness to inform me of the quality and characters of the people who dined above .- This requeit was a real favour to one of his difpolition, which was no lefs communicative than curious: he therefore complied with great fatisfaction, and told me, to my extreme aftonifhment, that the fuppoled young princewas a dancer at one of the theatres ; and the ambaffador no other than a fiddler belonging to the opera. " The doctor (faid he) is a Roman catholic prieft, who fometimes appears in the charaSter of an officer, and affumes the name of captain; but more generally takes the garb, title, and behaviour of a phytician, in which capacity he wheedles himfelf into the confidence of weak minded people, and, by arguments no lefs specious than falfe, converts them from their religion and allegiance. -He has been in the hands of juffice more than once for such practices; but he is a fly dog, and manages matters with io much crait, that hitherto he has eleaped for a thort imprisonment, -As for the general, you may fee he has owed his promotion more to his interest than his capacity; and now that the eyes of the ministry are opened, his friends dead, or become inconfiderable, he is firuck off the lift, and obliged to put up with a yearly peniion; penfion: in confequence of this reduction, he is become malcontent, and inveighs against the government in all companies, with fo little distretion, that I am furprif.d at the lenity of the administration in overlooking his infolence : but the truth of the matter is? he owes his fafety to his weakness and want of importance .---- He has feen a little, and but a little fervice; and yet, if you will take his word for it, there has not been a great action performed in the field fince the Revolution, in which he was not principally concerned. When a ftory is told of any great general, he immediately matches it with one of himfelf; though he his often unhappy in his tail, that every body is in pain for him .- Cæfar, Pompey, and Alexander the Great, are continually in his mouth; and as he reads a good deal, without any judgment to digeft it, his ideas are confused, and his harangues as unintelligible as infinite; for once he begins, there is no chance of his leaving off fpeaking, while one perfon remains to yield attention ; therefore the only expedient I know, for putting a ftop to his loquacity, is to lay hold of fome incongruity he has uttered, and demand an explanation; or alk the meaning of fome difficult term that he knows by name only: this method will effectually put him to filence, if not to flight, as it happened when I enquired about an epaulement .- Had he been acquainted with the fignification of that word, his triumph would have been intolerable, and we must have quitted the field first, or been worried with impertinence." -Having thus gratified my curiofity, the old gentleman began to difcover his own, in queltions relating to myfelf, to which I thought proper to return ambiguous anlivers .-.... I prefume, Sir, (faid he,) you have travelled." -I answered, " Yes." " I dare fay, you would find it very expensive," (faid he.)-I replied, " To be fure, one cannot travel without money."-" That I know by experience, (faid he;) for I myfelf take a trip to Bath or Tunbridge every feation : and one mult pay fauce for what he has on the road as well in other countries as in this____ That's a very pretty frome in your ring____ give give me leave, Sir-The French have attained a wonderful skillen making compositions of this kind .-- Why now, this looks almost as well as a diamond."-" Almoft as well, Sir, (faid I :) why not altogether -I'm fure, if you understand any thing of jewels, you must perceive at first light, that this itone is a real diamond, and that of a very fine water. Take it in your hand, and examine it."-He did fo, with some confusion, and returned it, faying, " I alk your pardon : I fee it is a true brilliant, of immense value."-I imagined his respect for me increafed after this enquiry : therefore, to captivate his effeem the more, I told him, I would fhew him a feal of composition, engraved after a very valuable antique; upon which I pulled out my watch with arich gold chain, adorned with three feals fet in gold, and an opal ring .---- He viewed each of them with great eagerneis, handled the chain, admired the chaled cale, and obferved, that the whole must have coft me a valt fum of money. I affected indifference, and replied in a careles manner, " Some trifle of fixty or leventy guineas."-He stared in my face for fome time, and then asked me if I was an Englishman ? I answered in the negative .--" You are from Ireland then, Sir, I prefume," (faid he.) I made the fame reply. "O! perhaps, (faid he,) you was born in one of our fettlements abroad."-I till antwered, No .- He feemed very much furprited, and laid, he was ture I was not a foreigner .- I made no reply, but left him upon the tenterhooks of impatient uncertainty .- He could not contain his anxiety, but aiked pardon for the liberties he had taken, and, to encourage me the more to difclose my fituation, displayed his own a confiderable annuity, on which I live according to my own inclination; and make the ends of the year meet very comfortably .----- As I have no effate to leave behind me, I am not troubled with the importunate offcioufnets of relations, or legacy hunters ; and I confider the world as made for me, not me for the world It is my maxim therefore to enjoy it while I can, and let futurity thift for itfelf."----While he thus indulged his own talkative vein, and at the fame time, no doubt, expected a retaliation from me, a young man entered, dreffed in black velvet, and an enormous tye-wig, with an air in which natural levity and affected folemnity were fo jumbled together, that on the whole be appeared a burlesque on all decorum. This ridiculous oddity danced up to the table at which we fat, and, after a thousand grimaces, afked my friend, by the name of Mr. Medlar, if we were not engaged upon bulinels .- My companion put on a furly countenance, and replied; " No great bufinels, doctor-But, however !"---- " O! then (cried the phyfician) I must beg your indulgence a little: pray pardon me, gentlemen .- Sir, (faid he, addrefling himfelf to me,) your most humble fervant : I hope you will forgive me, Sir-I must beg the favour to fit-Sir-Sir, I have fomething of confequence to impart to my friend, Mr. Medlar-Sir, I hope you will excufe my freedom in whifpering, Sir."-Before I had time to give this complaifant perion my permiflion, Mr. Medlar cried, " I'll have no whitpering-if you have any thing to fay to me, fpeak with an audible voice."--- The doctor feemed a little difconcerted at this exclamation, and turning again to me, made a thousand apologies for pretending to make a myltery of any thing, a piece of caution which he faid was owing to his ignorance of my connexion With Mr. Medlar ; but now he understood I was a friend, he would communicate what he had to fay in my hearing .---- He then began, after two or three hems, in this manner :-- " You mult know, Sir, I am just come from dinner at my Lady Flareit's, (then addreffing himfelf to me,) a lady of quality, Sir, at whofe table I have the honour of dining fometimes .---- There was Lady Stately and my Lady Larum, and Mrs. Dainty, and Mifs Biddy Gigler; upon my word a very good-natured young lady, with a pretty fortune, Sir .- There were alfo my Lord Straddle, Sir John Shrug, and matter Billy Chatter, who is actually a very facetious young gentleman -So, Sir, her ladyflip lieing me exceffively fatigued -for the was the laft of fifteen patients (people of diffinction, Sir) whom Guz 3

71

73

74

whom I had visited this forenoon,-infifted upon my flaying dinper; though, upon my word, I protect I had no appetite : however, in compliance with her ladythip's requeft, Sir, I fat down, and the convertation turning on different fubjects, among other things, Mr. Chatter afked very earneftly when I faw Mr. Medlar. -I told him I had not had the pleafure of feeing you these nineteen hours and a half; for you may remember, Sir, it was nearly about that time; I won't be politive as to a minute."---- " No! (lays he:) then I defire you will go to his lodgings immediately after dinner, and fee what's the matter with him, for he must certainly be very bad, from having laft night eat fuch a vaft quantity of raw oyfters."-The crufty gentleman, who, from the folemnity of his delivery, expected fomething extraordinary, no fooner heard his conclusion, than he ftarted up in a tefty humour, crying, " Pihaw, pfhaw! d-n your oyfters;" and walked away after a fhort compliment of, " Your fervant, Sir," to me. The doctor got up alfo, faying, " I vow and proteft, upon my word, I am actually amazed," and followed Mr. Medlar to the bar, which was hard by, where he was paying for his coffee. There he whifpered fo loud, that I could overhear, " Pray, who is this gentleman ?"----His friend replied haftily, " I might have known that before now, if it had not been for your impertinent intrution," and walked off very much disappointed. The ceremonious phylician returned immediately, and fat down by me, afking a thousand pardons for leaving me alone and giving me to understand, that what he had communicated to Mr. Medlar at the bar was an affair of the last importance, that would admit of no delay. He then called for fome coffee, and launched out into the virtue of that berry, which, he faid, in cold phlegmatic conflitutions, like his, dried up the fuperflous moilture, and braced the relaxed nerves. He told me it was utterly unknown to the ancients; and derived its name from an Arabian word, which I might eafily perceive by the found and termination. From this topic he transferred his diquintions to the word drink, which he affirmed, was improperly improperly applied to the taking of coffee, in as much as people did not drink, but fip or fipple, that liquor; that the genuine meaning of drinking is to quench one's thirft, or commit a debauch by fwallowing wine; that the Latin word, which conveyed the fare idea, was bibere or potare ; and that of the Greeks, pinein or poteein ; though he was apt to believe they were differently used on different occasions. For example; to drink a vaft quantity, or, as the vulgar expreis it, to drink an ocean of liquor, was in Latin potare, and in Greek potrein; and on the other hand, to use it immoderately, was bibere and pinein; that this was only a conjecture of his own, which, however, feemed to be fupported by the word bibulous, which is particularly applied to the pores of the fkin, that can only drink a very fmall quantity of the circumambient moisture, by reason of the smallness of their diameters; whereas, from the verb poteein, is derived the fubstantive potamos, which fignifies a river, or vaft quantity of liquor .---- I could not help finiling at this learned and important inveltigation ; and to recommend myfelf the more to my new acquaintance, whole difpolition I was by this time well informed of, I observed, that what he alledged did not, to the best of my remembrance, appear in the writings of the affcients : for Horace uses the words poto and bibo indiffesently for the fame purpofe, as in the twentieth Ode of his first Book.

Vile potabis modizis fubinum cantharis, —Et prælo domitam caleno tu bibes uvam.

That I had never heard of the verb potecin; but that jotanas, potema, and potos, were derived from pina, pojo, pepoka; in confequence of which the Greek poets never ule any other word for feltal drinking.—Homer defcribes Neffor at his cups in thefe words:

Neflora d'ouk elathen jache pinonta perempes. And Anacreon mentions it on the fame occasion almost in every page, Pinonti de oinon hedun Otan pino tan oinon. Opliz' ego de pino.

And

76 And in a thousand other places .- The doctor, who, doubtless, intended, by his criticiim, to give me a high idea of his erudition, was infinitely furprifed to find himfelf schooled by one of my appearance: and, aftera confiderable nufe, cried, " Upon my word ! you are in the right, Sir-I find I have not confidered this affair with my ufual accuracy."-Then accofting me in Latin, which he spoke very well, the conversation was maintained full two hours, on a variety of lubjects, in that language; and, indeed, he fpoke fo judicioufly, that I was convinced, notwithstanding his whimsical appearance, and attention to trifles, that he was a man of extenfive knowledge, efpecially in books : he looked upon me, as I afterwards underftood from Mr. Medlar, as a prodigy in learning, and proposed that very night, if I was not engaged, to introduce me to leveral young gentlemen of fortune and fashion, with whom he had an appointment at the Bedford coffee-houfe.

CHAP. IX.

Wagtail introduces me to a fet of fine gentlemen, with whom I spend the evening at a tavern-our converfation-the characters of my new companions-the doctor is roafied-the iffue of our debauch.

Accepted his offer with pleafure, and we went thither in a backney coach, where I faw a great number of gay figures fluttering about, most of whom speke to the doctor with great familiarity. Among the reft flood a groupe of them around the fite, whom I immediately knew to be the very perions who had the night before, by their laughing, alarmed my fulpicion of the lady who had put herfelf under my protection .- They no fooner perceived me enter with Dr. Wagtail (for that was my companion's name) than they tittered and whilpered one to another: and I was not a little furprifed to find that they were the gentlemen to whole acquaintance he defigned to recommend me; for when he observed them together, he told me who they were, and defined to know by what name he fhould introduce me. I fatisfied him in that particular, and he advanced with great gravity laying, "Gentlemen, your noft obedient-give me leave to introduce my friend Mr. Random to your fociety." Then turning to me, " Mr. Random, this is Mr. Bragwell-Mr. Banter, Sir-Mr. Chatter-my friend Mr. Slyboot, and Mr. Ranter, Sir."-I faluted each of them in order; and when I came to take Mr. Slyboot by the hand, I perceived him thruft his tongue in his check, to the no hnall entertainment of the company; but I did not think proper to take any notice of it on this occation. Mr. Ranter too (who I afterwards learned was a player) difplayed his talents, by mimicking my air, features, and voice, while he returned my compliment : This feat I should not have been fo lenfible of, had I not feen him behave in the fame manner to my friend Wagrail, when he made up to them at first. -But for once I let him enjoy the fruits of his dexterity without question or controul, refolved, however, to chaftife his infolence at a more convenient opportunity. -Mr. Slyboot, gueffing I was a ftranger, afked if I had been lately in France ? and when I antwered in the affirmative, inquired if I had feen the Luxembourg gallery ? I told him I had confidered it more than once with great attention : Upon this a conversation enfued, in which I difcovered him to be a painter-While we were difcourfing upon the particulars of this famous performance, I overheard Banter afk Dr. Wagtal. where he had picked up this Mr. Random .- To which question the physician aniwered, " Upon my word, a mighty pretty fort of a gentleman-a man of fortune, Sir-he has made the grand tour, and feen the best company in Europe, Sir." -"What, he told you fo? I fuppole, (faid the other.) I take him to be neither more nor lefs than a French valet de chambre."-" Oh! barbarous, barbarous! (wied the doctor :) this is actually, upon my word, altogether unaccountable .- I know all his family perfectly well, Sir; he's of the Randoms of the north-a very ancient house, Sir, and a distant relation of mine."-I was extremely nettled at the conjecture of Mr. Banter, and began to entertain a very indifferent opinion of my company in general ; but as I might poffibly by their means acquire a more extensive and agreeable acquaintance, tance, I determined to bear these little mortification as long as r could, without injuring the dignity of me character .- After having talked fome time on the wea ther, plays, politics, and other coffee-house subjects, i was propofed that we fhould fpend the evening at a note tavern in the neighbourhood, whither we repaired in body .- Having taken pofferfion of a room, called for French wine, and bespoke supper, the glass went about pretty freely, and the characters of my affociates opened upon me more and more .- It foon appeared that the doctor was entertained as a butt for the painter and played to exercise their wit upon for the diversion of the com pany. Mr. Ranter began the game, by afking him what was good for a hoarfenels, lownels of fpirits and indic gestion, for he was troubled with all these complaint to a very great degree .---- Wagtail immediately under took to explain the nature of his cafe, and in a very prolix manner harangued upon prognoftics, diagnoftic fymptomatics, therapeutics, inanition, and repletion then calculated the force of the fromach and lungs I their respective operations; afcribed the player's mala to a diforder in these organs, proceeding from hard dein ing and vociferation, and prefcribed a courfe of ftom chics, with abfinence from venery, wine, and lot fpeaking; laughing, finging, coughing, fneezing, f hallooing .- " Pah, pah, (cried Ranter, interruptif him,) the remedy is worfe than the difeate-I with b knew where to find fome tinder-water."-" Tindew water ! (faid the dostor :) upon my word I don't appl hend you, Mr. Ranter."-" Water extracted from pl der (replied the other,) an universal specific for all diffe to pers incident to man. It was invented by a learn German monk, who for a valuable confideration in parted the fecret to Paracelfus."-" Pardon me, (enec the painter:) it was first used by Solomon, as appears pr a Greek manufcript, in his own hand-writing, late found at the foot of Mount Lebanon, by a pealant wre was digging for potatoes."-" Well, (faid Wagtail,) all my vaft reading, I never met with fuch a preparation neither did I know, till this minute, that Solomon deritod

78

RODERIC RANDOM. 79 norflood Greek, or that potatoes grew in Paleftine."ere Banter interposed, faying, he was furprised that r. Wagtail should make the least doubt of Solomon's derftanding Greek, when he is represented to us as the felt and belt educated prince in the world; and as for statoes, they were transplanted thither from Ireland, in or time of the Crufades, by fome knights of that coun-. " I profefs (faid the doctor) there is nothing more elely-I would actually give a valt fum for a fight of hat manufcript, which must be ineftimable-And if I ederftood the process, would let about it immediately." The player affored him, the process was very fimthat he must cram a hundred weight of dry tinder dio a glafs retort, and, diffilling it by the force of aninil heat, it would yield half a fcruple of infipid water, let drop of which is a full dofe .- " Upon my integrity ! exclaimed the credulous doctor,) this is very amazing ! ic extraordinary ! that a caput mortuum shall yield any onter at all-I must own I have always been an enemy s lipecifics, which I thought inconfistent with the naare of animal ceconomy; but certainly the authority of nomon is not to be questioned .- I wonder where I mill find a glass retort large enough to contain fuch a of quantity of tinder, the confumption of which muft doubtedly raife the price of paper-or where thall I till animal heat fufficient even to warm fuch a mais." h Slyboot informed him, that he might have a retort down for him as big as a church; and that the eafielt pthod of railing the vapour by animal heat, would be place it in the middle of an infirmary for feverish patests, who might lie upon matreffes around, and in conwith it .- He had no fooner pronounced these words, in Wagtail exclaimed, in a rapture, " An admirable enedient, as I hope to be faved ! I will politively put it spractice."-This fimplicity of the phylician furnished atellent divertion for the company, who, in their turns, wred at him in ironical compliments, which his vanity 1, llowed as the genuine fentiments of their hearts .-the Chatter, impatient of fo long a filence, now broke a b and entertained us with a catalogue of all the peood who danced at the laft Hampftead affembly, with a molt

80

most circumstantial account of the dreis and ornaments of each, from the lappets of the ladies to the thoe-buckla of the men ; concluding with telling Bragwell, that he Melinda was there, and feemed to mils him ; and foliering his company at the next occation of that kind .-" No, no, damme, (faid Bragwell,) I have fomethin elfe to mind than dangling after a parcel of giddy-headen girls; befides, you know my temper is fo unruly, that I am apt to involve myfelf in icrapes when a woman's concerned. The last time I was there, I had an affar with Tom Trippet."-" O! I remember that, (crid Banter:) you lugged out before the ladies; and I commend you for fo doing, because you had an opportunity of fhewing your manhood without running rifk."-" Rifk ! (faid the other, with a fierce cous tenance.) Damn my blood! I fear no rifks. I ant afraid of lugging out against any man that wears a head damme! 'Tis well known I have drawn blood more than once, and loft fome too; but what does that fignify The player begged this champion to employ him as ho fecond the next time he intended to kill, for he wanted to fee a man die of a ftab, that he might know how w act fuch a part the more naturally on the ftage .- " Die! (replied the hero.) No, by God ! I know better thing than to incur the verdict of a Middle.ex jury-I thous look upon my fencing-mafter to be an ignorant fon ef bitch, if he had not taught me to prick any part of my antagonift's body, that I please to difable ?- " One (cried Slyboot,) if that be the cafe, I have a favour to ak. You must know I am employed to paint a Jeius on the crofs; and my purpole is to represent him at that pour of time when the ipear is thruft into his fide .- Now fhould be glad you would, in my prefence, pink tome m pertinent rellow into convultions, without endangering life, that I may have an opportunity of taking a goo elever agony from nature .- The doctor will direct to where to enter, and how far to go : but pray let it be near the left fide as poffible." Wagtail, who took the propofal ferioufly, obferved, that it would be a very d cult matter to penetrate into the left fide of the thora without hurting the heart, and of confequence kill the patient; but he believed it was poffible for a man of a very nice hand, and exact knowledge of anatomy, to wound the diaphragma fomewhere about the fkirts, which might induce a fingultus, without being attended with death ; that he was ready to demonstrate the infertion of the muscle to Mr. Bragwell ; but defired to have no concern with the experiment, which might effentially prejudice his reputation, in cafe of a milcarriage .- Bragwell was as much imposed upon by the painter's waggery as the doctor, and declined engaging in the affair, faying, he had a very great regard for Mr. Slyboot, but had laid it down as a maxim, never to fight except when his honour was engaged .- A thouland jokes of this kind were uttered: the wine circulated, fupper was ferved in, we ate heartily, returned to the bottle; Bragwell became noify and troublesome, Banter grew more and more fevere, Ranter rehearled, Slyboot made faces at the whole company, I fung French catches, and Chatter kiffed me with great affection; while the doctor, with a woeful countenance, fat filent like a difciple of Pythagoras .--At length, it was proposed by Bragwell, that we should four the hundreds, fweat the constable, maul the watch, and then reel ioberly to bed.

While we deliberated on this expedition, the waiter came into the room, and aiked for Dr. Wagtail. When he understood he was present, he told him there was a lady below to enquire for him; at which meffage the phylician started from his melancholy contemplation, and, with a look of extreme confusion, affured the company, he could not polfibly be the perfon wanted, for he had no connexion with any lady whatever; and bade the drawer tell her fo .- " For fhame ! (cried Banter :) would you be fo impolite as to refuie the lady a hearing ? perhaps the comes for a confultation .- It must be fome extraordinary affair that brings a lady to a tavern at this time o'night .---- Mr. Ranter, pray do the doctor's bailemains to the lady, and fquire her hither."-The player immediately fraggered out, and returned, leading in, with much ceremony, a tall ftrapping wench, whofe appearance proclaimed her occupation. We received her with VOL. II. 19) the

82

the utmost folemnity, and with a good deal of intreaty fhe was perfuaded to fit, when a profound filence enfued, during which the fixed her eyes with a difcontolate look upon the doctor, who was utterly confounded at her behaviour, and returned her melancholy four-fold : at length, after a good many piteous fighs, the wiped her eyes, and accoffed him thus: " What ! not one word of comfort? Will nothing foften that frony heart of thine? Not all my tears ! Not all my affliction ! Not the inevitable ruin thou haft brought upon me! Where are thy vows, thou faithlefs perjured man?-Haft thou no honour ?--- no conficience ?--- no remorfe for thy perfidious conduct towards me ?- Aniwer me, wilt thou at last do me j. lice, or must I have recourse to heaven or hell for my revenge!"-If poor Wagtail was amazed before he spoke, what must his confusion be on hearing this addrefs! His natural paleness changed into a ghaffly day colour, his eyes rolled, his lip trembled, and he answered honour, and falvation ! Madam, you are actually miftaken in my perfon .- I have a most particular veneration for your fex, and am actually incapable of injuring any lady in the imalleft degree, Madam :- Befides, Madam, 10 the best of my recollection, I never had the honour of feeing you before, as I hope to be faved, Madam!"-" How, traitor ! (cried the,) doft thou ditown methen? -Miftaken! no, too well I know that fair bewitching face ! too well I know that fake enchanting tongue Alas! gentlemen, fince the villain compels me, by his unkindnels, to expose myself and him, know that the betrayer, under the specious pretence of honourable addreffes, won my heart, and taking advantage of his conqueft, robbed me of my virgin-treasure, and afterwards abandoned me to my fate! I am now four months gont with child by him, turned out of doors by my relations, and left a prey to mifery and want! Yes, thou barba rian, (laid the, turning to Wagtail,) thou tyger, thou fuccubus! too well thou knoweft my fituation-but , will tear out thy faithlefs heart, and deliver the world from fuch a monfter."-So faying, fhe fprung forward at the doctor, who, with incredible agility, jumped over the table, and ran behind Bragwell, while the reft of us endeavoured to appeale the farious heroine .- Although every body in the company affected the utmost furprife, I could eafily perceive it was a fcheme concerted among them to produce diversion at the doctor's expence; and being under no concern about the confequence, I entered into the confederacy, and enjoyed the diffress of Wagtail, who, with tears in his eyes, begged the protection of the company, declaring himfelf as innocent of the crime laid to his charge, as the foetus in utero: and hinting, at the fame time, that nature had not put it in his power to be guilty of fuch a trefpafs-" Nature ! (cried the lady ;) there was no nature in the cafe-he abuled me by the help of charms and fpells; elfe how is it pollible that any woman could have liftened to the addreffes of fuch a fcare-crow -- Were thefe owlifh eyes made for ogling; that carrion complexion to be admired ; or that mouth, like a horie-fhoe, to be kiffed ? No, no; you owe your ficcels to your philtres, to your drugs and incantations; and not to your natural talents, which are in every refpect mean and contemptible."-The doctor now thought he had got an opportunity of vindicating himfelf effectually; and defired the complainant to compose herfelf but for half an hour, in which he undertook to prove the absurdity of believing in the perfer of incantations, which were only idle dreams of ignorance and fuperftition .- He accordingly pronounced a very learned difcourse upon the nature of ideas, the powers and independence of the mind, the properties of ftimulating medicines, the difference between a pronenels to venery, which many fimples would create, and a paffion limited to one object, which can only be the refult of fenfe and reflection; and concluded with a pathetic remonstrance, fetting forth his unhappinets in being perfecuted with the refentment of a lady whom he had never injured, nor even feen before that occasion, and whole faculties were, in all likelihood, fo much impaired by her misfortunes, that an innocent perfon was in danger of being ruined by her diforder .- He had no vooner finished his harangue, H 2

81

84

than the forlorn prince's renewed her lamentations, and cautioned the company against his eloquence, which, the faid, was able to bials the molt impartial bench in Chultendom .---- Banter advised him to eipouse her immediately, as the only means to falve his reputation, and offered to accompany him to the Fleet for that purpole; but Slyboot proposed that a father should be purchased for the child, and a comfortable alimony fettled on the mother. Ranter promifed to adopt the infant gratis. Wagtail was ready to worthip him for his generofity; and though he perifited in proteiting his innocence, condefcended to every thing rather than his unblemifhed character should be called in question. The lady rejected the propofal, and infifted on matrimony. Bragwell took up the cudgels for the doctor, and undertook to rid him of her importunity for half a guinea; upon which Wagtail, with great eagerneis, pulled cut his purfe, and put it into the hand of his friend, who taking half a piece out of it, gave it to the plaintiff, and bade her thank God for her good fortune. When she had received this bounty, fhe affected to weep, and begged, fince the phylician had renounced her, he would at least vouchfafe her a parting kifs. This he was prevailed upon to grant, with great reluctance, and went up with his utual, folemhity to falute her; when the laid hold of his cheek with her terrin, and held fait, while he roared with anguish, to the unspeakable diversion of all present. When the thought proper to reloafe him, the dropped a low curtiey to the company, and quitted the room, leaving the doctor in the utmost horror, not fo much on account of the pain, as the apprehension of the coniequence of the bite; for by this time he was convinced of her being mad. Banter prefcribed the actual cautery, and put the poker in the fire to be heated, in order to fear the place .- The player was of opinion that Bragwell thould scoop out the part affected with the point of his iword; but the painter prevented both these dreadful operations, by recommending a balfam he had in his pocket, which never failed to cure the bite of a mad dog : So faying he pulled out a imall bladder of black paint; with which

which he inftantly anointed not only the fore, but the greateft part of the patient's face, and left it in a frightful condition.—In fhort, the poor creature was to harraffed with fear and vexation, that I pitied him extremely, and feat him home in a chair, contrary to the inclination of every body prefent.

This freedom of mine gave umbrage to Bragwell, who teltified his difpleature, by fwearing a few threats, without making application, which being perceived by Slyboot, who fat by me, he, with a view of promoting a quarrel, whifpered to me, that he thought Bragwell uled me very ill; but every man was the best judge of his own affairs .- I answered aloud, that I would neither fuffer Mr. Bragwell nor him to use me ill with impunity; and that I flood in no need of his counfel in regard to the regulation of my conduct .---- He thought proper to alk a thousand pardons, and affure me, he meant no offence; while Bragwell feigned himfelf afleep, that he might not be obliged to take notice of what paffed .--But the player, who had more animal fpirits, and lefs difcretion, than Skyboot, unwilling to let the affair reft where he had dropt it, jogged Mr. Bragwell, and told him foftly, that I called him names, and threatened to cudgel him .- This particular I underftood by his flarting up, and crying, " Bloed and wounds! you lie-No man durk treat me fo ignominisally .- Mr. Random, did you call me names, and threaten to drub me?" I denied the imputation, and proposed to punish the fcoundrel who endeavoured to foment diffurbance in the company. Bragwell fignified his approbation, and drew his tword: I did the fame, and accosted the actor in these words, " Lookee, Mr. Ranter, I know you poffets all the mimickry and mifchievous qualities of an ape, becaule I have oblerved you put them all in practice more than once to-night, on me and others; now I want to te if you refemble one in nimbleness also; therefore I defire you to leap over this fivord without hefitation."-So faying, I held it parallel to the horizon, at the diftance of about three feet from the floor, and called, " Once-twice-thrice, and away;"-but, inftead of complying H3

86

complying with my command, he matched his hat and hanger, and affuming the looks, fiwagger, and phrafe of Pistol, burit out in the following exclamation : " Ha! must I then perform inglorious prank of sylvan ape in mountain forgit caught! Death rock me alleep, abridge my doleful days, and lay my hand in fury's lap .- Have we not Hiren here?"-This buffoonery did not answer his expectation, for by this time the company was bent on sceing him in a new character. Mr. Banter desired me to hold my fword a foot or two higher, that he might have an opportunity of exerting himfelf .- The painter told him, if he performed well, he would recommend him as a vaulter to the proprietors of Sadler's-wells; and Bragwell, crying, " Leap for the king," applied the point of his fword to the player's polteriors, with fuch fuccefs, that he fprung over in a trice, and finding the door unguarded, vanished in a twinkling; glad, no doubt, of having paid his fhare of the reckoning lo eafily

It being now near two o'clock in the morning, we difcharged the bill, and fallied out into the fireer.—The painter flunk away without taking his leave. Billy Chatter, being unable to ipeak or fland, was fent to a bagnios and Banter and I accompanied Bragwell to Mol-King's coffee-houfe, where, after he had kicked half a dozen of hungry wherea, we left him affect on a bench, and directed our courte towards Charing-Crois, near which place both he and I lodged.

The natural drynels of my companion being overcome by liquor, he honoured me by the way with many compliments and profeilions of friendfhip, for which I made fuitable acknowledgments, and told him, I thought myfelf happy in having, by my behaviour, removed the unlavourable opinion he entertained of me at firft fight. —He was furprified at this declaration, and begged me to explain myfelf: Upon which I mentioned what I had over-heard him fay of me to Wagtail in the ceffee house affuring me, that my appearance had very much prepoifeffed him in my favour; and what he faid; was only intended as a joke on the doctor's folemnity.——I was highly pleafed at being indeceived in this particular, and not a little proud of the good opinion of this wit, who fack me by the hand at parting, and promifed to meet me next day at the ordinary.

СНАР. Х.

Strap communicates to me a conquest be had made of a chandler's widow finds himself miserably mislaken —I go to the opera admire Melinda am cautioned by Banter—go to the offembly at Hampflead—dance with that young lady receive an infolent message from Bragavell, whose metal is soon cooled—am in favour with my missers, whom I wist next day; and am bubbled out of eighteen guineas at cards—Strap triumphs at my fuccess, but is assorid at my expence.—Banter comes to my lodging, is very farcassic at my expence, and borrows five guineas from me, as a proof of his friendship.

IN the morning before I got up, Strap came into my chamber, and finding me awake, hemmed feveral times, fcratched his head, caft his eyes upon the ground, and, with a very foolifh kind of fimper upon his face, gave me to understand he had fomething to communicate. -" By your countenance (faid I) I expect to hear good tidings."-" Indifferent, (replied he, tittering;) that is, hereafter as it shall be .- You make know, I have some thoughts of altering my condition"-" What! (cried I, altonished,) a matrimonial scheme? Orare Strap! thou haft got the heels of me at laft."------ " N'---- no lefs, I' affure you, (faid he, burfting into a laugh of felf-approbation.) A tallow-chandler's widow, that lives hard by, has taken a liking to me .- A fine jolly dame, as plump as a partridge .- She has a well-furnished house, a brilk trade, and a good deal of the ready-I may have her for the aiking. She told a friend of mine, a brother footman, that she would take me out of a stinking clout. -But I refused to give my final answer, till I knew your opinion of the matter."-I congratulated Monfieur d'Effrapes upon his conquest, and approved of the fcheme, provided he could be affured of those circumstances of her fortune; but advised him to do nothing rashly, and give me an opportunity of feeing the lady before matters. should be brought to a conclusion. He affured me he would do nothing without my confent and approbation; and that very morning, while I was at breakfast, introduced his inamorata to my acquaintance .- She was a fhort thick woman, about the age of thirty-fix, and had a particular prominence of belly, which I perceived at first fight, not without some suspicion of foul play .--- I defired her, however, to fit, and treated her with a difh of tea; the difcourse turning on the good qualities of Strap, whom I reprefented as a prodigy of fobriety, induftry, and virtue .- When the took her leave, he followed her to the door, and returned licking his lips, and afking if I did not think the was a lufcious creature.-I made no myftery of my apprehention, but declared my fentiments of her without referve; at which he was not furprised, telling me, he had observed the same symptom, but was informed by his friend that the was only livergrown, and would in a few months be as fmall in the wailt as ever .- " Yes (faid I,) a few weeks, I believe, will do the bufinels .- In fhort, Strap, it is my opinion, that you are egregiously imposed upon; and that this friend is no other than a rafcal, who wants to palm his trull upon you for a wife, that he may at once deliver himfelt from the importunities of the mother, and the expence of her bantling; for which reason I would not have you truft implicitly to the report he makes of her wealth, which is inconfistent with his behaviour; nor run your head precipitately into a noofe, that you may afterwards with exchanged for the hangman's." feemed very much startled at my infinuation, and promiled to look twice before he leaped; faying, with lome heat, " Odds; if I find his intention is to betray me, we shall fee which of us is the better man."-My prediction was verified in lefs than a fortnight; her great belly producing an infant, to the unfpeakable amazement of Strap, who was, before this happened, incluable to believe I had refined a little too much in my penetration. His falle friend difeppeared; and in a few days after an execution was iffued against her goods and household-furniture, which were feized by the creditors. Mean while I met my friend Banter at the ordinary, and in the evening went to the opera with him and Mr. Chatter, who pointed out Melinda in one of the boxes, and offered to introduce me to her, observing at the fame time, that the was a reigning toaft, worth ten thousand pounds. This piece of information made my heart bound with joy, and I difcovered great eagernefs to accept the propofal: upon which he affured me I should dance with her at the next affembly, if he had any influence in that quarter: fo faying, he went round, fpoke to her fome minutes, and, as I imagined, pointed at me; then returning, told me, to my inexpreifible pleafure, that I might depend upon what he had promifed, for the was now engaged as my partner .- Banter, in a whilper, gave me to understand, that she was an incorrigible coquette, who would grant the fame favour on any young fellow in England, of a tolerable appearance, merely to engage him among the herd of her admirers, that the might have the pleafure of feeing them daily increase;-that the was of a cold infentible disposition, dead to every pation but vanity, and fo blind to merit, that he would lay any wager, the wealthieft fool fhould carry her at laft. I attributed a good deal of this intelligence to the fatirical turn of my friend, or relentment for having himfelf fuffered a rebuff from the lady in queftion : and at any rate, trufted 90 much to my own accomplifiments, as to believe no woman could relift the ardour of my addrefies.

Full of this confidence, I repaired to Hampfiead, in company with Billy Chatter, my Lord Hobble, and Doctor Wagtail.—There I faw a very brilliant affembly, before whom I had the honour to walk a minuet with Melinda, who charmed me with her frank manner and camels of behaviour.—Before the country dances began, I received a meffage by a perfon I did not know, from Bragwell, who was prefent, importing, that nobody who knew him, prefuged to dance wish Melinda while he was there in perion; and that I would do well to relinquifh

00 linquish her without noise, because he had a mind to lead up a country dance with Her. This extraordinary intimation, which was delivered in the lady's hearing, did not at all difcompose me, who by this time was pretty well ecquainted with the character of my rival, I therefore, without the least fymptom of concern, bade the gentleman tell Mr. Bragwell, that fince I was to happy as to obtain the lady's confent, I fhould not be folicitous about his; and defired the bearer himfelf to bring me no fuch impertinent melfages for the future. Melinda affected a fort of confusion, and pretended to wonder that Mr. Bragwell thould give himfelf fuch liberties with regard to her, who had no manner of connection with the fellow. I laid hold of this opportunity to difplay my valour, and offered to call him to an account for his infolence, a propofal which the abfolutely refuted. under pretence of confulting my fafety; though I could perceive, by the fparkling of her eyes, that fhe would not have thought herfelf affronted in being the fubjed of a duel. I was by no means pleased with this dicovery of her thoughts, which not only argued the mon unjuftifiable vanity, but likewife the most barbarous mdifference : however, I was allured by her fortune, and reiolved to gratify her pride in making her the occasion of a public quarrel between me and Bragwell, who, I was pretty certain, would never drive matters to a datgerous extremity.

While we danced together, Lobferved this formidable rival at one end of the room, encircled with a clufter of beaus, to whom he talked with great vehemence, cating many big looks at me, from time to time. I gueffed the fubject of his difcourfe, and as foon as I had handed my partner to her leat, ftrutted up to the place where he ftood and cocking my hat in his face, demanded aloud, if he had any thing to fay to me. He answered with a fulles tone, " Nothing at present, Sir." And turned about upon his heel,-" Well, (faid I,) you know were I to be found at any time."-His companions stared a one another, and I returned to the lady, whole feature brightened at my approach, and "immediately a while ran through the whole room ; after which fo many eyes were turned upon me, that I was ready to fink with confusion .- When the ball broke up, I led her to her coach, and, like a true French gallant, would have got up behind it, in order to protect her from violence on the road; but the absolutely refused my offer, and expressed her concern that there was not an empty feat for me within the vehicle.

OI

Next day, in the afternoon, I waited on her at her lodgings, by permiffion, in company with Chatter, and was very civilly received by her mother, with whom the lived. There were a good many fashionable people prefent, chiefly young fellows; and immediately after tea, a couple of card tables were let, at one of which I had the honour to play with Melinda, who in less than three hours made hift to plunder me of eight guineas .- I was well enough content to lofe a little money with a good grace, that I might have an opportunity in the mean time to fay foft things, which are ftill most welcome when attended with good luck ; but I was by no means fatisfied of her fair play, a circumfrance that flocked me not a little, and greatly impaired my opinion of her difintereftedness and delicacy .- However, I was refolved to profit by this behaviour, and treat her in my turn with lefs ceremony : accordingly, I laid close fiege to her, and fulding her not at all difgufted with the groß incense I offered, that very night made a declaration of love in plain terms .--the received my addreffes with great gaiety, and pretended to laugh them off, but at the fame time treated me with such particular complacency, that I was permaded I had made a conquest of her heart, and concluded myielf the happieft man alive .- Elevated with these flattering ideas, I fat down again to cards, after fupper, and with great cheerfulness fuffered myself to be cheated of ten guineas more.

It was late before I took my leave, after being favoured with a general invitation; and when I got into bed, the adventures of the day hindered me from fleeping .--Sometimes I pleafed myfelf with the hopes of poffelling a fine woman with ten thousand pounds; then I would ruminate ruminate on the character I had heard of her from Banter, and compare it with the circumftances of her conduct towards me, which leemed to bear too great a refemblance to the picture he had drawn.—This introducd a melancholy reflection on the expence I had undergone, and the finalheis of my funds to fupport it, which, by the bye, were none of my own—In thort, I found myfelf involved in doubts and perplexities, that kept me awake the greateft part of the night.

2

In the morning, Strap, with whom I had not converfed for two days, prefented himfelf with the utenils for thaving me; upon which, I alked his opinion of the lady whom he had feen me conduct to her coach at Hampftead .----- " Odd! fhe's a delicious creature, (cried he,) and, as I am informed, a great fortune .-- I am forry you did not infut on going home with her. I dare lay, the would not have refuted your company; for the feens to be a good humoured foul."----- " There's a time for all things, faid I. You muft know, Strap, I was in company with her till one o'clock this morning."-I had no fooner pronounced thefe words, than he began to caper about the room, and inap his fingers, crying in a transport, " The day's our own !- the day's our own!" I gave him to underitand that his triumph was a little prematuse, and that I had more difficulties to furmount than he was aware of then I recounted to him the intelligence I had received from Banter .- At which he changed colour, thook his head; and obferved, there was no faith in woman .---- I told him, I was refolved to make a bold puil notwithstanding, although I forefar it would lead me into a great expence: and bade him guess the fum I had lost last night at cards .- He fcratched his chin, and profeffed his abhorrence of cards, the very name of which being mentioned made him fwed with vexation, as it recalled the money-dropper to his remembrance: " But, however, (aid he,) you haveto du with other-guess people now .---- Why, I suppole, you had a bad run laft night, you would fcarce come d for lefs than teneor twelve shillings." -- I was mortified at this piece of fimplicity, which I imagined, at the time, was all affected, by way of represent for my foliy ; and afked with fome hoat, if he thought I doent the evening in a cellar with chairmen and busters; giving him to know, at the fame time, that my expense had amounted to eighteen guineas.-It would require the pencil of Hogarth to expreis the altonation and concern of Strap on hearing this piece of news: the balon in which he was preparing the lather is my chin dropped out of his hands, and he remained tome time immovable in that ludicrous attitude, with his mouth open, and his eyes thruft forward confiderably beyond their ftation; but remembering my dilpolition, which was touchy, and impatient of controul, he imothered his chagrin, and attempted to recollect himdelf .--- With this view he endeavoured to laugh, but, in fpite of his teeth, broke out into a whimper, took up his washbal and pewter pot, fcrubbed my beard with the one, and difcharged the other upon my face.---- I took no notice of his confusion, but, after he had fully recovered hunfelf, put him in mind of his right, and affured him of my readmets to furrender his effects whenever he fhould think proper to demand them .- He was nettled at my infinuation, which he thought proceeded from my distruit of his friendship; and begged I would never talk to him in that strain again, unleis I had a mind to break his heart.

While my meditations were bufied in planning out my future conduct, Mr. Banter favoured me with a vifit j and after breakfaft, afked how I had paffed the preceding evening.—I anliwered, I was very agreeably entertained at a private house.—" Yes (iaid he with a farcaftic Vol. II. 19 fmile)

94 fmile) you deferved fomething extraordinary for the price you paid "-I was furprifed at this remark, and pretended ignorance of his meaning."-" Come, come, Random, (continued he,) you need not make a myftery of it to me, the whole town has it .- I with that foolin affair between you and Bragwell at Hampfread had been lefs public .- It has fet all the bufy-bodies at work to find out your real character and fituation; and you cannot imagine what conjectures have already circulated at your expence. One fulpects you to be a Jefuit in diguife; another thinks you are an agent from the Pretender; a third believes you to be an upftart gamefer, because nobody knows any thing of your family or fortune; a forth is of opinion, that you are an Irish fortune-hunter."----This last hypothefis touched me in nearly, that, to conceal my confusion, I was fain to isterrupt his detail, and damn the world for an envious meddling community, that would not fuffer a gentleman to live without moleftation. He took no notice of this apostrophe, but went on. " For my own part, I neither know, nor defire to know, who or what you are : this I am certain of, that few people make a mystery of their origin or fituation, who can boaft of any thing advantageous in either; and my own opinion of the matter is, that you have raifed yourfelf by your induftry, from nothing to the appearance you now maintain, and which you endeavour to support by some matrimonial scheme." -Here he fixed his eyes ftedfailly upon me, and perceiving my face covered with blufhes, told me, now he was confirmed in his opinion .---- " Look ye, Random, (faid he,) I have divined your plan, and am confident it will never fucceed .- You are too honeft, and too ignorant of the town, to practife the neceffary cheats of your profession, and detect the confpiracies that will be formed against you.-Befides, you are downright bashful -----What the devil! fet up for a fortune-hunter before you have conquered the fenie of fhame !- Perhaps you are entitled by your merit, and I believe you are, to a richer and better wife than Melinda; but take my word for it, the is not to be won at that rate;-or, if you as

fo lucky as to carry her, between you and me, you may fay as Teague did, By my foul I have gained a loss ! She would take care to fpend her fortune in a twinkling, and alarmed by his difcourfe, while I referred and freedom of it, and expressed my difguit, by telling inm, he was miftaken in my intentions, and deturne he would give me leave to regulate my conduct according to the dictates of my own reason .- He made an apology for the liberty he had taken, and afcribed it to the warmth of his friendthip for me; as an uncommon inftance of which, he borrowedfive guineas, affuring me, there were very few people in the world whom he would to far favour with his confidence .----- I gave him the money, and profefied mylelf to well convinced of his fincerity, that he had no occasion to put it to fuch extraordinary proofs for the future.---- is I thought (faid he) to have asked five pieces more, but hearing you was bubbled of eighteen last night, I prefumed you might be out of cash, and refolved to model my demand accordingly." I could not help admiring the cavalier behaviour of this spark, of whom I defired to know his reason for faying, I was bubbled .---- He then gave me to underftand, that before he came to my lodgings, he had beat up Tom Foille, who having been prefent, informed him of the particulars, rehearied all the fine things ? faid to Melinda, with which he proposed to entertain the town; and, among other circumitances, affored him, my miftrefs cheated with fo little art, that nobody but a meer novice could have been imposed upon.

The thoughts of becoming a fubject of raillery for coxcombs, and loofing my money to boot, flung me to the quick ; but I made a virtue of my indignation, and lower that no man fhould, with impunity, either afperfe the character of Melinda, or turn my behaviour into ridicule. He replied in a dry manner, that I would find it an Herculean talk to chaftife every body who fhould laugh at my expenses and as for the character of Melinda, he did not fee how it could furfer by what was laid to her charge; for that cheating at cards, far from being being reckoned a blemifh among people of fathion, was looked upon as an honourable indication of fuperior genius and addreis.—" But let us wave this fubject, (faid he.) and go to the coffee-houfe, in order to make a party for deaner."

CHAP. XI.

We repair to the coffee-boule, where we overhear a curous diffute between Wagtail and Medlar, which is referred to our decifion—the doctor gives an account of his experiment—Medlar is roafted by Banter at the ordinary—the old gentleman's advice to me.

REING as willing to drop the theme; as he to propole it, I accompanied him thither, where we found Mr. Medlar and Doctor Wagtail driputing upon the word Cuftard, which the phyfician affirmed fhould be fpelt with a G, becaufe it was derived from the Latin verb guftare, "to talte:"-But Medlar pleaded cultom in behalf of C, obferving, that, by the doctor's rule, we ought to change pudding into budding, because it is derived from the French word boudin; and in that cale why not retain the original orthography and prominciation of all the foreign words we have adopted? by which means our language would become a diffonant jargon, without ftandard or propriety. The controverly wis referred to us; and Banter, notwithstanding his real opinion to the contrary, decided it in favour of Wagtall: upon which the peevifh annuitant arole, and uttering the monofyllable, till with great emphasis, removed to another end of the table.

We then enquired of the doctor what progrefs he had made in the experiment of diffilling tinder-water; and he told us he had been at all the glafs-houles about town, but could find nobody who would undertake to blow a retort large nough to hold the third part of the quantity preferibed; but he intended to try the process on as much as would produce five drops, which would be fuificient to prove the fpecific, and then he would make it a parliamentary affair ! that he had already purchaid a confiderable weight of rags, in reducing which to under, he had met with a misfortune, which had obliged him to about the total states of the states of the total states of total states of total states of total states of total st change his lodgings : For he had gathered then in a heap on the floor, and fet fire to them with a condic, on a supposition that the boards would toftain no damage, because it is the hature of the flame to alcend ; but, by fome very extraordinary accident, the wood was invaded, and began to blaze with great violence, which difordered him fo much, that ne had not prefence of mind enough to call for affiftance, and the whole house mult have been confumed, with him in the middle of it, had not the imoak, that rolled out of the windows in clouds, alarmed the neighbourhood, and brought people to his fuccour .- That he had loft a pair of black velvet breeches, and 'a tye-wig, in the hurry; befides the expence of the rags, which were rendered ufelefs by the water used to quench the flame, and the damage of the floor, which he was compelled to repair .- That his landlord, believing him distracted, had infifted on his quitting his apartments at a minute's warning, and he was put to incredible inconvenience; but now he was fettled in a very comfortable house, and had the use of a large paved yard for preparing his tinder: So that he hoped in a very thort time to reap the fruits of his la-

After having congratulated the doctor on his profpect, and read the papers, we repaired to an auction of pictures, where we entertained outlelves an hour or two. From thence we adjourned to the Mall, and after two or three turns went back to dinner, Banter affuring us, that he intended to roatt Mediar at the ordinary; and indeed, we were no fooner fet, than this Cynic began to execute his purpofe, by telling the old gentleman he looked extremely well, confidering the little fleep he had enjoyed last night. To this compliment Medlar made no reply, but by a stare, accompanied with a fignificant grin ;and Banter went on thus : " I don't know whether most to admire, the charity of your mind, or the vigour of your body .- Upon my foul, Mr. Medlar, you do generous things with the bolt rate of any man I know ! You extend your compation to real objects, and exact only fuch returns as they are capable of making .- You muft know.

08

know, gentlemen, (faid he, turning to the company,) I had been up most part of the night with a friend who is il of a fever, and on my return home this morning chanced to pais by a gin-thop ftill open, whence iffued a confused found of mirth and jollity: Upon which, I popped in my head, and perceived Mr. Medlar dancing bare-headed in the midft of ten or twenty ragged bunters, who rejoiced at his expence. But indeed, Mr. Medlar, you ought not to facrifice your conftitution to your benevclence .- Confider you grow old apace; and therefore have a reverend care of your health, which mult certainly be very much impaired by thefe nocturnal expeditions."-The telty fenior could no longer contain himfelf, but cried haftily, " 'Tis well known that your tongue is no flander."-" I think (faid the other) you might fpare that obfervation, as you are very fenfible, that my tongue has done you fignal fervice on many occations .- You may remember, that when you made your addreffes to the fat widow, who kept a public house at Illington, there was a report fpread very much to the prejudice of your manhood, which coming to the ears of your miffrels, you was difcarded immediately; and I brought matters to a reconciliation, by affuring her, that you had three baftards at nurfe in the country : How you ruined your own affair afterwards, it is neither my bufinefs nor inclination to relate."-This anecdote, which had no other foundation than in Banter's own invention, afforded a good deal of mirth to every perfor present, and provoked Mr. Medlar beyond all sufferance; fo that he started up in a mighty passion, and forgetting that his mouth was full, belpattered those that fat next to him, while he difcharged his indignation in a volley of oaths, and called Banter infignificant puppy, impertinent jackanapes, and an hundred fuch appellations; telling the company, he had invented thele falle malicious afperfions, becaufe he would not lend him money to fquander away upon rooks and whores .--- " A very likely ftory (faid Banter) that I should attempt to borrow money of a man who is obliged to practife a thoufand fhifts to make his weekly allowance hold out to Saturday's Saturday's night. Sometimes he fleers four-and recently hours at a firstch, by which means he favos three races, befides coffee-houfe expense.—Sometimes he to fain to put up with bread and cheefe and final beer for dimer; and fometimes he regales on two-persynvoith of oxcheek in a cellar."—" You are a bing inferent, cried Medlar, in an ecftafy of rage.) I can there command money enough to pay your taylor with which I am fure is no trifle; and I have a good mind to give you a convincing proof of my circumitances. Is projecting you for defamation, furtah." By this time the violence of his wrath had deprived him of his appetite, and he fat filent, unable to fivallow one mouthful, while his tormentor enjoyed his mortification, and increafed his chagrin, by advifing him to lay in plentifully for his next days fait.

Dinner being ended, we came down frairs to the coffee-room, and Banter went away to keep an appointment, faying, he fuppofed he fhould fee Wagtail and me in the evening at the Bedford coffee-house.-He was no fooner gone, than the old gentleman took me alide, and faid, he was forry to fee me to intimate with that fellow, who was one of the most gracelets rakes about town, and had already walled a good effate and conflictution upon harlots; that he had been the ruin of many a young man, by introducing them into debauched company, and fetting a lewd example of all manner of wickedness; and that unlefs I was on my guard, he would ftrip me in a hort time, both of my money and reputation. I thanked him for his information, and promited to conduct myfelf accordingly, withing, however, his caution had been a few hours more early, by which means I might have laved five guineas. Not withftanding this intelligence, I was inclinable to impute fome part of this charge to Medlar's revenge for the liberties taken with him at dinner; and therefore, as foon as I could difengage myfelf, applied to Wagtail for his opinion of the character in question; refolged to compare their accounts, allowing for the prejudice of each, and to form my judgment upon both, without adharing milling to either .- The doctor affured me that he was a very pretty gentleman, of family and fortune ; a fcholar, a wit, a critic, and perfectly well acquainted with the town; that his honour and courses were unquestionable; though some extravagances he had been guilty of, and his talent for fatire, had procured him enemies, and made fome people fly of his acquaintance .- From these different sketches, I concluded that Banter was a young fellow of fome parts, who had fpent his fortune, but retained his appetites, and fallen out with the world, becaufe he could not enjoy it to his wifh.

I went to the Bedford coffee-houfe in the evening, where I met my friends; from thence proceeded to the play, and afterwards carried them home to my lodgings, where we fupped in good humour.

CHAP. XII.

I receive a challenge-the confequences of it-the quarrel being made up, am put in arrest, by the care and affection of Strap-but immediately released upon explaining my affair-the behaviour of Mr. Oregan and his two friends-I wifit Melinda, whom I divert with an atcount of the duel-propose marriage-the refers the matter to ber mother, of whom I make a Jolemn demand of her daughter-the old lady's behaviour-I am difcarded, and refent their difdain.

ATHEN I was ready to go abroad next day, Strap brought me a letter, To Mr. Random, Efg; Thoje -Which, upon opening, I found contained a challenge, conceived in these very extraordinary terms:

" Sir.

WHEREAS I am informed that you make love to Mil's Melinda Goofetrap, This is to let you know, that fhe is under promife of marriage to me; and that I am at this pretent waiting at the back of Montague-house, with a pair of good piftels in my hand; and if you will keep your appointment, I will make your tongue confers (after the breath is out of your body) that you do Your's, &c. not deferve her as well as, Rourk Oregan."

I gueffed

I suefied, from the file and fubferiation of this billet, that my rival was a true Melefian, and was not a little uneafy at the contents, efpecially that parts in which he afferted his right to my miftrels by memory a circumfance I did not know how to reconcile to Ber good fenie and penetration .- However, this was no time for me to decline the defiance, becaufe the fucces of my addreffes might in a great measure depend upon my behaviour in that affair. I therefore immediately longed my piftols, and betook myfelf in a hackney-coach to the place appointed, where I found a tall raw-boned man, with a hard-featured countenance, and black bufhy beard, walking by himfelf, wrapped up in a fhabby great coat, over which his own hair defcended in a leathern queue from his head, that was covered with a greaty hat, trimmed with a tarnished point d'espagne. He no sooner perceived me advancing, than he pulled a piftol from his bolom, and prefenting at me, fnapt it without the least preamble. Alarmed at this rude falutation, I made a ftand, and before he could adjust his other piece, fired one of mine at him, without doing any damage. By this time he was 1 dy with his fecond, which flashed in the pan without going off: Upon which he called, with a true Tipperary cadence, " Fire away, honey;"-and began to hammer his flint with great deliberation,-But I was refolved to make use of the advantage fortune had given me; and therefore fept up, without throwing away my fire, defiring him to alk his life, or prepare for another world; but this fout Hibernian refuied to condescend, and complained bitterly of my having quitted my ground before he could return my fhot ; faying, I ought to go back to my station, and let him have an equal chance with me-I endeavoured to perfuade him that I had given him a double chance already; and it was my buinefs to prevent him from enjoying a third ;---but now, fince I had an opportunity, I demanded a parley, and defired to know his condition, and reason for calling me to the field, who, to the best of my remembrance, far from having done hind any injury, had never before feen him. He told me that he was a gentleman of fortune, who had fpent all he had, and hearing that Melinda had got ten thousand pounds, he intended to make himfelf mafter of that fum by elpouling her, and was determined, in a honourable way, to cut the throats of all those who flood between him and his hopes. I then demanded to know the foundation of his hopes; and now that I had feen him, being more and more aftonished at the circumstance of the promife, defired that he would explain that myllery. -He gave me to underftand, that he trufted entirely to his birth and perfonal merit; that he had frequently written to Melinda, fetting forth his claim and pretenfions, but she was never kind enough to fend an answer, or even to admit him into her prefence ; and that the promile he mentioned in his letter, was made by his friend, Mr. Gahagan, who affured him, that no woman could refift a man of his appearance.----I could not forbear laughing to excels, at the fimplicity of my rival, who did not feem to relifh my mirth, but began to be very ferious: Upon which I endeavoured to appeale him, by giving him my word and honour, that, far from prejudicing his addreffes to the lady, I would represent him to her in the most favourable light I could choose with any regard to truth; but he must not be surprised if the should renfain blind to his deferts ; for nothing was more capricious than a woman's mind, and the affection of that fex was feldom purchased with virtue alone .- That my declaration might have the litter effect, I took notice of his diffabille, and profeffing forrow at feeing a gentleman reduced, flipt two guineas into his hand, at fight of which he threw away his piftols, and hugging me in his arms, cried, "Arrah, by Jefus now, you are the belt friend I have met with these feven long years." -When I had fuffered fome minutes in his embrace, he quitted me, and picked up his rulty arms, withing the devil might burn him if ever he fhould give me any further trouble about womankind.

The quarrel being thus amicably compoled, I begged leave to look at his pittols, which I found to crazy and fo foul, that, I believe it was happy for him neither of them was difcharged, for one of them would, certainly have fplit in the going off, and he would, in all probability, have loft his hand in the exploring but what gave me a lively idea of the man's character was, to find, upon examination, that one of them had been leaded without being primed, and the other paired without a charge.

103

While we walked home together, I expressed a defire of knowing my new friend's hiftory; and he informed me of his having ferved in the German army as a volunteer against the Turks; that, for his behaviour at the fiege of Belgrade, he had been honoured with an enfign's commission, and afterwards promoted to the rank of lieutenant, in which station it was his misfortune to affront his captain, who challenged him to the field, and was killed in the duel, upon which he was obliged to retreat ;--- that he had been in England fome years foliciting his friends for provision in the British army ; but being hitherto unfuccelsful, was defired by Mr. Gahagan to turn his thoughts to matrimony, and make his fortune by an advantageous match; in confequence of which advice, he had made up to Melinda; and having heard, by means of an Irifh footman in the family, that I was her chief favourite, had called me out, in hopes of removing, by my death, the greatest obstruction to his defires; but now he was conviaced of my honour and generofity, he fwore by the bleffed virgin, he would think of her no more, if there was not another woman in the world .- As a farther proof of his varacity, which I did not at all doubt, he opened an old iron muff-box, and pulled out his commission in the Imperial army, and his captain's challenge, which he preferved as teffiniomals of his character .- I was fo well convinced of this poor man's honefty and courage, that I determined to speak in his behalf, to some of my acquaintance, who might recommend his cafe to the confideration of those who could provide for him; and in the mean time to accommodate him with a few clothes, by which his appearance would be much mended, and himfelf enabled to renew his folicitations in perion. As 104 As we walked along, converfing focially together, we were met by a file of mulqueteers, and Strap at their head, who no fooner approached, than with a frantie look, he cried, " Seize them !---- in the name of God! feize them."----We were accordingly furrounded, and I put in arrelt by the corporal, who was commanding officer ; but Captain Oregan ditengaged himfelf, and ran with fuch fpeed towards Tottenham-court-road, thathe was out of fight in a moment. When my arms were delivered up, and myfelf fecured, Strap became a little more composed, and aiked pardon for the liberty he had taken, which he hoped I would excufe, as it proceeded from his affection. He then told me that, fulpeding the letter (which by the bye was brought by the author himfelf) contained fomething extraordinary, he had peeped through the key-hole, and icen me load my pittols; upon which he ran down to Whitehall, and applied to the officer on guard for a party to put me in arreft ; but, before he returned, I was gone in a coach; that he had enquired which way I went, and having heard, that duels were commonly fought at the back of Montague-house, he conducted the guard to this place, where he thanked God for having found me fafe and found. I gave him to underitand, that I forgave his officious concern for once, but cautioned him in pretty fevere terms, from making me the subject of idle conversation for the future : then turning to the corporal, thanked him for his care, and gove him a crown to drink with his, men, affuring him, that the rencontre was over long before he came up, and every thing compromised, as he might have observed by our behaviour; as a farther proof of which, he would find, upon examination, that one of my piftols had been dil charged ;- but this civil perfon, without giving hund or me any farther trouble, received the bounty with a thoufand bows and acknowledgments, and returning the piftols, releafed me immediately.

He was not gone a hundred yards, when my friend Oregan came up, in order to reicue me, with two tuterdemalions whom he had engaged for that purper about the purlicus of 80. Giles's. One of them was armed with a mufket that wanted a lock, and atother with a rufty broad iword. But their dress invalled all description .- When he underflood I was all early free, he made an apology for his abrupt departur, and mineduced me to his two companions : Firft, to Counterlos Pitze dabber, who, he told me, was then employed in compiling a hiftory of the kings of Muniter, from Irifh mamilerints; and then to his friend, Mr. Gahagan, who was a profound philosopher and politician, and had projected many excellent fchemes for the good of his counuy .- But it feems thefe literati had been very ill rewarded for their ingenious labours; for between them both, there was but one fhirt and half a pair of breeches. I thanked them very kindly for their readinefs to affift me, and having offered my fervice in my turn, bade them good-morrow, defiring Oregan to accompany me to my lodgings, where he was fitted with decent clothes from my wardrobe, to much to his fatisfaction, that he fwore eternal gratitude and friendship to me, and, at my requelt, recounted all the adventures of his life. In the afternoon I waited on Melinda, who received me with great kindnets and familiarity, and laughed excellively at my adventure with the Irishman, to whole wifnes the was no ftranger, having more than a dozen letters in her possession, which he had wrote to her on the fubject of love, and which, for my entertainment, the fubmitted to my perulal .- Having made ourielves merry at the expence of this poor admirer, I feized the opportunity of her mother's going out of the room, and introduced my own paffion, which I recommended to her with all the ardour and eloquence I was matter of .- I flattered, fighed, Iwore, intreated, and acted a thouland extravagancies, in hopes of making fome impression on her heart; but the heard every thing I faid without dilcovering the leaft emotion ; and other company came in before the would vouchiate one ferious reply .- After tea, the cards were brought in, according to cultom, and It was my good fortune to have Melinda for my partner; by which means, inflead of lofing, I came off with five Euineas clear gain. Vot. 11. 19 稻

106

I foor became acquainted with a good many people of fashion, and spent my time in the modifh diversions of the town, fuch as plays, operas, malquerades, drums, affemblies, and puppet-flows; chiefly in company with Melinda, whom I cultivated with all the eagerneis and addrefs that my profpect could infpire, and my education afford. I fpared neither my perfon nor my purfe to gratify her vanity and pride ; my rivals were intimidated, and indeed outfhone; and, after all, I began to fear that the dear creature had not a heart to lofe .- At lait, finding myfelf unable to fupport the expence of this amour much longer, I was determined to bring the matter to a crifis; and one evening, while we were together by ourfelves, complained of her indifference, defcribed the tortures of fulpence to a love-fick mind, and preffed her to disclose her sentiments of matrimony and me, with such carneftnefs, that the could not, with all her art, duit the fubject, but was obliged to come to an eclaircifiement.-She told me with a careless air, that the had no objection to my perion; and if I could fatisfy her mother in other particulars, I fhould not find her averfe to the match; but the was refolved to do nothing in fuch a momentous concern without the advice and confent of her parent .-This was no very agreeable declaration to me, whole aim had been to win her inclination first, and then fecure my conquest by a private marriage, to which I flattered mylelf the would express no reluctance .- That I might not, however, defert my caufe before it was defperate, I waited on her mother, and with great forma-The good lity demanded the daughter in marriage. lady, who was a very notable woman, behaved with great flate and civility; thanked me for the honour I intended her family; and faid, she did not doubt but that I was in all respects qualified to make a woman happy; but it concerned her, as a parent anxious about the welfare of her child, to enquire into the particulars of my fortune, and know what lettlement I proposed to make. To this intimation, which would have utterly disconcerted me, if I had not expected it, I replied without helitation, that though my fortune was very finall, I was a gentleman by birth and education, would maintain her daughter in the fphere of a contiewerban, and fettle her own dowry on her and her theirs, for ever .---This careful matron did not feem to re ine my neopoial, but observed with a demure countenance, that there was no neceffity for fettling that upon her child which was her own already : However, if I pleafed, her lawyer should confer with mine upon the matter; and in the mean time, fhe defired I would favour her with the perufal of my rent-roll .- Notwithstanding the vexation I was under, I could scarce forbear laughing in her face, at the mention of my rent-roll, which was, indeed, a fevere fatire upon my pretentions. I frankly owned I had no landed effate : and told her, that I could not exactly specify the sum I was master of, until I had regulated my affairs, which were at prefent in fome diforder; but that I would take an opportunity of fatisfying her on that head very foon. *

It was not long before I took my leave, and returned to my lodgings in a very melancholy mood, perfuaded that I had nothing more to expect from that quarter. I was confirmed in this opinion next day, when I went back with a view of explaining myfelf more fully to the old gentlewoman; and was told by the footman, that his ladies were not at home; although I had feep Melinda through the blinds at a parlourswindow, as I went up to the door. Incenfed at this affront, I quitted the door, without faying one word, and, as I repafied the parlour, bowed to Mifs, who ftill remained in the fame fituation, fecurely fcreened, as the thought, from my view.

This difappointment gave me more uncalinels on Strap's account than my own; for I was in no danger of dying for love of Melinda; on the contrary, the remembrance of my charming Narchfa was a continual check upon my conficience during the whole courie of my addreffes; and perhaps contributed to the bad fuccels of my feheme, by controuling my raptures, and condemning my defign.

There was a neceffity for informing my companion of every thing that happened to me; and I performed this piece of duty in an affected paffion, fwearing I would be his pack horfe no longer, and defiring him to take the management of his affairs' into his own hands. fineffe had the defired effect; for inftead of grumbling over my milcarriage, Strap was frightened at the pallon I feigned, and begged me for the love of God to be appealed; obferving, that although we had fuffered a great lofs, it was not irreparable; and if fortune frowned taday, fhe might perhaps finile to-morrow .- I pretended to acquiefce in his remarks, praife his equaninity, and promife to improve by misfortune .- He, on the other hand, pretended to be perfectly well fatisfied with my conduct, and conjured me to follow the dictates of my own reflection; but, in fpite of all his affectation, I could perceive his inward affliction, and his vilage lenfibly increafed in longitude from that day.

108

CHAP. XIII.

I long to be rewenged on Melindu—apply to Banter for bis affiftance—he contrives a februme for that purjols, which is put in execution with great fucces—I make an attempt on the beart of Mifs Gripewell, but an diappointed, and have recours to the bottle—receive a billet doux—am rawifhed with the contents—ful my&lf involved in an intrigue, which I imagined would make my fortune—am confounded at my milfals, which banifhes all thoughts of matrimony.

IN the mean time, my attention was wholly engrafied in fearch of another midtrefs, and the defire of being revenged on Melinda, in both which fchemes I was termuch affilted by Billy Chatter, who was fuch a neceflay creature among the ladies, that in all private dances he engaged the men.—To him therefore I applied, defing he would introduce me to a partner of fome figure, at the next private affembly, for the fake of a frolic, the intention of which I would afterwards communicate. Billy, who had heard fomething of a difference between Melinda and me, immediately imoaked part of my defign, and thinking I only wanted to alarm her jealoufy a little, promified to gratify my defire, by matching me with a partner worth thiny thou and pounds, whom the ladies of this end of the town had lately taken into their management and protection .- Upon further showry, I found this perfon's name was Mill Biddy Grinewell; that her father, who had been a pawn-broker, died inteffate, by which means all his fubitance descended to his daughter, who was fo little a favourite, that, could the old man have prevailed with his own rapacious difpofition, to part with as much money as would have paid the expence of a will, the would not have inherited a fixth part of his fortune;-that during his life, far from being educated in a way fuitable to fuch great expectations, fhe was obliged to live like a fervant wench, and do the most menial offices in the family .- But his funeral was no fooner performed, than the affumed the fine lady, and found to many people of both fexes to flatter, carefs, and inftruct her, that, for want of diffretion and experience, fhe had grown infufferably vain and arrogant, and pretended to no lefs than a duke, or earl at leaft, for a hufband ;- that the had the misfortune to be neglected by the English quality, but a certain poor Scottifh lord was then making interest to be introduced to her acquaintance .- In the mean time, fhe was fallen into the hands of a notable lady, who had already disposed of her to a lieutenant of foot, a diftant relation of her lady hip's; though Mifs, as yet, knew nothing of the affair; and lattly, that if I proposed to darge with her, I must give him leave to represent me as a knight or foreign count at leaft .- I was ravished at this piece of information, and confented, for one night, to perfonate a French marquis, that I might the eafier fulfil my revenge.

100

Having made the appointment with Chatter, I went to Banter's lodgings, as I had by this time conceived a great opinion of his penetration and knowledge, and, after I had enjoined fecrecy, told him every circumstance of my digrace with Melinda, and imparted the plan I had projected to mortify that proud coquette, defining his advice in improving, and allistance in executing, the fcheme.— Nothing could be more agreeable to his milanthropical temper, then an account of her behaviour and my refentment. He app auded my resolution, and proposed that I fhould not cily provide myfelf with a proper partner. but alle procure fuch an one for Mifs Goofetrap, as fhould in bly entail upon her the ridicule of all her acquaintance. For this purpose he mentioned his barber, who, he faid, was an exceeding great coxcomb, lately come from Paris, whole abfurd affectation and grimate would eafily pais upon her for the fprightly politeffe of a gentleman improved by travel.-I hugged him for this hint; and he affured me, it would be no difficult matter to make him believe, that Melinda, having feen him by accident, was captivated by his appearance, and longed for his acquaintance .- He actually engaged him on this pretence, and painted his good fortune in fuch colours, that the poor shaver was quite befide himself with joy. -He was immediately fitted with a tawdry fuit of clothes belonging to Banter, and by him recommended to Chatter as a very pretty fellow, just returned from his travels .- Mafter Billy, who afted as gentleman ufher to a great many of the fair fex in and about town, undertook at once, to befpeak Melinda in his behalf; and every thing happened according to my wifh.

110

At the time appointed, I appeared dreffed to the belt advantage; and in the character of a marquis, had the honous of opening the ball with the rich heirefs, who attracted the eyes of the whole company, by the prodigious number of jewels with which the was adorned .-Among others, I perceived Melinda, who could no more conceal her envy than aftonifhment at my fuccefs. Her curiofity was still more flagrant and tormenting, for the had never feen Mifs Gripewell before ; and Chatter, who alone could give her any fatisfaction on that head, was engaged in convertation at the other end of the room .- I observed her impatience, and exulted in her chagrin; and after my partner was fet, took the opportunity of palling by her to make a flight bow without ftopping; which compleated my triumph and her indignation. She changed colour, bridled up, affumed an air of difdain, and flirted her fan with fuch a fury, that it went to pieces in a moment, to the no finall entertainment of those who fat near and observed her. At

At length the metamorphofed barber mok her out. and acted his part with fuch ridiculous astronamore, that the mirth of the whole company was a liber at his expence, and his partner to much afhamed. thit, before the country dances began, fhe retired in great confution, under pretence of being taken fuddenly in and was followed by her gallant, who no doubt imagined her indisposition was nothing but love; and laid hold of the occasion of conducting her home, to comfort her, with an affurance of his entertaining a reciprocal paffion .---They were no fooner gone, than an inquifitive whilper of, "Who is he?" ran round the room ; and Chatter could give them no other intelligence about him, than that he was a man of fortune, just returned from his travels. I, who alone was acquainted with his real quality, affected ignorance, well knowing that female curiolity would not reft fatisfied with fuch a general account, and that the difeovery would proceed with a better grace from any body than me.

Mean while I was tempted by the richnels of the prize, to practife upon Mil's Gripewell's heart; but foon found it too well fortified with pride and indifference to yield to any efforts in my own character; and I neither would nor could preferve the title I had borrowed longer than that night.

As I expected, every thing come to light next day. The barber, in pure implicity of heart, detected himfelf to Melinda, and dicovered the foundation of his hopes: the fickened at the affront, and was afhamed to hew her face in public for many weeks after this accident. Poor Chatter found it impofible to juftify himfelf to her fatisfaction; was in utter digrace with Miffs Gripewell, for having impofed me upon her as a nobleman; and fuffered very much in his character and influence among the ladies in general.

Finding my finances diminified more than one half, and my project as little advanced as on the first day of my arrival in town, I began to defpair of any fuccels, and grew melancholy at the profpect of approaching want.—To difpel the horrors of this fiend, I had recourfe to the bottle, and kept more company than ever. I became particularly attached to the play-houfe, converfed with the actors behind the fcenes, grew acquainted with a body of Templars, and in a fhort time commenced a profeffed wit and critic. Indeed, I may fay, without vaniw, that I was much better qualified than any one of my companions, who were, generally fpeaking, of all the creatures I ever converfed with, the molt ignorant and affuming .- By means of these avocations I got the better of care, and learned to feparate my ideas in fuch a manner, that whenever I was attacked by a gloomy reflection, I could shove it aside, and call in fome agreeable reverie to my affiftance .- This was not the cafe with Strap, who practifed a thousand shifts to conceal the forrow that preyed upon his carcafs, and reduced him to the refemblance of a mere skeleton.

学生史

While I thus posted, in a thoughtless manner, towards poverty, I one day received, by the penny-poft, a letter written in a woman's hand, containing a great many high-flown compliments, warm protestations of love, couched in a very poetical file, an earneft defire of knowing whether or not my heart was engaged, by leaving an aniwer at a certain place, directed to R. B. and the whole fub cribed, "Your Incognita." I was transported with joy on reading the contents of this billet-doux, which I admired as a mafter-piece of tendernel's and elegance, and was already up to the ears in love with the author, whom my imagination represented as a lady of fortune, in the bloom of youth and beauty .- Elevated with this conjecture, I went to work, and exhaufted my invention in composing an answer fuitable to the fublimity of her ftyle, and the ardour of her fentiments .- I expressed my admiration of her wit in terms the most hyperbolical; and while I acknowledged myfelf unworthy of her regard, declared myfelf enamoured of her understanding; and in the most pathetic manner implored the honour of an interview .- Having finished this performance, and communicated it to Strap, who fkipped about for joy, I difpatched him with it to the place appointed, which was the houle of a milliner not far from Bond-Itreet, and defired him to keep watch near the doorifor fome time, that he might difcover the performance found call for it .- In lefs than an hour he returned with a joyiul countenance, and told me, that for, after he had delivered the letter a chairman was called, the whom it was given, with directions to carry it to the bule of a rich gentleman in the neighbourhood, whither he (Strap) followed him, and law it put into the hands of a waitingwoman, who paid the mellenger, and fhut the door .---That upon enquiry at an alchoufe hard by, where he called for a pint of beer, he underftood, the gentleman to whom the house belonged had an only daughter, very handfome, who would inherit his whole effate; and who certainly was the author of the billet I had received .- I was of the fame opinion, and hugging myfelf in the happy profpect, dreffed immediately, and paffed in great fate by the houfe that contained my unknown admirer. -Nor was my vanity difappointed; for I perceived a beautiful young creature standing at one of the windows of the dining-room, who, I imagined, observed me with more than common curiofity. That I might indulge her view, and at the fame time feaft my own, I affected to ftop, and gave orders to Strap, in the ftreet, just oppofite to her flation, by which means I had an opportunity of feeing her more diffinctly, and of congratulating myielf on having made a conquest of fo much perfection. -In a few minutes the retired; and I betook myfelf to the ordinary, in a rapture of hope, which deprived me of my appetite for that meal, and fent me home in the evening to indulge my contemplation.

Early next day, I was favoured with another epifle from my unknown charmer, fignifying her unutterable joy at the receipt of mine, which, while it made a tender of my heart, convinced her of the value of it. Above all things, the profeffed extreme pleafure in finding me fo much attached to her underftanding, a circumftance that not oaly flattered her in the moft lenfible part, but at the fame time argued my own fagacity.—As for the interview I defired, the adjured me, that I gould not be more eager for fuch an occation than the; but the muft not oaly fac life a little more to decorum, but be fatisfied of my h nourable intentions, before the would grant that request : Mean while, the gave me to understand, that although the might owe fome deference to the opinion of certain perfons, the was refolved, in an affair that to nearly concerned her happinels, to confult her own inclination, preferable to the advice of the whole world; efpecially as the was urged to fuch condefcention by no confideration of fortune, what fhe depended upon being her own, without refriction or controul .- Struck with admiration at the philosophy and felf-denial of my mistrefs, who feemed infensible of the beauty the poffelfed, and, in particular, ravished with that piece of intelligence, by which I learned her fortune was independent, I refumed the pen, launched out into encomiums on the dignity of her fentiments, affected to undervalue the charms of external beauty, pretended to ground my passion on the qualities of her mind, complained of her rigour in facrificing my repole to an over-fcrupulous regard to decorum, and declared the purity of my defigns in the most folemn and pathetic vows .- This performance being fealed and directed, was fent to the place appointed by Strap, who, that we might be ftill the more confirmed in our belief, renewed his watch, and in a little time brought back the fame information as before, with this addition, that Mifs Sparkle, (the name of my correfpondent,) looking out at the window, no fooner law the meffenger arrive, than the flut the calement in a fort of beautiful confusion, and disappeared; eager, no doubt, to hear from the dear object of her love.

114

My doubts now vanished, the long-expected port appeared, and I looked upon myfelf as perfectly feare of that happinels I had been in queft of folong.—After dinner, I fauntered in company with Dr. Wagtail to that part of the town in which my inamorata lived; and, as he was a mere regifter, enquired of him into the name character and fortune of every body who poffelfed a good houfe in the freets through which we paffed. When it came to his turn to mention Sir John Sparkle, he reprefented him as a man of an immente eftate and narrow difficultion, disposition, who mewed up his only child, a fire young lady, from the convertation of mankind, under the troch watch and infpection of an eld governante, who was either fo honeft, envious, or infatiable, that mobody had been, as yet, able to make her a friend, or get access to her charge, though numbers attempted of every day; not fo much on account of her expectations from her father, who, being a widower, might marry again, and have fons, as for a fortune of twelve thousand pounds left her by an uncle, of which the could not be deprived. -This piece of news exactly tallying with the laft part of the letter I had been honoured with in the morning, had fuch an effect on me, that any man, except Wagtail, might have obferved my emotion; but his attention was too much engroffed by the contemplation of his own importance, to fuffer him to be affected with the deportment of any other body, unless it happened to be fo particular, that he could not help taking notice of it.

When I had difengaged myfelf from him, whofe converfation grew infipid to me, I went home, and made Strap acquainted with the fruit of my refearches .----This faithful fquire was almost choaked with transports, and even wept with joy; but whether on account of himfelf or me I shall not pretend to determine .- Nextoday a third billet-doux was brought to me, containing many expressions of tendernels, mingled with some affecting doubts about the artifice of man, the inconfrancy of youth, and the jealoufy often attending the most fincere paffion; withal defiring I would excute her, if the thould try me a little longer, before the declared herfelf beyond the power of retracting .---- Thefe interesting foruples added fuel to my flame, and impatience to my hope: I redoubled my complaints of her indifference, and preffed her to an affignation with fuch fervid entreaties, that in a few days, the confented to meet me at the house of that milliner who had forwarded all my letters .- During the interval between the date of her promile, and the hour of appointment, my pride foared beyond all reafou and description : I lost all remembrance of the genthe Narciffa, and my thoughts were wholly employed in planning trium, be over the malice and contempt of the world.

116

At length the happy our arrived : I flew to the place of rendezvous, and v conducted into an apartment, where I had not waited ten minutes, when I heard the rultling of filin and the found of feet afcending the flain. My heart too, the alarm, and beat quick ; my cheeks glowed, my nerves thrilled, and my knees shook with exitaiy! I perceived the door opening, faw a gold brocade petticoat advance, and fprung forward to embrace my charmer .- Heaven and earth ! how thall I paint my fituation, when I found Mifs Sparkle converted into a wrinkled hag turned of feventy! I was ftruck dumb with amazement, and petrified with horror ! This ancient Urganda perceived my diforder, and approaching with a languishing air, feized my hand, alking, ina fqueaking tone, if I was indifposed .- Her monitrous affectation completed the difguff I had conceived for her at first appearance; and it was a long time before I could command myfelf fo much as to behave with common civility. At length, however, I recollected myfell, and pronounced an apology for my behaviour, which, I faid, proceeded from a dizzinels that feized me all of a fudden .- My hoary Dulcinea, who, no doubt, had been alarmed at my confusion, no fooner learned the caule to which I now afcribed it, than the difcovered her joy in a thousand amorous coquetries, and assumed the fprightly airs of a girl of fixteen. One while, the ogled me with her dim eyes, quenched in rheum; then, as u the was afhamed of that freedom, the affected to look down, blufh, and play with her fan; then tofs her head, that I might not perceive a paliy that flook it; alk ione childifh queftions with a lifping accent; giggle and grin with her mouth fhut, to conceal the ravages of time upon her teeth; leer upon me again, figh piteoully, fing herfelf about in her chair to fhew her agility, and act a great many more abfurdities that youth and beauty can alone excute. Shocked as I was at my difappointment, my disposition was incapable of affronting any period who loved me; I therefore endeavoured to put a good face on the matter for the prefent, receiving to prop the whole affair as foon as I fhould ge that of her Simpany. With this view I uttered fome could thinks, and in particular defired to know the name and condition of the lady who had honoured me fo much -- She told me her name was Withers; that fhe lived with Singloba Sparkle in quality of governess to his only day for, in which fituation fhe had picked up a comfortable fufficiency to make her eafy for life; that fhe had the pleafure of feeing me at church, where my appearance and deportment made fuch an impreffion upon her heart, that the could enjoy no eafe until the had enquired into my character, which the found to amiable in all refpects, that the yielded to the violence of her inclination, and ventured to declare her paffion, with two little regard perhaps to the decorum of her fex; but the hoped I would forgive a trefpais of which I myfelf was, in fome measure, the caufe, and impute her incrusion to the irrefiftible distates of love .- No decayed rake ever fwallowed a bolus with more reluctance than I felt in making a reply fuitable to this compliment, when, inftead of the jewel, I found the crazy cafket only in my power; and yet my hopes began to revive a little, when I confidered that, by carryon the appearance of an intrigue with the duenia, I might poffibly obtain access to her charge. Encouraged by this fuggestion, my temper grew more ferene, my referve wore off, I talked en cavalier, and even made love to this antiquated sequette, who feemed extremely happy in her adorer, and spread all her allurements to make her imagined conquest more secure .- The good woman of the house treated us with tea and sweetmeats, and afterwards withdrew like a civil experienced matron as the was .- Left thus to our mutual endearments, Mifs Withers (for the was still a maiden) began to talk of matrimony, and expressed to much impatience in all her behaviour, that, had the been fifty years younger, I might poffibly have gratified her longing without having recourse to the church; but this ftep my virtue as well as interest forbad. When the inclinations of an old maid fettle upon a young fellow, he is perfecuted with VOL. II. 19

118

her addre es; but, fhould he once grant her the favour, he will never be able to difentangle himfelf from her importunities and reproaches. It was my bufineis to defer the eremony as long as possible, under the most specious pretences, with a view of becoming acquainted with Mils Sparkle in the mean time; and I did not defpair of fuccels, when I confidered, that, in the courle of our correspondence, I should, in all probability, be invited to vifit my mistrefs in her own apartment, and by these means have an opportunity of conversing with her charming ward. Pleased with this prospect, my heart dilated with joy; I talked in raptures to the stale governante, and kiffed her inrivelled hand with great devotion. She was to much transported with her good fortune, that fhe could not contain her exftaiy, but flew upon me like a tygreis, and preffed her fkinny lips to mine; when (as it was no doubt concerted by her evil genius) a dole of garlick the had fwallowed that morning, to difpel wind, I suppose, began to operate with such a sudden explosion, that human nature, circumftanced as I was, could not endure the fhock with any degree of temper .- I loft all patience and reflection, flung away from her in an inftant, inatched my hat and cane, and ran down ftairs as if the devil had me in purfuit, and could fcarce reftrain the convultion of my bowels, which were grievoully offended by the perfume that afflulted me .- Strap, who waited my return with impatience, feeing me arrive in the utmost diforder, stood motionless with apprehension, and durit not enquire into the caufe.

After I had wafhed my mouth more than once, and recruited my fpirits with a glafs of wine, I recounted to him every particular of what had happened; to which he made no other reply for fome time, than lifting up his eyes, clafping his hands, and uttering a hollow groan. —At length he obferved, in a melancholy tone, that it was a thouland pities my organs were to delicate as to be offended with the fmell of garlick. "Ah! God help us, (faid he,) 'tis not the freams of garlick, no, nor of fomething ehe, that would give me the leaft uncafinefs-See what it is to be a cobfer's fon."—I replied haftly, "I with

" I wish then you would go and retrieve my mitderiage." —At this fuggestion he flarted, forced a finile, and left the room, fhaking his head. Whether the old gentlewoman refented my abrupt departure to much, that her love changed into difdain, or was almoned to be me on account of her infirmity, I know my ; but I was never troubled again with her passion.

C'H A P. XIV.

I cultivate an acquaintance with two noblemen-am introduced to Earl Strutwell-bis kind promife and invitation-the behaviour of his porter and lacquey ---- be receives me with an appearance of uncommon affection-undertakes to speak in my behalf to the minister-informs me of his success, and wishes me joy-introduces a conversation about Petronius Arbiter -falls in love with my watch, which I prefs upon bim-I make a prefent of a diamond ring to Lord Straddle-impart my good fortune to Strap and Banter, subo difabufes me, to my utter mortification. RAFFLED hitherto in my matrimonial fchemes, I began to queffion my talents for the fcience of fortune-hunting, and to bend my thoughts towards fome employment under the government. With the view of procuring which, I cultivated the acquaintance of Lords Straddle and Swillpot, whole fathers were men of interest at court .---- I found these young poblemen as open to my advances as I could defire : I accompanied them in their midnight rambles, and often dined with them at taverns, where I had the honour of paying the reckoning. I one day took the opportunity, while I was loaded with protestations of friendship, to disclose my defire of being fettled in fome finecure; and to folicit their influence in my behalf .- Swillpot, fqueezing my hand, laid I might depend upon his fervice, by God. The other fwore that no man would be more proud than he to run my errands. Encouraged by these declarations, I ventured to express an inclination to be introduced to their fathers, who were able to do my bufinefs at once. Swillpot frankly owned he had not fpoke to his father these three years ; and Straddle affured me that his father, having htely difobliged the minister, by fubscribing his name to a proteft in the house of peers, was thereby rendered incapable of ferving his friends at prefent; but he undertook to make me acquainted with Earl Strutwell, who was hand and glove with a certain perfon who ruled the roaft. This offer I embraced with many acknowledgments. and plied him fo closely, in fpite of a thoufand evalions, that he found himfelf under a necessity of keeping his word, and actually carried me to the levee of this great man, where he left me in a crowd of fellow dependents, and was ufhered to a particular clofet audience; from whence, in a few minutes, he returned with his lordfhip, who took me by the hand, affured me he would do me all the fervice he could, and defired to fee me often .---- I was charmed with my reception; and although I had heard that a courtier's promife is not to be depended upon, I thought I difcovered to much fweetness of temper and candour in this earl's countenance, that I did not doubt of finding my account in his protection .- I refolved therefore to profit by this permiffion, and waited on him next audience day, when I was favoured with a particular finile, fqueeze of the hand, and a whifper, fignifying that he wanted half an hour's conversation with me in private, when he should be difengaged, and for that purpose defired me to come and drink a difh of chocolate with him to-morrow morning .---- This invitation, which did not a little flatter my vanity and expectation, I took care to observe, and went to his lordship's house at the time appointed. Having rapped at the gate, the porter unbolted and kept it half open, placing himfelf in the gap, like foldiers in a breach, to difpute my paffage .- I alked if his lord was ftirring ?- He answered with a furly aspect, " No." At what hour does he commonly rile?" faid I. " Sometimes fooner, fometimes later," (iaid he, clofing the door upon me by degrees.)-I then told him, I was come by his lordfhip's own appointment; to which intimation this Cerberus replied, "I have received no orders about the matter!" and was upon the point of furting me out, when I recollected myielf all of a fudden, and flipping a crown into his hand, bedned as a favour that he would enquire, and let me know whether or not the earl was up." The grin janitor releated at the touch of my money, which he took with all the indifference of a tax-gatherer, and thewed me into a parlour, where, he faid, I might amute millelf till such time as his lord flould be awake .-- I dad not fat ten minutes in this place, when a footman entered, and, without speaking, stared at me. I interpreted this piece of his behaviour into " Pray, Sir, what is your bufinefs?" and afked the fame queftion I had put to the porter, when I accosted him first. The lacquey made the fame reply, and difappeared before I could get any further intelligence .- In a little time he returned, on pretence of poking the fire, and looked at me again with great carnefinefs; upon which I began to perceive his meaning, and tipping him with half a crown, defired he would be fo good as to fall upon fome method of letting the earl know that I was in the house-He made a low bow, faid, " Yes, Sir," and vanished .---- This bounty was not thrown away; for in an inftant he came back, and conducted me to a chamber, where I was received with great kindnefs and familiarity by his lordship, whom I found just rifen, in his morning gown and flippers .--After breakfast, he entered into a particular conversation with me about my travels, the remarks' I had made abroad, and examined me to the full extent of my underftanding .- My anivers feemed to pleafe him very much : he frequently fqueezed my hand, and looking at me with a fingular complacency in his countenance, bade me depend upon his good offices with the minister in my behalf. "Young men of your qualifications (faid he) ought to be cherished by every administration. For my own part, I fee fo little merit in the world, that I have laid it down as a maxim, to encourage the leaft appearance of genius and virtue to the utmost of my power-You have a great deal of both; and will not fail of making a figure one day, if I am not miltaken; but you must lay your account with mounting by gradual steps to the fummit of your fortune .- Rome was not built in a day, day .- As you understand the languages perfectly well, how would you like to crofs the iea as fecretary to an embaffy?"-- I affured his lordfhip, with great eagerneis, that nothing could be more agreeable to my inclination: Upon which he bade me make myfelf eafy, my bulinefs was done, for he had a place of that kind in his view. -This piece a generolity affected me fo much, that I was unable for fome time to express my gratitude, which at length broke out in acknowledgments of my own unworthinefs, and encomiums on his benevolence .- I could not even help shedding tears at the goodness of this noble lord, who no fooner perceived them, than he caught me in his arms, and hugged and kiffed me with a feemingly paternal affection .- Confounded at this uncommon instance of fondnets for a stranger, I remained a few moments filent and afhamed; then role and took my leave, after he had alfured me that he would speak to the minister in my favour that very day; and defired that I would not for the future give myfelf the trouble of attending at his levee, but come at the fame hour every day when he should be at leifure ; that is, three times a week.

122

Though my hopes were now very fanguine, I determined to conceal my profpect from every body, even from Strap, until I should be more certain of fucces; and in the mean time, give my patron no respite from my folicitations .- When I renewed my vifit, I found the fireet door open to me as if by enchantment; but in my paffage towards the prefence room, I was met by the valet de chambre, who cast some furious looks at me, the meaning of which I could not comprehend. The earl faluted me at entrance with a tender embrace, and wished me joy of his fuccess with the premier, who, he faid, had preferred his recommendation to that of two other noblemen very urgent in behalf of their friends, and absolutely promifed that I should go to a certain foreign court in quality of fecretary to an ambaffador and plenipotentiary, who was to fet out in a few weeks on an affair of weft importance to the nation. I was thunderstruck with my good fortune, and could make no

RODERIC RANDOM. other reply than kneel, and attempt to kils my benefactor's hand, which fubmiffion he would not permit, but, railing me up, prefied me to his bread with haprifing emotion, and told me he had now taken upon himicif the care of making my fortune .- What enhanced the value of the benefit still the more, was his man ing light of the favour, and flifting the converfation to another fubject. Among other topics of difcourse, that of the belles lettres were introduced, upon which his lordship held forth with great tafte and erudition, and difcovered an intimate knowledge of the authors of antiquity .---"Here's a book, (faid he, taking one from his bofom,) written with great elegance and fpirit; and, though the fubject may give offence to fome narrow-minded people, the author will always be held in effectin by every perion of wit and learning." So faying, he put into my hand Petronius Arbiter, and afked my opinion of his wit and manner .- I told him, that, in my opinion, he wrote with great eafe and vivacity; but was withal fo lewd and indecent, that he ought to find no quarter or protection among people of morals and tafte .---- " I own (replied the earl) that his tafte in love is generally decried, and indeed condemned by our laws; but perhaps that may be more owing to prejudice and mifapprehemion, than to true reason and deliberation .- The best man among the ancients is faid to have entertained that paftion; one of the wifest of their legislators has permitted the indulgence of it in his commonwealth; the most celebrated poets have not scrupled to avow it : at this day it prevails not only over all the east, but in most parts of Europe; in our own country it gains ground apace, and in all probability will become in a fhort time a more tathionable vice than fimple fornication .- Indeed, there is fomething to be faid in vindication of it; for, notwithstanding the feverity of the law against offenders in this way, it mult be confelled, that the practice of this paffion is unattended with that curfe and burthen upon lociety which proceeds from a race of miferable and deferted baftards, who are either murdered by their pa-rents, deferted to the utmoft want and wretchedness, or bred up to prey u_{p-1} the commonwealth: And it likewife prevents the debauchery of many a young maiden, and the profitution of honeft mtns wive's; not to mention the confideration of health, which is much lefs liable to be impaired in the gratification of this appetite, than in the exercise of common venery, which, by ruining the conflictuations of our young men, has produced a puny progeny, that degenerates from generation to generation. Nay, I have been told, that there is another motive, perhaps more powerful than all thefe, that induces people to cultivate this inclination; namely, the exquilite pleafure attending its fuccels."

124

From this difcourfe, I began to be apprehenfive that his lordfhip, finding I had travelled, was afraid I might have been infected with this fipurious and fordid defire abroad, and took this method of founding my fentiments on the fubje?...-Fired at this fuppofed fufficion, I argued against it with great warpith, as an appetite unnatural, abfurd, and of permicious confequence; and declared my utter detefiation and abhorrence of it in thefe lines of the fatrifit:

" Eternal infamy the wretch confound Who planted first that vice on British ground ! A vice ! that, fpite of fenfe and nature, reigns, And politons genial loye, and manhood frains."

The earl finiled at my indignation, told me he was glad to find my opinion of the matter to conformable to his own, and that what he had advanced was only to provoke me to an antiwer, with which he profetfed himfelf perfectly well pleafed.

After I had enjoyed a long audience, I happened to look at my watch, in order to regulate my motions by it; and his lordfhip obferving the chafed cafe, defined to fee the device, and examine the execution, which he approved with fome exprellions of admiration.—Confidering the obligations I lay under to his lordfhip, I thought there could not be a fitter opportunity than the prefento manifelt, in folice fhape, my gratitude: I therefore observed begged he would do me the house to accest of the watch, as a finall teftimony of the fende I and of his lordship's generofity ; but he reconcent in a part aptory manner, and faid he was forry I headd enter an tach a mercenary opinion of him; obferving at the fame time, that it was the most beautiful piece of workmanthip he had ever feen ; and defiring to know while he could have fuch another. I begged a thoufand pardons for the freedom I had taken, which I hoped he would impute to nothing elfe than the highest veneration for his perfortold him that, as it came to my hand by accident in France, I could give him no information about the maker, for there was no name on the infide ; and once more humbly intreated that he would indulge me to far as to ule it for my fake .- He was still politive in refusing it ; but was pleafed to thank me for my generous offer, faying, it was a prefent that no nobleman need be afhamed of receiving ; though he was refolved to fhew his difintereftednefs with regard to me, for whom he had conceived a particular friendship; and infisted (if I was willing to part with the watch) upon knowing what it coft, that he might at least indemnify me, by refunding the money. On the other hand, I affured his lordfhip, that I should look upon it as an uncommon mark of diffinction, if he would take it without further question; and, rather than difoblige me, ohe was at last perfuaded to put it in his pocket, to my no fmall fatisfaction, who took my leave immediately, after having received a kind fqueeze, and an injunction to depend upon his pro-

125

Buoyed up with this reception, my heart opened; I gave away a guinea among the lacqueys who efcorred me to the door; flew to to the kodgings of Lord Straddle, upon whom I forced my diamond ring, as an acknowledgment for the great fervice he had done me; and from thence hied me home, with an intent of flaring my happinefs with honeft Strap.—I determined, however, to heighten his pleature, by deprefing his fpirits at firft, and then bringing in the good news with double relin-—For this purpole I affected the appearance of difappointment pointment and chagrin, and told him in an abrupt manner, that I had loft my watch and diamond. Poor Hugh, who had been already harraffed into a confumption by intelligence of this fort, no fooner heard thele words, than, unable to contain himfelf, he cried with distraction in his looks, " God in Heaven forbid!"-I could carry on the farce no longer, but, laughing in his face, told him every thing that had paffed, as above recited. His features were immediately unbended, and the transition to affecting, that he wept with joy, calling my Lord Strutwell by the appellation of jewel, pheenix, rara avis; and praising God, that there was still fome virtue left among our nobility .- Our mutual congratulations being over, we gave way to our imagination, and anticipated our happinefs, by profecuting our fucceis through the different steps of promotion, till I arrived at the rank of a prime minister, and he to that of my first feeretary.

126

Intoxicated with these ideas, I went to the ordinary, where, meeting with Banter, I communicated the whole affair in confidence to him, concluding with an affurance that I would do him all the fervice in my power .- He heard me to an end with great patience; then, regarding one a good while with a look of difdain, pronounced, "So, your bufinefs is done, you think ?"_"As good as done, I kelieve," (faid I.)---" I'll tell you (replied he) what will do it ftill more effectually-a halter----- 'Sdeath! if I had been fuch a gull to two fuch fcoundrels as Strutwell and Straddle, I would without any more ado tuck myfelf up." Shocked at this exclamation, I defired him with fome confution to explain himfelf: Upon which he gave me to understand, that Straddle was a poor contemptible wretch, who lived by borrowing and pimping for his fellow peers; that, in confequence of this laft capacity, he had doubtlefs introduced me to Strutwell, who was fo notorious for a paffion for his own fex, that he was amazed his character had never reached my ears; and that, far from being able to obtain for me the post he had promised, his interest at court was so low, that he could fearce provide for a fuperannuated footman once a year in the cuffoms or excile;—that it was a common thing for him to anufe firangers, whom his jackies run down, with fuch affurances and carefles as he had bettowed on me, until he had fiript them of their call, and envy thing valuable about them;—very often of the charding, and then leave them a prey to want and so any;—that he allowed his fervants no other wages; than that part of the fpoil which they could glean by their induftry; and the whole of his conduct towards me was fo glaring, that nobdoy, who knew any thing of mankind, could have been impoled upon by his infinuations.

127

I leave the reader to judge how I relifhed this piece of information, which precipitated me from the moft exalted pinnacle of hope, to the loweft abyfs of defpondence; and well nigh determined me to take Banter's advice, and finifh my chagrin with a halter.—I had no room to fufpeft the veracity of my friend, becaufe, upon recollection, I found every circumflance of Strutwell's behaviour exactly tallying with the charafter he had deferibed: His hugs, embraces, fqueezes, and eagerlooks, were now no longer a myftery; no more than his defence of Petronius, and the jealous frown of his valet de chambre, who, it feems, had been the favourite father

S SAILAS

CHAP.

THE ADVENTURES OF CHAP, XV.

I attempt a recover my watch and jewel, but to no purpole—refolve to revenge myleff on Strutwell by my importunity—am reduced o my laft guinea—soliged to inform Strap of my neceffity, who is almaft ditracted with the news—but nevertheless obliged to pawn my big loword for prefent fulfiltence—that small fupply being exhausted, I am almost fupplied with my misfortunes—go to the gaming table, by the advice of Banter, and come off with unexpected fucces-Strap's exflafy—Mrs. Gawky waits upon me, profeljes remorfe for her perfidy, and implores my affiltance —I do myleff a piece of justice by her means, and afterwards reconcile ber to her father.

WAS to confounded that I could make no reply to Banter, who reproached me with great indignation for having thrown away upon rafcals, that which, had it been converted into ready money, would have fupported the rank of a gentleman for fome months, and enabled me, at the fame time, to oblige my friends .----Stupified as I was, I could eafily divine the fource of his concern, but ineaked away in a folitary manner, without yielding the leaft aniwer to his expollulations; and begae to deliberate with myfelf in what manner I should attempt to retrieve the moveables I had fo foolifhly loft. -I thould have thought it no robbery to take them again by force, could I have done it without any danger of being detected; but as I could have no fuch opportunity. I refolved to work by fineffe, and go immediately to the lodgings of Straddle, where I was fo fortunate as to find him .- " My Lord, (faid I,) I have just now recollected, that the diamond I had the honour of prefenting to you, is lootened in the locket, and there is a young fellow just arrived from Paris, who is reckoned the best jeweller in Europe : I knew him in France, and if your lordship will give me leave, will carry the ring to him to be fet to rights."-----His lordfhip was not to be caught in this fnare-he thanked me for memoffer, and told me, that having himfelf obferved the defect, he had already fent it to his own jeweller to be mended.

0

J

RODERIC RANDOM. 129 And, indeed, by this time, I believe, it was in she jeweller's hands, though not in order to be mender, for it flood in need of no alteration.

Baulked in this piece of politics, I carfed my fimplicity; but refolved to play a furer game with the earl, which I thus devised .- I did not doubt of Being admitted into familiar convertation with him, a before, and hoped by fome means to get the water into my hand ; then, on pretence of winding or playing with it, drop it on the floor, when in all probability the fall would diforder the work fo as to flop its motion. This event would furnish me with an opportunity of infifting upon carrying it away in order to be repaired ; and then I should have been in no hurry to bring it back. What pity it was I could not find an occation of putting this fine icheme in execution! When I went to renew my visit to his lordthip, my accefs to the parlour was as free as ever; but after I had waited fome time, the valet de chambre came in with his lord's compliments, and a defire to fee me tomorrow at his levee, he being at prefent fo much indifpoled that he could not fee company. I interpreted this meffage into a bad omen, and came away muttering curfes against his lordship's politenels, and ready to go to loggerheads with myfelf for being fo egregioufly duped .- But, that I might have fome fatisfaction for the lois I had fuftained, I belieged him clofely at his levee, and perfecuted him with my folicitations; not without faint hopes, indeed, of reaping fomething more from my industry, than the bare pleafure of making him uneasy; though I could never obtain another private hearing during the whole course of my attendance : neither, had I refolution enough to undeceive Strap, whole looks, in a little time, where fo whetted with impatience, that, whenever I came home, his eyes devoured me, as it were, with eagerness of attention.

At length, however, finding myfelf reduced to my laft guinea, I was compelled to diiclofe my neceffity, though I endeavoured to ivecten the diicovery, by reheating to him the daily affurances I received from my patron.—But these promises were not of efficacy futficient to iupport the fpirits of my friend, who no fooner Vol. II. I. Monumer Monumer and Monumer to the food

130 underft od the lownefs of my finances, than uttering a dreadful groan, he exclaimed, " In the name of God. what fhall we do !"-In order to comfort him, I faid, that many of my acquaintance, who were in a work condition than we, supported, notwithstanding, the character of gentlemen; and advising him to thank God that we had a vet incurred no debt, proposed he should pawn my iword of fteel inlaid with gold, and truft to my difcretion for the reft. This expedient was wormwood and gall to poor Strap, who, in fpite of his invincible affection for me, still retained notions of œconomy and expence fuitable to the narrowneis of his education : neverthelefs, he complied with my requeft, and raifed feven pieces on the fword in a twinkling .- This fupply, inconfiderable as it was made me as happy for the preient, as if I had kept five hundred pounds in bank; for by this time. I was fo well fkilled in procraftinating every troublefome reflection, that the profpect of want feldom affected me very much, let it be ever fonear .-And now, indeed, it was nearer than I imagined. My landlord having occasion for money, put me in mind of my being indebted to him five guineas in lodging; and telling me he had a fum to make up, begged I would excere his importunity, and difcharge the debt.----Though I could ill fpare fo much cash, my pride took the refolution of defburfing it. This I did in a cavalier manner, after he had written a difcharge, telling him, with an air of fcorn and refentment, I faw he was refolved that I fhould not be long in his books ; while Strap, who flood by, and knew my circumflances, wrung his hands in fecret, gnawed his nether lip, and turned yellow with defpair .- Whatever appearance of indifference my vanity enabled me to put on, I was thus derstruck with this demand, which I had no focnet fatisfied, then I haftened into company, with a view of beguiling my cares with conversation, or of drowning them with wine.

After dinner, a party was accordingly made in the coffee house, from whence we adjourned to the tavern, where, instead of sharing the mirth of the company, I was as much chagrined at their good-humour as miamn'd foul in hell would be at a glimple of Heaven - In vain did I fwallow bumper after bumper! the wine had loft its effect upon me, and, far from radius my dejected fpirits, could not even lay me afleep.----Banter, who was the only intimate I had, (Strap excented) perceived my anxiety, and when we broke up, reproduced me with pufillanimity, for being caft down at any diappointment that fuch a rafcal as Strutwell could be the occasion of. -I told him, I did not at all fee how Strutwell's being a rafcal alleviated my misfortune; and gave him to understand, that my present grief did not fo much proceed from that disappointment, as from the low ebb of my fortune, which was funk to fomething lefs than two guineas. At this declaration he cried, " Pfhaw ! is that all?" and affured me, there was a thoufand ways of living in town without a fortune, he himfelf having fublifted many years entitely by his wit. I expressed an eager defire of being acquainted with fome of thefe methods; and he, without further expostulation, bade me follow him. He conducted me to a house under the piazzas in Covent-Garden, which we entered, and having delivered our fwords to a grim fellow, who demanded them at the foot of the flaircafe, alcended to the fecond ftory, where I faw multitudes of people ftanding round two gaming tables, loaded in a manner with gold and filver .- My conductor told me this was the houfe of a worthy Scotch Lord, who using the privilege of his peerage, had fet up public gaming tables, from the profits of which he drew a comfortable livelihood. He then explained the difference between the fitters and the betters; characterized the first as old rooks, and the laft as bubbles ; and advifed me to try my fortune at the filver table, by betting a crown at a time. ---- Before I would venture any thing, I confidered the company more particularly, and there appeared fuch a groupe of villainous faces, that I was itruck with horror and aftonifhment at the fight! fignified my furprise to Banter, who whifpered in my ear, that the bulk of these prefent, were fharpers, highwaymen, and apprentices, who, having M 2

6)

0

ISI

having mbezzled their mafter's cafh, made a defperate push in this place, to make up their deficiencies .- This account did not encourage me to hazard any part of my finall pittance ; but at length being teazed by the importunities of my friend, who affured me there was no danger of being ill ufed, becaufe people were hired by the owner to be juffice done to every body, I began by rifquing one fhilling, and in lefs than an hour my winnings amounted to thirty .---- Convinced by this time of the fairness of the game, and animated with success, there was no need of further perfuation to continue the play. I lent Banter (who feldom had any money in his pocket) a guinea, which he carried to the gold table, and loft in a moment.----He would have borrowed another, but finding me deaf to his anguments, went away ina pet.---Mean while my gain advanced to fix pieces, and my defire of more increafed in proportion; fo that I moved to the higher table, where I laid half a guinea on every throw, and fortune still favouring me, I became 2 fitter, in which capacity I remained until it was broad day; when I found myfelf, after many viciffitudes, one hundred and fifty guineas in pocket.

Thinking it now high time to retire with my booty, I sked if any body would take my place, and made a motion to rife; upon which an old Gafcon, who fat oppolite to me, and of whom I had won a little money, started up with fury in his looks, crying, " Reflect, foutre, restez, il faut donner moi mon ranvanchio!" At the fame time, a Jew, who fat near the other, infinuated that I was more beholden to art than fortune for what I had got; that he had observed me wipe the table very often, and that fome of the divisions feemed to be greafy This intimation produced a great deal of clamour against me, efpecially amongst the lofers, who threatened with many oaths and imprecations to take me up by a warrant as a tharper, unless I would compromife the affair by refunding the greatest part of my winnings .- Though was far from being eafy under this accufation I relied upon my innocence, threatened in my turn to profecute the Jew for defamation, and boldly offered to fubmit my caufe to the examination of any juffice in Wedminiter; but they knew themfelves too well to put their characters on that iffue, and finding I was not to be intimidated into any conceffion, dropt their plea, and made way for me to withdraw.——I would not, however, fir from the table, until the Ifraelite had retracted what he faid to my difadvantage, and afked pardon before the whole alfembly.

133

As I marched out with my prize, I happened to tread upon the toes of a tall raw-boned fellow, with a hooked nose, fierce eyes, black thick eye-brows, a pig-tail wig of the fame colour, and a formidable hat pulled over his forehead, who flood gnawing his fingers in the crowd, and no fooner felt the application of my fhoe-heel, than he roared out in a tremendous voice, " Blood and wounds! you fon of a whore, what's that for ?"-I aiked pardon with a great deal of fubmiffion, and protefted I had no intention of hurting hira; but the more I humbled myfelf, the more he flormed, and inlifted upon gentlemanly fatisfaction, at the fame time provoking me with fcandalous names that I could not put up with; fo that I gave a loofe to my paffion, returned his Billingsgate, and challenged him to follow me down to the piazzas. -----His indignation cool ng as mine warmed, he refuled my invitation, faying, he would choose his own time, and returned towards the table, muttering threats, which I neither dreaded, nor diffinely heard; but descending with great deliberation, received my foord from the door-keeper, whom I gratified with a guinea, according to the cufform of the place, and went home in a rapture of joy.

My faithful valet, who had fet up all night in the utmolt uncafinels on my account, let me in with his face behabbered with tears, and followed me te my chamber, where he ficod filent like a condemned criminal, in & pechation of hearing that every fhilling was fpent.—I guefied the fituation of his thoughts, and alfuming a follan lock, bade him fetch me fome water to wafh.— He reprized, without lifting his eyes from the ground, "In my imple conjecture, who have more occafion for reft, reft, not having (I fuppofe) flept thefe four-and-twenty hours."- "Bring me fome water," (faid I in a peremptory tone;) upon which he meaked away, flrugging his fhoulders. Before he returned, I had fpread my whole flock on the table in the most oftentatious manner; fo that when it first faluted his view, he flood like one intranced; and vaving rubbed his eyes more than once, to affure himfelf of his being awake, broke out into, " Lord have mercy upon us, what a vaft treafure is here !" " 'Tis all our own, Strap, (faid I;) take what is neceffary, and redeem the fword immediately."-He advanced towards the table, ftopt fhort by the way, looked at the money and me by turns, and, with a wildnefs in his countenance, produced from joy checked by distrust, cried, " I dare fay, it is honeftly come by."-To remove his fcruples, I made him acquainted with the whole ftory of my fuccefs, which, when he heard, he danced about the room in an exftafy, crying, "God be praised !-- a white stone !-- God be praised !-- a white ftone !"-So that I was afraid the fudden change of fortune had difordered his intellects, and that he was run mad with joy .- Extremely concerned at this event, I attempted to reafon him out of his frenzy, but to no purpofe; for, without regarding what I faid, he continued to frifk up and down, and repeat his raphfody of " God be praifed ! a white frome " A laft I role in the utmolt confternation, and laying violent hands upon him, put a ftop to his extravagance, by firing him down to a fettee that was in the room .- This constraint banished his delirium; he ftarted, as if just awoke, and, terrified at my behaviour, cried, "What is the matter ?" When he learned the caufe of my apprehenfion, he was afhamed of his transports, and told me, that, in mentioning the white stone, he alluded to the Dies fasti of the Romans, albo lapide notati.

134

Having no inclination to fleep, I fecured my cafh, dreffed, and was juft going abroad, when the fervant of the house told me, there was a gentlewoman at the loor, who wanted to speak with me.—Surprifed at this information, I bade Strap shew her up, and in less than a minute faw a young woman of a fhabby decayed appearance enter my room. After half a dozen courtievs, fhe began to fob, and told me her name was Gawky; upon which information I immediately recollected the features of Mifs Lavement, who had been the first occasion of my misfortunes .- Though I had all the reafon in the world to refent her treacherous behavious to me, I was moved at her diffrefs, and profelling my forrow at feeing her to reduced, defired her to fit, and enquired into the particulars of her fituation .- She fell upon her knees, and implored my forgiveness for the injuries she had done me, proteiling before God, that the was forced, against her inclination, into that hellifh confpiracy which had almost deprived me of my life, by the entreaties of her hufband, who having been afterwards renounced by his father on account of his marriage with her, and unable to support a family on his pay, left his wife at her father's house, and went with the regiment to Germany, where he was broke for mifbehaviour at the battle of Dettingen, fince which time the had heard no tidings of him. She then gave me to understand, with many lymptoms of penitence, that it was her misfortune to bear a child four months after marriage, by which event her parents were to incenfed, that the was turned cat of doors with the infant, that died foon after; and had hitherto fubfifted in a miferable indigent manner, on the extorted charity of a few friends, who were now quite tired of giving; that not knowing where or how to fupport herfelf one day longer, fhe had fied for fuccour even to me, who of all mankind had the leaft cause to affist her, relying upon the generofity of my difpofition, which the hoped would be pleafed with this opportunity of avenging itfelf in the nobleft manner on the wretch who had wronged me .- I was very much affected with her difcourfe, and having no caufe to fufpect the fincerity of her repentance, raifed her up, freely pardoned all fhe had done against me, and promised to befriend her as much as lay in my power.

Since my laft arrival in London, I had made no advances to the apothecary, imagining it would be impoffi-

136

ble for me to make my innocence appear, fo unhappily was my acculation circumftanced. Strap, indeed, had laboured to justify me to the fchoolmaster : but, far from fucceeding in his attempt, Mr. Concordance dropt all correspondence with him, because he refuted to quit his connexion with me .- Things being in this fituation, I thought a fairer opportunity of vindicating my character could not offer, than that which now prefented itfelf. -I therefore flipulated with Mrs., Gawky, that, before I would yield her the leaft affiftance, fhe thould do me the justice to clear my reputation, by explaining on oath, before a magistrate, the whole of the confpiracy, as it had been executed against me .- When she had given me this fatisfaction, I prefented her with five guineas, a fum fo much above her expectation, that the could fcarce believe the evidence of her fenfes, and was ready to worthip me for my benevolence .- The declaration, figued with her own hand, I fent to hay father, who, upon recollecting and comparing the circumftances of my charge, was convinced of my integrity, and waited on me next day, in company with his friend the fchoolmatter, to whom he had communicated my vindication.----After mutual falutation, Monfieur Lavement began a long apology for the unjust treatment I had received : but I faved him a good deal of breath, by interrupting his harangue, and affuring him. that, far from entertaining a refentment against him, I thought myfelf obliged to his lenity, which allowed me to elgape, after fuch firong prefumptions of guilt appeared against me. Mr. Concordance thinking it now his turn to speak, observed, that Mr. Random had too much candour and fagacity to be difobliged at their conduct, which, all things confidered, could not have been otherwife, with any honefty of intention. " Indeed, (faid he,) if the plot had been unravelled to us by any fupernatural intelligence; if it had been whilpered by a genie, communicated by a dream, or revealed by an angel from on high, we fhould have been to blame in crediting occular demonstration; -but as we were left in the midift of mortality, it cannot be expected we should be incapable of impolition .- I do · allure affire you, Mr. Random, no man on earth is more pleafed than I am at this triumph of your character; and as the news of your misfortune panged me to the very entrails. this manifeltation of your innocence makes my midriff quiver with joy."—I thanked him for his concern, defired them to undeceive thole of their acquaintance who judged harfhly of me, and having treated them with a glafs of wine, reprefented to Lavement the deplorable condition of his daughter, and pleaded her caufe fo effectually, that he confented to fettle a finall annuity on her for life; but could not be perfuaded to take her home, becaufe her mother was fo much incenfed that fhe would never fee her.

137

CHAP. XVI.

I purchafe new clothes—reprimand Strutwell and Straddle—Banter propofes another matrimonial febene—I accept of his terms—fet out for Bath in a ftage coach, with the young lady and her mother —the behaviour of an officer and lawyer, our fetlow travellers, deferibed—a fmart dialogue between my miftrefs and the captain.

HAVING finished this affair to my fatisfaction, I found myfelf perfectly at eafe, and looking upon the gaming-table as a certain relource for a gentleman in want, became more gay than even .- Although my clothes were almost as good as new, I grew ashamed of wearing them, becaufe I thought every body, by this time, had got an inventory of my wardrobe .- For which reafon, I disposed of a good part of my apparel to a falefman in Monmouth-ftreet, for half the value, and bought two new fuits with the money. I likewife purchaled a plain gold watch, defpairing of recovering that which I had to foolifhly given to Strutwell, whom, notwithstanding, I still continued to visit at his levee, until the ambaffador he had mentioned fet out with a lecretary of his own choosing .-- I thought myself then at liberty to exportulate with his lordfhip, whom I treased with great freedom in a letter, for amufing me with vain hopes, when he neither had the power nor inclination to provide for me .- Nor was I lefs referved with Straddle, whom I in perfor reproached for mine prefering to me the character of Strutwell, which I did not fcruple to aver was infamous in every refpect.— He feemed very much enraged at my freedom, talked a great deal about his quality and honour, and began to make fome comparisons which I thought fo injurious to mine, that J demanded an explanation with great warmth; and he was mean enough to equivocate, and condefcend in fuch a manner, that I left him with a hearty contempt of his behaviour.

128

About this time, Banter, who had observed a furprifing and fudden alteration in my appearance and difpolition, began to enquire very minutely into the caule; and, as I did not think fit to let him know the true flate of the affair, left he might make free with my purfe, on the ftrength of having proposed the scheme that filled it, I told him that I had received a fmall fupply from a relation in the country, who at the fame time had promifed to use all his interest (which was not small) in foliciting fome post for me that should make me easy for life .- " If that be the cafe (faid Banter) perhaps you won't care to mortify yourfelf a little, in making your fortune another way. I have a relation who is to fet out for Bath next week, with an only daughter, who, being fickly and decrepit, intends to drink the waters for the recovery of her health .- Her father, who was a rich Turkey merchant, died about a year ago, and left her with a fortune of twenty thousand pounds, under the fole management of her mother, who is my kinfwoman. I would have put in for the plate myfelf, but there is a breach at prefent between the old woman and me .- You must know, that fome time ago I borrowed a fmall fum of her, and promifed, it feems, to pay it before a certain time; but being disappointed in my expectation of money from the country, the day elapfed, without my being able to take up my note; upon which fhe wrote a preremptory letter, threatening to arreft me, if I did not pay the debt immediately. Nettled at this precise behaviour, I sent a damn'd severe answer, which enraged her fo much, that the actually took out a writ againft RODERIC RANDOM. 130 against me .- Whereupon, finding the thing grow ferious, I got a friend to advance the money for me, difcharged the debt, went to her houfe, and abused her for her unfriendly dealing .- She was provoked by my reproaches, and fcolded in har turn. The little deformed urchin joined her mother with fuch virulence and volubility of tongue, that I was fain to make my retreat, after having been honoured with a great many fcandalous epithets, which gave me plainly to underftand, that I had nothing to hope from the effect of the one, or the affection of the other .- As they are both utter krangers to life, it is a thousand to one but the girl will be picked up by fome fcoundrel or other at Bath, if I don't provide for her otherwife .- You are a well-looking fellow, Random, and can behave as demurely as a quaker. Now, if you will give me an obligation for five hundred pounds, to be paid fix months after your marriage, I will put you in a method of carrying her in fpite of all opposition."

This propofal was too advantageous for me to be refufed : The writing was immediately drawn up and executed; and Banter giving me notice of the time when, and the flage coach in which they were to fet out, I befpoke a place in the fame convenience, and, having hired a horfe for Strap, who was charmed with the profped, fet forward accordingly.

As we embarked before day, I had not the pleafure for fome time of feeing Mifs Snapper (that was the name of my miftrefs) nor even of perceiving the number and fex of my fellow-travellers, although I gueffed that the coach was full, by the difficulty I found in feating myfell.—The firft five ministes paffed in a general filence, when, all of a fudden, the coach heeling to one fide, a boilterous voice pronounced, "To the right and left, cover your flanks, damine! whiz!" I easily diffeovered, by the tone and matter of this exclamation, that it was uttered by a fon of Mars. Neither was it hard to conctive the profeficion of another perior who fat oppoite to me, all oblerved, that we ought to have been well latiffied of the fecurity, before we entered upon the premifes.

THE ADVENTURES OF 140 -Thefe two fallies had not the defired effect. We continued a good while as mute as before, till at length. the gentleman of the fword, impatient of longer filence. made a fecond effort, by fwearing he had got into a meeting of quakers .- " I believe to too, (faid a fhrill female voice, at my left hand.) for the ipirit of folly begins to move."-" Out with it then, Madam," (replied the foldier.)-" You feem to have no occasion for a midwife," (cried the lady.)-" D-n my blood! (exclaimed the other.) a man can't talk to a woman, but the immediately thinks of a midwife."-" True, Sir, (faid fhe.) I long to be delivered."-"What! of a moule, Madam?" (faid he.)-" No, Sir, (faid fhe,) of a fool."-" Ar you far gone with a fool ?" (faid he.)-" Little mon than two miles," (faid fhe.)-"" By Gad, you're a wit Madam!" (cried the officer:)-"" I wifh I could with an justice return the compliment," (faid the lady.)-" Zounds, I have done," (faid he.)-" Your bolt i foon fhot, according to the old proverb," (faid fhe.)-The warrior's powder was quite fpent; the lawyer ad vifed him to drop the profecution ; and a grave matron who fat on the left hand of the victorious wit, told her fhe must not let her tongue run fo fast among strangers This reprimand, foftened with the appellation of child convinced me that the fatirical lady was no other that Mifs Snapper, and I refolved to regulate my conduct ac cordingly. The champion, finding himfelf to finarth handled, changed his battery, and began to expatiateou his own exploits ---- " You tark of thot, Madam, (iai he.) Damme ! I have both given and received fome the in my time .- I was wounded in the fhoulder by a pifte ball at Dettingen, where-I fay nothing-but b G-d! if it had not been for me-all's one for that-I defpife boafting, d-me! whiz !"----So faying, h whill ed one art, and hummed another, of the Blad Joke; then, addreffing himfelf to the lawyer, went d thus: " Wouldn't you think it damn'd hard, after har ing, at the rifk of your life, recovered the fandard t a regiment, that had been loft, to receive no preferment for your pains? I don't choofe to name no names, in me the ! but howfomever, this I will refer, by G-d, and the hat is this: a mulqueteer of the French guards, haveet ng taken a ftandard from a certain cornet of a certain all egiment, damme ! was refreating with the prize as fait s the his horfe's heels could carry him, fink me! Upon the hich, I inatched up a firelock that belonged to a dead fe, man; damme! whiz! and that his harfe under him, the -n my blood! The fellow got upon his feet, and beedisan to repore me, upon which I charged my bayonet he breaft high, and ran him through the body, by G-d! "-One of his comrades coming to his affiftance, that me Aren the fhoulder, as I told you before; and another gave norme a contumon on the head with the butt end of his carwithine; but, damme, that did not fignity. I killed one, amput the other to flight, and, taking up the flandard, carried it off very deliberately .- But the best joke of all It invas, the fon of a b-ch of a cornet, who had furren-.) dered it in a cowardly manner, feeing it in my poffellion, addemanded it from me, in the front of the line .--- " D---tronmy blood (fays he) where did you find my flandard?" her (lays he.)-" D-n my blood (faid I) where (faid I) gers did you lose it ?" (faid I.)-" That's nothing to you, bild (lays he ;) 'tis my flandard, (fays he.) and, by G-d, I'll have it," (lays he.)-" D-n-tion feize me, viays RadI,) if you fhall, (fays I,) till I have first delivered it to artithe general, (fays I;) and accordingly I went to the itco head quarters, after the battle, and delivered it to my (fail Lord Stair, who promoted to do for me; but I am no the more than a poor literenant ftill, d-n my blood." piffe Having vented this repetition of expletives, the lawyer n bound he had not been requited according to his deferts; at observed, that the labourer is always worthy of his hire, , h and alked if the promite was made before witheffes, be-Blad cause in that case the law would compet the general to nt a perform it ;-but understanding that the promife was hay made over a bottle, without being refricted to time or rd o terrus, he pronounced it not valid in law, proceeded to men enquire into the particulars of the battle, and affirmed, that, although the English had drawn, themfelves into a met premunize at first, the French managed their caufe to N VOL. II. 19 1

141

lamely in the courfe of the difpute, that they woul have been utterly nonfuited; had they not obtained noli profequi.—In fpite of the enlivening touches, th converfation was like to fuffer another long interruption when the lieutenant, unwilling to conceal any of his ac complifiments, that could be difplayed in his prefer fituation, offered to regale the company with a forg and interpreting our filence into a defire of hearing, began to warble a failmonable air, the firft ftanza of which he pronounced thus:

> "Would you talk the moon-ty'd hair, To you flagrant beau repair; Where, waving with the popling vow, The bantling fine will fhelter you, &c."

The fenfe of the reft he perverted as he went on, with fuch furprifing facility, that I could not help thinking he had been at fome pains to burlefque the performance. -Mils Snapper afcribed it to the true caufe, namely, ignorance; and, when he afked her how fhe relifhed his mulic, answered, that, in her opinion, the mulic and the words were much of a piece .- " O, d-n my blood! (laid he) I take that as a high compliment; for every body allows the words are damnable fine."-" They may be for (replied the lady,) for ought I know; but they are above my comprehension."-" I an't obliger to find you comprehension, Madam, curse me !" (cried he.)-" No, nor to fpeak fense neither," (laid fhe.)-" D-n my heart (faid he) I'll fpeak what I pleate." -Here the lawyer interposed, by telling him, there were fome things he must not speak .- And upon being defied to give an inftance, mentioned Treafon and Defamation. -" As for the king, (cried the foldier,) God bleis him -I eat his bread, and have lost blood in his caule, therefore I have nothing to iay to him-but, by G-d, I dare fay any thing to any other man."-" No, (laid the lawyer,) you date not call me a rorne."-" Damme, for why ?" (faid the other.)-""Because (replied the counfellor) I thouse have a good aftion against you, and recover."

RODERIC RANDOM. 143 recover."---" Well, well, (cried the officer,) if I dare not call you rogue, I dare think you one, damme!"-This stroke of wit he accompanied with a loud laugh of felf-approbation, whic unluckily did not affect the audience, but effectually filenced his antagoniff, who did not open his mouth for the space of an hour, except to clear his pipes with three hems, which, however, produced nothing.

CHAP. XVII.

Day breaking, I have the pleasure of viewing the person of Mils Snapper, whom I had not feen before-the foldier is with upon me-is offended, talks much of bis valour is reprimanded by a grave gentlewoman I get out of the coach, and fland on my own defence -they ride off, without baving attacked us-I purfue them-one of them is thrown from his borfe and taken ____ I return to the coach ____ am complimented by Mifs Snapper-the captain's behaviour on this occafion-the prude reproaches me in a pliloquy-I upbraid ber in the fame manner-the behaviour of Mrs. Snapper at breakfaß difobliges me-the lawyer is witty upon the officer, who threatens him.

IN the mean time, day breaking upon us, difcovered to one another the faces of their fellow-travellers; and I had the good fortune to find my miftrefs not quite to deformed nor difagreeable as the had been reprefented to me .- Her head, indeed, bore fome refemblance to a hatchet, the edge being reprefented by her face; but the had a certain delicacy in her complexion, and a great deal of vivacity in her eyes, which were very large and black; and, though the protuberance of her breaft, when confidered alone, feemed to drag her forwards, it was easy to perceive an equivalent on bar back, which balanced the other, and kept her body in equilibrio-On the whole, I thought I should have great reason to congratulate myself, if it should be my fate to possible twenty shouland pounds incumbered with fuch a wife. I began therefore to deliberate about the most probable means of acquiring the conquest, and was to much engroffed N 2

THE ADVENTURES OF 144 groffed by this idea, that I carce took any notice of the reft of the people in the coach, but revolved my profes in filence; while the convertation was maintained as be fore, by the object of my hopes, the ion of Mars and the barrifier, who by this time had recollected himield and talked in terms as much as ever .---- At length : diffute happened, which ended in a wager, to be determined by me, who was to much abforpt in contemplation. that I neither heard the reference nor the queltion which was put to me by each in his turn. Affronted at my fup. poled contempt, the foldier, with great vociferation, fwore, I was either dumb or deaf, if not both, and that I looked as if I could not fay Boh to a goofe .- Aroufed at this observation, I fixed my eyes upon him, and pronounced with emphasis, the interjection Bob! Upon which he cocked his hat in a fierce manner, and cried, "Damme, Sir, what d'ye mean by that ?"-Had I intended to answer him, which, by the bye, was not my defign, I should have been anticipated by Mifs, who told him, my meaning was to fhew that I could cry Boh! to a goofe; and laughed very heartily at my laconic reprost. -Her explanation and mirth did not help to appeare ms wrath, which broke out in feveral martial infinuations; fuch as ----- " I do not understand fuch freedoms, damme -D-n my blood! I'm a gentleman, and bear the king's commission .- 'Sblood ! some people deferve to have their nofes pulled for their impertinence."-I thought to have checked these ejaculations by a frown; becaule he had talked fo much of his valour, that I had long ago rated him an afs in a lion's fkin; but this expedient did not answer my expectation; he took umbrage at the contraction of my brows, fwore he did not value my fulky look a fig's end, and protefted he feared no man breathing -Mil's Supper faid, the was very glad to find herfelf in company with a man of fo much courage, when fhe did not doubt, would protect us all from the attempts of highwaymen during our journey .- " Make yourfelf perfectly eafy on that head, Madam, (replied the officer;) I have got a pair of pistols (here they are) which I took from a horfe officer at the bettle of Dettingen-they are double double loaded; and if any highwayman in England robs you of the value of a pin while I have the honour of being in your company, d-n my heart."-When he had expressed himself in this manner, a prim gentlewoman, who had fat filent litherto, opened her mouth, and faid, fhe wondered how any man could be fo rude as Madam, (cried the champion,) if you are to much afraid at fight of a piftol, how d'ye propofe to fland fire, if there fhould be occasion."-She then told him, that if the thought he could be fo unmannerly as to ule fire-arms in her prefence, whatever might be the occasion, the would get out of the coach immediately, and walk to the next village, where the might procure a convenience to herfelf.-Before he could make any answer, my Dulcinea interposed, and observed, that, far from being offended at a gentleman's using his arms in his own defence, the thought herfelf very lucky in being along with one by whole valour the flood a good chance of laving herfelf from being rifled .- The prude caft a difdainful look at mifs, and faid, that people who have but little to lofe, are fometimes the most folicitous about preferving it .---The old lady was affronted at this inuendo, and took notice, that people ought to be very well informed before they ipeak ilightingly of other people's fortunes, left they diffeover their own envy, and make themfelves ridiculous. The daughter declared, that fhedid not pretend to vie with any body in point of riches; and if the lady, who infifted upon non-reliftance, would promife to indemnify us all for the lois we fhould fultain, the would beene of the first to purfuade the captain to submission, in cafe we fhould be attacked .- To this propoial, reafonable as it was, the referved lady made no other reply, than a fearnful glance, and a tors of her bad .---- I was very well pleased with the fpirit of my mittrefs; and even wifned for an opportunity of diffinguithing my courage under her eye, which I believed could not fail of prepoliciling her in my favour; when, all of a fudden, Strap rode up to the coach-door, and told us in a great fright, that two men on horieback were crofling the N 3

145

146

heath (for by this time weehad paffed Hounflow) a rol made directly towards us. I This piece of informatic up was no fooner delivered, than Mrs. Snapper began h fcream, her daughter grew pale, the other lady pulk out her purfe to be in readind's, the lawyer's teeth char tered, while he pronounced, " 'Tis no matter-we'll in the county, and recover."-The captain gave evide figns of confusion; and I, after having commanded t coachman to ftop, opened the door, jumped out, and in vited the warrior to follow me .---- But finding him back ward and aftonished, I took his pistols, and, givin them to Strap, who had by this time alighted, and trem bled very much, I mounted on horieback; and takin my own (which I could better depend upon) from the holfters, cocked them both, and faced the robbers, wh were now very near us .- Seeing me ready to oppose the on horieback, and another man armed afoot, they mad a halt at fome diffance to recommitte us, and, after having rode round us twice, myfelf ftill facing about a they rode, went off the fame way they came, at a hand gallop. A gentleman's fervant coming up with a home at the fame time, I offered him a crown to affift me in purfuing them, which he no fooner accepted, than I armed him with the officer's piftols, and we galloped after the thieves, who, trufting to the fwiftness of the horfes, stopped till we came within shot of them, and then firing at us, put their nags to the full speed .-- We followed them as faft as our berths could carry us, but, not being to well mounted as they, our efforts would have been to little purpose, had not the horse of one of them flumbled, and thrown his rider with fuch violes over his head, that he lay fenfelefs, when we came up and was taken without the least opposition; while his comrade confulted his own fafety in flight, without regarding the diffress of his friend. We scarce had time to make ourfelves mafters of his arms, and tie his hands together, before he recovered his fenses; when, learning his fituation, he affected furprife, demanded tooknow by what authority we used a gentleman in that manner, and had the impudence to threaten us with a profecution for robbery.

147

robbery.—In the mean time we perceived Strap coming up with a crowd of people, armed with different kinds of weapons; and among the reft a farmer, who no fooner perceived the thief whom we had fecured, than he cried with great emotion, "Tilere's the fellow who robbed me an hour ago, of twenty pounds in a canval's bag." —He was immediately tearched, and the money found exactly as it had been deferibed: Upon which, we committed him to the charge of the countryman, who carried him to the town of Hounflow, which it feems the farmer had alarmed: and I, having fatisfied the footman for his trouble, according to promite, returned with Strap to the coach, where I found the captain and lawyer boly in adminifering fmelling bottles and cordials to the grave lady, who had gone into a fit at the noise of the firing.

When I had taken my feat, Mil's Snapper, who from the coach had feen every thing that happened, made me a compliment on my behaviour, and faid, the was glad to fee me returned, without having received any injury. Her mother too owned herfelf obliged to my refolution; and the lawyer told me, that I was entitled by act of parliament to a reward of forty pounds, for having apprehended a highwayman .- The foldier obferved, with a countenance in which impudence and thame flruggling, produced fome diforder, that if I had not been in fuch a damned hurry to get out of the coach, he would have lecured the rogues effectually, without all this builtle and loss of time, by a tcheme, which my heat and precipitation ruined .-.... For my own part, (continued he,) I amalways extremely cool on these occasions."-" So it appeared, by your trembling," (faid the young lady.) -" Death and damnation, (cried he,) your fex protests you, Madam : if any man on earth durft tell me to much, I'd fend him to hell, d-n my heart ! in an inftant."-So faying, he fixed his eyes upon me, and alked if I had ieen him tremble ?"-I answered, without hefitation, " Yes." " Damme, Sir, (laid he,) d'ye doubt my courage?"-I replied, " Very much."-This declaration quite difconcerted him. He looked blank, and pronounced with a fail tering voice, "O! 'tis to well-----d---n my blood! I thall find a time."---I figs fied my contempt of him, by thrutting my tongue in m cheek, which humbled him it much, that he fearce from another oath aloud during the whole journey.

148

The precife lady, having recruited her fpirits by the help of some fireng waters, began a foliloquy, in which fne wondered that any man, who pretended to mainta the character of a gentleman, could, for the fake of little paultry coin, throw perfons of honour into fue quandaries as might endanger their lives; and profess her furprife that women were not ashamed to commen fuch brutality. At the fame time vowing, that, for d future, the would never let foot in a ftage coach, if private convenience could be lfad for love or money. Nettled at her remark, I took the fame method a conveying my fentiments, and wondered in my turn, th any woman of common fenfe, flould be fo unreafonab as to expect that people, who had neither acquaintant nor connexion with her, would tamely allow themselve to be robbed and mal-treated, merely to indulge her a pricious humour. I likewife confessed my attonilhus at her infolence and ingratitude in taxing a perfon with brueality, who deferved her approbation and acknow ledgment; and vowed, that if the thould be affaulte again, I would leave here to the mercy of the spoke, that the might know the value of my protection. This perion of honour did not think fit to carry on the altercation any further, but feemed to chew the cut of her refeatment, with the creft-fallen captain, while I entered into difcourfe with my charmer, who was the more pleafed with my convertation, as the had conceive a very indifferent opinion of my intellects from my for myst filence. It found have had caufe to be equally fairfied with the forightline of the regions, could the har curbed her imagination with judgment; but the labourd under fuch a profution of falls, that I dreaded her unruly tongue, and felt by anticipation the horrors of an eternal clack! However, when I confidered the joys at tending the policifion of thenty thousand pounds, I RODERIC CANDOM. 149 orgot her imperfections, is zed occasion by the foreock, and endeavoured to infinuate myfelf into her aftection.—The careful momer kept a first watch over ner; and though the could not help behaving civilly to ne, took frequent opportunities of difcouraging our communication, by reprimming her for being to free with frangers, and telling her the mult learn to fpeak leis, and think more.—Abridged of the die of fpeech, we converted with our eyes, and I found the young lady very eloquent in this kind of difcours?. In thort, I had realon to believe that the was fick of the old gentlewoman's tuition, and that I fhould find it no difficult matter to fuperiede her authority.

When we arrived at the place were we were to breakfaft, I alighted, and helped my miftreis out of the coach, as well as her mother, who called for a private room, to which they withdrew, in order to eat by themselves. As they retired togethers I perceived that mits had got more twifts from nature than I had before obferved; for the was bent fideways, in the figure of an S, to that her progression very much refembled that of a crab.--The prude alfo choic the captain for her meis-mate, and ordered breakfaft for two only to be brought into another feparate room; while the lawyer and I, defected by the rest of the company, were fain to put up with each other. I was a good deal, chaganed whe flately referve of Mrs. Snapper, who I thought did not ule me with all the complaitance I deferved; and my companion declared, he had been a traveller for twenty years, and never knew the flage-coach rules fo much infringed be-As for the honourable gentlewoman, I could not conceive the meaning of her attachment to the lieutenant; and afked the lawyer if he knew for which of the foldier's virtues the admired him! The countellor facetioufly replied, " I fuppofe the lady knows him to be an able conveyancer, and wants him to make a fettlement in tail." -I could not help laughing at the archnels of the barrister, who entertained me during breakfast with a great deal of wit of the fame kind, at the expence of our fellow-travellers; and among other things faid, he was

150 THE ADVENTURES OF forty to find the young lacy faddled with fuch incur brances.

When we had made an and of our repart, and pa our reckoning, we went into the coach, took our place and bribed the driver with fuspence, to revenge us on a reft of his fare, by hurrying them away in the midts their meal .- This tafk he performed to our fatisfaction after he had diffurbed their enjoyment with his importunate clamour .- The mother and daughter obeyed th fummons first, and, coming to the coach-door, were oblig to defire the coachman's affiftance to get in, becaule t lawyer and I had agreed to fhew our refeatment by ou neglect .- They were no fooner feated, than the capta appeared as much heated as if he had been puried dozen miles by an enemy; and immediately after hi came the ludy, not without fome marks of diforder.few caths against the coachman, for his impertment a terruption; and the lawyer comforted him, by faying that if he had fuffered a nifi prius through the oblinant of the defendant, he might have an opportunity to jo iffue at the next stage. This last expression gave offend to the grave gentlewoman, who told him, if the was man, the would make him repent of fuch obfcenity, and thanked God fhe had never been in fuch company before. -At this samuar on, the captain thought himself under a neceffity of efpouring the lady's caule ; and according threatened to cut off the lawyer's ears, if he fhould give his tongue any fuch liberties for the future .- The poor countellor begged pardon, and universal filence enfued.

NHARAJA SERFORI'S

CHAP.

ISI

CHAP. XVIII. refolve to ingratiate myfelf with the mother, and am fawoured by accident-ibe frecile lady finds her bufband, and quits the coach-the captain is disappointed of his dinner-we arrive at B th-I accompany Mifs Snapper to the long room, where the is attacked by Beau to ber, and receive a check-fquire her to an affembly, where I am bleft with a fight of my dear Narcilla, which difcomposes me to much, that Wills Snapper, obferving my diforder, is at fome pains to difcover the caufe -is piqued at the occasion, and in our way bome pays me a farcaffic compliment-I am met by Mils Williams, who is maid and confidante of Narcijja-jhe acquaints me with her lady's regard for me, while under the difguise of a servant, and describes the transports of Narciffa on feeing me at the affembly in the character of a gentleman-I am furprifed with an account of her aunt's merriage, and make an appointment to meet Mils Williams next day.

URING this unfocial interval, my pride and interest maintained a fevere conflict on the fubicet of Milis Snapper, whom the one represented as unworthy of notice, and the other proposed as the object of my whele attention. The advantages and difadvantages attending fuch a match, were opposed to one another by my magination; and at length my judgment gave it fo much in favour of the full, that I refolved to profecute my scheme with all the address in my power .--- I thought I perceived fome concern in her countenance, occafioned by sy filence, which the no doubt imputed to my difguft at her mother's behaviour; and, as I believed the old woman could not fail of afcribing my mutenels to the lame motive, I determined to continue that fullen conduct towards her, and fall upon force other method of manifefting my effeem for the daughter : nor was it difficult for me to make her acquainted with my fentiments by the expression of my locks, which I modelled into the characters of humility and love; and which were answered by her with all the 2 m pathy and approbation I could

THE ADVIN FURES OF

152

I could defire. But when I chan to confider, that, win out further opportunities of improving my fucces, a the progrefs I had hitherto real, would not much are and that fuch opportunities could not be enjoyed withe the mother's permiffion. I charled define the would be requfite to vanquifh her could be read infpicion by my affidities and refpecifful behaviour on the road; and file would be requfite to vanquifh her could be read in the work in all likelihood invite me to vifit her at Bath, when did not fear of being able to cultivate her acquaintant as much as would be neceffary to the accompliftment my purpofe. And indeed, accident furnified me with opportunity of obliging her fo much, that the could ne with any appearance of good manners, forbear to grafmy inclination.

When we arrived at our dining-place, we found a the eatables in the inn befpoke by a certain noblema who had got the ftart of us; and in all likelihood m miftrefs and her mother mult have dined with Du Humphrey, had I not exerted myfelf in their behalf, at bribed the landlord with a glafs of wine, to curtail lordfhip's entertainment of a couple of fowls and at bacon, which I fent with my compliments to the laws They accepted my treat with a great many thanks, a defined I would favour them with my company at do ner, where I amufed the old gentlewoman to fucceistul by maintaining a feemingly difinterested ease, in ! midit of my civility, that the fignified a defire of beil better acquainted, and hoped I would be fo kind as fee her fometimes at Bath .-- While I enjoyed myielf this manner, the precife lady had the good fortune meet with her hufband, who was no other than gen man, or, in other words, valet de chambre to the va nobleman, whole coach flood at the door. Proud of I erereft the sol in the houle, the affected to thew power by introducing the captain to her fpcule, as perfon who had treated her with great civility; up which he was invited to a fhare of their dinner; wh the poor lawyer, finding himfelf utterly abandoned, mad application to me, and was, through my intercellion, a mitted into our company -Having fatisfied our appe it ites, and made ourfelves therry at the expence of the aperion of honour, the civil captain, and complaifant mufband, I did myfelf the pleafure of difcharging the bill by stealth, for which I received a great many apoperogies and acknowledgments from my guefts, and we reimbarked at the first warning. The officer was ob. iged, at laft, to appeale his hunger with a luncheon of repread and cheefe, and a pint bottle of brandy, which me he difpatched in the coach, curfing the inappetence of his to ordfhip, who had ordered dinner to be put back a whole a hour.

Nothing remarkable happened during the remaining in part of our journey, which was finished next day, when I waited on the ladies to the houfe of a relation, in a which they intended to lodge, and, paffing that night at the inn, took lodgings in the morning for myfelf.

The forenoon was spent in visiting every thing that was worth feeing in the place, in company with a gena tieman to whom Banter had given me a letter of introin duction; and in the afternoon I waited on the ladies, and found Mifs a good deal indifposed with the fatigue of the journey .- As they forefaw they fhould have occalion for a male acquaintance to fquire them at all pubic places, I was received with great cordiality, and had the mother's commission to conduct them next day to the long room, which we no fooner entered, than the eyes of every body prefent were turned upon us; and when we had fuffered the martyrdom of their looks for some time, a whilper circulated at our expence, which was accompanied with many contemptuous finiles, and thesing observations, to my utter shame and confusion. -I did not fo much conduct as follow my charge to a place, where the feated her mother and herfelf with aftonithing compositive, notwithstanding the anshannerly as s haviour of the whole company, which seemed to be affumed merely to put her out of countenance .- The cetebrated Mr. N-h, who commonly attends in this place as malter of the ceremonies, perceiving the difpolition of the affembly, took upon himfelf the task of gratifying their ill nature still further, by exposing my mistrels to VOL. II. 19 0 0

5 B

ppe

THE ADVENTURES OF the edge of his wit .- With this view he approached ut with mapy bows and gram cet. and, after having we comed Mil's Snapper to the ple s, afked her, in the hear ga ch ing of all prefent, if the could inform him of the nam of Toby's dog .- I was to much incented at his into Ve lence, that I flouid certainly have kicked him where flood, without ceremony and not the young lady pre vented the effects of my indignation, by replying, with the utmost vivacity, " His name was N-h; and an im pudent dog he was." This repartee, fo unexpected and just, raised fuch an universal laugh at the aggreffor, the all his affurance was infufficient to support him under their derifion ; fo that after he had endeavoured to compole himfelf, by taking fnuff, and forcing a fmile, was obliged to fneak off in a very ludicrous attitude while my Dulcinea was applauded to the fkies for the brilliancy of her wit, and her acquaintance immediate courted by the heft people of both fexes in the room This event, with which I was infinitely pleased at firl did not fail of alarming me, upon jurther reflection, when I confidered that the more the was carefied by perfons of diffinction, the more her pride would be inflamed, and confequently the obftacles to my fuccils multiplied and enlarged .- Nor were my prelaging fear untrue .- That very night I perceived her a little intextcated with the incenic the had received, and, though the fill behaved with a particular civility to me, I forelaw that, as foon as her fortune fhorld be known, the would be furrounded with a fwarm of admirers, some one of whom might poffibly, by excelling me in point of wealth, or in the arts of flattery and fcandal, fupplant me in he effeem, and find means to make the mother of his party. -I refolved therefore to lofe no time, and being invited to ibend the evening with them, found an opportunity. in lpite of the old gentlewoman's vigilance, to explain the meaning of my glances in the coach, by paying homage to her wit, and profeffing myfelf enamoured of her perion .- She bluthed at my declaration, and in a favourable manner difapproved of the liberty I had taken, putting me in mind of our being firangers to each other, and defiring I would not b the means of interrupting our acquaintance by any ach unfeafonable firokes of gallantry for the future. My ardour was effectually checked by this reprimand, which was, however, delivered in fuch a gentle manner, that I had no caule to be difobliged; and the arrival of her mother relieved me from a dilemma in which I fhould not have known how to demean mytelf a minute longer.—Neither could I refume the eatinets of carriage with which I came in : my miftrefs acted on the referve; and the convertation begining to flag, the old lady introduced her kinfwoman of the houle, and proposed a hand at whift.

While we amufed ourieives at this divertion, I undertion the gentlewoman that there was to be an affembly next night, at which I begged to have the honour of dancing with Mifs. She thanked me for the favour I mended her, affured me fine never did dance, but fignified a define of feeing the company; when I offered up fervice, which was accepted; not a little proud of being exempted from appearing with her in a fituation that, netwithftanding my profellion to the contrary, was not at all agreeable to my inclination.

Having fupped, and continued the game till fuch time as the fucceflive yawns of the mother warned me to be gone, I took my leave, and went home, where I made Strap very happy with an account of my progrefs .---Next day I put on my gaveft apparel, and went to drink tea at Mrs. Snapper's, according to appointment, when I found, to my inexpreffible fatisfaction, that the was laid up with the tooth-ach, and that Mifs was to be entroned to my care .- Accordingly we let out for the ball-room pretty early in the evening, and took pofferfion of a commodious place, where we had not fat longer than a quarter of an hour, when a goatieman, draffed in a green frock, came in, leading a young lady, whom I immediately difcovered to be the adorable Narciffa ! Good heaven! what were the thrillings of my foul at that infrant ! my reflection was overwhelmed with a torrent of agitation ! my heart throbbed with furprifing violence! a fudden milt overspread my eyes! my ears were 02 invaded

THE POYENTURES OF invaded with a dreadful wund! I panted for want of breath, and in fhort was the force moments entranced -This first tumult in the crowd of flattering ide rufhed upon my imagination': every thing that was for fentible and engaging in the character of that dear cre ture recurred to my remembrance ; and every favourab circumftance of my own qualifications appeared in a the aggravation of felf-conceit to heighten my expects tion !- Neither was this transport of long duration : th dread of her being already difpofed of intervened, an overcalt my enchanting reverie! My pretaging appre henfion reprefented her encircled in the arms of fom happy rival, and of confequence for ever loft to me! was flung with this fuggeftion, and believing the period who conducted her to be the hulband of this amiab young lady, already devoted him to my fury, and how up to mark him for my vengeance ; when I recollected to my unipeakable joy, her brother, the fox-hunter, in the perfon of her gallant .--- Undeceived to much to my fatisfaction in this particular, I gazed in a phrenzy a delight on the irrefiftible charms of his fifter, who no fooner diftinguished me in the crowd, than her evident confusion afforded a happy omen to my flame.----At fight of me the ftartled, the roles inftantly vanished from her polifhed cheeks, and returned in a moment with a double glow that overiproad her lovely neck, while her enchanting bofom heaved with strong emotion. I hailed these favourable symptoms, and lying in wait for he looks, did homage with my eyes .- She feemed to approve my declaration, by the complacency of her afpect; and I was to transported with her discovery, that more once I was on the point of making up to her, to difclole the throbbings of my heart in perion, had not that profound veneration which her prefence always infpired, reitrained the unfeatonable impulse .- All my powers being ingroffed in this manner, it may easily be imagined how ill I entertained Mifs Snapper, on whom I could not now turn my eyes, without making comparisons very little to her advantage .- It was not even in my power to return dutinct answers to the questions she asked me from time to time, io that the could not help obferving my abtence of mind; and having a turn for obfervation, watched my glances, and tracing them to the divine obict, difcovered the caufe of my diforder .- That the might, however, be convinced of the truth of her conjecture, the began to interrogate me with regard to Narcifia, and, notwithitanding all my endeavours to difguife my ientiments, perceived my attachment by my confufun.-Upon which flie affunced a frateline's of behaviour, and fat filent during the remaining part of the entertainment .- At any other time, her infpicion would have alarmed me; but now I was elevated by my paffion above every other confideration .- The miftrels of my fool having retired with her brother, I discovered fo much uncalinels at my fituation, that Mils Snapper propoled to go home ; and, while I conducted her to a chair, told me the had too great a regard for me to keep me any longer in torment.-I feigned ignorance of her meaning, and, having feen her fafely at her lodgings, took my leave, and went home in an ecftafy, where I diclosed every thing that had happened to my confident and humble fervant, Strap, who did not relifh the accident to well as I expected; and obferved, that a bird in hand is worth two in the bufh .- " But howfoever (laid he) you know beft-you know beft."-Next day, as I went to the pump-room, in hopes of feeing or hearing some tidings of my fair enflaver, I was met by a genthewoman, who, having looked hard at me, cried, " O Chrift! Mr. Random !" Surprifed at this exclamation, I examined the countenance of the perion who spoke, and immediately recognized my old iweetheart and fellow-fufferer, Mifs Williams.

157

I was mightily pleafed to find this unfortunate woman under fuch a decent appearance, profefice my joy at feeing her fo well, and defired to know where I should have the pleafure of her convertation. She was as heartily rejoiced at the apparent esfinels of my fortune, and gave me to know, that fhe, as yet, had no habitation that fhe could properly call her own; but would wait on me at any place I should pleafe to appoint.— O 3 Underfinanding

158 THE ADVENTURES OF Understanding that the way engaged for the prefent. thewed her the way to ray own lodgings, where, after very affectionate falutation, tod informed me of her he ing very happy in the force of a young lady, to when the was recommended by a former miffreis deceafed, in whole family the had recommended herfelf by the hond deceit we had concerted while the lived with me in the garret at London .- She then expressed a vehement de fire to be acquainted with the vicifitudes of my life fince we parted, and excuted her curiofity on account of the concern the had for my intereft .--- I forthwith grati fied her request, and, when I defcribed my fituation in Suffex, perceived her to attend to my flory with particular eagernets. She interrupted me, when I had finithe that period, with, " Good God ! is it pofible !"and then begged I would be fo good as to continue my relation; which I did as briefly as I could, burning with impatience to know the caule of her furprile, about which I had already formed a very intereiting conjature-When I had brought my adventures down to the prefent day, the feemed very much affected with the diferent circumstances of my fortune; and faying, with a finile, the believed my diffreffes were now at a period, proceeded to inform me, that the lady whom the fervel was no other than the charming Narciffa, who had he noured her with her confidence for fome time; in confquence of which trutt, the had often repeated the hor of John Brown with great admitation and regard; that fhe loved to dwell upon the particulars of his character, and did not fcruple to own a tender approbation of his flame .--- I became delirious at this piece of intelligente ftrained Mits Williams in my embrace, called her the angel of my happinets, and acted fuch extravagances, that the might cave been convinced of my fincerity, had the not been fatisfied of my honour before. As foon a I was in a condition to yield attention, the defcribed the prefent fituation of her miftrefs, who had no found reached her lodgings the night before, than the clotened her, and, in a repture of joy, gave her to know, that the had feen me at the ball, where I appeared in the character which the always thought my due, with fuch advantage of transformation, that, unless my image had been engraven on her hear, it would have been impoffible to know me for the perfon who had worn her aunt's livery ;-that, by the longuage of my eyes, the was affured of the continuance of my paffion for her, and confequently of my being unengaged to any other ; and that, tho' fhe did not doubt I would fpeedily fall upon fome method of being introduced, fhe was to impatient to hear of me, that fhe (Mifs Williams) had been fent abroad this very morning, on purpole to learn the name and character I at prefent bore .- My bofom had been hitherto a firanger to fuch a flood of joy as now rufhed upon it : My faculties were overborn by the tide: It was fome time before I could open my mouth, and much longer ere I could utter a coherent fentence .- At length, I forvently requefted her to lead me immediately to the object of my adoration . But the relifted my importunity, and explained the danger of fuch premature conduct .--" How favourable foever (faid fhe) my lady's inclination towards you may be, you may depend upon it, fhe will not commit the fmalleft trefpafs on decorum, either in difclofing her own, or in receiving a declaration of your paffion ; and although the great veneration I have for you, has prompted me to reveal what the communicated to me in confidence, I know fo well the feverity of her fentiments with respect to the punctilios of her fex, that, if the thould learn the leaft furmile of it, the would not only difinifs me as a wretch unworthy of her benevolence, but also for ever thun the efforts of your love." -I affented to the justness of her remonstrance, and defired the would affift me with her advice and direction : upon which, it was concerted between us, that, for the prefent, I should be content with her telling Narcisla, that, in the course of her inquiries, fhe could only learn my name: and that if, in a day or two, I could fall upon no other method of being introduced to her miftrefs, the would deliver a letter from me, on pretence of confulting her happines; and fay, that I met her in the treet, and bribed her to this piece of fervice .- Matters being thus adjusted, I know my old acquaintance to breakfast, and learned from the conversation, that my rival, Sir Timothy, had double Bunfelf into an apoplexy, of which he died five months ago; that the favage wa ftill unmarried; and that his aunt had been feized with a whim which he little expected, and choien the Ichoolmafter of the parish for her lord and huiband : but, ma. trimony not agreeing with her conflictution, the had been heetic and dropfical a good while, and was now a Bath, in order to drink the waters for the recovery of her health; that her niece had accompanied her thinker at her requeft, and attended her with the fame affection as before, notwithstanding the mistake she had committed : and that her nephew, who had been exciperated at the loss of her fortune, did not give his attendance out of good will, but purely to have an eye on his filter, left fhe fhould likewife throw herielf away without his confent or approbation .- Having enjoyed ourielves in this manner, and made an affignation to meet next day at a certain place, Mils Williams took her leave; and Strap's looks being very inquifitive about the nature of the communication fublishing between us, I made him acquainted with the whole affair, to his great affoniliment and fatisfaction.

159

to

160

CHAP. XIX.

I become acquainted with Marciffa's brother, who invite me to his houfe—where I am introduced to that adoable creature—where I am introduced to that adobis nap—Freeman, guefing the fituation of my thought, withdraws likewife, on pretence of bufinels—I declare my paffion to Narciffa—am well received charmed with her conversation—the fuire detains us to fupper—I eluce-bis defign by a firatagem, and get base laber.

IN the afternoon, I drank tea at the houfe of Mr. Free man, to whom I had been recommended by Banter, where I had not fat five minutes, till the fox-hunter came in, and, by his familiar behaviour, appeared to be intimate with my friend—I was at first under fome concern, left he fnould recollect my features; but when I found myfelf introduced to him as a gentleman from London, without being diffevered, I bleffed the opportunity that brought me into his company; hoping that, in the courie of our acquaintance, he would invite me to his house-Nor were my hopes fruftrated ; for as we fpent the evening together, he grew extremely fond of my conversation, asked a great many childifh questions about France, and other foreign parts; and feemed in highly entertained with my anfwers, that in his cups, he flook me often by the hand, pronounced me an honeft fellow, and in fine defired our company at dinner next day in his own house.-My imagination was fo much employed in anticipating the happinels I was to enjoy next day, that I flept very little that night; but, rifing early in the morning, went to the place appointed, where I met my the friend, and imparted to her my fuccets with the fquire .- She was much pleafed at the occasion, which (the faid) could not fail of being agreeable to Narciffa, who, in fpite of her pallion for me, had mentioned fome feruples relating to my true fituation and character, which the delicacy of her fentiments fuggeffed, and which the believed I would find it neceffary to remove, though the did not know how. I was a good deal startled at this infinuation, becaufe I forefaw the difficulty I flould find in barely doing my of juffice; for, although it never was my intention to impole mythis upon any woman, much leis on Marciffa, as a man of fortune, I laid claim to the character of a gentleman, by birth, education, and behaviour; and yet (io unlucky had the circumstances of my life fallen out) I should find it a very hard matter to make good my pretentions even to thefe, especially to the last, which was the most effential .- Mifs Williams was as fentible as I, of this my difadvantage; but comforted me alth observing; that when once a woman has beltowed her affections on a man, the cannot help judging of him, in all refpects, with a partiality eafily influenced in his favour: the remarked, that, although fome fituations of my life had been low, yet none of them had been infamous ; that my indigence had been the crime, not of me, but of fortune;

T.6 T

THE ADVINTURES OF and that the miferies I had indergene, by improving the faculties both of mind and back qualified me the mer for any dignified flation ; and would of confequence a commend me to the good praces of any fentible woman -She therefore advited the to do avays open and unr ferved to the inquiries of any unifreis, without una ceffarily betraying the meanelt occurrences of my fat and truft to the ftrength of her love and reflection for the reft .- The fentiments of this fentible young woman this, as well as on almost every other subject, peried agreed with mine : I thanked her for the care the tot of my interefts, and promiting to behave myfelf accord ing to her direction, we parted, after the had affor me, that I might depend upon her beft offices with he miltreis, and that the would, from time to time, conmunicate to me fuch intelligence as the thould procus advantage, I waited for the time of dinner with the mo fearful impatience : and as the hour drew nigh, my hea beat with fuch increased velocity, and my fpirits con tracted such diforder, that I began to suspect my tee lution, and even to with mylelf difengaged .- At la Mr. Freeman called at my lodgings, in his way, and accompanied him to the house where all my happing was depotted .- We were very kindly received by the fquire, who fat finoaking his pipe in a parlour, and afked if we chose to drink any thing before dinner : the I never had more occasion for a cordial, I was alhand to accept his offer, which was also refuled by my friend We fat down, however, and entered into convertation which lafted half an hour, fo that I had time to reco left myfelf; and (fo capricious were my thoughts) eve to hope that Narciffa would not appear-when, all or adden, a fervant coming in, gave us notice that dinne was upon the table-and my perturbation returned will fuch violence, that I could fearce conceal it from the company as I alcended the ffair-cafe .- When I entered the dining-room, the first object that faluted my ravined eyes was the divine Narciffa, bluthing like Aurora adorned with all the graces that meeknels, innocence and beauty can diffule! I was feized with a giddinefs, ny knees tottered, and I fcarce had ftrength enough to perform the ceremony of talutation, when her brother, flapping me on the fhoulder, cried, " Meafter Randan, that there is my fifter." I approached her brace, my foul was agonized with rapitore !- It was a lacky circumitance for us both, that my entertainer was not endued with an uncommon flock of penetration; for our mutual confusion was fo manifest, that Mr. Freeman perceived it, and as we went home together, congratulated me on my good fortune.-But, fo far was Bruin from entertaining the least fulpicion, that he ena language unknown to him, by telling her, that he had brought a gentleman who could jabber with her in French and other foreign lingos, as fait as the pleafed : then, wrning to me, faid, " Odds bods! I with you would hold difcourfe with her, in your French or Italiano; and tell me if the understands it as well as the would together whole days in it, and I can't have a mouthful my amiable miftrefs, and found her averie to his propofal, which indeed the declined with a fweetness of denial peculiar to herfelf, as a piece of diffeipect to that part of the company which did not understand the language in queftion. As I had the happinels of fitting opposite to to her, I feafted my eyes much more than my palate, which the tempted in vain with the most delicious bits carved by her fair hand, and recommended by her perfuative tongue ;---but all my other appetites were fwallowed up in the immentity of my love, which I fed by gazing inceffantly on the delightful object -Dinner was fcarce ended, when the fquire became very drowfy ; and, after feveral dreadful yawns, got up, firetched himfelf, took two or three turns acrofs the room, begged we would allow him to take a fhort nap, and, having laid a firong injunction on his fifter to detain us till his return, went to his repole without any further ceremony.

162

164

He had not been gone many minutes, when Freeman gueffing the lituation of my loan, and thinking he could not do me a greater favour that to leave me alone with Narciffa, pretended to recelled monfelf all of a fudde and, flarting up, begged the lady's pardon for half : hour, for he had lucking remembered an engagement of fome confequence, that he work perform at that infant -fo faying, he took his leave, promifing to come bad time enough for tea; leaving my miftrels and me great confusion .- Now that I enjoyed an opportunity. difclofing the pantings of my foul, I had not power ufe it .--- I fludied many pathetic declarations, but, wh I attempted to give them utterance, my tongue denu its office ; and the fat filent, with a downcaft look, fulle anxious alarm, her bolom heaving with expectation fome great event .- At length, I endeavoured to put " end to this folemn paule, and began with, " It is ver furprifing, Madam-" Herothe found dying away, made a full ftop-while Narciffa, ftarting, blufhed, and with a timid accent, answered, "Sir ?"-Confounded at this note of interrogation, I pronounced with theme fheepifh bashfulnels, "Madam !" To which she replied, " I beg pardon .- I thought you had fpoke to me."-Another paufe enfued-I made another effort, and though my voice faultered very much at the beginning Madam, 'tis very furprifing, that love fhould act to it confiftent with itfelf, as to deprive its votaries of the of their faculties, when they have most need of them Since the happy occasion of being alone with you preid ted itfelf, I have made many unfuccefsful attempts declare a paffion for the lovelieft of her fex-a paffio which took pofferfion of my foul, while my cruel tat compelled ine to wear a fervile difguife, fo unfuitable my birth, fentiments, and, let me add, my deferts ; yd favourable in one respect, as it furnished me with opportunities of feeing and adoring your perfections .- Yes, Madam, it was then your dear idea entered my boliom where it has lived unimpaired in the midft of numberled cares, and animated me against a thousand dangers and calamities!

calamities!"----While I fpoke thus, the concealed her face with her fan; and when I ceafed speaking, recovering herfelf from the mofe beautiful confution, told me, the thought herfelf very much obliged by my favourable opinion of her; and that she was very forry to hear I had been unfortunate .- Encouraged by this genile reply, I proceeded; owned myfelf fufficiently recompened by her kind compassion for what I had undergone, and declared that the future happiness of my life depended folely upon her .---- " Sir, (faid fhe,) I fhould be very ungrateful, if, after the fignal protection you once afforded me, I fhould refuse to contribute towards your happinefs, in any reafonable condetcention."-Transported at this acknowledgment, I threw myself at her feet, and begged the would regard my paffion with a favourable eye. She was alarmed at my behaviour, intreated me to rife, left her brother fhould difcover me in that posture, and to spare her, for the prefent, upon a subject for which the was altogether unprepared. In confequence of this remonstrance, I role, affuring her I would rather die than dilobey her; but, in the mean time, begged her to confider how precious the minutes of this opportunity were, and what reftraint I put upon my inclination, in facrificing them to her defire .- She infiled with unipeakable fweetness, and faid, there would be no want of opportunities, provided I could maintain the good opinion her brother had conceived of me; and I, enchanted by her charme, feized her hand, which I well high devoured with killes .- But the checked my boldnets with a feverity of countenance ; and defired I would not to far forget myfelf to her, as to endanger the efteem the had for me .- She reminded me of our being almost trangers to each other, and of the neceffity there was for her knowing me better, before the coald take any refolution in my favour; and, in fhort, mingled fo much good fenie and complacency in her reproof, that I became as much enamoured of her understanding, as I had been before of her beauty; and alked pardon for my preiumption with the utmost, reverence of conviction .- She forgave my offence with her blual affability; and fealed VOL. II. P. my 19

THE ADVENCTURES OF my pardon with a look to fill of bewitching tendernels. that for fome minutes my letters were loft in exitaly ! afterwards endeavoured to ree alenny behaviour accord ing to her defire, and turn the conversition upon a more indifferent lubject that her protonce was an infurmount. able obflacle to my defigue while I beheld fo much excellence, I found it in portiols to cell my attention from the contemplation of it I gazed with unutterable fondness I grew mad with admiration !- " My condition is infupportable! (cried I.) I am diffracted with paffion! Why are you to exquititely fair ?- Why are you foenchantingly good ?- Why has nature dignified you with charms fo much above the itandard of women; and wretch that I am, how dares my unworthinefs afpire to the enjoyment of fuch perfection!"

She was flartled at my ravings, reasoned down my transport, and, by her irreliftible eloquence, foothed my foul into a ftate of tranquil felicity; but, left I might fuffer a relapte, industriously promoted other subjects to entertain my imagination-She chid me for having omitted to enquire about her aunt, who (fhe affured me) in the midit of all her abience of temper, and detachment from common affairs, often talked of me with uncommonewarmth .- I profeffed my veneration for the good lady, excuted my omiffion, by imputing it to the violence of my love, which ongroffed my whole foul, and defired to know the lituation of her health .---- Upon which, the amiable Narciffa repeated what I heard be fore, of her marriage, with all the tendernefs for her reputation that the fubject would admit of; told me fit lived with her hufband hard by, and was fo much all o ted with the dropfy, and walted by a confumption, that the had finall hopes of her recovery .- Having expressed my forrow for her diffemper, I queffioned her about my good friend Mrs. Sagely, who I learned (to my great fatisfaction) was ftill in good health ; and who, by the encomiums fhe beltowed upon me after I was gone, confirmed the favourable impressions my behaviour at parting had made on Narcilla's heart .- This circumitance introduced an enquiry into the conduct of Sir Timothy Thickey,

Thicket, who (the informed me) had found means to incenie her brother fo much against me, that the found it impolible to undeceive kinh; but, on the contrary, fuffered very much in her own character, by his feandalous infinuations .--- That the whole parifh was alarmed, and actually in purfuit of me; to that the had been in the utmolt conffernation upon my account, well knowing how little my own innocence and her teftimony would have weighed with the ignorance, injuitice and brutality of those who must have judged me, had I been apprchended-That Sir Timothy having been leized with a fit of the apoplexy, from which with great difficulty he was recovered, began to be apprehentive of death, and toprepare himfelf accordingly for that great event; as a ftep to which he fest for her brother, owned with great contrition the brutal defign he had upon her, and of confequence acquitted me of the affault, robbery, and correspondence with her, which he had laid to my charge ; after which confession, he lived about a month in a languilhing condition, and was carried off by a fecond

Every word that this dear creature fpoke rivetted the chains with which the held me endaved ! My mifthievous fancy began to work, and the tempelt of my pathon to wake again ; when the return of Freeman defroyed the tempting opportunity, and enabled me to quell the rifing tumult .- A little while after, the iquire ftaggered into the room, rubbing his eyes, and called for his tea, which he drank out of a fmall bowl, qualified with brandy; while we took it in the utual way .---Natciffa left us in order to vifit her aunt; and, when Freeman and I proposed to take our leave, the fox-hunter infitted on our fpending the evening at his houfe with fuch oblinacy of affection, that we were obliged to comply .- For my own part, I fhould have been glad of the invitation, by which, in all likelihood, I fhould be bleft with more of his fifter's company, had I not been afraid of hisking her effeem, by entering into a debauch of drinking with him ;, which, from the knowledge of his character, I forefaw would happen; but there was no remedy.—I was forced to rely upon the ftrength of my conftitution, which I hoped would refift intoxication longer than the fquire's; and to truft to the good-name and differentiation of my miftrefs for the reft.

P 2

168

Our entertainer refolving to begin betimes, orden the table to be furnifhed with liquor and glaffes immeately after tea; but we abfolutely refuted to fet in for drinking fo foon; and prevailed upon him to pafs away an hour of two at whift, in which we engaged as foun as Narcifia returned.—The favage and I happened tob partners at first; and as my thoughts were wholly enployed in a more interefing game, I played to ill the he loft all patience, fwore bitterly, and threatend u call torwine, if they would not grant him another affeciate. This defire was gratified, and Narciffa and I were of afide : he won for the fame reafon that made him lofe before : I was fatisfied, my lovely partner dia not repine, and the time flipped away very agreeably, until we were told that fupper was ferved in another room.

The fquire was enraged to find the evening fo unprofitably spent, and wreaked his vengeance on the cards which he tore, and committed to the flames with man exectations; threatening to make us redeem our lois with a large glass and quick circulation ; and indeed we had no fooner fupped, and myocharmer withdrawn, than h began to put his threats in execution. Three bottles 9 port (for he drank no other for of wine) were place before us, with as many water-glaffes, which were in mediately filled to the brim, after his example, by each out of his refpective allowance, and emptied in a tree to the beft in Chriftendom .- Though I fivallowed this and the next as faft as the glafs could be replemined without handation or thew of reluctance, I perceived that my brain would not be able to bear many bumpers of this fort; and, dreading the perfeverance of a champion who began with fuch vigour, I determined to make up for the deficiency of my strength by a stratagent which I actually put in practice, when the second course of bottles was called for .- "The wine being frong and heady, I was already a good deal difcomposed by the difpatch we had made; Freeman's eyes began to reel; and Bruin himfelf was clevated into a fong, which he uttered with great vociferation .- When I therefore faw the fecond round broughtin, I affumed a gay air, and entertained him with a French catch on the fubject of drinking, which, though he did not understand it, delighted him highly, and, telling him that your choice ipirits at Paris never troubled themfelves with glaffes, alked if he had not a bowl or cup in the house that would contain a whole quart of wine .- " Odds niggers! (cried he) I have a filver caudle cup that holds just the quantity, for all the world-Fetch it hither, Numps."-The veilel being produced, I bade him decant his bottle into it, which he having done, I nodded in a very deliberate manner, and faid, " Pledge you."-He ftared at me for fome time, and crying, "What! all at one pull, Measter Randan !"-I answered, "At one pull! Sir: you are no milk-for-we fhall do you justice."-" Shall you? (faid he, fhaking me by the hand :) odd then, I'll ice it out, an't were a mile to the bottom .- Here's to our better acquaintance, Measter Randan."-So faying, he applied it to his lips, and emptied it in a breath.-----I knew the effect of it would be almost instantaneous; therefore, taking the cup, began to discharge my bottle into it, telling him he was now qualified to drink with the cham of Tartary .---- I had no fooner pronounced these words, than he took umbrage at them, and, after feveral attempts to fpit, made fluit to futter out, "A f-t for your chams of T-Tartary! I am a f-ffree born Englidhman, worth th-three thouland a-year, and v-value no man, damme !" Then, dropping his jaw, and fixing his eyes, he hickup'd aloud, and fell upon the floor as mute as a flounder .--- Freeman, heartily glad at his defeat, affifted me in carrying him to bed, where we left him to the care of his fervants, and went home to our refpective habitations, congratulating one another on our good fortune.

169

THE ADVENTURES OF C H A P. XX.

170

Mils Williams informs ma of Narciffa's approbation of m flame-I appeafe the four downite to my militely am bleffed with an anfwer -beg leave of her brothe to dance with her at a ball obtain his confent and her -enjoy a private conversation with her-am perplexed with reflections-bave the bonour of appear. ing her partner at a ball-we are complimented by certain nobleman-be difcovers fome fymptoms of paffion for Narcifia-I am flung with jealoufy-Narciffa, alarmed, retires ___ I obferve Melinda the company—the squire is capitvated by her beauty WAS met next morning, which we joy of the progrets I has williams, who gave me joy of the progrets I has we will be in the set of th WAS met next morning, at the utual place, by Mr made in the affection of her miltrefs, and bleffed me wit an account of that dear creature's convertation with her after the had retired the night before from our company -----I could fearce believe her information, when the recounted her expressions in my favour, fo much men warm and paffionate were they than my molt fangum hopes had prefaged ; and was particularly pleafed to hear that the approved of my behaviour to her brother, after the withdrew .- Transported at the news of my happ nels, I prefented my ring to the meffenger, as a teftimor of my gratitude, and fatisfaction ; but the was about fuch mercenary confiderations, and refufed my compli ment with fome refentment, faying, the was not a litt mortified to fee my opinion of her to low and contempt ble. I did myfelf a piece of juffice by explaining m behaviour on this head, and, to convince her of m efteem, promifed to be ruled by her directions in a profecution of the whole affair, which I had fo much a heart, that the repofe of my life depended upon the comfaquence.

As I fervently withed for another interview, where might pour out the effufions of my love, without dange of being interrupted, and perhaps reap fome endeaning return from the queen of my defires, I implored her ad vice and affiftance in promoting this event; — but de gave me to underftand, that Narcifla would, make m precipitat

precipitate compliances of this kind, and that I would do well to cultivate her brother's acquaintance, in the course of which, I should not want opportunities of removing that referve which my miftrels thought herfelf obliged to maintain during the infancy of our correfpondence. In the mean time fhe promifed to tell her lady, that I had endeavoured, by prefents, and periuations, to prevail upon her, (Miss Williams,) to deliver a letter from me, which the had refuted to charge herfelf with, until the thould know Narcifia's fentiments of the matter; and faid, by thefe means the did not doubt of being able to open a literary communication between us ; which could not fail of introducing more intimate connexions. I approved of her counfel; and our appointment being renewed for next day, left her with an intent of falling upon fome method of being reconciled to the fquire, who, I supposed, would be offended with the trick we had put upon him. With this view, I confulted Freeman, who, from the knowledge of the fox-hunter's difpolition, affured me there was no other method of pacifying him, than that of facrificing ourielves, for one night, to an equal match with him in drinking. This expedient I found myfelf neceffitated to comply with, for the interest of my passion, and therefore determined to commit the debauch at my own ledgings, that I might not run any rifk of being difcovered by Narciffa in a ftate of brutal degeneracy. Mr. Freeman, who was to be of the party, went, at my defire, to the louire, in order to engage him, while I took care to furnish myself for his reception. My invitation was accepted, my gueits honoured me with their company in the evening, when Bruin gave me to underftand, that he had drank many tuns of wine in his life, but was never ferved fuch a trick as I had played upon him the night before. I promifed to atone for my treipais ; and, having ordered to every man his bottle, began the contest with a bumper to the health of Narcifia. The toalts circulated with great devotion, the liquor began to operate, our mirth grew noify, and, as Freeman and I had the advantage of drinking finall French claret, the favage

ing

10

171

was effectually tamed before our lenfes were in the laf affected, and carried home in an apoplexy of drunkenefs.

I was next morning, as ufual, favoured with a vir from my kind and punctual confidante, who, telling me fhe was permitted to receive my letters for her miftres, I tock up the non immediately, and, following the fin dictates of my paffion, wrote as follows:

" Dear Madam,

A7ERE it poffible for the powers of utterance to reyeal the loft emotions of my foul; the fond anxiety the glowing hopes, the chilling fears, that rule my break by turns; I should need no other witness than this paper to evince the purity and ardour of that flame your charm have kindled in my heart. But, alas! expression wrong my love : I am infpired with conceptions that no lan guage can convey! Your beauty fills me with wonder your understanding with ravishment ! and your goodne with adoration! I am transported with defire, diffract with doubts, and tortured with impatience! Suffer me then, lovely arbitrefs of my fate, to approach you I perfon, to breath in foft murmurs my paffion to your est to offer the facrifice of a heart overflowing with the mol genuine and difinterested love, to gaze with exflacy of the divine object of my wifnes, to hear the mufic of he enchanting tongue ! and to rejoice in her finiles of appro bation, which will banish the shoft intolerable super from the bolom of

Your enraptured

Having finished this effusion, I committed it to be care of use faithful friend, with an injunction to fecamy energy with all her eloquence and influence; as in the mean time went to drefs, with an intention of w fitting Mrs. Snapper and Mils, whom I had utterly as gleeted, and indeed almost forgot, fince my dear Narcal had refumed the empire of my foul. The old gend woman received me very kindly, and Mils affected frankact franknefs and gaicty which, however, I could eafily perceive were forced and diffembled. Among other things, the pretended to joke me upon my paffion for Narcifla, which the averred was no feeret, and afked if I intended to dance with her at the next affembly. I was a good deal concerned to find myfelf become the town-talk on this fubject, left the fquire, having notice of my inclinations, fhould difapprove of them, and, by breaking off all correspondence with me, deprive me of the oppartanities I now enjoyed. But I refolved to ufe the interest I had with him while it lafted; and that very night meeting him occafionally, afked his permittion to folicit her company at the ball, which he very readily granted, to my inexpreffible fatisfaction.

Having been kept awake the greateft part of the night, by a thouland delightful reveries that took poffeffion of my fancy, I got up betimes, and, flying to the place of rendezvous, had in a dttle time the pleafure of feeing Mils Williams approach, with a finile on her countemance, which I interpreted into a good omen. Neither was I miftaken in my prefage: She prefented me with a letter from the idol of my foul, which, after having killed it devoutly, I opened with the utmott eagernels, and was bleffed with her approbation in thefe terms:

" SIR,

TO fay I look upon you with indifference, would be a piece of diffimulation, which I think no decorum requires, and no cultom can juitify. As my heart never ist an imprefiion that my tongue was afhamed to declare, I cill not icruple to own myleft pleafed with your paffion; onfident of your integrity, and fo well convinced of my own difference of the second second second second second you the interview you define, were I net over-awed by the prying curiofity of a malicious world, the centure of which might be fatally prejudicial to the reputation of Your

NARCISSA."

174

No anchorite, in the exitacy of devotion, ever ado a relique with more fervour than that with which killed this inimitable proof of my charmer's cando generofity, and affection I read it over an hundred time was ravified with her confelion in the beginning; the fubleription of your Narciffa, yielded me fuch delig as I had neveo felt before! My happinels was fill created by Mils Williams, who blefted me with a rey tition of her lady's tender expredions in my favour, wi fhe received and read my letter. In thort, I had alto reafon in the world to believe that this gentle creature bofom was poliefied by a pallion for me, as warm, they, perhaps not fo impetuous, as mine for her.

I informed my friend of the fquire's confent to dancing with Narciffa at the ball, and defired her to her miltrets, that I would do myfelf the honour of vi ing her in the afternoon, in confequence of his permilie when I hoped to find her as inculgent as her brother been complaifant in that particular .----- Mifs Willia expressed a good deal of joy at hearing I was fo mu in favour with the fox-hunter, and ventured to alfurem that my vifit would be very agreeable to my miltrefs, " rather, becaufe Bruin was engaged to dine abroad-T was a circumftance which I fcarce need fay pleafed m him, and affecting to know nothing of his engageme told him I would do myfelf the pleafure to wait un him in the afternoon, and to prefent his fifter with ticket for the ball .- He fhook me by the hand, accord ing to cultom, and giving me to understand that he v to dine abroad, defired me to go and drink tea Narciffa notwithstanding, and promifed to prepare for my vifit in the mean time.

Every thing fucceeded thus to my wift. I waited w incredible impatience for the time, which no foons rived than I haftened to the feene, which my fancy h pre-occupied long before.—I was introduced according to the dear enchantrels, whom I found accompanied Mifs Williams, who, on pretence of ordering tea, tired at my approach—This for ourable accident, wh larmed my whole foul, difordered her alfo .-- I found nvielf actuated by an irrefiftible impulse : I advanced to er with eagerne's and awe; and profiting by the conbifion that prevailed over her, claiped the fair angel in ny arms, and imprinted a glowing kifs upon her lips, nore foft and fragrant than the dewy rofe-bud just burstne from the fiem ! Her face was in an inftant covered oth blufhes; her eyes fparkled with refentment; I threw wielf at her feet, and implored her pardon. Her love ecame an advocate in my caufe; her look foftened into orgiveness; the railed me up, and chid me with fo much weetness of displeasure, that I should have been tempted prepeat the offence, had not the coming in of a fervant with the tea-board prevented my prefumption .- While we were fubject to be interrupted or over-heard, we conerfed about the approaching ball, at which the promifed o grace me as a partner; but when the equipage was removed, and we were left alone, I refumed the more merefing theme, and expressed myself with such transbort and agitation, that my miltrefs, fearing I would ommit fome extravagance, rung the bell for her maid, whom the detained in the room, as a check upon my viacity.- I was not forry for this precaution, becaufe I ould unbofom myfelf without referve before Mifs Wilams, who was the confidante of us both _I therefore ave a loofe to the infpirations of my paffion, which perated fo fuccefsfully upon the tender affections of arcilla, that the laid alide the conftraint the had hitherto rore, and bleffed me with the most melting declaration her mutual flame!-It was impossible for me to foras taking the advantage of this endearing condefcenon .- She now gently yielded to my embraces, while I, scircling all that I held dear within my arms, tafted in dvance the joys of that paradile I hoped in a fittle time a holly to poffers !- We spent the afternoon in all the sklaly of hope that the most fervent love, exchanged y mutual vows, could infpire; and Mifs Williams was much affected with our chafte carefies, which recailed ie fad remembrance of what fhe was, that her eyes ere filled with tears.

175

176

The evening being pretty far advanced, I forced m felf from the dear object of my flame, who induiged in a tender embrace at parting, and repairing to a lodgings, communicated to my friend Strap every c cumstance of my happines, which filled him with much pleafure that it ran over at his eyes; and he prav heartily that no envious devil might, as formerly, d the cup of bleffing from my lip .- When I reflected what had happened, and effectially on the unrefer proteftations of Marciffa's love, I could not help be amazed at her omitting to enquire into the particul circumftances of life and fortune of one whom the favoured with her affection, and I began to be a lit anxious about the fituation of her finances; well kno ing that I fhould do an irreparable injury to the per my foul held moft dear, if I fhould efpouse her, with being able to support her in the rank which was certain her due .- I had heard indeed, while I ferved her an that her father had left her a confiderable fum; and t every body believed the would inherit the greatest a of her kinfwoman's dowry, but I did not know how the might be refricted by the old gentleman's will, the enjoyment of what he left her; and I was too w informed of the virtuofo's late conduct, to think " mistress could have any expectations from that quart -I confided, however, in the good fenfe and policy my charmer, who, I was fure, would not content unite her fate with mine, before the had fully confide

The ball night being arrived, I dreffed myleff in fuit I had referved for fome grand occafion; and fuidrank tea with Narciffa and her brother, conducted angel to the feene, where the in a moment eclipted her female competitors for beauty, and attracted admiration of the whole affembly.—My heard dias with pride on this occafion, and my triumph rejected bounds, when, after we had danced together, a genu nobieman, remarkable for his figure and influence and beau monde, cane up, and, in the hearing of all prefe honoured us with a very particular compliment, up our accomplishments and appearance; but this transport was foon checked, when I perceived his lordship attach hmielf with great affiduity to my miftrefs; and fay fome warm things, which, I thought, favoured too much of puffion .- It was then I began to feel the pangs of jealoufy -I dreaded the power and address of my rival-I fickened at his difcourfe-When the opened her lips to anfwer, my heart died within me .----- When the imiled, I imption; I curfed her complaifance! At length he quitted her, and went to the other fide of the room .---Narciffa, fulnecting nothing of the rage that inflamed me, put fome queftions to me, as foon as he was gone, to which I made no reply, but affumed a grim look, which too well denoted the agitation of my breaft, and furprifed her not a little .- She no fooner obferved my emotion, than the changed colour, and afked what ailed me? but, before I could make answer, her brother, pulling me by the fleeve, bade me take notice of a lady who fat fronting us, whom I immediately, to my vaft attonishment, diffinguished to be Melinda, accompanied fquire,) is the not a delicate piece of fruit ?----- 'Sdeath ! I have a good mind-it I thought the was a fingle perion."-Notwithstanding the perplexity I was in, I had reflexion enough to forefee that my paffion might fuffer greatly by the prefence of this lady, who in all probability would revenge herfelf upon me for having formerly difgraced her, by fpreading reports to my prejudice - I was therefore alarmed at these symptoms of the fquire's admiration; and for fome time did not know what reply to make, when he afked my opinion of her beauty. At length I came to a determination, and told him, that her name was Melinda, that the had a fortune of ten thousand pounds, and was faid to be under promile of marriage to a certain lord, who deferred his nupuals a few months until he should be of age. I thought this piece of intelligence, which I had myfelf Vol. II. 20 0 invented, would have hindered him effectually from en tertaining any further thoughts of her; but I was egregioufly miltaken. The fox-huster had too much felf. fufficiency to defpair of fuccefs against any competitu on earth. He therefore made light of her engagement, faying, with a finile of felf approbation, " Mayhap he will change her mind-What fignifies his being a lord -I think myfelf as good a man as e'er a lord in Chriften. dom ;-and I'll fee if a commoner worth three thoujand a year won't ferve her turn."-This determination ftartled me not a little. I knew he would foon difcover the contrary of what I advanced, and, as I believed he would find her ear open to his addreffes, did not doubt of meeting with every obftacle in my amour, that he malice could invent, and her influence execute.----This reflexion increased my chagrin .- My vexation was evident .- Narciffa infifted on going home immediately; and as I led her to the door, her noble admirer, with a look full of languishment, directed to her a profound bow, which ftung me to the foul-Before the went into the chair, the afked, with an appearance of concern, what was the matter with me? and I could pronounce no more than, " By heaven ! I'm diffracted.

177

178

CHA

RODERIC RANDOM. CHAP. XXI.

179

Tertured with jealoufy, I go byme and abufe Strap-receive a mellage from Narciffa, in confequence of which I baften to her apariment, where her endearing affurances banifs all my doubts and apprehensions in my retreat difcover fomebody in the dark, whom, sufpetting to be a fpy, I refolue to kill; but, to my great furprife, am convinced of his being no other than Strap-Melinda flanders me-I become acquainted with Lord Quiverwit, who endeavours to found me with regard to Narciffa-the fauire is introduced to his lordship, and grows cold towards me-I learn from my confidante, that this nobleman professes bonourable love to my mistres, who continues faithful to me, notwithstanding the fcandalous reports the has beard to my prejudice-I am mortified with an affurance that her whole fortune depends upon the pleasure of ber brother-Mr. Freeman condoles me on the decline of my character, which I windicate fo much to his fatisfaction, that he undertakes to combat fame in my behalf.

AVING uttered this exclamation, at which fhe fighed, I went home in the condition of a frantic Bedlamite ; and finding the fire in my apartment almost extinguished, vented my fury upon poor Strap, whole ear I pinched with fuch violence, that he goared hideoully with pain, and when b quitted my hold, looked fo foolifhly aghaft, that no unconcerned fpectator could have feen him, without being feized with an immoderate fit of laughter. It is true, I was foon fenfible of the injury I had done, and afked pardon for the outrage I had committed; upon which my faithful valet, fhaking his head, faid, " I forgive you, and may God forgive you." But he could not help fhedding fome tears at my unkindnefs .- I felt unfpeakable remorfe for what I had done, curfed my own ingratitude, and confidered his tears as a reproach that my foul, in her prefent disturbance, could not bear .- It fet all my paffions into a ferment ; I for horrible oaths, without meaning or application; I feamed at the mouth, kicked the chairs about the room, and played abundance of mad pranks, that frightened my friend almost out of his fenles.—At length my transport fublided, I became melancholy, and wept infensibly.

180

During this fate of dejection, I was furprised with the appearance of Mifs Williams, whom Strap, blubbering all the while, had conducted into the chamber, without giving me previous notice of her approach.-She was extremely affected with my condition, which he had learned from him, begged me to moderate my paifion, fufpend my conjectures, and follow her to Narcifa, who defired to fee me forthwith .---- That dear name operated upon me like a charm! I ftarted up, and, without opening my lips, was conducted into her apartment through the garden, which we entered by a private door .- I found the adorable creature in tears ! I was My heart was too full to fpeak-Her fnowy bofom heaved with fond refertment. At last the, fobbing, cried, "What have I done to difoblige you !"-My heart was pierced with the tender queffion ! I drew near with the utmoß reverence of affection ! I fell upon my knees before her, and, kiffing her hand, exclaimed, "O! thou art all goodness and perfection! I am undone by my want of merit! I am unworthy to poffers thy charms, which heaven hath defined for the arms of fome more favoured being."-She gueffed the caufe of my difquiet, upbraided me gently for my fufpicton, and gave me fuch flattering affurances of her eternal fidelity, that all my doubts and fears forlook me, and peace and fatisfaction reigned within my break.

At midnight I left the fair nymph to her repole, and, being let out by Mifs Williams at the garden gate by which I encrets, began to explore my way homeward in the dark, when I heard at my back a noife like that of a baboon when he mows and chatters. I turned in ftantly, and, perceiving fomething black, concluded I was difcovered by fome fpy, employed to watch for that purpole. Aroufed at this conjecture, by which the reputation of the virtuous Narciffa appeared in jeopardy, I drew my fword, and would have facrificed him to her fame, had not the voice of Strap reftrained my arm. It was with great difficulty he could pronounce, " Dd-d-do! mum-um-ym-murder me if you pleafe." Such an effect had the cold upon his jaws, that his teeth rattled like a pair of caftanets. Pleased to be thus undeceived, I laughed at his confernation, and afked what brought him thither ? Upon which he gave me to underftand, that his concern for me had induced him to follow me to that place, where the fame reafon had detained him till now; and he frankly owned, that, in fpite of the effeem he had for Mils Williams, he began to be very unealy about me, confidering the difpolition in which I went abroad ; and, if P had ftaid much longer, would have certainly alarmed the neighbourhood in my behalf. The knowledge of this his intention confounded me! I represented to him the mischievous consequences that would have attended fuch a rafh action, and cautioning him feverely against any such defign for the future, concluded my admonition with an affurance, that in cafe he should ever act fo madly, I would, without hefitation, put him to death. " Have a little patience, (cried he, in a lamentable tone ;) your difpleafure will do the builnefs, without your committing murder." I was touched with this repreach; and as foon as we got home, made it my bulinefs to appeale him, by explaining the caufe of that transport, during which I had used him to unworthily. Next day, when I went into the long room, I obferved leveral whilpers circulate all of a fudden; and did not doubt that Melinda had been bufy with my character : but I confoled myfelf with the love of Narciffa, upon which I refted with the most perfect confidence, and, going up to the rowly-powly table, won a few pieces from my fulpected rival, who, with an eafy politenefs, entered into converfation with me, and, defiring my company at the coffee-house, treated me with tea and chocolate. remembered Strutwell, and guarded against his infinuating behaviour : not was my fufpicion wrong placed : he artfully artfully turned the difcourfe upon Nareifla, and endervoured, by hinting at an intrigue he pretended to be engaged in elfewhere, to learne what connexion there was between her and me. But all his finefle was ineffectual; I was convinced of his diffimulation, and gav fuch general antwers to his enquiries, that he was lored to drop the fubject, and talk of fomething effect.

181

182

While we converted in this manner, the favage can in, with another gentleman, who introduced him to hs lordfhip; and he was received with fuch peculiar marks of diffinction, that I was perfuaded the courtier intendedu ufe him in fome fhape or other; and from theme I drew an unlucky omen. But I had more caufe to be diffunged the following day, when I faw the fquire in company with Melinda and het mother, who honourd me with feveral diffainful glances; and when I after wards threw mylelf in his way, inflead of the could fhake of the hand, he returned nty falute with a cold re pittion of "Servant, fervant;" which he pronounced with fuch inflerence, or rather contempt, that if he had not been Marciffa's brother, I should have affronted him in public.

These occurrences diffurbed me not a little. I fore faw the brooding form, and armed myfelf with refoltion for the occasion; but Narciffa being at flake, I was far from being rehend.—d could have renounced every other comfort of lite with fome degree of fortitude; but the prospect of losing her, difabled all my philosophy, and tortured my foul into madnets.

Mils Williams found me, next morning, full of anious tumult, which did not abate, when the told me, that my Lord Quiverwit, having profelfed honourable intentions, had been introduced to my lovely miffreis by he brother, which add at the fame time, from the information of Melinda, fpoke of me as an Irifh fortune-hunter, without either birth or effate; who fupported myfelf in the appearance of a gentleman by fharping, and other infamous practices; and who was of fuch an obferreorigin, that I did not even know my own extraction.—Though

183

I expected all this malice, I could not hear it with temper, especially as truth was fo blended with falsehood in the affertion, that it would be almost impossible to feparate the one from the other in my vindication .- But I faid nothing on this head, being impatient to know how Narcilla had been affected with the difcovery.-----That generous creature, far from believing these imputations, was no fooner withdrawn with her confidante, than the inveighed with great warmth against the malevolence of the world, to which only the afcribed the whole of what had been faid to my difadvantage; and calling every circumstance of my behaviour to her, into review before her, found every thing fo polite, honourable and difinterested, that she could not harbour the least doubt of my being the gentleman I affumed.-----" I have indeed (faid fhe) purpofely forebore to alk the particulars of his life, left the recapitulation of fome misfortunes, which he has undergone, fhould give him pain : and as to the article of his fortune, I own myfelf equally afraid of enquiring into it, and of discovering the atuation of my own, left we should find ourielves both unhappy in the explanation; for, alas! my provision is conditional, and depends entirely on marrying with my

I was thunderftruck with this intelligence; the light forfook my eyes, the colour vanished from my cheeks, and I remained in a state of universal trepidation! My female friend perceiving my diforder, encouraged me with allurances of Narcilla's confrancy, and the hope of fome accident favourable to our love; and, as a further confolkion, gave me to understand, that she had acquainted my miftrefs with the outlines of my life; and that although the was no firanger to the prefent low fate of my finances, her love and efteem were rather increased than diminished by the knowledge of my circumstances. I was greatly comforted by this affurance, which faved me a world of confusion and anxiety: for I must have imparted my fituation one day to Narciffa ; and this talk I could not have performed without thame and diforder. As

184

As I did not doubt that, by this time, the fcandalour afperfions of Melinda were diffufed all over the town, I refolved to collect my whole fivength of affurance, to brow-beat the efforts of her malice, and to publish her adventure with the Frenchified barber, by way of n. prifal .- In the mean time, having promifed to be at the garden gate about midnight, Mils Williams tock ha of my dear Narciffa, which was as perfect as inviolable. -Before I went abroad I was visited by Freeman, who came on purpose to inform me of the infamou ftories that were railed at my expence .----- I heard then with great temper, and in my turn difclofed every thing that had happened between Melinda and me; and, among other circumfances, entertained him with the flory of the barber, letting him know what fhare is friend Banto had in that affair. He was convinced of the injury my reputation had fuffered, and no longer doubting the fountain from whence this deluge of flander had flowed upon me, undertook to undeceive the town in my be half, and roll the ftream back upon its fource; but in the mean time cautioned me from appearing in public while the prepoficifion was to firong against me, left I fhoulid meet with fome affront that might have bad confequences.

HAP. XXII.

1 receive an extraordinary meffage at the door of the bay room, which I bookever enters' and affront the figure who threatens to take the law of me-rebuke Melmas for her malice-fle weeps with veration-bar and received with the utmaft tendernefs by Narcijs, who defires to bear the biflory of my life-we were etemplice of famous to one another-I retire-an work by a meffenger, who met, engage, and venguip.
THANKED him for his advice, which, however, it is a set of the set of t

my pride and refentment would not permit me to idlow; for he no iponer left me, in order to do julier to my character among his friends and acquaintance, than I fallied out, and went directly to the long room .----- I was met at the door by # fervant, who prefented to me a billet, without a fubfcription, importing that my presence was difagreeable to the company, and defiring I would take the hint without further disturbance, and beftow myfelf elfewhere for the future. This peremptory meffage filled me with indignation .- I followed the fellow who delivered it, and feizing him by the collar, in the prefence of all the company, threatened to put him infantly to death, if he did not discover the fcoundrel who had charged him with fuch an impudent commillion, that I might punish him as he deferved .- The meffenger, affrighted at my menaces and furious looks, tell upon his knees, and told me, that the gentleman who ordered him to deliver the letter was no other than Narcifia's brother, who at that time food at the other e end of the room, talking to Melinda .---- I went up to d him immediately, and, in the hearing of his inamorata, . accorded him in these words : " Lookee, squire, was it in not for one confideration that protects you from my reic lentment, I would cane you where you ftand, for hav-1 ng had the prefumption to fend me this fcurrilous inti-" mation;" which I tore to pieces, and threw in his face. At the fame time darting an angry regard et his miftrefs, told her I was forry fhe had put it out of my power to compliment her upon her invention, but at the expense of her good-nature and veracity .- Her admirer, whofe courage never role but in proportion to the wine he had wallowed, initead of refenting my address in what is a alled an honourable way, threatened to profecute me , or an affault, and took witneffes accordingly; while " he, piqued at his pufillanimous behaviour, and enraged t the farcaim I had uttered against her, endeavoured to wake her quarrel a public caule, and wept aloud with pite and vexation. The tears of a larry could not , ail of attracting the notice and concern of the fpectaprs, to whom the complained of my rudenefs, with reat bitterneis, faying, if the was a mon, I durit not 186 ufe her fo .---- The greatest part of the gentlemen, ready prejudiced against me, were offended at the liber I had taken, as appeared from their looks; though no of them fignified their difguft any other way, except m Lord Quiverwit, who ventured to fay with a fneer, th I was in the right to eftablish my own character, which he had now no longer any doubt .---- Nettled this fevere equivoque, which raifed a laugh at my expense I replied with fome warmth, " I am proud of having in that particular got the fart of your lordfhip."-He made no answer to my repartee, but, with a o temptucus finile, walked off, leaving me in a very d agreeable fituation .- In vain did I make up to feve people of my acquaintance, whole convertation, I have would banish my confusion; every body shunned me li a perion infected, and I thould not have been able bear my difgrace, had not the idea of the ever-faith and fond Narcifia come to my Pelicf .- I quitted the for of my mortification, and fauntering about the town happened to wake from my contemplation, when I for mylelf just opposite to a toy-shop, which I entered, a purchased a ring fet with a ruby in the form of a her furrounded by diamond fparks, for which I paid guineas, intending it for a prefent to the charmer of a foul. .

I was introduced, at the hour appointed, to this a vine creature, who, notwithftanding what the had he to my difadvantage, received fire with the utmolt con dence and tendernefs ; and having been informed of t general fketches of my life, by Mifs Williams, expa fed a defire of knowing the particular circumfane which I related with great candour, omitting hower fome things which I concluded altogether improper · her car, and which the reader's reflection will early ! geft .---- As my ftory was little elie than a recital misfortunes, the tear of sympathy cealed not to tric down her enchanting eyes during the whole of the " ration; which, when I had finished, she recompensed for my trouble with the most endearing protestations ternal love.-----She bewailed her reftricted condition, as twas the means of retarding my happines; told me, hat Lord Quiverwit, by her brother's permiffion, had been to drink tea with her that very afternoon, and actually proposed marriage, and feeing me extremely affected with this piece of information, offered to give me a convincing proof of her affection, by spouling me in a private, and leaving the reft to fate .--- I was penetrated with this inftance of her regard; but, that I might not be outdone in generofity, relified the bewitching temp-ation, in confideration of her honour and intereft : at the fame time, I prefented my ring as a pledge of my n inviolable attachment, and on my knees implored heaven to shower its curfes on my head, if ever my heart hould entertain one thought unworthy of the paffion I then avowed .- She received my token, gave me in return her picture in miniature, exquifitely drawn, and fet In gold ; and in the fame pofture called heaven to witnels, and to judge her flame .- Our vows being thus reprocally breathed, a confidence of hope enfued; and our mutual fondnefs becoming as intimate as innocence would allow, I grew infenfible of the progress of time, and it was morning before I could tear myfelf from this farling of my foul! My good angel forefaw what would appen, and permitted me to indulge myfelf on this octation, in confideration of the fatal absence I was doomed to fuffer.

I went to bed immediately on my return to my lodgng, and having flept about two hours, was waked by hap, who, in great confusion, told me, there was a council below with a letter, which he would deliver to obedy but myfelf.— Alarmed at this piece of news, defined my friend to flew him up to my chamber, and treived the following letter, which, he faid, required a numediate answer.

"SIR,

WHEN any man injures my honour, let the difference of rank between us be ever fo great, I am contated to wave the privilege of my quality, and to feek

reparation

187

188

reparation from him on equal terms.—The infolence your reply to me yefterday in the long room, I mige have overlooked, had not your prefumptive emulation a much more intereffing affair, and a diffovery which made this morning, concurred in perfuading me to chain your audacity with my fword.—If you thereforehan fpirit enough to fupport the character you affirme, we will not fail to follow the bearer immediately to a convenient place, where you thall be met by Quiverwit.

Whether I was enervated by the love and favour Narciffa, or awed by the fuperior fration of my antagon I know not, but I never had lefs inclination to be than at this time. However, finding there was a need fity for vindicating the reputation of my mistrefs, aswa as for afferting my own honour, I forthwith role, m dreffing in a hurry, put on my word, bade Strap attend me, and fet out with my conductor, curling my bad fortune all the way, for having been obferved in my return from my angel; for fo I interpreted his lordship's de covery .- When I came within fight of my rival, h lacquey told me, he had orders to ftop; upon which, commanded Strap to halt alfo, while I walked forward refolving, if possible, to come to an explanation with challenger, before we fhould come to battle .- Nor wi an opportunity wanting; for I no fooner approache than he afked with a ftern concenance, What buint I had in Mr. Topehall's garden fo early in the mot ing ?- " I don't know, my lord, (faid I,) how to anive a queftion put to me with fuch magifterial haugh ach -If your lordfhip will pleafe to exportulate calmly, yo will have no caufe to repent of your condefcention. Otherwife, I am not to be intimidated into any conte fion."-" There is no room for denial, (anfwered he I faw you come out with my own eyes."-" Did and other perfon fee me ?" (faid I.) ---- " I neither know nor care, (laid he.) I want no other evidence that in of my own fenfes."--Pleafed to hear that the inipier was confined to him alone, I endeavoured to appeale his jealoufy, by owning an intrigue with the waiting-maid : but he had too much difcernment to be fo eafily imposed upon, and told me, there was only one way to convince him of the truth of what Lafledged; which was no other than renouncing all claim to Narciffa, upon oath, and promising, upon honour, never to speak to her for the future .- Exafperated at this proposal, I unsheathed my fword, faying, " Heavens! what title have you, or any man on earth, to impose fuch terms on me!" He did the fame, and making towards me with a contracted brow, faid, I was a villain, and had difhonoured Narciffa .--"He's a fcandalous villain (I replied, in a transport of fury) who brands me with that imputation! She is a thousand times more chaste than the mother that bore you; and I will affert her honour with my heart's blood !" -So faying, I rushed upon him with more eagernel's than address, and endeavouring to get within his point, received a wound in my neck, which redoubled my rage. -He excelled me in temper as well as in fkill, by which means he parried my thrufts with great calmness, until I had almost exhausted my spirits; and when he perceived me beginning to flag, attacked me fiercely in his turn .---- Finding himfelf however better opposed than he expected, he refolved to follow his longe, and close with me : accordingly, his fword entered my waistcoat, on the fide of the break-bone, and running up between my thirt and thin, appeared over my left thoulder. I imagined that his weapon had perforated my lungs, and of confequence that the wound was mortal; thereforey determined not to die unrevenged, I feized his fhell, which was close to my breaft, before he could difentangle his point, and, keeping it fast with my left hand, thortened my own fword with my right, intending to run him through the heart; but he received the thruft in the left arm, which penetrated up to the shoulder-blade. -Difappointed in this expectation, and afraid ftill that death would frustrate my revenge, I grappled with him, and, being much the ftronger, threw him upon the ground, Vol. II. where where I wrefted his fword out of his hand, and, fo great was my confusion, instead of turning the point upon him, ftruck out three of his fore-teeth with the hilt .---- In the mean time, our fervar's feeing us fall, ran up to feparate and affiftus; but, hefore their approach, I was upon my feet, and had difcovered, that my fuppole mortal wound was only a flight fcratch. The knowledge of my own fafety difarmed me of a good deal of myre fentment, and I began to enquire with fome concen into the fituation of my antagonift, who remained on the ground bleeding plentifully at his mouth and arm-l helped his footman to raife him, and, having bound a his wound with my handkerchief, affured him it was no dangerous. I likewife reftored his fword, and offered t fupport him to his houfe .- He thanked me, with an a of fullen dignity; and, whilpering that I should hear from him foon, went away, leaning on his fervant's

100

I was furprifed at this promife, which I confirued into a threat, and refolved, if ever he fhould call me out again, to use whatever advantage fortune might give me over him in another manner .- In the mean time, I had let fure to take notice of Strap, who feemed quite flupified with horror. I comforted him with an affurance that I had received no demage, and explained the nature of this affair, as we walked homeward .- By that time I had got into my apartment, I found the wound in my neck ftiff and uneasy, and a good deaf of clotted blood run down upon my fhirt: Upon which I pulled off my cont and waiftcoat, and unbuttoned my collar, that I might drefs it with more eafe .- My friend no fooner percented my fhirt quite dyed with blood, than, imagining I had got at least twenty thousand wounds, he cried, "0! Jefus ?" and fell flat on the floor .- I flopt the bleeding with a little dry lint, and applying a plafter over it, cleanfed myfelf from the gore, thifted and dreffed, while he lay fenfeless at my feet; to that when he recovered, and faw me perfectly well, he could fcarce believe his own eyes .- Now that the danger was paft, I was very well pleafed with what had happened, hoping that it would foon become known, and confequently dignify my charafter not a little in this place.—I was alfo proud of having fhewn myfelf, in time fhape, worthy the love of Narciffa, who, I was genuaded, would not think the worfe of me for what I had done.

C H A P. XXIII. Iam wifited by Freeman, with whom Pappear in public, and am careffed an fent for by Lord Quiverwit, whole preferee I quit in a paffion. Narciffa is carried off by her brother I intend to purfue bim, and am diffuaded by my friend engage in play, and lofe all my money let out for London by my fortune at the gammy table, without fuccefs receive a letter from Narciffa bilk my taylor.

VHILE I entertained mylelf with these reflections, the news of the duel being communicated by fome unknown channel, fprozd all over the town .- I was vilited by Freeman, who tellified his furprife at finding me; for he was told, that Lord Quiverwit being dead of his wounds, I had ablconded, in order to avoid the cognizance of the law. I alked if people gueffed the occasion of the quarrel; and, understanding it was attributed to his lordfhip's refentment of my reply in the long room, confirmed that conjecture, glad to find Narciffa unfufpected .----- My friend, after I had assured him that my antagonift was in no danger, withed me joy of the event, than which, he faid, nothing could happen more opportunely to support the idea he had given of my character to his friends, among whom he had been veryafficuous in my behalf.

On the firength of this affurance, I went with him to the coffee-houle, where I was faluted by a great many of thole very perions who had fluuned me the preceding day; and I found every body making merry with the flory of Melinda's French gallant.—While I remained in this place, I received a meffagefrom Lord Quiverwit, defining, if I was not engaged, to fee me at his houle.

R 2

Thither

IQI

Thither I immediately repaired, and was conducted to an apartment, where I was received by his lording in bed .- When we were left by ourfelves, he thanks me in very polite terms, for having ufed the advanta and aiked pardon for any offence his refentment min ingly (faid he) make you my friend; but as it is impofi ble for me to divelt myfelf of my paffion for Narcill I am too well convinced of your fentiments, to this we fhall ever agree on that fubject. I took the liber therefore, of fending for you, in order to own candid that I cannot help opposing your fuccels with that your lady; though, at the fame time, I promife to regula my opposition by the dictates of justice and honour. This however, I think proper to advertise you of, that the has no independent fortune, and, if you should even fucces in your addreffes, you would have the mortification w fee her reduced to indigence, unlefs you have wherewithal to fupport her-And I am credibly informed of your incapacity that way-Nay, I must conich, that, urged by this confideration, I have actually tent notice to her brother, of the progrefs I fufpect you have made in her affection, and defired him to take his precautions accordingly."-Alarmed and provoked at this information, I told his lordfhip, that I did not fee how he could reconcile that piece of conduct with his profeffion of open dealing, and flung away from him ina

As I walked homeward, in hope of hearing from up miffreds, as ufual, by means of Mifs Williams, I'wa furprifed with the waving of a handkerchief from the window of a coach and fix that paffed by me at full fneed; and, spon further obfervation, I faw a fervant on horicback riding after it, who, I knew by his livery belonged to the signification. Thunderfituek with this dicovery, the knowledge of my misfortune ruled all at once upon my reflection !--I gueffed immediately that the fignal was made by the dear hand of Narciffa, who being hurried away in confequence of Lord Quiverwit's meffage to her brother, had no other method of relating her diffrefs, and imploring my affiftance .- Frantic with this conjecture, I ran to my lodgings, finatched my piltols, and ordered Strap to get post-horfes, with fuch incoherence of speech and diforder, that the poor valet, terrified with the fufpicion of another duel, inftead of providing what I defired, went forthwith to Freeman, who, being informed of my behaviour, came firaight to my apartment, and conjured me fo pathetically to make him acquainted with the caule of my uneafinels, that I could not refuse telling him my happiness was fled with Narciffa, and that I must retrieve her or perish. He reprefented the madnels of fuch an undertaking, and endeavoured to divert me from'it with great firength of friendfhip and reafon: But all his arguments would have been meffectual, had he not pu tme in mind of the dependence I ought to have on the love of Narcifia, and the attachment of her maid, who could not fail of finding opportunities to advertife me of their fituation : and at the iame time demonstrated the injury my charmer's reputation must fusher from my precipitate retreat. I was convinced and composed by these confiderations. I appeared in public with an air of tranquillity, was well received by the best company in town, and, my misfortune taking air, condoled accordingly; while I had the latisfaction of seeing Melinda fo universally difcountenanced, that the was thin to return to London, in order to avoid the fcoffs and cenfure of the ladies at Bath .--But though the hope of hearing from the darling of my four fupported my fpirits a little while, I began to be very uneally, when at the end of feveral weeks I found that expectation difappointed .- In fhort, melancholy and despondence took possession of my fonl; 'and, repining at that Providence which, by acting the Rep-mother towards me, kept me from the fruition of my wilhes, I determined, in a fit of defpair, to rifk all I had at the gaming-table, with a view of acquiring a fortune furficient to render me independent for life; or of plunging myfelt mylelf into fuch a ftate of mifery, as would effectually cruth every ambitious hope that now tortured my imagnation.

104

Actuated by this fatal r folution, I engaged in play, and, after force turns of fortune, found myfelf, at the end of three days, worth a thouland pounds; but it was not my intention to flop there, for which caufe I kay. Strap ignorant of my fuccefs, and continued my carea, until I was reduced to five guineas, which I would hav hazarded alfo, had I not been afhamed to fall from a be of two hundred pounds to fuch a petty fum.

Having thus executed my feheme, I went home, anzed to find myfelf fo much at eale, and informed my friend Strap of my milchance, with fuch calmnels, hu he, imagining I joked, affedfed to receive the tiding with great equanimity.—But both he and I fami ourfelves miltaken very foon.—I had mifinterpreted my own flupidity into deliberate relignation; and he had realon to believe me in earneft, when he faw me net morning agitated with the molt violent defpair, which he endeavoured to alleviate with all the confolation in his power.

In one of my lucid intervals, however, I charge him'to take a place in the flage-coach for London; and in the mean time paid my debts in Bath, which anomied to thirty fullings only. - Without taking leave of my friends, I embarked, (Strap having the good fortune to find a return horfe,) and errived in town, withouthaving met with any thing remarkable on the road. While we croffed Bagfhot heath, I was feized with a jort of melination to retrieve my fortune, by laying paffengers und contribution in fome fuch place.-My thoughts were to circumflanced at this time, that I thould have digeted the creme of robbery, fo righteoully had I concerted my plan, and ventured my life in the execution, had I ret been deterred, the reflecting upon the infamy that attends detection.

The apartment I formerly lived in being unengaged, I took pofferfion of it, and next day went in queft of Banter, who received me with open arms, in expectation of having his bond difcharged to his liking: But, when he underflood what had happened, his countenance changed of a fudden, and he told me, with a dryneis of difpleasure peculiar to himself, that if he was in my place, he would put it out of fortune's power to play him fuch another trick, and be avenged of his own indifcretion at once .- When I defired him to explain his meaning, he pointed to his neck, raifed himfelf on his tiptoes, and was going away without any further ceremony, when I put him in mind of my indigence, and demanded the five guineas I had formerly lent him. " Five guineas ! (cried he.) Zounds! had you acted with common prudence, you might have had twenty thousand in your pocket by this time .- I depended upon five hundred from you, as much as if I had had notes for it in the bank; and by all the rules of equity, you are indebted to me for that fum."-I was neither pleafed nor convinced by this computation, and infifted on my right with fuch determined obstinacy, that he was fain to alter his tone, and appeale my clamour, by affuring me, that he was not mafter of five fhillings .- Society in diffrefs generally promotes good understanding among people; from being a dun, I defcended to be a client, and afked his advice about repairing my loffes .- He counfelled me to have recourse again to the gaming-table, where I fucceeded to well before, and put myfelf in a condition, by felling my watch .- I followed his directions, and, having accommodated him with a few pieces, went to the place, where I loft every fhilling.

Then I returned to my lodgings, full of defperate refolution, and having made Strap acquainted with my fate, ordered him to pawn my fword immediately, that I might be enabled to make another affort. This affortionate creature no fooner underflood my purpole, than, feized with inexprefible forrow at the propect of my milery, he burft into tears, and afked what I propoled to do, after the final fum he could ratie on the fword fhould be fpent. '5 On my own accent (faid he) I am quite unconcerned; for while God fpares me health and these ten fingers, I can earn a comfortable sublistence any where; but what must become of you, who have lefs humility to foop, and more appetites to gratify!" -Here I interrupted him, by faying, with a gloomy afpect, I fhould never want a refource while I had a loaded piftol in pofferfion .- Stupified with horror at this dreadful infinuation, he flood mute for fome time, and then broke out into-" God of his infinite mercy enable you to withftand that temptation of the devil!-Confider your immortal foul-there is no repentance in the grave! -O Lord! that ever we fhould come to this-Are we not enjoined to refign ourfelves to the will of heaven? -where is your patience?-Durum patientia frange-You are but a young man-there may be many good things in ftore for you-Accidit in puncto quid non fperatur in anno-Remember your uncle, Mr. Bowling; perhaps he is now on his voyage homeward, pleafing himself with the hopes of feeing and relieving you-nay, peradventure he is already arrived, for the thip was expected about this time."-A ray of hope flot athwart my foul at this fuggestion: I thanked my friend for his featonable recollection; and, after having promifed to take no refolution till his return, difinified him to Wapping for intelli-

196

In his ablence I was vifited by Banter, who, being informed of my bad luck at play, told me that fortune would probably be one day weary of perfecuting me.-" In the mean time (faid he) here is a letter for you, which I received juft now, incloid in one from Freema," -I fnatched it with eagerne(s, and, knowing the fuperfoription to be of Narcifa's hand-writing, kiffed it with transport, and, having opened it, read,

"I T is with great difficulty that I have ftolen, from the oble varion of thele fpies who are fet over mothis opportunity of telling you, that I was indeeply capried away from Bath by my brother, who was informed of our correspondence by Lord Quiverwit, whom, I fince underftand, you have wounded in a duel on my account.—As I am tully convinced of your honour and lave, I hope I fhall never hear of fuch deiperate proofs of either for the future.—I am fo firidly watched, that it will be impoffible for you to fee me, until my brother's fufficion fhall abate, or heaven contrive fome other unforefeen event in our behalf. In the mean time, you may depend on the confiancy and affection of

Y OUF OWI

NARCISSA.

197

P. S. Mifs Williams, who is my fellow priforer, denres to be remembered to you. We are both in good health, and only in pain for you, efpecially as it will be impracticable for you to convey any meffage or letter to the place of our confinement; for which reafon, pray defit from an attempt, that, by mifcarrying, might prolong our captivity.

This kind letter afforded me great confolation. I communicated it to Banter, and at the fame time fnewed him her picture. He approved of her beauty and good fenfe, and could not help owning, that my neglect of Mifs Snapper was excutable, when fuch a fine creature engrofied my attention.

I began to be reconciled to my fate, and imagined, that if I could contribe means of fubfifting until my uncle thould arrive, in cafe he was not already at home, he would enable me to do fomething effectual in behalf of my love and fortune. — I therefore confulted Banter about a prefent fupply, who no fomer underflood that I had credit with a taylor, than he advifed me to take off two or three fuits of rich clothes, and corvert shen into cath, by felling them at half price to a faleiman in Monmouth-flureet. — I was flartled at this price fal, which I hought favoured a little of fraud; but he rendered it palatable; by obferving, that in a few months I unght be in a condition to do, every body infrice; and in the mean time, I was acquitted by the honefty of my intertions.—I fuffered myfelf to be perfuaded by his faby by which my necefity, rather than my judgement, wa convinced; and when I found there was no accounts of the fhip in which my uncla embarked, actually put in fcheme in practice, and raifed by it, five and tweny guineas, paying him for his advice with the odd five. C H A P. XXIV.

108

I am arrefled—carried to the Mar/halfea—find m old acquaintance beau Jackfon in that jail—be in forms me of his advontures—Strap arrives, aud with difficulty is comforted—Jackfon introduces new a poet—I admire his converfation and capacity am deeply affected with my misfortune—Strap tau himfelf as a journeyman barver.

BUT this expedient was in a few weeks attended with a confequence I did not forfee : a player having purchafed one of the fuits which were exposed to fale, appeared in it on the flage one night while my taylor mfortunately happened to be prefent .- He knew it immediately, and enquiring minutely into the affair, difevered my whole contrivance; upon which, he came to my lodgings, and, telling me he was very much fraitened for want of money, prefented his bill, which amounted to 501 .- Surprifed at this unexpected address, I affected to treat him cavalierly, fwore fome oaths, afked if he doubted my honour, and, telling him I fhould take care who I dealt with for the future, bade him come again in three days .- He obeyed me punctually, demanded his money, and, finding himfelf amuled with bare promifes, arrefled me that very day in the ftreet .- I was not much fhocked at this adventure, which, indeed, put an end to a ftate of horrible expectation ; but, I recufed to go to a fpunging-house, where I heard there was nothing but the most flagrant impofition; and, a mach being called, was carried to the Marshalsea, attended by a bailiff and his follower, wa were very much difappointed and chagrined at my relo-The

199

The turnkey gueffing, from my appearance, that I had money in my pocket, received me with the repetition of the Latin word depone, and gave me to underftand, that I must pay before-hand for the apartment I fhould choose to dwell in .- I defired to fee his conveniences, and hired a finall paltry bed-chamber for a crown a week, which in any other place would not have let for half the money. Having taken pofferfion of this difinal habitation, I fent for Strap, and my thoughts were bufied in collecting matter of confelation to that faithful fouire, when fomebody knocked at my door, which I no fooner opened, than a young fellow entered, in very fhabby cloathes, and marvellous foul linen. After a low how, he called me by name, and afked if I had forgot him. His voice affifted me in recollecting his perfon, whom I foon recognized to be my old acquaintance Jackfon, of whom mention is made in the first part of my memoirs .- I faluted him cordially, expressed my fatisfaction at finding him alive, and condoled him on his prefent lituation, which, however, did not feem to affect him much, for he laughed very heartily at the occation of our meeting fo unexpectedly in this place. Our mutual compliments being part, I enquired about his amour with the lady of fortune, which feemed to be fo near a happy conclusion when I had the pleasure of feeing him laft; and, after an immoderate fit of laughter, he gave me to understand, that he had been egregiously bit in that affair .- "You must know (faid he) that a few days after our adventure with the bawd and her b-ches, I found means to be married to that fame fine lady you fpeak of, and paffed the night with her at her lodgings, to much to her fatisfaction, that, early in the morning, after a good deal of fnivelling and fobbing, fle owned, that, far from being an heirefs of great fortune, that was no other than a common woman of the town, who had decoyed me into matrimony, in order enjoy the privilege of a femme couverta; and that, unlefs I made my elcape immediately, I should be arrested for a debt of her contracting, by bailiffs employed and inforucted for that purpose. Startled at this intimation, I rofe in a twinkling, and, taking leave of my fpoule with feveral hearty damns, got fafe into the verge of the court, where I kept inug until I was appointed furgeon' mate of a man of war at Portfmouth; for which place I fet out on Sunday, werk on board of my thip, n which I failed to the Streights, where I had the good for tune to be made furgeon of a floop that came home int few months after, and was put out of commillion; whereupon I came to London, imagining myfelf forget. ten, and freed from my wife and her creditors; but had not been in town a week, before I was arrefted for a debt of her's amounting to 201. and brought to this place, where I have been fixed by another action fine that time .- However, you know my difpolition; I der care and anxiety; and, being on the half-pay lift, make fhift to live here tolerably eafy."-I congratulated him on his philosophy, and, remembering that I was in his debt, repaid the money he formerly lent me, which, I believe, was far from being unfeafonable. I then anquired about the economy of the place, which he eplained to my fatisfaction; and, after we had agreed to mels together, he was just going to give orders for duner, when Strap arrived.

200

I never in my life faw forrow fo extravagantly exprefed in any countenance as in that of my honeft friend, which was, indeed, particularly adapted by nature for fuch impreffions .- When we were left by ourfelves, communicated to him my difafter, and endeavoured to confole him with the fame arguments he had former uled to me, withal representing the fair chance I had of being relieved in a fhort time by Mr. Bowling. ___Bu his grief was unutterable; he feemed to give attenno without liftening; and wrung is hands in filence; fo the L was in a fair way of being infected by his behaviour when Jackfon returned, and, perceiving the deference paid to Strap, achough in a footman's habit, distributed his crumbs of comfort with fuch mirth, jollity, and unconcern, that the features of the differented liquire re laxed by degrees, he recovered the ute of fpeech, and began to be a little more reconciled to this lamentable event. We dined together on boiled beef and greens, brought from a cook's fhop in the neighbourhood; and, although this meal was ferved up in a manner little correponding with the fphere of life in which I had lately lived, I made a virtue of necessity, ate with good appetite, and treated my friends with a bottle of wine, which had the defired effect, of increasing the good humour of my fellow-prifoner, and exhilerating the fpirits of Strap, who now talked cavalierly of my misfortune. After dinner, Jackson leit us to our private affairs; when I defired my friend to pack up all our things, and carry them to fome cheap lodging he fhould choose for himfelf in the neighbourhood of the Marshalfea, after he had difcharged my lodging, for which purpose I gave him money .- I likewife recommended to him the keeping my misfortune fecret, and faying to my landlord, or any other who fhould enquire for me, that I was gone into the country for a few weeks; at the fame time I laid Brong injunctions upon him to call every fecond day upon Banter, in cafe he should receive any letter for me from Narciffa, by the channel of Freeman; and by all means to leave a direction for himfelf at my uncle's lodgings in Wapping, by which I might be found when

201

When he departed to execute thefe orders, (which, by the bye, were punctually performed that very night,) I found myfelf to little feafoned to my fituation, that I dreaded reflection, and fought flucter from it in the company of the beau, who, promiling to regale me with a lecture upon taffe, conducted me to the common fide, where I faw a number of naked miferable wretches alfembled together.—We had not been here many minutes, when a figure appeared, wrapt in a dirty mg, tied about his loins with two pieces of hif, of different colours, knotted together; having a black buffur beard, and his head covered with a huge mefs of brown perfixing, which feared to have been ravified from the crown of fome feare-crow.—This apparition, flalking in with great Vol. II. 20 ', S folematty, folemnity, made a profound bow to the audience, who fignified their approbation by a general response of "How d'ye do, Doctor ?" He then turned towards us. and honoured Jackfon with a particular falutation; upon which my friend, in a formal manner, introduced him to me, by the name of Mr. Melopoyn .---- This ceremony being over, he advanced into the middle of the congregation, which crowded around him, and, hemming three times, to my utter aftonishment, pronounced, with great fignificance of voice and gefture, a very elegant and ingenious difcourfe upon the difference between Genius and Tafte, illustrating his affertions with apt quotations from the beft authors, ancient as wella modern. When he had finished his harangue, which lafted a full hour, he bowed again to the fpectators; not one of whom (I was informed) underflood fo much a a fentence of what he had uttered. They manifelia, however, their admiration and effect by voluntary contribution, which, Jackfon told me, one week with another, amounted to eighteen pence .- This moderate fipend, together with some finall prefents that he received for making up differences, and deciding caules amongst the prifoners, just enabled him to breathe and walk about, in the grotefque figure I have defcribed .- I mderftood alfo, that he was an excellent poet, and had composed a tragedy, which was allowed by every body who had feen it to be a performance of great ment; that his learning was infinite, his morals unexceptionable, and his modelty invincible .- Such a character could not fail of attracting my regard; I longed impatiently to be acquainted with him, and defired Jackfon would engage him to spend the evening in my apartment.-My request was granted; he favoured us with his company, and in the course of our conversation, perceiving that I had a ftrong pation for the belles lettres, acquitted himfelf fo well on that fubject, that I expressed a fervent defire of feeing his productions .- In this point too he gratified my inclination .- He promised to bring his tragedy to my room next day, and, in the mean time, time, entertained me with fome detached pieces, which gave me a very advantageous idea of his poetical talent. —Among other things, I was particularly pleafed with fome elegies in imitation of Tibulhus; one of which I beg leave to fubmit to the reader, as a fpecimen of his complexion and capacity.

Where now are all my flatt'ring dreams of joy ? Monimia, give my foul her wonted reft. Since furt thy beauty fix'd my roving eye, Heart-gnawing cares corrode my penfive breaft !

II.

Let happy lovers fly where pleafures call, With feltive longs beguile the fleeting hour ! Lead beauty thro' the mazes of the ball, Or prefs her wanton in love's rofeate bower.

III.'

For me, no more I'll range th' empurpled mead, Where fhepherds pipe, and virgins dance around; Nor wander thro' the woodbine's fragrant fhade, To hear the mufic of the grove refound.

J IV.

I'll feek fome lonely church, or dreary hall, Where fancy paints the glimm'ring taper blue; Where damps hang mould'ring on the ivy'd wall, And fheeted ghofts drink up the midnight dew:

V.

There, leagu'd with hopelefs anguifh and defpair, A while in filence o'er my fate repine; Then, with a long farewell to love and care, To kindred duft my weary limbs confign.

S 2

203

204 -

Wilt thou, Monimia, fhed a gracious tear On the cold grave where all any forrows reft? Strew vernal flow'rs, applaud my love fincere, And bid the turf lie eafy on my breaft?

I was wonderfully affected with this pathetic complaint, which feemed fo well calculated for my own dil appointment in love, that I could not help attaching the idea of Narciffa to the name of Monimia, and of form ing fuch melancholy prefages of my paffion, that I could not recover my tranquillity; and was fain to have recourfe to the bottle, which prepared me for a profound fleep, that I could not otherwise have enjoyed .- Whether thele impreffions invited and introduced a train of other melancholy reflections, or my fortitude was all exhauted in the effort I made against despondence during the fint day of my imprifonment, I cannot determine; but I awoke in the horrors, and found my imagination haunted with fuch difinal apparitions, that I was ready to defpair :--- and I believe the reader will own, I had no great caufe to congratulate myfelf, when I confidered my fitu ation .- I was interrupted in the midft of these gloomy apprehentions by the arrival of Strap, who contributed not a little to the re-establishment of my peace, by letting me know that he had hired himfelf as a journeymm barber; by which means he would not only be able to fave me a confiderable expence, but even make thift to lay up fomething for my fubfiltence after my money fhould be fpent, in cafe I fhould not be relieved before. CHAP. XXV.

Leread Melopoyn's tragedy, and conceive a waß opinion y bis genius—be recounts his adventures.

WHILE a state our breakfaft together, I made him acquainted with the charafter and condition. the poet, who came in with his play at that infant, and, imagining we were engaged about bufinefs, could not be invalled prevailed upon to fit; but, leaving his performance, went away.—My friend's tender heart was melted at the fight of a gentleman and Christian (for he had a great veneration for both thele epithets) in fuch milery; and allented with great cheerfulnels to a propofal I made of clothing him with our superfluities; a task with which he charged himself, and departed immediately to perform it.

orty Start C

He was no fooner gone, than I locked my door, and fat down to the tragedy, which I read to the end with vaft pleasure, not a little amazed at the conduct of the managers who had rejected it .- The fable, in my opinion, was well chosen, and naturally conducted; the incidents interesting; the characters beautifully contrasted, strongly marked, and well fupported ; the diction poetical, fpirited, and correct; the unities of the drama maintained with the most scrupulous exactness; the opening, gradual and engaging; the perijeteiaia furprifing, and the cataftrophe affecting. In fhort, I judged it by the laws of Ariftotle and Horace, and could find nothing in it exceptionable, but a little too much embellishment in some tew places, which objection he removed to my fatisfaction, by a quotation from Ariftotle's Poetics, importing, that the least interesting parts of a poem ought to be raifed and dignified by the charms and energy of diction.

I revered his genius, and was feized with an eager runofity to know the particular events of a fortune fo unworthy of his merit —At that inftant Strap returned with a bundle of clothes, which I fent with my compliments to Mr. Melopcyn, as a fmall token of my regard, and defired the favour of his company to dinner. He accepted my prefent and invitation, and in lefs than half an hour made his appearance in a decent drefs, which altered his figure very much to his advantage. I perceived by his countenance that his heart was big with gratitude, and endeavoured to preven be acknowledgments, by afking pardon for the liberty I had taken. He made no reply, but, with an afpect full of admiration and effeem, bowed to the ground, while the tears guided from his eyes. Affected with thele fymptoms of an ingenuous mind, I fhitted the convertation, and complimented him on his performance, which, I affured him, afforded me infinite pleafure.—My approbation made him happy. Dinner being ferved, and Jackfon arrived, I begged their permiflion for Strap to fit at table with us after having informed them, that he was a perform whom I was extremely obliged : they were kind enough to grant that favour, and we ate together with great havmony and fatisfaction.

206

Our meal being ended, I expressed my wonder at the little regard Mr. Melopyn had met with from the worl and fignified a define of hearing how he had been treated by the managers of the play-houfes, to whom I under flood from Jackfon, he had offered his tragedy without fuccels.— There is fo little entertaining in the inddents of my life (faid hc) that I am fure the recital will not recompense your attention; but fince you differe an inclination to know them, I underftand my duty to well to diffappoint your define."

MY father, who was a curate in the country, being by the narrownels of his circumflances, hinderd from maintaining me at the univerfity, took the charg of my education upon himfelf, and laboured with the indulty and concern in the ondertaking, that I had ht the caule to regret the want of public mafters.—Being at great pains to confult my natural bias, he diffeovered in me, betimes, an inclination for poetry; upon which he recommended me to an intimate acquaintance with the claffics, in the cultivation of which, he affifted me with paternal zeal, and uncommon erudition.—When he thought me fufficiently acquainted with the ancients, he directed my fludies to the belt modern authors, French and Italian, as well as Englifh, and laid a particular injunction upon me, to make myfelf mafter of my mother tongue.

About the age of eighteen, I grew ambitious of undertaking a work of fome confequence; and, with my father's approbation, actually planned the tragedy you have read; but, before I had finished four acts, that indulgent parent died, and left my mother and me m very indigent circumstances .- A near relation compaflionating our diffrefs, took us into his family, where I brought my fable to a conclusion, and foon after that period my mother quitted this life .---- When my forrow for this melancholy event had fubfided, I told my kinfman, who was a farmer, that, having paid my laft duty to my parent, I had no attachment to detain me in the country, and therefore was refolved to fet out for London, and offer my play to the ftage, where I did not doubt of acquiring a large fhare of fame as well as tortune; in which cafe I fhould not be unmindful of my friends and benefactors .- My courin was ravished with the profpect of my felicity, and willingly contributed towards the expence of fitting me out for my expedi-

207

Accordingly I took a place in the waggon, and arrived in town, where I hired an apartment in a garret, willing to live as frugal as poffible, until I should know what I had to expect from the manager, to whom I intended to offer my play .- For, though I looked upon myfelf as perfectly fecure of a good reception, imagining that a patentee would be as eager to receive as I to prefent my production; I'did not know whether or not he might be pre-engaged in favour of another author, a circumstance that would certainly retard my faccefs .- On this confideration too, I determined to be speedy in my application, and even to wait upon one of the managers the very next day. For this purpole, I enquired of my landlord, if he knew where either or both of them lived ; and, he being curious to know my butinels, and at the fame time appearing to baceveryhoneft friendly man, (a tallow-chandler,) I made him acquainted with my defign; upon which ris told me, that I went the wrong way to work ; that I would not had fuch eafy access to the manager as I imagined ; and that, if I delivered my performance without proper recommendation.

208

commendation, it would be as one to a thousand if ev it should be minded .---- " Take my advice (faid he and your bufinefs is done .- One of the patentees is good catholic, as I am, and uses the fame father w confeffes me .- I will make you acquainted with th good prieft, who is an excellent fcholar, and if he flow approve of your play, his recommendation will go great way in determining Mr. Supple to bring it on I ftage."----I applauded his expedient, and was int duced to the friar, who, having perused the trage was pleafed to fignify his approbation, and commend me in particular for having avoided all reflections up religion-He promised to use all his influence with fon Supple in my behalf, and to inform himfelf the very day, at what time it would be proper for me wait upon him with the piece .- He was punctual performing his engagement, and next morning gave to understand, that he had mentioned my affair to t manager, and that I had no more to do, than to go his houfe any time in the forenoon, and make use of h name, upon which I should find immediate admittant I took this advice, put my performance in my bolen and, having received directions, went immediately the, house of Mr. Supple, and knocked at the doo which had a wicket in the middle, faced with a net work of fron. Through this a fervant, having view me for fome time, demanded to know my bulinels told him, my bufinefs was with Mr. Supple, and the I came from O'Varnish .---- He examined my appear ance once more, then went away, returned in a fe minutes, and faid his mafter was bufy, and could not feen .- Although I was a little mortified at my difap pointment, I was perfuaded that my reception wa owing to Mr. Supple's ignorance of my errand : ap that I might meet with no more obstructions of t. fame kind, I defyed Mr. O'Varnish to be my introduc tor the next time .- He complied with my request, obtained immediate admittance to the manager, wh received me with the utmost civility, and promifed

0

209

my play with the first convenience .- By his own omment I called again in a fortnight, but he was out. I returned in a week after, and the poor genan was extremely ill. I renewed my visit in a fortafter that, and he affored me, he had been to much gued with bufinefs, that he had not been able as yet ad it to an end; but he would take the first opporty; and in the mean time, obferved, that what he had ten of it was very entertaining .-- I comforted myfelf this declaration a few we ks longer, at the end of th I appeared again before his wicket, was let in, found him laid up with the gout. I no fooner enthis chamber, than looking at me with a languisheye, he faid, " Mr. Melopoyn, I'm heartily forry for accident that has happened during my illness .- You It know, that my eldeft boy, finding your manufeript on the table in the dining-room, where I used to read carried it into the kitchen, and, leaving it there, a gligent wench of a cook maid, miltaking it for walte per, has expended it all but a few leaves in lingeing vis upon the fpit .- But I hope the misfortune is not parable, fince, no doubt, you have feveral copies." I proteft to you, my good friend Mr. Random, I was remely shocked at this information; but the goodtured gentleman feemed to be fo much affected with y misfortune, that I fupprelled my concern, and told m, that although I had not another copy, I fhould be le to retrieve the lofs by writing another from my meory, which was very tenacious. You cannot imagine w well pleafed Mr. Supple was at this affurance : he gged I would fet about it immediately, and carefully volve and recollect every circumftance, before I prended to commit it to paper, that it might be the fame vidual play that he had perused. Encouraged by is injunction, which plainly demonstrated how much e interested himself in the affair, I talked by remem-Thee and industry, and in three weeks produced the act image of the former, which was conveyed to him my good friend, Father O'Varnish, who told me next 210 THE ADVENTURES OF day, that Mr. Supple would revife it fuperficialy, order to judge of its famenefs with the other, and it give his final anfwer.—For this examination I allott week; and, in full confidence of feeing it acted in a la while, demanded an audience of the manager, when it term was expired.—But, alas! the featon had fipaway infentibly. He convinced me, that if my play is been put into rehearfal at that time, it could not he been ready for performing until the end of March, we the benc fit nights came on , confequently it would in interfered with the intereft of the players, whom it w not my budinefs to difabling.

I was fain to acquiefce in these reasons, which to fure were extremely just; and to referve my pertu mance for the next feafon, when he hoped I would a be fo unlucky : although it was a grievous dilappon ment to me, who by this time began to want both m ney and necefiaries, having, on the firength of my o pectation from the theatre, launched out into fome of travagancies, by which the fum I brought to town w already almost confumed .- Indeed, I ought to be asham at this circumstance of my conduct : for my finances we funcient, with good acconomy, to have maintained n comfortably a whole year .- You will perhaps be amaze when I tell you, that in fix months I expended not a farthing lefs than ten guineas: but when one confiders the temp tations to which a young man is exposed in this great city, especially if he is addicted to pleasure, as I am, the wonder will vanish, or at least abate .- Nor was the caule of my concern limited to my own fituation en tirely : I had writ an account of my good reception $ my kiniman the farmer, and defired him to depend upon me for the money he had kindly accommodated me with, about the end of February; which promife I now found myfelf unable to perform .---- However, there was no remedy but rationce. I applied to my landlord, who was a very good-natured man, candidly owned my diffres, and begged his advice in laying down fome plan for my fublistence .- He readily promifed to confult his confeffor iffor on this fubject, and in the mean time told me, I ras welcome to lodge and board with him, until fortune hould put it in my power to make reflictution.

Mr. O'Varnish being informed of my necessity, offerd to introduce me to the author of a weekly paper. who, he did not doubt, would employ me in that way, prorided he should find me duly qualified, but, upon enpuiry, I underflood that this journal was calculated to oment divisions in the commonwealth, and therefore I defired to be excufed from engaging in it .- He then nopofed that I fhould write fomething in the poetical way, which I might difpose of to a bookseller for a prety fum of ready money, and perhaps establish my own character into the bargain : this event would infallibly procure friends; and my tragedy would appear next lealon to the beft advantage, by being supported both by intereft and reputation .- I was charmed with this prospect, and having heard what friends Mr. Pope acquired by his paftorals, fet about a work of that kind, and in lefs than fix weeks compoled as many eclogues, which I forthwith offered to an eminent bookfeller, who defired me to leave them for his perufal, and he would give me an answer in two days .---- At the end of that time I went to him, when he returned the poems, telling me, they would not answer his purpose, and sweetened his refutal by faying, there were fome good clever lines in them .---- Not a little dejected at this rebuff, which, I learned from Mr. O'Varnish, was owing to the opinion of another author, whom this bookfeller always confulted on these occasions, I applied to another perion of the fame profession, who told me, the town was cloyed with paftorals, and advised me, if I intended to profit by my h, alents, to write fomething fatirical or lufcious, fuch as d The Button Hole, Shockey and Towzer, The Leaks Seffel, . offic. and yet this was a man in years, who wore a reverend s perriwig, looked like a fenator, and went equilarly to church .- Be that as it will, I foorned to profitute my pen in the manner he proposed, and carried my papers a third, who affured me, that peetry was entirely out of his way; and afked if I had got never a piece of cret hiftory, thrown into a feries of letters, or a verof adventures, fuch as those of Robinson Cruce a Colonel Jack, or a collection of conundrums, where to entertain the plantations.—Being quite unfundfor this dealer, I had recouffe to another, with as in fucces; and I verily believe was rejected by the wa trade.

I was afterwards perfuaded to offer myfelf as a m lator, and accordingly repaired to a perfon, who was to entertain numbers of that clafs in his pay. He and me, he had already a great deal of that work on hands, which he did not know what to do with; ferved, that translation was a mere drug, that brand literature being overflocked with an inundation of thors from North Britain ; and afked what I would pect per fheet, for rendering the Latin claffics English ?- That I might not make myfelf too chea determined to let a high price upon my qualificati and demanded half a guinea for every translated the -" Half a guinea!" (cried he, staring at me;) " paufed a little, and faid, he had no occafion for my vice at prefent .--- I found my error, and refolving make amends, fell one half in my demand; upon w he ftared at me again, and told me his hands were t I attempted others, without finding employment, was actually reduced to a very uncomfortable prop when I bethought myfelf of offering my talents to printers of halipenny ballads, and other fuch occalion effays as are hawked about the freets .---- With the view, I applied to one of the most noted and vocifere of this tribe, who directed me to a perion whom I four entertaining a whole crowd of them with gin, bread an cheefe. He carried me into a little back-parlour, ve neatly furnished, where I fignified my defire of being " rolled among his writers; and was alked, what kind composition I professed ?-Understanding that my inc nation leaned towards poetry, he expressed his fatist tion, telling me one of his poets had loft his fenfes, a

213

was confined in Bedlam, and the other was become lozed by drinking of drams; fo that he had not done my thing tolerable thefe many weeks .- When I propoied, that we should enter into terms of agreement, he rave me to understand, that his bargains were always conditional, and his authors paid in proportion to the ale of their works. Having therefore fettled thefe conlitions, which (I do affure you) were not very advanageous to me, he affigned me a fubject for a ballad, which was to be finished in two hours; and I retired to my garret in order to perform his injunction,—As the theme happened to fuit my fancy, I completed a pretty fort of an ode within the time prefcribed, and brought it to him, big with the hope of profit and applaufe. He read it in a twinkling, and, to my utter altonishment, told meitwould not do : though, indeed, he owned I wrote a good hand, and fpelled very well; but my language was too high flown, and of confequence not at all adapted to the capacity and tafte of his cuftomers-I promifed to rectify that miftake, and in half an hour humbled my file to the comprehension of vulgar readers : he approved of the alteration, and gave me fome hopes of fucceeding in time; though he observed, that my performance was very deficient in quaintnels of expression, that pleases the nultitude : however, to encourage me, he ventured the expence of printing and paper, and, if I remember aright, my fhare of the fale amounted to fourpence halt-

From that day I ftudied the Grub-ftreet manner with great diligence, and at length became iuch a proficient, that my works were in great requeft among the moft polite of the chairmen, draymen, hackney coachmen, botmen, and fervant maids: Nay, I have enjoyed the pleafure of feeing my productions, advined with stuts, pafted upon the wall as ornaments in beer-cellars and coblers' ftalls; and have actually heard them fung in clubs of fubftantial tradefinen.—But empty praile (you know, my dear friend) will not fupply the cravings of nature, —I found myfelf in danger of ftarving in the midft of all my fame; for of ten fongs I composed, it Vot. II. 20 was well if two had the good fortune to pleafe .- I d this reafon I turned my thoughts to profe, and during me tract of gloomy weather, published an apparition, on a m fubstance of which I fublisted very comfortably a which 10 month. I have made many a good meal upon a mo pla fter; a rape has often afforded me great fatisfaction ter but a murder well timed was my never-failing reformation What then ? I was a most miferable flave to my employ. ers, who expected to be furnished at a minute's warm with profe and verfe, juft as they thought the circum frances of the times required, whether the inclinate was absent or prefent. Upon my fincerity, Mr. Res dom, I have been fo much peftered and belieged by the children of clamour, that life became a burden to mt. C H A P.º XXVI.

214

The continuation and conclusion of Mr. Melopoyn's floy I MADE fhift, notwithstanding, to maintain min fe till the beginning of next winter, when I renewed m addreffes to my friend Mr. Supple, and was molt grad oufly received .- " I have been thinking of your affair, o Mr. Melopoyn (faid he) and am determined to fhew here r far I have your intereft at heart, by introducing you to a young nobleman of my acquaintance, who is remarkable for his fine tafte in dramatic writings, and is, to fides, a man of fuch influence, that if once he fhould ap prove of your play, his patronage will fupport it again all the efforts of envy and ignorance: for I do alw you, that merit alone will not bring fuccefs .- I have already spoke of your performance to Lord Rattle, and if you call at my house in a day or two, you shall have letter of introduction to his lordship."-I was antiba touched with this mark of Mr. Supple's friendfhip, and looking upon my affair as already done, went home cand imparted my good fortune to my landlord, when render my appearance more acceptable to my partition procured a fait of new clothes for me on his own credit Not to trouble you with idle particulars, I carried m tragedy to his lordthip's lodgings, and fent it up along with Mr. Supple's letter, by one of his fervants, wh defired me, by his lord's order, to return in a week-

215

did fo, and was admitted to his lordship, who received me very courteoufly, told me he had perufed my play, which he thought, on the whole, was the best coup deffai he had ever feen ; but that he had marked fome places in the margin, which he imagined might be altered for the b tter .--- I was transported with this reception, and promifed (with many acknowledgments of his lordship's generofity) to be governed forely by his advice and direction .---- " Well then (faid he) write another hir copy with the alterations I have proposed, and bring it to me as foon as poffible; for I am reloved to have it brought on the ftage this winter."-You may be fure I let about this talk with alacrity; and although I found his lordfhip's remarks much more numerous, and of leis importance, than I expected, I thought it was not my interest to dispute upon trifles with my patron ; theretore new modelled it according to his defire in lefs than

When I waited upon him with the manufcript, I found one of the actors at breakfaft with his lordflip, who immediately introduced him to my acquaintance, and defired him to read a fcene of my play.—This talk he performed very much to my fatisfaction, with regard to mphalis and pronunciation; but he fignified his difguft at feveral words in every page, which I prefuming to defend, Lord Rattle toli me with a preremptory look, I muft not pretend to difpute with him, who had been a player these twenty years, and underflood the ecconomy of the ftage better than any man living. I was forced to fubmit; and his lordflip proposed the fame actor fould read the whole play, in the evening, before fome gentlemen of his acquaintance, whom he would convene at his lodgings for that purpofe.

I was prefent at the reading : and I protect to you, my dear friend, I never underwent fuch a fevere trial in the whole course of my life as at that juncture; for although the player might be a very honeft man, and a good performer, he was exceffively illiterate and affuning, and made a thousand frivolous objections, which I was not permitted to answer: however, the piece was T very very much applauded on the whole; the gentlemen profent, who, I underflood, were men of fortune, promto countenance and fupport it as much as they couland Lord Raitle affining me that he would all the parof a careful nurfe to it, defired me to carry if home, and alter it immediately according to their remarks.— I we fain to acquiefee in his determination, and fulfilled is injunctions with all the expedition in my power; but he fore I could prefer the new copy, my good friend M. Supple had diffored of his property and patent to an Mr. Brayer; fo that fresh intereft was to be made wit the new manager.— This talk Lord Rattle undered, having fome acquaintance with him, and recommende my performance to forongly, that it was received.

216

I looked upon myfelf now as upon the eve of reapic the fruits of all my labour: I waited & few days in epectation of its being put into rehearfal, and wondenig at the delay, applied to my worfdy patron, who excide Mr. Brayer on account of the multiplicity of buinds in which he was involved, and bade me beware of tearing the patentee.—I treatured up this caution, and excide my patience three weeks longer; at the end of which his lordhing gave me to underfland, that Mr. Brayer had read mysplay, and owned it had indubitable menit; but as he had long, been pre-engaged to another author, he could not pofibly reprefent it that feafon; though, if I would referve it for the next, and in the interim make fuch a treations as he had propofed by observations on the margin, I might depend upon his compliance.

Thunderftruck at this difappointment, I could at for fome minutes utter one fyllable : at length, however I complained bitterly of the manager's infinerity in amuling me to long, when he knew from the beginning that he could not gratify my defire.—But his lordhip reprimtinded me for my freedom, faid Mr. Brayer was a man of honour, and imputed his behaviour, with refpect to me, to nothing elfe but forgetfulnels.—And indeed I have had fome readon fince that time to be "convinced of his bad memory; for, in ipite of appearances, I will not allow myteff to integoret his conduct any other way .---- Lord Rattle observing me very much affected with my difappointment, offered his interest to bring on my play at the other house, which I eagerly accepting, he forthwith wrote a letter of recommendation to Mr. . Bellower, actor, and prime minister to Mr. Vandal, proprietor of that theatre; and defired me to deliver it with my tragedy without loss of time. ____Accordingly, I haftened to his house, where, after waiting a whole hour in a lobby, I was admitted to his prefence, and my perlomance received with great flate.-He told me he was extremely bufy at prefent, but he would perule it as toon as poffible; and bade me call again in a week. I took my leave, not a little affonished at the port and Apercilious behaviour of this ftage player, who had not treated me with good manners; and began to think the dignity of a poet greatly impaired fince the days of Euupides and Sophocles ; but all this was nothing in comparifon of what I have fince observed.

217

Well, Mr. Random, I went back at the appointed time, and was told that Mr. Bellower was engaged, and could not fee me .- I repeated my vifit a few days after, and having waited a confiderable time, was favoured with an audience, during which, he faid, he had not as ret read my play .- Nettled at this utage, I could contain myfelf no longer, but telling him, I imagined he would have paid more deference to Lord Rattle's recommendation, demanded my manufcript with form expreftone,) with all my heart. "-Then pulling out a drawer of the bureau, at which he fat, he took out a bundle, and threw it upon a table that was near him, pronouncing the word, " There," with great difdain .- I took it up, and perceiving, with fome furprife, that it was a comedy, told him it did not belong to me; upon which he offered me another, which I also disclaimed .- A third was produced, and rejected for the fame region. At length he pulled out a whole handful, and ipread them before me, faying, " There are feven-take which you pleate-or taks them all."---- I impled out my own, and went away, ftrucks dumb with admiration at what

T3

what I had feen-not fo much on account of his info-h lence, as the number of new plays which, from this to circumfance, I concluded were yearly offered to the ftage .---- You may be fure, I did not fail to carry m complaint to my patron, who did not receive it with a the indignation I expected; But taxed me with precipitation, and told me, I must lay my account with bearing the humours of the players, if I intended to write for the ftage. There is now no other remedy (faid he) but to keep it till the next fealon for Mr. Brayer, and alter it at your leifure, in the fummer, according to his directions."---- I was now reduced to a terrible alternative, either to quit all hopes of my tragedy, from which I had all along promifed myfelf a large fnare of fortun and reputation, or to encounter eight long months of advertity, in preparing for and expecting its appearance. -This last penance, painful as it was, feemed most eligible to my reflection at that time, and therefore I re-

Why fhould I tire you with particulars of no conquence? I wreftled with extreme poverty until the imof my probation was expired, and went to my lord Rattle, in order to remind him of my affait, when I underflood, to my great concern, that his lordhip was juit on the point of going abroad, and, which was fill more unfortunate for me, Mr. Brayer had gone into the coutry; fo that my generous patron had it not in his power to introduce me perfonally, as ha intended : however, he wrote a very firong letter to the manager in my favor, and put him in mind of the promife he had made in behalf of my play.

As foon as I was certified of Brayer's return, I went to his houfe with this letter, but was told he was gore out.—L called again next day early in the morning, received the fame anfwer, and was defined to leave my name and bufinefs. I did fo, and returned the next day after, when the fervant fill affirmed that his mafter was gone abroad! though I perceived him, as I refired, diferving me through a window. Incenfed at this difcovery, I went to a coffee houfe hard by, and incloing his lordship's letter in one from myself, demanded a categorical anfwer. I fent it to his house by a porter, who returned in a few minutes, and told me Mr. Brayer would be glad to fee me at that inftant. I obeyed the fummons, and was received with fuch profusion of compliments and apologies, that my refentment immediately lubided, and I was even in pain for the concern which this honeft man shewed at the mistake of his fervant, who, it feems, had been ordered to deny him to every body but me .- He expressed his utmost veneration for his good and noble friend Lord Rattle, whom he fhould always be proud to ferve; promifed to perufe the play with all difpatch, and give me a meeting upon it; and, as a teltimony of his effeem, made me a pretent of a genetal order for the feation, by which I fhould be admitted to any part of the theatre .- This was a very agreeable compliment to me, whole greatest pleasure confisted in leeing dramatic performances, and you need not doubt that I often availed myfelf of my privilege. As I had an opportunity of being behind the fcenes when I pleafed, I frequently converfed with Mr. Brayer about my play, and afked when he intended to put it into rehearfal; but he had always fo much bufinefs upon his hands, that it remained with him unopened a confiderable while; and I became very unealy about the feafon, that wafted apace, when I faw in the papers another new play advertuied, which had been written, offered, accepted and rehearied in the compate of three months .---- You may cally guess how much I was confounded at this event! I own to you, that, in the first transports of my anger, I sufpasted Mr. Brayer of having acted towards me in the molt pitiful, perfidious manner; and was actually glad of his difappointment of his favourite piece, which, by the ftrength of art, lingered till the third right, and then died in a deplorable manner. But now that paffion has no fhare in my reflection, I am willing to afcribe his behaviour to his want of memory or want of judgment, which, you know, are natural defects, that are more worthy of compafiion than reproach.

About

210

220

About this time I happened to be in company with gentlewoman, who having heard of my tragedy, told me fhe was acquainted with the wife of a gentleman, whi was very well known to a lady, who had great interwith a perion who was intimate with Earl Sheerwit, and that, if I pleafed, the would use her influence in my behalf .- As this nobleman had the character of a Meernas in the nation, and could framp a value upon any a very fhort time, provided that I fhould have the good fortune to pleafe his lordship's tafte. I withdrew the manufcript from the hands of Mr. Brayer, and committed it to the care of this gentlewoman, who laboured to effectually in my intereft, that in lefs than a month it was conveyed to the earl; and in a few weeks after, I had the fatisfaction to hear, that he read and approved it very much. Transported with this piece of intelligence, I flattered myfelf with the hopes of his interefting himfelf in its favour; but hearing no more of the matter in three whole months, I began (God forgive me) to impet the veracity of the perfon who brought me the good lidings: for I thought it impoffible that a man of his rank and character, who knew the difficulty of writinga good tragedy, and understood the dignity of the work, thould read and applaud an effay of this kind, without feeling an inclination to befriend the author, whom his countenance alone could raife above dependence .- But it was not long before I found my friend very much wronged by my opinion.

You mult know that the civilities I had received from Lord Rattle, and the defire he manifefted to promote the faccels of my plays encouraged me to write an account of my bad fortune to his Lordship, who condefcended to far as to defire, by letter, a young fquire of a great eftate, with whom he was intimate, to elpoule my cave, and, in particular, make me acquainted with one Mr. Marmozet, a celebrated player, who had lately appeard on the ftage with aftonishing celat, and bore firsh fivay in in the houfe where he acted, that the managers durft not refute any thing he recommended. The young gentleman whom Lord Rattle had employed for this purpole, being diffident of his own interest with Mr. Marmozet, had recourse to a nobleman of his acquaintance, who, at his folicitation, was fo good as to introduce me to him ; and the conversation turning upon my performance, I was not a little furpr fed, as well as pleafed, to hear, that Earl Sheerwit had Ipoken very much in its praife, and even fent Mr. Marmozet the copy, with a meffage exprefling a defire that he would act in it next featon .---Nor was the favourite actor backward in commending the piece, which he mentioned with fome expressions of regard, that I do not choose to repeat ; alluring me that he would appear in it, provided he fhould be engaged to play at all during the featon. In the mean time, he defired I would give him leave to perule it in the country, whither he intended to remove next day, that he might have leifure to confider and point out fuch alterations as might, perhaps, be neceffary for its reprefentation; and took my direction, that he might communicate by letter, the observations he should make. Trusting to these affurances, and the interest which had been made in my behalf, I hugged myfelf in the expectation of feeing it not only acted, but acted to the greateft advantage, and this I thought could not fail of recompending me in an ample manner, for the anxiety an affliction I had undergone : but fix weeks being elapfed, I did not know how to reconcile Mr. Marmozet's filence with his promife of writing to me in ten days after he let out for the country: however, I was at last favoured with a letter, importing, that he had made fome remarks on my tragedy, which he would freely impart at meeting, and adviting me to put it, without lofs of time, into the hands of that manager who had the beft company ; as he himfelf was quite uncertain whether or not he finguld be engaged that winter .- I was a good deal alarmed at this laft part of his letter, and advised about it with a friend, who told me, it was a plain indication of Mr. Marmozet's defire to get rid of his promife: that his pretended uncertainty uncertainty about acting next winter, was no other the myf a fcandalous evalion; for, to his certain knowledge, was already engaged, or at leaft in terms, with Mr. Var dal; and that his defign was to difappoint me, in favor of a new comedy; which he had purchased of the author and intended to bring upon the flage for his own advan tage .---- In fhort, my dear Sir, this perfon, who, I mu own, is of a fanguine complexion, handled the character of Mr. Marmozet with fuch feverity, that I begant fulpect him of fome particular prejudice, and put myle upon my guard against his infinuations .---- I ought crave pardon for this tedious narration of trivial circum frances, which, however interefting they may be to ne muft certainly be very infipid to the ear of one uncon cerned in the affair .- But I understand the meaning your looks, and will proceed .- Weil, Sir, Mr. Marmo zet, upon his return to town, treated me with uncommon complaifance, and invited me to his lodgings, when he proposed to communicate his remarks, which I confels were more unfavourable than I expected; but m fwered his objections, and, as I thought, brought him a over to my opinion; for, on the whole, he fignified the highest approbation of the performance .- In the course of our difpute, I was not a little furprifed to find the poor gentleman's memory to treacherous as to let hu forget what he had faid to me, before he went out d town, in regard to Earl Sheerwit's opinion of my play which he now profelled h mielf ignorant of; and I wa extremely mortified at hearing from his own mouth, that his interest with Mr. Vandal was so very low, as to be infufficient of itfelf to bring a new piece upon the lage I then begged his advice, and he counfelled me to appr to Earl Sheerwit for a meffage in my favour to the ma pager, who would not prefume to refuse any thing r commended by fo creat a man; and he was fo kind a to promife to fecond this meffage with all his power.had immediate recourse to the worthy gentlewoman my friend already mentioned, who opened the channels d her conveyance with fuch expedition, that in a few day I had a promife of the me tage, provided I could after nyfelf of Mr. Vandal's being unengaged to any other uthor; for his lordfhip did not choose to condescend fo far, until he should understand that there was a probability (at least) of fireceeding. At the tame time that he bletied me with this piece of news, I was flartled at another, by the fame canal of communication; which was, that Mr. Marmozet, before he advifed me to this application, had informed the Earl, that he had read my play, and found it altogether unfit for the ftage .- Though I could not doubt the certainty of this intelligence, I believed there was fome mifapprehension in the cafe; and, without taking any notice of it, told Mr. Marmozet the anlwer I had been favoured with ; and he promifed to alk Mr. Vandal the queltion proposed .- I waited upon him in a day or two, when he gave me to understand, that Mr. Vandal having profeffed himfelf free of all engagements, he had put my play into his hands, and reprefented it as a piece ftror gly recommended by Earl Sheerwit, who (he affured him) would honour him with a mellage in its favour : and he defired me to call for an answer at Mr. Vandal's house in three days .- I followed his directions, and found the manager, who, being made acquainted with my bufinels, owned that Mr. Marmozet had given him a manufcript play, but denied that he mentioned Earl Sheerwit's name .- When I informed him of the circumftances of the affair, he faid, he had no engagement with any author ; that he would read my tragedy forthwith ; and did not believe he thould venture to reject it in contradiction to his lordship's opinion, for which he had the utmost veneration, but put it into rehearfal without lofs of time .- I was fo much intoxicated with this encouragement, that I overlooked the mylferious conduct of Mr. Marmozet, and attended the manager at the time appointed, when, to my infinity confusion, he pronounced my play improper for the frage, and rejected it accordingly. As foon as I could recollect myfelf from the diforder into which this unexpected retufal had thrown me, I exprelled a defire of hearing his objections, which were to groundlets, indiffinet, and unintelligible, that I perfuaded myfelf he had not at all perufed the piece, but had been prompted by by iomebody, whole leffons he had not rightly retained - wh However, I have been fince informed, that the poor man's head, which was not naturally very clear, had been difedered with inperfition, and that he laboured under the ranny of a wife and the terrors of hell-fire at the fame time -Precipitated in this manner, from the higheft pinned of hope to the aby is of defpondence, I was ready to int he under the burden of my affliction; and, in the bittened of my anguish, could not help entertaining some doubt of Mr. Marmozet's integrity, when I recollected and compared the circumftances of his conduct towards me I was encouraged in this supposition, by being told, that my Lord Sheerwit had fpoke of his character with ge contempt; and, in particular, refented his inicience oppoling his own talte to that of his lordship concerning my tragedy .- While I hefitated between different op nions of the matter, that friend, who (as I told you before) was a little hot-headed, favoured me with a vill, and, having heard a circumstantial account of the whole affair, could not contain his indignation, but alirmed, without ceremony, that Marmozet was the fole occanon of my difappointment; that he had acted from first to laft with the most perfidious diffimulation, cajoling " with infinuating civilities, while he underhand employe all his art and influence to prejudice the ignorant mana ger against my performance; that nothing could equa his hypocrify but his avarice, which engroffed the facuties of his foul fo much, that he ferupled not to be guilty of the meaneft practices to gratify that fordid appetite; that, in confequence of this difpolition, he had proflituted honour in betraying my inexperience, and in andermining the interest of another author of established reputation, who had also offered a tragedy to the tage which he thought would interfere with the fuccels of the comedy he had bought, and determined to bring on at all

221

223

224

I was flocked at the defcription of fuch a moniter, which I could not believe exifted in the world, bad as it is, and argued against the affeverations of my friend, by

225

by demonstrating the bad policy of fuch behaviour, which could not fail of entailing infamy upon the author; and the fmall temptation that a man of Mr. Marmozet's figure and fuccess could have to confult his intereft in fuch a groveling manner, which must create contempt and abhorrence of him in his patrons, and effectually deprive him of the countenance and protection he now enjoys in fuch an eminent degree .- He pretended to laugh at my fimplicity, and alked if I knew for which of his virtues he was fo much carefied by the people of fashion .- " It is not (faid he) for the qualities of his heart, that this little parafite is invited to the tables of dukes and lords, who hire extraordinary cooks for his entertainment : His avarice they fee not, his ingratitude they feel not; his hypocrify accommodates itfelf to their humours, and is of confequence pleafing; but he is chiefly courted for his buffoonery, and will be admitted into the choiseft parties of quality for his talents of mimicking Punch and his wife Joan, when a poet of the most exquisite genius is not able to attract the least regard."-God forbid, Mr. Random, that I fhould credit affertions that degrade the dignity of our, superiors fo much, and reprefent that poor man as the most abject of all beings! No! I looked upon them as the hyperboles of paffion; and though that comedy of which he spoke did actually appear, I dare not doubt the innocence of Mr. Marmozet, who, I am told, is as much as ever in favour with the earl; a circumstance that, furely, could not be, unlefs he had vindicated his character to the fatisfaction of his lordfhip.----Pray brgite this long digreffion, and give me the hearing a little longer; for, thank heaven, I am now near the goal. Baffled in all my attempts, I defpaired of feeing my play acted; and bethought myfelf of shooting fome employment, that might afford a fure though mean fubliftence; but my landlord, to whom Lawas by this time confiderably indebted, and who had laid his account with having his money paid all in a heap, from the prohts of my third night, could not brook his difappointment, therefore made another effort in my behalf, and, VOL, II. 20 .U. by by dint of intereft, procured a meffage from a lady fuffiion to Mr. Brayer, who had always profeffed a get veneration for her, defiring that he would iet up m play forthwith, and affuring him that the and all he friends would (upport it in the performance. In firengthen 'my intereft, fhe edgaged his beft actors my caufe; and in fhort exerted herfelf formuch, that was again received, and my hopes began to revive...... But Mr. Brayer, honeft man, was formuch engrolled by hubinels of vaft confequence, though to appearance had nothing at all to do, that he could not find time read it until the feafon was pretty far advanced; a read it he muft; for, notwithftanding his having periff it before, his memory did not retain one circumfarce of the matter.

226

At length he favoured it with his attention, and having propoled certain alterations, fent his duty to that y who patronized it, and promified, on his honora to bring it on the next winter, provided their alteration fhould be made, and the copy delivered to him before the end of April.—With an aching heart, I fubmitrat to these conditions, and performed them accordingly But Fortune owed me another unforsteen mortification Mr. Marmozet, during the fummer, became joint-patentee with Mr. Brayer, fo that when I claimed performance of articles, I was told, he could do nothing with out the confent of his partner, who was pre-engaged another author.

My condition was rendered defperate by the death on my good friend and landlord, whole executors obtain a judgment againft my effects, which they feized and turned me out into the firsets naked, friendleis and for lorn : there I was arrefed at the fuit of my raylor, and thrown into prifor, where I have made fhift to live the five weeks on the bounty of my fellow-prifoners, who I hope, are not the world for the infruction and good offices by which I manifest my gratitude; but, in find of all their charitable endeavours, my life was fear tolerable, until your uncommon benevolence enabled m to enjoy it with comfort.

RODERIC RANDOM. CHAP. XXVII

227

I om feized with a deep melancholy, and become a flowen am relieved by my uncle—he prevails upon me to engage with his winners as furgeon of the frip which he commands—he makes me a confiderable prefent—entertains Strap as his floward—I take leave of my friends, and go on board—the flip arrives at the Downs.

SHALL not make any reflections on this ftory, in the course of which the reader must perceive how egregiously the simplicity and milky disposition of this worthy man had been duped and abufed by a fet of foundrels, who were fo habituated to falfehood and equivocation, that I verily believe, they would have found the utmost difficulty in uttering one syllable of truth, though their lives had depended upon their fincerity .-- Notwithstanding all I had fuffered from the knavery and felfifnnefs of mankind, I was amazed and meenfed at the bale indifference which fuffered fuch uncommon merit as he poffeffed, to languish in obscurity, and ftruggle with all the miferies of a loathfome jail; and fhould have bleffed the occasion that feeluded me from fuch a perfidious world, had not the remembrance of the amiable Narciffa preferved my attachment to that fociety of which the constituted a part .- The picture of that lovely creature was the conftant companion of my olitude: How often did I contemplate the refemblance of those enchanting features that first captivated my cart!-How often did I weep over those endearing fcenes which her image recalled, and how often did I curfe my Artidious fate for having robbed me of the fair original ! In vain did my imagination flatter me with fchemes of future happines; furly reafon always interpofed, and in a moment overthrew the unfubitantial fabric, by, chaltifing the extravagance of my hope, and reprefentng my unhappy fituation in the right point of view: In vain did I fly for refuge to the amufements of the place, and engage in the parties of Jackson, at cards, billiards, nine-pins, and fives; a train of melancholy thoughts took pofferion of my foul, which even the convertation of Melopoyn could not divert. I ordered Strap to U z

228

enquire every day at Banter's Vodgings, in expectation en of hearing again from my charmer; and my ditappoint 前日 ment confiderably augmented my chagrin .---- My to fectionate valet was infected with my forrow, and of 19 IT fat with me whole hours without fpeaking, uttering for figh, and fhedding tear for tear .- This fellow increased our diftemper : he became incapable of bufut and was difcarded by his matter; while I, feeing a money melt away without any certainty of deliverand and, in fhort, all my hopes fruftrated, grew negligent life, loft all appetite, and degenerated into fuch a flow that, during the fpace of two months, I was neithe washed, shifted, nor shaved; so that my face, rendered meagre with abftinence, was obfcured with dirt, a over-fhadowed with hair, and my whole appearant fqualid, and even frightful; when, one day, Strap brough me notice, that there was a man below who wanted fpeak with me. Roufed at this intelligence, and in the hopes of receiving a letter from the dear object of n love, I ran down flairs with the utmost precipitation and found, to my infinite furprile, my generous unce Mr. Bowling! Transported at the fight, I fprung torward to embrace him. Upon which he ftarted afide with great agility, drew his hanger, and put himielf upo his guard, crying, "Avalt, brother, avaft ! Sheer of -Yo ho! you turnkey, why don't you keep a bette look-out? Here's one of your crazy priloners broke fro his lashings, I do suppose."-Icould not help laught heartily at his miftake; but this I foon rectified by m voice, which he inftantly recollected, and thook me ! the hand with great affection, teftifying his concern a feeing me in fuch a miferable condition.

I conducted him to my apartment, where, in prefere of Strap, whom J introduced to him as one of my bar friends, he gave me to underftand, that he was just ar rived from the coaft of Guinea, after having make pretty fuccelsful voyage, in which he had acted as mate until the fhip was attacked by a French privater; in the captain being killed during the engagement, he has taken the command, and was to fortunate as to imk b

RODERIC RANDOM. 229 enemy; after which exploit he fell in with a merchant thip from Martinico, laden with fugar, indigo, and fome fiver; and, by virtue of his letter of marque, attacked, took, and brought here fate into Kinfale, in Ireland, where the was condemned as a lawful prize; by which means he had not only get a pretty fum of money, but also acquired the favour of his owners, who had already conferred upon him the command of a large thip, mounted with twenty nine-pounders, ready to fail upon a very advantageous voyage, which he was not at liberty to discover .- And he affured me, that it was with the greatest difficulty he had found me, in confequence of a direction left for him at his lodgings at Wapping. I was rejoiced beyond measure at this account of his good fortune; and, at his defire, recounted all the adventures that had happened to me fince we parted.----When he underftood the particulars of Strap's attachment to me, he fqueezed his hand very cordially, and promifed to make a man of him; then, giving me ten guineas for my prelent occasion, took a direction for the taylor who arrefled me, and went away, in order to difcharge the debt, telling me at parting, that he would foon fetch up all my leeway with a wet fail.

I was utterly confounded at this fudden transition, which affected me more than any reverfe I had formerly felt; and a crowd of incoherent ideas rufhed fo impethoughy upon my imagination, that my reafon could neither feparate nor connect them; when Strap, whole by had manifested itself in a thousand fooleries, came to my room with his fhaving utenfils, and, without by previous intimation, began to lather my beard, whiftling with great emotion all the while .- I ftarted from my reverie, and, being too well acquainted with Strap, to truft myfelf in his hands while he was under luch agitation, defired to be excufed, fent for another arber, and fuffered myfelf to be trimmed .- Having performed the ceremony of ablution, I fhifted, and, drefting in my gayeft apparel, waited for the return of my uncle, who was agreeably furprifed at my fudden transformation.

This

le

This beneficent kinfman had fatisfied my creditor. and obtained an order for my discharge, fo that I wa no longer a prisoner; but, as I had fome reluctance to part with my friends and fellows in diffress, I prevailed upon Mr. Bowling to favour us with his company, and invited Mr. Melopoyn and Jack fon to fpend the evening at my apartment, where I regaled them with a fupper good wine, and the news of my releafe, on which the heartily congratulated me, notwithstanding the loss my company, which, they were pleafed to fay, the fhould feverely feel .---- As for Jackion, his misfortun made to little imprefion on himfelf, and was altogethe io loofe, indifferent, and indifferent, that I could fear pity his fituation: but I had conceived a veneration and friendship for the poet, who was, in all respects, an ob ject much more worthy of compassion and regard -When our guefts withdrew, and my uncle had retired, with an intention to vifit me next morning, I made upa bundle of fome linen, and other necessaries, and, bidding Strap carry them to Mr. Melopoyn's lodging, went thitner myfelf, and preffed it upon his acceptance, with five guineas, which with much difficulty he received, affuring me, at the fame time, that he fhould never have it in his power to make fatisfaction. I then afked if could ferve him any other way : to which he answered, "You have already done too much;" and, unable a contain the emotions of his foul any longer, burft into tears, and wept aloud .- Moved, at the spectacle, I let him to his repofe, and, when my uncle returned in the morning, reprefented his character in fuch a favourable light, that the honeft feaman was affected with his dia trefs, and determined to follow my example, in prefenting him with five pieces more: upon which, that I might fave him fome confusion, I advited Mr. Bowling to inclose . 'in a letter to be delivered by Strap after we should be gone.

This was accordingly done. I took a formal leave of all my acquaintance in the jail; and, juft as Lwas about to ftep into a hackney coach at the gate, Jackion callion me, I returned, 'and he afked me in a whilper, if I coul lend him a fhilling? AHis demand being fo moderate, and in all likelihood the laft he would make upon me, I flipt a guinea into his hand, which he no fooner perceived, than he cried, of O Jelus ! a guinea!" then laying hold of a button of my coat, broke out into an immoderate fit of laughter; and, when his convultion was ended, told me I was an honeft fellow, and let me go. -The coachman was ordered to drive to Mr. Bowling's lodgings, where, when we arrived, he entered into a ferious discourse with me on the subject of my lituation, and proposed that I should fail with him in quality of his furgeon; in which cafe, he would put me in a method of getting a fortune in a few years, by my own industry; and affured me, that I might expect to inherit all that he thould die posseffed of, provided I should furvive him. -Though I was penetrated with a fenfe of his generofity, I was startled at a proposal that offered violence to my love, and fignified my fentiments on that head, which he did not feem to relifh; but observed, that love was the fruit of idlenefs; that when once I fhould be employed in bufinels, and my mind engaged in making money, I should be no more troubled with these filly notions, which none but your fair-weather Jacks, who have nothing but their pleafure to mind, ought to entertain .---- I was piqued at this infinuation, which I looked upon as a reproach, and, without giving hyfelf time to deliberate, accepted his offer .- He was overjoyed at my compliance, carried me immediately to his chief owner, with whom a bargain was thruck ; fo that then I could not retract with honour, had I been ever fo much caverie to the agreement .- That I might not have time to cool, he bade me draw out a lift of medicines for a complement of five hundred men, adapted to the diftempers of hot climates, and fufficient for a voyage of eighteen months; and carry it to a certain wholefale apothecary, who would also provide me in two well qualified mates .---- While I was thus employed, Strap came in, cand looked very blank, when he underftood my refolution: However, after a paule of fome minutes, he infifted upon going along with me; and at my defire 232 was made fhip's fleward by Captain Bowling, who may mifed to be at the expence of fitting him out, and toled him two hundred pounds to pyrchafe an adventure.

231

When I had delivered my lift of medicines, chofen couple of my own countrymen for mates, and behoke a fet of chirurgical inftruments my uncle told me, that by his laft voyage he had cleared almost three thousand pounds, one thirde of which he would immediately make over and put into my hands ; that he would procure for me credit to the value of as much more, in juch good as would turn to best account in the country to which we were bound; and that although he looked upon my intereft as his own, he would keep the remaining pan of his fortune in his own difpofal, with a view of preferving his independence, and the power of punishing me, in case I should not make a good use of what he had already beftowed.

Without troubling the reader with an account of the effect which this furprifing generofity had upon my mind, I shall only fay, that his promises were instantly per-formed, and an invoice of merchandize proper for the voyage prefented to me, that I might purchase the goods, and fhip them with all expedition .- In the midft of this hurry, the remembrance of my charming Narciffa often interposed, and made me the most miferable of all mortals. I was diffracted with the thought of being tom from her, perhaps, for ever; and though the hope of feeing her again might have supported me under the torments of feparation, I could not reflect upon the anguila fhe muft feel at parting with me, and the inceffant forrows to which her tender bof m would be exposed during my absence, without being pierced with the deepest affliction! As my imagination was daily and nightly upon the rack to invent fome method of mitigating this cruel stroke, or at least of acquitting my love and honour in the opinion of this gentle creature, I at length flumbled upon an expedient, with which the reader will be made acquainted in due time; and in confequence of my determination, became lefs uneafy and diffurbed.

My bufinels being fillished, and the ship ready to tail, I refelved to make my fult appearance among my acquaintance at the other and of the town, where I had not been fince my impeifonment; and as I had, by the advice of my uncle, taken off fome very rich clothes for fale, I put on the gaveff uit in my pofferfion, and went in a chair to the coffee-house I used to frequent, where I found my friend Banter fo confounded at the magnificence of my drefs, that, when I made up to him, he gazed at me with a look of aftonifhment, without being able, for fome minutes, to open his lips;-then pulling me ande by the fleeve, and fixing his eyes on mine, accofted me in this manner :- " Random, where the devil have you been? eh !--- What is the meaning of all this finery? -Oho! I understand you .--- You are just arrived from the country ! What ! the roads are good, eh !-----Well,-Random, you are a bold fellow, and a lucky fellow !-----but take core, the pitcher goes often to the well, but is broke at laft." So faying, he pointed to his collar; by which getture, and the broken hints he had ejaculated, I found he fulpected me of having robbed on the highway; and I laughed very heartily at his I told him he was militaken in his conjecture; that I had been for fome time paft with the relation of whom he had frequently heard me speak ; and that as I should fet out next day upon my travels, I had come to take my leave of my friends; and to receive of him the money he had borrowed from me, which, now that I was going abroad, I fhould certainly have occasion for .---- He was a little difconcerted at this demand; but recollecting himfelf in a moment, fwore, in an affected paffion, that I had used him extremely ill, and he would never forgive me, for having, by this fhort warning, put it out of his power to irce himfelf of an obligation he could no longer bear.____I could not help fmiling at this pretended delicacy, which I commended highly, telling him, he needed not be uneafy on that fcore, for I would give him a direction to a merchant in the city, with whom I would leave a discharge for the sum, to be delivered upon payment.-He professed much it at this expedient, at a with great eagernels afked the perion's name and place of abode, which he forthwith wrote in his pocket-book affuring me, that he fhould not be long in my debt --This affair, which I knew he would never think of, be ing fettled to his fatisfaction, I fent cards to all m friends, defiring the favour of their company at a taven in the evening, then they honoured my invitation, and I had the pleafure of treating them in a very elegan manner, at which they expressed equal admiration a applaufe. Having enjoyed ourfelves till midnight, took my leave of them, and was well nigh fifted will careffes. Next day I fet out with Strap in a polt-chall for Gravefend, were we went on board, and the will ferving, weighed anchor in lefs than twelve hours. Without meeting with any accident, we reached the Downs, where we were obliged to come to an anchor, an wait for an eafterly wind to carry us out of the channel CHAP. XXVIII.

234

I fet out for Suffex—confult Mrs. Sagely—atches an interview with Narciffa—return to the [bipwe get clear of the channel—I learn our defination we are chasted by a large fip—the company a 'difmayed, and encouraged by the captain's freechour purfuer happens to be an English man of war we arrive at the coaft of Guinea, purchaste 400 m groes, fail for Paraguay, get fafe into the river Plate, and fell our cargo to great advantage.

IT was now I put in execution the icheme Ih projected at London; and alking leave of the catain, for Strap and me to flay on fhore till the wind should become favourable, my requeft was granted, be caufe he had orders to remain in the Downs until should receive form difpatches from London, which he did not expect in lefs than a week.—Having imparted my refolution to my trufty valet, who (though he mdeavoured to diffuade me from fuch a raft undertaking would not quit me in the enterprize, Thired florifs, as fet out immediately for that part of Suffex where m charmer was confined, which was not above thirty mil-

235

diffant from Deal, where we mounted .- As I was pera feetly well acquainted with the extent of the fquire's that and influence, I haved within five miles of his - noufe, where we remained 'till the twilight, at which time we let forward, and, by the fayour of a dark night, reached a copie about half a mile from the village where Mrs. Sagely lived .- Here we left our horfes tied to a tree, and went directly to the house of my old benefactrefs, Strap trembling all the way, and venting ejaculatory petitions to Heaven for our fafety. Her habitation being quite folitary, we arrived at the door without being observed, when I ordered my companion to inter by himfelf, and, in cafe there fhould be company with her, deliver a letter which I had writ for that purpofe, and fay that a friend of her's in London, underfanding that he intended to travel this road, had committed it to his care. He rapped at the door, to which the good old matron coming, told him, that, being a one woman, he must excuse her, if she did not open it, until he had declared his name and bufinefs .- He answered, that his name was unknown to her, and that his bufinefs was to deliver a letter, which, (to free her from all manner of apprehenfion,) he would convey to her through the fpace between the door and threshold .----This he inftantly performed ; and fie no fooner read the t contents, which specified my being present, than she cried, " If the perion who wrote this letter be at hand, let him fpeak, that I may be affured by his voice, whether or not I may fafely admit him."-I forthwith applied my mouth to the key-hole, and pronounced, " Dear mother, you need not be afraid; it is I, fo much " indebted to your goodnefs, who now crave admittance." -She knew my voice, and, opening the door immediately, received me with a truly maternal affection, manifelting by the tears the let fall, her concern left I thould "De difcovered; for the had been informed of every thing that had happened between Narciffa and me, from the dear captive's own mouth. When I explained the motive of my journey, which was no other than a defire of feeing the object of my love before I should quit the kingdom,

236 kingdom, that I might in perfor convince her of de be neceffity I was under to leave/ner, reconcile her to the win event, by defcribing the advantages that in all proba odd bility would attend it, repeat my vows of eternal conftancy, and enjoy the melancholy pleasure of a tender embrace at parting-I fay, when I had thus figning my intention, Mrs. Sagely told me, that Natciffa, upm her return from the Bath, had been to ftrictly watched, that no body but one or two of the fervants, devoted a her brother, was admitted to her prefence; that after-1011 wards, fhe had been a little enlarged, and was permitte to see company; during which indulgence, the had been feveral times at her cottage; but of late the had been betrayed by one of the fervants, who difcovered to the fquire, that he had once carried a letter from her to the post-house directed to me ; upon which information, he was now more confined than ever ; and that I could have no chance of feeing her, unlefs J would run the rique of getting into the garden, where the and her maid wer every day allowed to take the air, and lie hid until I fhould have an opportunity of fpeaking to them-an adventure attended with fuch danger, that no man is his right wits would attempt it .- This enterprise hazardous as it was, I refolved to perform, in spited all the arguments of Mrs. Sagely, who reafoned, child and intreated by turns; and the tears and prayers a Strap, who conjured me on his knees, to have more re gard to myfelf as well as him, than to tempt my own destruction in fuch a precipitate manner. I was des to every thing but the fuggestions of my love; and, ordering him to return immediately with the horses of the inn from whence we let out, and wait for my coming in that place, he at first peremptorily refused to kave ome, until I perfueded him, that if our horfes fhould remain where they were till day-light, they would certainly be, difcovered, and the whole county alarmed -On this confideration, he took his leave in a forrowful plight, killed my hand, and, weeping, cried, "God knows if ever I chall fee you again."-My kind landlady, finding me obitinate, gave me her best advice how the behave in the execution of my project ; and, after wing perfuaded me to take a little refreshment, accommated me with a bed, and left me to my repole .---and any in the morning, I crose, and, armed with a couple loaded piftols and a hanger, went to the back of the st mire's garden, climbed over the wall, and, according p Mrs. Sagely's direction, concealed myfelf in a thicket, , and by an alcove that terminated a wa'k at a good difmee from the house, which (I was told) my miffrels requented .- Here I remained from five o'clock in the torning till fix in the evening, without feeing a human tature: at laft I perceived two women approaching, mem, by my throbbing heart, I foon recognized to be e adorable Narciffa and Mil's Williams. I felt the mongeft agitation of foul at the fight; and, gueffing at they would repole themfelves in the alcove, frept into a unperceived, and laid upon the ftone table a picture mylelf in miniature, for which I had fat in London, re urpoing to leave it with Narciffa before I fhould go I proad. I exposed it in this manner, as an introduction ap my own appearance, which, without fome previous minimation, I was afraid might have an unlucky effect pon the delicate nerves of my fair enflaver; and then athdrew into the thicket, where I could hear their difpurie, and fuit myfelf to the circumitances of the ocahon .- As they advanced, I observed an air of mencholy in the countenance of Narcifia, blended with th unipeakable fweetrais, that I could fearce refrain rom flying into her arms, and kiffing away the pearly rop that flood collected in each bewitching eye .- Acording to my expectation, fhe entered the alcove, and erceiving fomething on the table, took it up .- No poner did fhe caft her eye upon the features, than ftartal at the refemblance, fhe cried, "Good God!" and he roles inftantly vanished from her cheeks .- Her con-Mante, alarmed at this exclamation, looked at the picthre, and, struck with the likeness, exclaimed, " O, eius ! the very features of Mr. Random !" Narciffa, aving recollected herfelf a little, " faid, " Whatever ngel brought it hither as a comfort to me in my afflic-Vol. II. tion, X

238

tion, I am thankful for the benefit, and will prefere as the deareft object of my care." So faying, theki it with furprifing ardour, field a flood of tears, and t deposited the lifelets image in her lovely bofom. Th ported at these symptoms of her unaltered affection, In about to throw myfelf at her feet, when Mils Willia whole reflection was lefs engaged than that of her a trefs, obferved, that the picture could not transport in hither; and that the could not help thinking I was far off .- The gentle Narcifia, ftarting at this conjectu anfwered, " Heaven forbid ! for although noting the universe could yield me fatisfaction equal to that his prefence for one poor moment, in a proper place would rather forfeit his company-almost for m than fee him here, where his life would be expoled to much danger."-I could no longer reftrain the impu of my paffion, but, breaking from my concealment ftood before her, when the uttored a fearful fhriek, fainted in the arms of her companion. I flew town the treasure of my foul, clasped her in my embrac and with the warmth of my kiffes brought her again life. O! that I were endowed with the expression of Raphael, the graces of a Guido, the magic touches a Titian, that I might represent the fond concern, chaftened rapture, and ingenuous blufh that mingled her beauteous face, when the opened her eyes upon and pronounced, " O, Heavens! is it you ?"

I am afraid I have already encroached upon the r der's patience with the particulars of this amout, which (I own) I cannot help being imperimently or cumftantial. I fhall therefore omit the lefs material p fages of this interview, during which I convined reation, though I could not appeale the fad prelages her love, with regard to the long voyage, and dany I muft undergo.—When we had fipent an hour (whi was all file could fpare from the barbarity of her bilther's vigilance) in lamenting over our hard fate, w in repeating our reciprocal vows, Miß Williams r minded us of the neceffity there was for our immedia parting ; and fure, lovers gaver parted with foch for ndrelustance as we. But, because my words are incaable of doing justice to this affecting circumftance, I mobilized to draw a veil over it, and observe, that I reanned in the dark to the 'houle of Mrs. Sagely, who as overjoyed to hear of my fuccess, and opposed the umilts of my grief with such firength of reason, that my mind regained in fome measure its tranquillity; and hat very night, after having forced upoil the good genlewoman a purse of twenty guiness, as a token of my gratitude and elfeem, I took my leave of her, and set at on foot for the inn, where my arrival freed honeft Strap from the horrors of unutterable dread.

239

We took horie immediately, and alighted early next morning at Deal, where I found my uncle in great contern on account of my ablence, becaule he had received his difpatches, and muft have weighed with the first fair wind, whether I had been on board or not.—Next day, a brick eafterly gale foringing up, we fet fail, and in right and forty hours got clear of the channel.

When we were about 200 leagues to weftward of the Land's-end, the captain taking me apart into the cabbin, told me, that, now he was permitted by his infructions, he would difclose the intent and defination of our voyage. " The thip, (faid he;) which has been litted out at a great expence, is bound for the coaft of Guinea, where we fhall exchange part of our cargo for laves and gold duft : from thence we will transport our regroes to Buenos Ayres, in New Spain, where (by virtue of paffports obtained from our own court, and that of Madrid) we will dispose of them and the goods that remain on board for filver, by means of our fupercargo, who is perfectly well acquainted with the coaft, the lingo, and inhabitants."-Being thus let into the fecref of our expedition, I borrowed of the upercargo, a Spanish grammar, dictionary, and fome other books of the fame language, which I ftudied with fuch application, that before we arrived in New Spain, I could maintain a conversation with him in that tongue.-Beang arrived in the warm latitudes, I ordered (with the captain's confent) the whole fhip's company to be blood-X 2

ed and purged, myfelf undergoing the fame evacuation in order to prevent those dangerous fevers to which me thern confluctions are fubject in hot climates; and have reason to believe that this precaution was not ferviceable, for we loft but one failor during our win paffage to the coaft.

240

One day, when we had been about five weeks at we deferied to windward a large thip bearing down us with all the fail fhe could carry. Upon which uncle ordered the fludding-fails to be hoifted, and thip to be cleared for engaging; but finding that ufe the feaman's phrafe) we were very much wronge the fhip which had us in chace, and which by this in had hoifted French colours, he commanded the fudding fails to be taken in, the couries to be clewed up, main-top-fail to be backed, the tompions to be tal out of theguns, and every man to repair to his quarte While every body was bufied in the performance of I orders, Strap came upon the quarter-deck, tremb and looking aghait, and, with a voice half suppress by fear, afked if I thought we were a match for veffel in purfuit of us. Observing his confernation, faid, "What! are you afraid, Strap ?" " Airaid! replied,) n-n-no; what fhould I be afraid of? I the God I have a clear confci nce; but I believe it will a bloody battle, and I wish you may not have occas for another hand to affift you in the cockpit."----I ceived his drift, and, making the captain acquain with his fituation, defired he might be flationed be with me and my mates. My uncle, incenfed at his fillanimity, bade me jend him down immediately, th his fear might not infect the thip's company; whereup I told the poor fleward, that I had begged him for m affiltant, and defired him to go down, and help my mat to get ready the inftruments and dreffings .----- Notwid ftanding the latisfaction he must have felt at these tiding he affected a fhynefs of quitting the upper deck; a faid, he hoped I did not imagine he was afraid to his duty above board; for he believed himfelf as " prepared for death as any man in the ship, no dispare

241

ment to me or the captain .- I was difgusted at this affectation, and, in order to punish his hypocrify, affured him, he might take his choice of either going down to the cockpit with me, or of flaying upon deck during the engagement. Alarmed at this indifference, he replied, " Well, to oblige to you, I'll go down ; but remember it is more for your lake than my own."-So faying, he dilappeared in a twinkling, without waiting for an anfwer .- By this time we could obferve two tier of guns in the fhip which purfued us, and which was now but two fhort miles aftern. This difcovery had an evident effect upon the failors, who did not fcruple to fay, that we fhould be tore to pieces, and blown out of the water; and that if in cafe any of them should lofe their precious limbs, they must go a begging for life, for there was no provision made by the merchants for those poor fouls who are maimed in their fervice. The captain underflanding this backwardness, ordered the crew abaft, and spoke to them thus : "My lads, I am told you hang an a-ie-I have gone to fea thirty years, man and boy, and never faw English failors afraid before .- Mayhap you think I want to expose you for the lucre of gain .-- Whofoever thinks to, thinks a damned lie; for my whole cargo is infured ; fo that in cafe I fhould be taken, my to's would not be great-The enemy is ftronger than we, to be fure. What then ? have we not a chance for carrying away one of her mafts, and fo get clear of her ?- If we find her too hard for us, 'tis but ftriking at laft .---- If any man is hurt in the engagement, I promife, on the word of an honeft feaman, to make him a recompense according to his lofs.---So now, you that are lazy, lubberly, cowardly dogs, get away, and fculk in the hold, and bread-room; and you that are jolly boys, ftand by me, and let us give one broadfide for the honour of Old England."-This eloquent harangue was fo well adapted to the difposition of his hearers, that one and all of them, pulling off their hats, waved them over their heads, and faluted him with three cheers; upon which he fent his boy for two large cafe bottles of brandy, and, having treated every man with a dram, they repaired to their X3. quarters,

THE ADVENTURES OF 242 quarters, and waited impatiently for the word of command .---- I must do my uncle the justice to fay, that, in the whole of h.s difpolition, he behaved with the amo intrepidity, conduct, and deliberation .- The enemy be ing 'very near, he ordered me to my station, and wa just going to give the word for hoifting the colours, and firing, when the iuppofed Frenchman hauled down has white pennant, jeck and enfign, hoifted English ones and fired a gun a-head of us. This was a joyful event Captain Bowling, who immediately fhewed his colour and fired a gun to leeward : upon which the other in ran along-fide of us, hailed him, and giving him I know that the was an English man of war of forty gus ordered him to hoift out his boat, and come on board .-This command he obeyed with the more alacrity, be caule, upon enquiry, he found that the was commanded by an old meis mate of his, who was overjoyed to a him, detained him to dinner, and fent his barge for th fupercargo and me, who were very much carefied on h account .- As this commander was defined to cruizeupo the French coaft in the latitude of Martinico, his lies and quarters were adorned with white flowers-de-lis, and the whole thell of the thip to much difguited for a decoy the enemy, that it was no wonder that my uncle did w know her, although he had failed on board of her man years .---- We kept company with her four days, during which time the captains were never alunder, and the parted, our courie lying different from hers.

In lefs than a fortnight after our feparation, we may the land of Guinea, near the mouth of the river Gam bia, and trading along the coaft as far to the louthwar of the line as Angola and Bengula, in lefs than fix mont difpored of the greateft part of our cargo, and purchase four hundred fregrees, my adventure having been laid or in gold duft.

Our complement being made up, we took our departure from Cape Negroe, and arrived in the Rio de-Plata in fix weeks, having met with nothing remarkain our voyage, except an epidemic fever, not unlike to jail diftemper, which broke out among our flaves, and me carried off a good many of the fhip's company; among whom I loft one of my mates; and poor Strap had well in high given up the ghoft.—Having produced our paffport to the Spanifh governo, we were received with great a courtely, fold our flaves in a very few days, and could in have put off five times the number at our own price; though we were obliged to finuggle the reft of our merits chantize, confifting of European bale goods, which, the however, we made thift to diipole of at a great advantage. C H A P. XXIX.

I an invited to the willa of a Spani/h Don, where we meet with an Englifh gentleman, and make a very interesting difference - we leave Buenos Ayres, and arrive at Jamaica.

UR thip being freed from the difagreeable lading of negroes, to whom indeed I had been a miferable flave ince our leaving the coaft of Guinea, I began to enjoy in myfelf, and breathe with pleafure the pure air of Paraguay, this part of which is reckoned the Montpelier of South America, and has obtained, on account of its climate, the name of Buenos Ayres .- It was in this dea ucious place that I gave myfelf entirely up to the thoughts of my dear Narcilla, whole image fill kept pofferfion of my breaft, and whofe charms, enhanced by absence, appeared to my imagination, if possible, more mgaging than ever! I calculated the profits of my byage, which even exceeded my expectation; refolved o purchafe a handfome finecure upon my arrival in ingland; and, if I should find the squire as averie to me as ever, marry his fifter by ftealth; and, in cafe our amily should increase, rely upon the generofity of my uncle, who was by this time worth a confiderable fum. While I amused myfelf with these agreeable projects, and the transporting hopes of enjoying Narcilla, wea were very much careffed by the Spanish gentlemen, who ar-irequently made parties of pleasure for our entertain. ment, in which we made excursions into the country. Among those who fignalized themselves by their civility to us, there was one Don Antonio de Ribera, a very polite young gentleman, with whom I had contracted an intimate friendfhip, who invited us one day to in country-houfe, and, as a further inducement to a compliance, promified to procure for us the company on an English fignior, who had been fettled in those par many years, and acquired the love and effect of the whole province by his affability, good fense, and henourable behaviour.

244

We accepted his invitation, and fet out for his villa where we had not been longer than an hour, when the perfon arrived in whole favour I had been fo much propoffeffed .---- He was a tall man, remarkably we fhaped, of a fine mien and appearance, commandia afpect, and feemed to be turned of forty. The feature of his face were faddened with a referve and gravity which in other countries would have been thought the effect of melancholy; but here appeared to have be contracted by his conmerce with the Spaniards, wh are remarkable for that feverity of countenance. Un derstanding from Don Antonio, that we were his countrymen, he faluted us all round very complaifanth and, fixing his eyes very attentively on me, uttered deep figh .- I had been fruck with a profound venertion for him at his first coming into the room; and a fooner observed this expression of his forrow, directed," it were, in a particular manner to me, than my has took part in his grief. I fympathized involuntary and fighed in my turn .- Having asked leave of our a tertainer, he accosted us in English, professed his late faction at feeing fo many of his countrymen in fuch a m mote place, and afked the captain, who went by the name of Signior Thoma, from what part of Britan had failed, and whither he was bound .- My uncle to him that we had failed from the river Thames, and wer bound for the fame place, by the way of Jamaica, where we intended to take in a lading of fugar.

Having fatisfied himfelf in thefe and other particulars about the frate of the war, he gave us to underfanthat he had a longing defire to revifit his native comtry, in confequence of which, he had already tranmitted to Europe the greatest part of his fortune in new

a halbottoms, and would willingly embark the reft of it, a with himfelf, in our thip, provided the captain had no
b objection to fuch a paffenger. My uncle very prudently, a pany, if he could procure the confent of the governor, b without which he durft not admit him on board, what c ver inclination he had to oblige him. The gentleman a proved of his differentiation, and telling him that there b would be no difficulty in obtaining the connivance of the b governor, who was his good friend, fhifted the conver-

I was overjoyed to hear his intention, and already interefield myielf fo much in his favour, that, had he been difappointed, I flould have been very unhappy. In the toutfe of our entertainment, he eyed me with uncommon attachment: I felt a furprifing attraction towards him! when he fpoke, I liftened with attention and reverence: the dignity of his deportment filled me with affection and awe; and in fhort, the emotions of my foul, in the prefence of this ftranger, were ftrong and unaccountable.

Having fpent the beft part of the day with us, he took his leave, telling Captain Thoma, that he fhould hear from him in a fhort time. He was no fooner gone, than I alked a thoufand queftions about him of Den Antonio, who could give me no other fatisfaction, than that his name was Don Rodrigo, that he had lived fifteen or fixten years in thefe parts, was reputed rich, and fuppoint to have been unfortunate in his younger years, becaufe he was obferved to nourifh a penfive melancholy, even from the time of his firft fettlement among them; but that no body had ventured to enquire into the caufe of his forrow, in confideration of his peace, which might infer in the recapitulation of his migrortunes.

I was feized with an irrefiftible defire of knowing the particulars of his fate, and enjoyed not one hour of repole during the whole night, by realon of the eager contractions that infpired me, with regard to his floty, which I refolved (if possible) to learne-Next morning, while we were at breakfaft, three mules, richly capari-

THE ADVENTURES OF 246 foned, arrived with a meffage from Den Rodrigo, de. firing our company, and that of Don Antonio, at his houfe, which was fituated about ten miles further m the country .---- I was pleafed with this invitation, i confequence of which we mounted the mules which he had provided for us, and alighted at his hould before noon. Here wawere plendidly entertained by the gnerous ftranger, who ftill feemed to fhew a particular. gard for me, and after dinner, made me a pretent of a ring let with a beautiful amethylt, the production of that country, faying at the fame time, that he was one bleffed with a fon, who, had he lived, would have bea nearly of my age. This observation, delivered with profound figh, made my heart throb with violence; crowd of confused ideas rushed upon my imagination, which, while I endeavoured to unravel, my uncle prceived my absence of thought, and, tapping me on the fhoulder, faid, " Oons ! are you, afleep, Rory ?" Before I had time to reply, Don Rodrigo, with uncommon eagernels of voice and look, pronounced, " Pray, captain, what is the young gentleman's name ?---- "His name (faid my uncle) is Roderick Random."-" Gncious Powers !" (cried the franger, frarting up)-" And his mother's ?----" His mother (anfwered the captain amazed) was Charlotte Bowling."-" O bounteous heaven ! (exclaimed Don Rodrigo, fpringing across the table, and, claiping me in his arms,) my fon I my fon have I found thee again ? Do I behold thee in my en brace, after having loft and defpaired of feeing thee long?" So faying, he fell upon my neck, and wep aloud with joy; while the power of nature operating ftrongly in my breaft, I was left in rapture, and, while he prefled me to his heart, let fall a fhower of tears in chis bofom .- His cutterance was choaked up a goo while by the agitation of his foul. At length he brok out into & Myfterious Providence !- O my dear Char lotte! there yet remains a pledge of our love! and fuch a pledge ! fo found ! O infinite goodneis ! les me ador thy all-wife decrees !" Having thus expressed himled he kneeled upon the floor, hited up his eyes and hand to heaven, and remained fome minutes in a filent exftacy of devotion. I put myfelf in the fame pofture, adored the al good Dispofer, in a prayer of mental thankigiving; and, when his ejaculation was ended, did homage to my father, and craved his parental bleffing. He hugged me again with unutterable fondne's, and, . having implored the protection of heaven upon my head, Re railed me from the ground, and prefeated me as his fon to the company, who wept in concert over this affecting icene. Among the reft, my uncle did not fail to difthe cover the goodness and joy of his heart : Albeit unused to the melting mood, he blubbered with great tendernefs, and, wringing my father's hand, cried, " Brother Random, I am rejoiced to fee you-God be praifed for this happy meeting."-Don Rodrigo, understanding that he was his brother-in-law, embraced him affectionately, faying, " Are you my Charlotte's brother ?----Alas! unhappy Charlotte ! But why fhould I repine ? we shall meet again, never more to part ?-Brother, you are truly welcome .- Dear fon, 1 am transported with unspeakable joy !----This day is a jubilee--my friends and fervants fhall fhare my fatisfaction."

247

While he difpatched meffengers to the gentlemen in the neighbourhood, to announce this event, and gave orders for a grand entertainment, I was fo much affected with the tumults of paffion, which affailed me on this great, fudden, and unexpected occasion, that I fell lick, . tevered; and in lefs than three hours became delirious; to that the preparations were countermanded, and the joy of the family converted into grief and delpair. Physicians were instantly called; I was plentifully blooded in the foot, my lower extremities were bathed in a decoction of falutiferous herbs: inten hours after I was taken ill, I enjoyed a critical fiveat, and next day felt no remains of the diffemper, but an agreeable lassitude, which did not hinder me from getting up .- During the progrefs of this fever, which, from the term of its duration, is called ephemera, my father never once quitted my bed-fide, but administered the prefcriptions of the phylicians with the most pious care; while Captain Bowling

248

Bowling manifefted his concern by the like attendanc. — I no foomer found myfelf delivered from the ditaithan I bethought myfelf of my honeft friend, Strap, and refolving to make him happy forthwith, in the Knowledge of my good fortune, told my father in general, that I had been infinitely obliged to this faithful adherent; and begged, he would indulge me fo far as w fend for him, without letting him know my happmeis, until he could receive an account of it from my own mouth.

My requeft was inftantly complied with, and a melfenger with a fpare mule detached to the fhip, carrying orders from the captain to the mate, to fend the fleward by the bearer .---- My health being, in the mean time, re-eftablished, and my mind composed, I began to relia this important turn of my fortune, in reflecting upon the advantages with which in must be attended; and, as the idea of my lovely Narciffa always joined itielf to every scene of happiness I could imagine, I entertained mydelf now with the profpect of pofferfing her in that diftinguithed fphere, to which the was entitled by her birth and qualifications .- Having often mentioned her name while I was deprived of my fenfes, my fathe gualed that there was an intimate connection between us and, discovering the picture which hung in my boson by a ribbon, did not doubt that it was the refemblance of my amiable miltrefs. In this belief he was confirmed b my uncle, who told him it was the picture of a your woman, to whom I was under promife of marriage Alarmed at this piece of information, Don Rodrig took the first opportunity of questioning me about the particulars of this affair, which, when I had candid recounted, he approved of my paffion, and promifed t contribute all on his power towards its fuccefs .- Though I had never doubted his generofity, I was transported on this occasion, and, throwing myself at his feet, told him, he had now completed my happinels; for, without the pofferfion of Narcifia, I thould be miferable among all the pleafures of life .- He raifed me with a finile of paternal fondnels; faid, he knew what it was, to be " love; and observed, that if he had been as tenderly beloved by his father, as I was by mine, he thould not now perhap, have caufe------Here he was interrupted by a ligh, the tear rushed into his eye, he suppressed the dicates of his grief, and the time being opportune, dered me to relate the paffages of my life, which my uncle had told him were manifold and teoprifing .- I recounted the most material circumstances of my fortune, to which he liftened with wonder and attention, manifelting, from time to time, those different emotions, which my different fituations may be supposed to have railed a a parent's breaft; and, when my detail was ended, leffed God for the adverfity I had undergone, which, a faid, enlarged the understanding, improved the eart, steeled the constitution, and qualified a young man for all the duties and enjoyments of life, much etter than any education which affluence could befrow. When I had thus far sfied his curiofity, I difcovered m inclination to hear the particulars of his flory, which egratified, by beginning with his marriage, and proreded to the day of his difappearing, as I have related m the first part of my memoirs. " Carelels of life, continued he,) and unable to live in a place where every bject recalled the memory of my dear Charlotte, whom had loft through the barbarity of an unnatural parent, took my leave of you, my child, then an infant, with heart full of unutterable wee, but little infpecting that y father's unkindness would have descended to my inocent orphan; and fetting out alone at midnight for be nearest fea-port, early next morning got on board thip, bound, as I had heard, for France, and baraming with the matter for my paffage, bade along adieu my native country, and put to fea with the first fair ind. The place of our deltination was Granville; but e had the misfortune to run upon a ridge of rocksnear he illand of Alderney, called the Catkets, where the a running high, the thip went to pieces, the boat funk long-fide, and every foul on board perifhed, except myelf, who, by the affiftance of a grating, got on fhore Vot. II, 2001 You Where where I was fo lucky as to meet with a Count, when tonic I had formerly known in my travels. With this ga tleman I fet out for Paris, where I was recommercial him, and other friends, as a tutor to a young noblema whom I accompanied to the court of Spain .- There remained a whole year, at the end of which my pup being recalled by his father, I quitted my office, mat t ftaid behind, by the advice of a certain Spanish grande who took me into his protection, and introduced me to another nobleman, who was afterwards created vice of Peru. He infifted on my attending him to his gover ment in the Indies, where, however, by reafon of a religion, it was not in his power to make my ford any other way than by encouraging me to trade, who I had not long profecuted when my patron died, and found myself in the midst of strangers, without the friend to support or protect me. Urged by this confidence ation, I fold my effects, and removed to this country my the governor of which having being appointed by t Heaven profpered my endeavours, during a relidence in fixteen years, in which my tranquillity was never inded, but by the remembrance of your mother, wh death I have in fecret mourned without cealing; and reflection of you, whole fate I could never learn, w withitanding all my enquiries, by means of my his in France, who, after the most strict examination, co give me no other account, thay that you went ab fix years ago, and was never afterwards heard of.could not reft fatisfied with this imperfect informati and though my hope of finding you was but lag refolved to go in quest of you in perion : For wh purpole, I have remitted to Holland the value of two thousand pounds, and am in possellion of fifteen th land more, with which I intended to embark myld board of Captain Bowling, before I difcovered.19 amazing troke of Providence, which you may be

240

250

My father having emertained us with this agree fketch of his life, withdrew in order to relieve Don the mio, who in his abfence had done the honours of his generate; and I was juft dreffed for my appearance among the ga fts, when Strap arrived from the fhip.

251

He no fooner enteredothe grand apartment, in which aw was, and faw the magnificence of my apparel, than ound is speech was lost in amazement, and he gaped in filence met the objects that furrounded him .--- I took him by da he hand, observed, that I had sent for him to be a witto rels and tharer of my happines; and told him I had found en tiather. At these words he started, and, after having consa, much fome minutes with his month and eyes wide open, T ried, "Aha-odd, I know what! Go thy ways, poor the Narciffa, and go thy ways fornebody elfe-Well-Lord, a what a thing is love!-God help us! are all our mad nd pranks and protestations come to this? and have you and your habitation in this diltant land! God profper ide on-I find we must part at last-for I would not leave the my poor carcals to far from my native home, for all the sealth of the universe!" With these ejaculations, he topegan to fob and make wry faces ; upon which I affored a num of his militake, both in regard to Narciffa, and my maintaying in Paraguay, and informed him as briefly as I would, of the great event which had happened .- Never It was rapture more ludicroully expressed than in the beharetiour of this worthy creature, who cried, laughed, whiftled, fung, and danced, all in a breath : his tranfort was fearce over, when my father entered, who no of the hand, faying, "Is this the honeft man, who be-mended you fo much in your diffrefs? You are welcome my houle, and I will foon put it in the power of my on to reward you for your good offices in his behalf; in the mean time, go with us, and partake of the repart that is provided." Strap, wild as he was with joy, would by no means accept of the proffered honour, crying, "God forbid! I know my distance-Your worthis thall excuse me." And Don Rodrigo finding his modely invincible, recommended him to his majordomo, to be treated with the utmost respect ; while he carried me into a large faloon, where I was prefented Y 2 0

252 THE ADVENTURES OF to a numerous company, who loaded me with compments and carefies, and compressibled my father in term not proper for number extent

Without the first one particulars of our entertainment, let it furface to day, it was at the fame the cagant and fumptuous, and the velociting lafted two days after which, Bon Ridrigo fettled his affairs, content his effects into filter and gold, vilited and took leave all his friends, who were grieved at his departure, an honoured me with confiderable preferts; and coming o board of my uncle's flip, with the furf favourable with we failed from the Rio de la Plata, and in two month came fafe to an anchor in the harbour of Kington, n the flat of Jamaica.

C H A P. • XXX. I wift my old friend Thomfon-we fet fail for Europe, -meet with an odd adventure-arrive in Englad -I ride acrois the country from Portfmonth to Sujar converfe with Mrs. Sagely, who informs me f Nasciffa's being in London-in conjequence of the intelligence, I proceed to Canterbury-meet with m old friend Morgan-arrive at London-offe Noeiffa-inforduce my father to ber-be bischarmad with her good fenfe and beauty-we come to a determination of demanding her brother's confent to an marriage.

I ENQUIRED, as foon as I got affore, about my so nerous companion Mr. Thomfon; and hearing in he lived in a flourithing condition, upon the effate it him by his wife's father, who had been dead fome years I took horfe immediately, with the confent of about Ridrigo, who had heard me mention him with great regard, and in a few hours reached the place of his habitstion.

I fhould much wrong the delicacy of Mr. Thomion's fentiments, to fay, harely he was glad to fee mes he felt all that the mott fentible and dinntercited friending could feel on this occation; introduced me to his wife, a very amiable young lady, who had already bieffed him with two fine children; and being as yet ignorant of my circumfances.

incumflances, frankly offered me the affiftance of his urle and intereft. I thanked him for his generous inmtion, and made him acquainted with my fituation, mushich he congratulated me with great joy ; and, after had flaid with him a whole day and night, accompamit me back to Kington, to wait upon my father, whom he invited to his house. Don Ridrigs complied with his requeft, and having been bandlomely enter-aned during the fpace of a week, returned extremely well fatisfied with the behaviour of my friend and his ity, to whom at parting he prefented a very valuable amond ring; as a token of his efteem. During the marie of my convertation with Mr. Thomfon, he gave me to underfrand, that his and my old commander, Captain Oakhum, was dead fome months, and that amediately after his death, a difcovery had been made of mome valuable effects that he had felonioufly fecreted out a prize, by the affifance of Dr. Mackfhane, who was tow actually in prison on that account, and being deftithe of friends, fublified folely on the charity of my friend, " whose bounty he had implored in the most abject manmer, after having been the barbarous occasion of driving him to that terrible extremity on board of the Thunder, which we have formerly related. Whatfoever this wretch might have been guilty of, I applauded Mr. Thomion's remerofity towards him in his diffrets, which wrought to much upon me allo, that I fent him ten piffoles, in luch a private manners that he could never know his

While my father and I were carefiel among the gentemen alhore, Captain Bowling had write to his owners, by the packet, which failed a few days after our arrival, fightlying his properous veyage hitherto, and defining them to mfure his fhip and cargo howeward bound; after which precaution he applied him tell fo heartily to the task of loading his fhip, that, with the affiftance of Mr. Thomfon, fhe was full in lefs than fix weeks. This kind gentleman likewife procured for Don Rodrigo bills upon London for the greateft part of his gold and filter, by which means it was fecured againfi the rifk of Va the

THE ADVENTURES OF

be

the feas and the enemy; and before we failed, fupping us with fuch large quantities of all kinds of floor, the not only we, but the fhip's company fared fum during during the voyage.

254

Every thing being ready, we took our leave of a fet fail for England on the first day of June. Web up to windward, with fine eafy weather; and one nei While we remained in this fituation, a failor, havi drank more new rum than he could carry, flagge over-board, and, not with ftanding all the means thatcout peared. About two hours after this melancholy ac dent happened, as I enjoyed the cool air on the quart deck, I heard a voice riling, as it were, out of the ta and, calling, "Ho, the thip aboy !" Upon which a of the men upon the forecastle cried, " I'll be d-n' if that an't Jack Marlinfpike, who went over-board Not a little furprized at this event, I jumped into t boat that lay along-fide, with the fecond mate and ton men, and rowing towards the place from wheneed voice (which repeated the hail) feemed to proceed, " perceived fomething floating upon the water: when " had rowed a little farther, we difcerned it to be a me riding upon a hencoop, who feeing, us approach, p nounced with a hoarfe voice, " D-n your bloods! w did you not answer when I hailed ?" Our mate, " was a veritable feaman, hearing this falute, faid, "" G-d, my lads, this is none of our man-This & devil-Pull away for the fhip." The fellows obey his command, without queltion, and were already for tathoms on our retorn, when I infifted on their taking up the poor creature, and prevailed upon them to go back to the wreck, which, when we came near the fecond time, n and fignified our intention, we received an answer d " Avalt, avaft-What fhip, brother?" Being latit fied in this particular, he cried, "D-n the fhip" was in hopes it had been my cwn-Where are you bound bound ?" We fatisfied his curiofity in this particular too; upon which he inffered himself to be taken on board, and, after having been comforted with a dram, told us, he belonged to the Veiuvio man of war, upon a cruize off the ifland of Hilpaniola; that he had fallen ever-board about four-and-twenty hours ago, and the thip being under fail, they did not choose to bring to, but toffed a hencoop over-board for his convenience, upon which he was in good hopes of reaching the Cape next morning : howfornever, he was as well content to he aboard of us, because he did not doubt that we should meet his fhip ; and if he had gone afhore in the bay, he uncle and father were very much diverted with the account of this fellow's unconcerned behaviour; and in two days, meeting with the Vetuvio, as he expected, lent him on board of her, according to his defire.

RODERIC PANDOM.

Having beat up fucacisfully the windward paffage, we firstched to the northward, and falling in with a wefterly wind, in eight weeks arrived in foundings, and in two days after made the Lizard.—It is impoffible to expresent the second second second second second second second factors and the second s

My father and I went afhore immediately at Portfmouth, leaving Strap with the captain to go round with the fhip, and take care of our effects; and I diffeovered to much impatience to ice my charming Narciffa, that my father permitted me to ride acrois the country to her in bucher's house; while he fhould hire a polt-chaife for London, where he would wait for me at a place to which I directed him.

THE ADVENTURES OF

256 Fired with all the eagerness of passion, I took pott house indi that very night, and in the morning reached an inn about three miles from the fquire's habitation ; wher I re mained till next evening, allaying the torture of my im patience with the rapturous hope of feeing that divin creature after an abience of expiteen months, which far from impairing, had raifed my love to the most exalted pitch ! Neither were my reflections free from ap prehenfions, that fometimes intervened in fpite of all m hope, and repreferted her as having yielded to the im portunity of her brother, and bleffed the arms of t happy rival .- My thoughts were even maddened wit the fear of her death ; and when I arrived in the dan at the house of Mrs. Sagely, I had not for some time courage to defire admittance, left my foul thould fhocked with difinal tidings. At length, however, knocked, and no fooner certified the good gentlewen of my voice than the opened the door, and received t with 'a most affectionate embrace, that brought tea into her aged eyes. " For Heaven's fake ! dear mothe (cried I) tell me, how is Narciffa ? Is the the fame that left her ?" She bleffed my cars with faying, "She as beautiful, in as good health, and as much your's ever."---- Transported at this affurance, I begged know if L could not fee her that very night; when t fage matron gave me to underfland that my militels w in London, and that things were firangely altered the fquire's house fince my departure; that he had be married a whole year to Meninda, who at first four means to wean his attention to much from Narciffa, th he became quite careless of that lovely lifter, comfortin himfelf with the claufe in his father's will, by which I would forfeit her fortune, by marrying without his con Tent ; that my miltrefs being but indifferently treated b her fifter in law, had made use of her freedom fome month ago, and gone to see , where the was lodged with Mit Williams, th expectation of my arrival; and had be pettered with the addreffes of Lord Quiverwit, wh finding her heart engaged, had fullen upon a gre many fhifts, to perfinade her that I was dead;

RODERIC RANDOM. 257 maining her affection, he had confoled himfelf for her indifference, by marrying another lady fome weeks ago, m who had already left him on account of fome family meafinefs.-Befides this interesting information, the and me, there was not aggeat deal of harmony between Melinda and the fquire, who was to much difguited at the number of gallants who continued to hover about or even after marriage, that he had hurried her down where their mutual animolities had rifen to fuch a height, hat they preferved no decency before company or fervoots, but abuled one another in the groffelt terms:

This good old gentlewoman, to give me a convincing proof of my dear Narciffa's unalterable love, gratined me with a fight of the laft letter fhe had favoured her with, in which I was mentioned with fo much honour, tendernefs, and concern, that my Joul was fired with impatience, and I determined to ride all night, that I might have it the fooner in my power to make her happy .- Mrs. Sagely, perceiving my eagernefs, and her maternal affection being equally divided between Marciffa and me, begged leave to remind me of the fentiments with which I went abroad, that would not permit me, for any felath gratification, to prejudice the fortune of that amiable young lady, who must entirely depend upon me, after having beflowed herielf in marriage. I thanked her for her kind concern, and as briefly as poinble defcribed my flourishing fituation, which afforded this humane perfon infinite wonder and fatisfaction. I told hertlat now I had an opportunity to manifelt my gratitude for the obligations I owed, I would endeavour to make her old age comfortable and eafy; as a ftep to which, I proposed the thould come and live with Narciffa and me, -This venerable gentlewoman was fo much affected with my words, that the tears ran down her ancient cheeks. She thanked heaven that I had not belied the prefages the had made, on her first acquaintance with me; acknowledging my generofity, as the called it, in the most elegant and pathetic expressions; but declined my proposal, on account of her attachment to the dear melancholy cottage, where the had to peacefully or furned her folitary widowhood. Finding her immoval on this fubjed, I infifted on her accepting a project of thirty guineas, and took my leave, refolving to accommodate her with the fame ium annually, for the mor comfortable fupport of the infizmities of old age.

THE ADVENTURES OF

258

Having rode all night, I found myfelf at Canterbur and, as I walked into the inn, perceived an apothecary shop on the other fide of the fireet, with the name of Morgan over the door. Alarmed at this differery, could not help thinking that my old melimate had in tled in this place, and, upon enquiry, found my conjecture true, and that he was married lately to a widow i that city, by whom he got three thousand pounds. Rejoiced at this intelligence, I went to his fhop as foon it was open, and found my friend behind the counter bufy in preparing a clyfter. I faluted him at entrance with, " Your fervant, Mr. Morgan."-Upon which h looked at me, and replying, " Your most humble forvant, goot Sir;" rubbed his ingredients in the moran without any emotion. "What ! (laid I) Morgan, has you forgot your old meffinate?"-At these words looked up again, and, flarting, cried, " As Got is m -fure it cannot-yes, by my falfation, I believe it my dear friend, Mr. Rantom."-He was no fooner co vinced of my identity, than he threw down the per overlet the mortar, and, jumping over the board, for up the contents with his clothes, flew about my ned hugged me affectionately, and daubed me all over w turpentine and the yolks of eggs, which he had be mixing when I came in .- Our mutual congratulation being over, he told me, that he found himielf a widow ar upon his return from the Weft Indies; that he had go interest to be appointed furgeon of a man of war, " which capacity he had ferved fome years, until he man ried an apothecary's widow, with whom he now enjoy a pretty good fum of money, peace and quiet, and an in different good traile. He was very defirous of hearing " adventures, which I affured him I had not time to relat but told him in general, my circumftances were very good, and that I hoped to see him when I should not be in uch a hurry as at prefent .- He infifted, however, on my staying breakfaft, and introduced me to his wife, who feemed to be a decent fenfible woman, pretty well fricken in years. In the course of our conversation, he fnewed the fleeve buttons I had exchanged with him at our parting in the Weft Indies, and was not a little proud to fee that I had preferved his with the fame care. When I informed him of Mackfhane's condition, he feemed at first to exult over his distress ; but, after a little recollection, faid, " Well, he has paid for his malice. I forgife him, and may Got forgife him likewile." He expressed great concern for the foul of Captain Oakhum, which he believed was now gnafhing its teeth : but it was fometime before I could convince him of Thomson's being alive, at whole good fortune, neverthelefs, he was extremely glad.

RODERIC JANDOM.

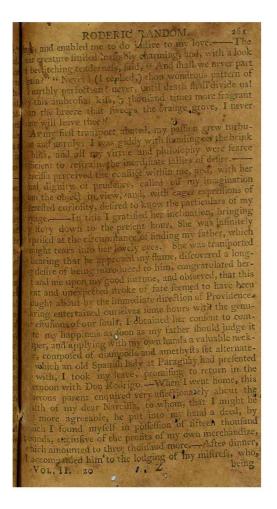

259

Having renewed our protestations of friendship, I bade the honeft Welfluman and his fpoufe farewell, and taking post-hories, arrived at London that fame night, where I found my father in good health, to whom I imparted what I had learned of Narciffa .- This indulgent parent approved of my intention of marrying her, even without a fortune, provided her brother's conient could not be obtained; promited to make over to me in a few days a fufficiency to maintain her in a fashionable manner, and expressed a defire of feeing this amiable creature, who had captivated me fo much .---- As I had not flept the night before, and was befides fatigued with my journey, I found myielf under a necessity of taking some repose, and went to bed accordingly. Next morning, about ten o'clock, I took a chair, and, according to Mrs. Sagely's directions, went to my charmer's loggings, and enquired for Mifs Williams .---- I hed not waited in the parlour ar-blonger than a minute, when this young woman entered, and no fooner perceived me, than the finieked and ran backward; but I got between her and the door, and, clatping her in my arms, brought her to herfelf with an embrace, " Good heaven! (cried fhe,) Mr. Random, is

1

THE ADVENTURES OF it you indeed ! my miltrefs will run diffracted with it. -I told her, it was from an apprehension that my in den appearance might have some bad effect on rh de Narciffa, that I had defired to fee her first, in order concert fome method of acquainting her miltrefs grad ally with my arrival. She approved of my conduct, a after having vielded to the fugge tions of her own frien thip, in afking if my voyage had been fucceisful, charge herfelf with that office, and leit me glowing with dean of feeing and embracing the object of my love. In very little time I heard fomebody coming down flairs halte, and the voice of my angel pronounce, with an e ger tone, " O heaven ! is it poffible ! where is he ! -How were my faculties aroused at this well-know found ! and how transported, when the broke in upon view in all the bloom of ripen'd beauty! Grace was all ber fleps, beaven in her eye, in every gefture digut and love !- You whole fords are fulceptible of the m delicate impressions, whose tender botoms have felt it affecting viciffitudes of love, who have fuffered an abfence of eighteen long months from the dear object. your hope, and found at your return the melting fair kind and conftant as your heart could with, do me just on this occasion, and conceive what unutterable raptu poffeffed us both, while we flew into each other's arm This was no time for speech-locked in a mutual en brace, we continued fome minutes in a filent trance joy !---When I thus encircled all that my foul held dea -while I hung over her beauties,-beheld her eyes ha kle, and every feature flush with virtuous fondness when I faw her enchanting bofom heave with undifer bled rapture, and knew myfelf the happy caule-He vens! what was my lituation ! I am tempted to comm carry paper to the flames, and to renounce my pen for ever because its most ardent and lucky expression to poor defcribes the emotions of my foul, O adorable Narcil (cried I) O miracle of heanty, love, and truth ! I at is fold thee in my arms! I at last can call thee mine! jealous brother fiell thwart our happinels again: I tune hath at length recompensed me for all my full

THE ADVENTURES OF being dreffed for the occarbn, made a most dazzling pearance. I could perceive him fouck with her i which I really think was the most beautiful that eyr created under the fun. He embraced her tenderly, told her, he was proud of having a fon who had fpira attempt, and qualifications to engage, the affection fuch a fine lady .- She bluihed at this compliment, with eyes full of the loftest languisment, turned u me, faid, the fhound have been unworthy of Mr. I dom's attention, had the been blind to his extraordin merit. I made no other an fwer than a low bow. My fa fighing, pronounced, " Such once was my Charlotte while the tear rufned into his eye, and the tender hear Narcilla manifetted itlelf in two precious drops of h pathy, which, but for his prefence, I would have ke away. Without repeating the particulars of our of versation, I shall only observe, that Don Rodrigo was much charmed with her good fenfe as with her appe ance ; and flie was no lefs pleafed? with his underftand write to the fquire, fignifying his approbation of pathon for his filter, and offering a lettlement which thould have no reafon to reject ; and that, if he flould fuse the propolal, we would crown our mutual with without any farther regard to his will. CHAP.

My father makes a prejent vo Narciffa—the letter is patched to ber brother—I oppegr among my acquase ance—Banter's behaviour—the Squire refujes his a fent—my uncle comes to town—approves of my choine I am married—we meet the foure and his lady a play—our acquainfance is courted.

A FTER having fpent the evening to the fatisfature of all prefent, my father addreffed himfelf thus a "viarciffa: "Madam, give me leave to confider you have after as my daughter, in which capacity I infift upon your accepting this first inflance of my paternal duty and affection."—With thefe words he put into her hand bank note of 500l, which the no fooner examined, that with a low curtley, the replied, "Dear Sir, though have not the leaft occasion for this fupply, I have to

RODERIC FANDOM.

263

at a veneration for you, to refute this proof of your mere lity and effect, which I the more freely receive, easily I already look upon Mr. Random's interest as alterrably connected with mine." He was extremely will pleafed with her frank and ingenuous reply; upon which we faluted, and withed her good night.— The leter, at my requelt, was dispatched to Sallex by an exus; and in the mean time Don Rodrigo, to grace my aptials, hired a ready-furnished house, and let up a very undome could be a substanting of the substantial substantial of the substantial substant

Though I paffed the greatest part of the day with the arling of my foul, I found leifure fometimes to be mong my former acquaintance, who were altonished at he magnificence of my appearance. Banter, in partiwher, was confounded at the ftrange vicifitudes of my atune, the caufes of which he endeavoured in vain to licover, until I thought fit to difclose the whole secret my laft voyage, partly in confideration of our former ntimacy, and partly to prevent unfavourable conjectures, which he and others, in all probability, would have made in regard to my circumftances. He profelled great fatisfaction at this piece of news, and I had no canle to believe him infincere, when I confidered that he would now look upon himfelf as acquitted of the debt he owed me, and at the same time flatter hundelf with hopes of borrowing more .- I carried him home to dinner with me; and my father liked his conversation to much, that, upon heading his difficulties, he defired me to accommodate him for the prelent, and enquire if he would accept of a committion in the army, towards the purchase of which he would willingly lend him money. Accordingly, I gave my friend an opportunity of being alone with me, when, as I expected, he told me that he was just on the point of being reconciled to an old rich . uncle, whofe heir he was, but wanted a few pieces for immediate expence, which he defired I would lend him, and take his bond for the whole. His demand was limited to ten guineas; and when I put twenty into his hand, he ftared at me for fome moments, then, putting it into his purfe, faid, " Aye, 'tis all one-you fhall have the whole in a very mort time."----When I had Z 2

264 THE ADVENTURES OF taken his note, to fave the expense of a bond prefied fome furprife that a fellow of has bard loiter away his time in idlenefs, and the chard who not choofe to make his fortune in the chard who (faid he) throw away my money user a fabra commilien, to be under the ominate of a know foundrels, who have railed themfelves above me opta moft infamous predices? no, I love independency is well to factifice my life, health, and pleature for his pitful condictation."—Finding him averate to this w of life, I changed the fubject, and returned to D Rodrigo, who had juft received the following epid from the fquire.

" SIR,

Concerning a letter which I received, fubfcribed a Raadom, this is the anfwer.—As for you, I kan nothing of you.—Your fon, or pretended fon, I hav feen—If he marries my fifter, at his peril be it. If declare, that he fhall not have one farthing of her for tune, which becomes my property, if the takes a hav band without my confent.—Your fettlement, I do be lieve, is all a fham, and yourfelf no better than you fhould be; but if you had all the wealth of the Inde your fon fhall nevermatch in our family with the confent of Orfon Topehall."

My father was not much furprifed at this polite letter, after having heard the character of the author: and for me, I was even pleafed at hisprefufal, becaufe I nor had an opportunity of flewing my difinterefted love By his permiffion I waited on my charmer; and, having imparted the contents of her brother's letter, at which he wept bitterly, in spite of all my confolation and carelles the time of our marriage was fixed at the diftance of two adays .--- During wis interval, in which my foul was wound up to the last stretch of rapturous expectation, Narcilla endeavoured to reconcile fome of her relations, in town to her marriage with me; but finding them all deaf to her remonstrances, either out of envy or prejudice, the told me with the most enchanting fweetness while the tears bedewed her lovely cheeks, "Sure the world will no longer queftion your generofity, when you

RODERIC ANDOM.

264

ake a poor forlornebeggar to your arms."----Affected with her forrow, I preffed the fair mourner to my breast, and fore the was more dear and welcome on that account, because she had facrificed her friends and fortune to her love for me .- My uncle, for whole character the had a great veneration, being by this time come to town, I introduced him to my bride," and, although he was not very much fubject to refined ienfations, he was ftruck duinb with admiration at her beauty. After having kiffed and gazed at her for fome time, he returned to me, faying, "Odds bohs, Rory! here's a notable prize, indeed; finely built, and glorioufly rigg'd, i'faith! if the an't well manned, when you have the command of her, furrah, you deferve to go to fea in a cockle-fhell.-No offence, I hope, niece; you must not mind what I fay, being (as the faying is) a plain fea-faring man, thaf mayhap I have as much regard for you as another." -She received him, with great civility, told him the had longed a great while to fee a perfon to whom the was to much indebted for his generofity to Mr. Random; that the looked upon him as her uncle, by which name hebegged leave to call him for the future; and that the was very fure he could fay nothing that would give her the least offence. The honeft captain was transported at her courteous behaviour, and infifted upon, giving her away at the ceremony, frearing that he loved her as well as if the was his own child, and that he would give two thousand gameas to the first fruit of our love, as loon as it could iqueak. Every thing being prepared for the folemnization of our nuprials, which where to be performed privately at my father's houle, the aufpicious bour arrived, when Don Rodrigo and my uncle went in the coach to fetch the bride and Mits Williams; leaving me with a parfon, Banter, and Strap, neither of whom had as yet feen my chaining miltrefs .- My faithful valet, who was on the rack of impatience to behold a lady of whom he had heard to much, no fooner underflood that the coach was returned, than he placed himfelf at a window, to have a peep at her as the alighted p and, when he faw her, clapped his hands together, turned up the white of his eyes, and, with his mouth wide open, remained

 Z_3

266 THE ADVENTURES OF in a fort of exitacy, which bloke out into " O Dee en -gualis in Eurotæ ripis, aut per juge Synthe me Diana chorus !"-The doctor and Banter were lung. to hear my man fpeak Latin ; bat, when he false Narciffa into the room, the object of that admin was foon changed, as appeared in the counter both. Indeed, they must have been the most infenily of all heings, could they have beheld without emotion the divine creature that approached. She was dreffed a fack of white fatin, embroidered on the breaft wi French cap, from whence defcended her beautiful ha in ringlets that waved upon her fnowy neck, which dig nified the necklace I had given her: her looks glowd with modelty and love; and her boson, through the veileof gauze that fhaded it, afforded a profpect of Ely fium !-- I received this ineftimable gift of Providence a became me; and in a little time the clergyman did his office, my uncle, at his own earnest request, acting the part of a father to my dear Narciffa, who trembled very much, and had fcarce fpirits fufficient to fupport he under this great change of fituation .- Soon as the wa mine by the laws of heaven and earth, I printed a buning kils upon her lips, my father embraced her tenderly, my uncle bugged her with great affection, and I prefented her to my friend Banter, who faluted her in a vor polite manner. Mils Williams hung round her net and wept plentifully; while Strap fell upon his kness and begged to kils his lady's hand, which the prejented with great affability .---- I fhall not pretend to defente my own feelings at this juncture; let it fuffice to fay, that, after having fupped and entertained ourfelves until ten o'clock, I cautioned my Narciffa against expoing oher health, by litting up too late, and the was prevailed upon to withdraw with her maid to an apartment defined for us When the left the room, her face was overfpread with a blufh that fet all my blood in a fate of fermentation, and made every pulle beat with ten-fold vigour ! She was fo cruel as to let me remain in this condition a full half hour; when, no longer able to reftrain my impatience, I broke from the company, burt

RODERIC RANDOM.

267

ber chamber, puthed out her confidante, locked the r, and found her—O heaven and earth! a feaft, a ufacd times more delicious than my moft fanguine be prefaged!—But let me not profane the chafte myftes of Hymen.—I was the happielt of men!

In the morning I was waked by three or four drums, which Banter had placed under the window; upon which I withdrew the curtain, and enjoy at the unipeakable latis action of contemplating thole angelic charms which were now in my pofferion! Beauty ! aubich, aubether heeping or awake, that forth peculiar graces !- The light darting upon my Narciffa's eyes, the awoke alfo, and, recollecting her fituation, hid her blufhes in my bofom .--- I was distracted with joy! I could not believe the evidence of my fenies, and looked upon all that had happened as the fistions of a dream! In the mean time my uncle knocked at the door, and bade me turn out, for I had had a long frell .- I role accordingly, and fent Mifs Williams to her miftrefs, myfelf receiving the congratulations of Captain Bowling, who rallied me in his fea-phrase with great fuccefs .- In lefs than an hour, Don Rodrigo led my wife into breakfalt, where the received the compliments of the company on her looks, which, they faid, if poffible, were improved by matrimony .- As her delicate ears were offended with none of those indecent ambiguities which are too often spoke on fuch occations, the behaved with dignity, unaffected modefly, and eate : and, as a teltimony of my affection and efteem, I prefented her, in prefence of them all, with a deed, by which I fettled the whole fortune I was poffeffeel of, on her and her heirs for ever .- She accepted it with a glance of the most tender acknowledgment, obferved, that she could not be surprised at any thing of this kind I should do, and defired my fatherto take the, trouble of keeping it, faying, " Next to my own, Mr. Random, you are the perfon in whom I ought to have the greateft confidence."-Charmed with her prudent and ingentious manner of proceeding, he took the paper, and affured her that, it fhould not lofe its value while in his o cuftody. As we had not many vilits to give and receive, the little time we flayed in to he was spent in going to public

THE ADVENTURES OF 268 diversions, where I have the vanity to think Nore feldom was eclipfed .- One night, in particular was fent our footman to keep one of the flage bases, who we no fooner entered, than we perceived in the opport box the fquire and his lady, who feemed and a bin prifed at feeing us. I was pleafed at this spout of confronting chem; the more, becaule Melinda was robbed of all her admirers by my wife, who happened that night to outfhine her lifter both in beauty and dress. -She was piqued at Narcilla's victory, toffed her head a thousand different ways, flirted her fan, looked at us with difdain, then whilpered to her hufband, and broke out into an affected giggle; but all her arts proved inceal her own mortification, which at length forced har awar long before the play was done .- The news of our marriage being fpread, with many circumitances to our difadvantage, by the induftry of this malignant creature, a certain fet of perfons, fond of fcandal, began to enquire into the particulars of my fortune, which they no fooner underftood to be independent, than the tables were turned, and our acquaintance was courted as much as it had been despised before. But Narciffa had too much dignity of pride to encourage this change of conduct, efpecially in her relations, whom the could never be prevailed upon to fee, after the malicious report they had raifed to her prejudice.

CHAP. XXXII.

My father intends to revifit the place of his nativity we propose to accompany him—my under renews his will in my favour, determining to go to bae again we fet out for Scotland—arrive at Edinburgh purchase our paternal estate—proceed to it—balt at the town-where I was educated—take up my bond to Crab—the behaviour of Potion and his wife, and one of my temale culius—our reception at the estate Strap marries Mijs Williams, and is feitled by my father to bisown faitsfaction—I am more and more bafty. MY father, intending to revisit his native country, and pay the tribute of a few terrs at my mother's grave, Narcifia and I refolved to accompany him in the execution evolution of his pique office, and accordingly prepared for the journey; in which, however, my uncle would not engage, being refolved to try his fortune once more at fea. In the mean time he renewed his will in favour of my wife and me, and deposited it in the hands of his brother-in-law; while δ (that I might not be wanting to my own interest) tummoned the figuing to produce hus father's will at Dector's Commons, and employed a proctor to manage the affair in my absence.

RODERIC FANDOM.

Every thing being thus fettled, we took leave of all our friends in London, and fet out for Sootiand; Don Rodrigo, Narciffa, Mifs Williams, and I, in the coach, and Strap with two men in livery on horfeback. As we made eafy frages, my charmer held it out very well till we arrived at Edinburgh, where we proposed to reft ourfelves iome weeks.

Here Don Rodrigo having intelligence that the foxhunter had fpent his ettate, which was to be exposed to fale by public autition, he determined to make a purchafe of the fpot where he was born, and actually bought all the land that belonged to his father.

In a few days after this bargain was made, we left Edinburgh, in order to go and take pofferfion; and by the way, halted one night in that town where I was educated.----Upon enquiry, I found that Mr. Crab was dead; whereupon I fent for his executor, paid the fum I owed, with interest, and took up my bond. Mr. Potion and his wife hearing of our arrival, had the affurance to come to the inn where we lodged, and fent up their names, with a defire of being permitted to pay their respects to my father and me: But their fordid behaviour towards me, when I was an orphan, had made too deep an impreffion on my mind, to be effaced by this mean, mercenary piece of condeicention ? I therefore rejected their meffage with difdain, and bade Strap tell them, that my father and I defired to have no communication with fuch low-minded wretches as they were. They had not been gone half an hour, when a woman, without any ceremony, opened the door of the room where we fat, and making towards my father, accolled him with, " Uncle, you servant-I am glad to fee

260

THE ADVENTURES OF 270 you."-This was no other than one of my leng second mentioned in the first part of my menous, to who Don Rodrigo replied, " Pray, who are very, Modant . O! (cried fhe) my couline Rory there known very well .- Don't you remember me, Rorva Madam, (faid I,) for my own part, I thad never forg. you .- Sir, this is one of the young ladies, who (as have formerly told you) treated me To humanely in n childhood?" When I pronounced thefe words, myth ther's refentment glowed in his vifage, and he ordere her to be gone, with fuch a commanding afpect, that it retired in a fright, muttering curfes as the went down ftairs. We afterwards learned that the was married to an enfign, who had already fpent all her fortune; an that her fifter had bore a child to her mother's footman who is now her hufband, and keeps a petty ale-houle I the country.

The fame of our flourishing condition having arrive at this place before us, we got notice that the magifirate intended next day to compliment us with the freedom of their town; upon which my father, confidering their complaifance in the right point of view, ordered the horfes to the coach early in the morning.

We proceeded to our effate, which lay about twenty miles from this place; and when we came within half a league of the house, were met by a prodigious number of poor tenents, men, women, and children, who tellified their joy by loud acclamations, and accompanied our coach to the gate .- As there is no part of the world in which the peafants are more attached to their lords than in Scotland, we were almost devoured by their affection. My father had always been their favourite, and now that he appeared their matter, after having been thought dead is long, their joy broke out into a thoufand extravagances. When we entered the court-yard, we were furgounded by a vaft number, who crowded together to clotely to see us, that fiveral were in danga of heing iqueezed to death. These who were hear Don Redrigo fell upon heir knees, and killed his hand, or the hem of his garment, praying aloud for long life and profperity to him: others spirowhed Narciffa and me the time manner; whil /the reit clapped their hands a a difference, and invoked heaven to shower its choicest i belings on our heads! In thort, the whole irene, though the was to affecting, that the genrie partner of my ortweps over it, and my father himfelf could not rego in from dropping a trar.

RODERIU RANDOM.

Having velcomed his daughter and spe to his house, 15 ne ordered fome buillocks to be killed, and fome logifor acts of sile to be brought from the neighbouring village, ere regain those honest people, who had not enjoyed such the holiday for many years before.

ow Next day we were vifited by the gendemen in the in highbourhood, more of them our relations, one of whom and overst along with him my coulin, the fex-himter, who an ad word at his house, fince he was obliged to leave his en w. My father was generous enough to receive him million in the army, for which he expressed great thankite pipe's and joy.

My charming Nareilla was univerfally admired and OIII eir rved for her beauty, affability, and good lente; and fo ell pleafed with the fituation of the place, and the comthe ny round, that the has not, as yet, diffeovered the ait defire of changing her babitation. ity

We had not been many days fettled, when I prevailed pon my father to pay a wint to the village where I had en at Ichool. Here we were received by the principal meditants, who entertained us in the church, where Ar. Syntax, the ichoolfhalter, (my tyrant being dead.) recounced a Latin or then in honour of our family. and none exerted themselves more than Strap's father nd relations, who looked upon the honeft valet as the ad gentleman of a marace, and honoured his benefacen ors accordingly. Having received the homage of his place, we retired, leaving forty pounds for the bethe poor of the parith; and that very night, Strap being a little elevated with the regard that had been theyen to him, and to me on his account, ventured 9 tell me, that he had a fneaking kindnels for Mils Williams, and that if his lady and I would vie out inwelt in his behalf, he did set doubt that the would lifter

đ

THE ADVENTURES, &

272

to his addreffes. Surprifed t this proposel, Phile he knew the flory of that unfortunate come or ide man: Upon which, he replied, "Yes, star i he what you mean-She has been unhappy and you but what of that ? I am convinced of her retormate or elfe you and my good lady would not train her y fuch respect .- As for the centure of the world, I ve it not a fig's end-Befides, the world knows nothing the matter." I commended his philosophy, and interest Narciffa in his caufe ; who interceded to effectually, the in a little time, Mifs Williams yielded her confent, a they were married with the approbation of Don Rodrig who gave him five hundred pounds to flock a farm, a made him overfeer of his eftate. My generous bed-fe low gave her maid the fame fun; fo that they live gres- peace and plenty within half a mile of us, a daily put up prayers for our prefervation.

If there be such a thing as true happiness on eart I enjoy it .- The impetuous transports of my pation a now fettled and mellowed into endearing fondnefs an tranquillity of love, rooted by that intimate connexid and interchange of hearts, which nought but virtual wedlock can produce .- Fortune feems determined make ample amends for her former cruelty; for, m proctor writes, that, notwithftanding the claufe in m father-in-law's will, on which the fourie founds " claim, I shall certainly recover my wife's fortune, confequence of a codicil annexed which explains th claufe, and limits her rectriction to the age of nineter after which fhe was at her own dispoial .- I would ha fet out for London immediately after receiving this pie of intelligence, but my dear angel has been qualmish late, and begins to grow remarkably round in the wail fo that I cannot leave her in frich an interefting fituatio which I hope will produce iomething to crown my felicit

END OF THE ADVENTURES OF BODERIC RANDOM.