

Scrip. J. R. Royal. 182

THE

BRITISH INDIAN MONITOR;

OR THE

ANTIJARGONIST, STRANGER'S GUIDE, ORIENTAL LINGUIST,

AND

VARIOUS OTHER WORKS,

COMPRESSED INTO A SERIES OF PORTABLE VOLUMES, ON THE

HINDOOSTANEE LANGUAGE, IMPROPERLY CALLED MOORS;

WITH

CONSIDERABLE INFORMATION

RESPECTING

EASTERN TONGUES, MANNERS, CUSTOMS,
&c. &c. &c.

THAT PREVIOUS TIME, AND THE VOYAGE TO THE EAST INDIES, MAY BOTH BE RENDERED AGREEABLY SUBSERVIENT TO THE SPEEDY ACQUI-SITION OF MUCH USEFUL KNOWLEDGE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS, INTIMATELY CONNECTED WITH FUTURE HEALTH, FAME, HAPPINESS, AND FORTUNE, IN THAT REMOTE, BUT PROMISING PORTION OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

HINDOOSTANEE PHILOLOGY,
&c. &c.

VOLUME I.

Edinburgh:

PRINTED BY WALKER & GREIG,
FOR MANNERS & MILLER, AND ARCH. CONSTABLE
& CO. EDINBURGH; AND BLACKS & PARRY,
7. LEADENHALL STREET, LONDON.

1806.

To the Right Honourable
Sir WILLIAM FETTES, Baronet, Lord Provost;
~~WILLIAM COULTER, Esq.~~
ARCH. CAMPBELL, Esq.
JOHN TURNBULL, Esq.
JAMES GOLDIE, Esq.
JOHN MUIR, Esq. Dean of Guild;
PETER HILL, Esq. Treasurer;—and the other Gentlemen, Magistrates of EDINBURGH in the Year 1805.

Right Honourable Sir, & Sirs,

ON my Return from INDIA
having been favoured, by your Decree, with the Freedom of my NATIVE CITY, to which, as the Son of a Burgess, I owe all my Success in Life, permit me to inscribe to you the first Fruits of my Literary Labours, since my Residence here, as a Public Testimony of Gratitude and Respect for the Honour then so handsomely conferred upon,

GENTLEMEN,

Your most Obedient

Humble Servant,

JOHN BORTHWICK GILCHRIST.

CONTENTS.

Dedication,	v
Preface,	ix—xciv
Hindee-Roman Orthoepigraphical Alphabet,	1—62
Hindoctance significant Particles,	36—92
Prepositives,	93—95
Adjunctives,	95—102
Intermediate,	103
Simple Postpositions,	103—104
Feminine —,	105
Compound —,	105—106
Local Adverbials,	107—108
Temporal —,	108
Miscellaneous,	109
Conjunctions and Interjections,	110—113
Declension in abstract,	114—120
Conjugation —,	121—133
Translation and Analysis,	124—138
Noun, Article, Declension, and Gender,	139—148
Illustrations,	151—163
Adjectives,	164—168

Pronouns,	169—178
Illustrations,	179—183
Verb,	183—202
Numerals, Days, Months, Coins, &c.	203—212
Dialogues,	212—242
Exercises,	243—342
Military Terms, &c.	343—359
Articles of War,	360—369
Naval Terms,	370—392
Derivation and Composition of Words,	393—407
Titles and Compellations,	408—410
Hindee-Arabic Prospectus,	411—420
Exercises,	421—456

P R E F A C E.

HAVING, for several cogent reasons, come to the resolution of re-publishing all my Works, now out of print, in a more convenient portable shape than they enjoyed before, I have condensed the most useful as much as possible, that neither their bulk nor price may in future deter people, proceeding to India, from purchasing or studying the formidable and various publications that mine have been, for a number of years past, in the more conciliating form they will henceforth assume. The present Volume, which is the First of the intended series, being most essential for beginners of the oriental languages, I have thought proper to publish it before the Second, which may yet be a month or two in the Press, though I must refer to that number for the whole of the information, directions, and advice immediately connected with the future health, fame, happiness, and fortune, of young men destined to the civil, military, naval, commercial, medical, legal, clerical, and other departments in British India, which I have long been collecting for their benefit. This is a subject so important and distinct, that it will appear to more advantage by itself, than if blended here with other matters, more properly belonging to the general Preface; in a literary point of view only, of the whole subsequent Volumes.

Nothing can be so discouraging to the student of a living language in India, as the chance of being, by future proficiency therein, under the disagreeable necessity of unlearning whatever pronunciation or lessons he may have acquired at the outset of his oriental career. Few of my readers, who are in the smallest degree acquainted with Indian affairs, need now be apprized, that they will be exposed to the irksome situation I have just stated, provided they still prefer to this Volume, the inaccurate and inadequate performances of my predecessors, as their guides to the Hindoostanee tongue. To them we may apply the following lines with great propriety :

Aut inertes, aut insani, aut quibus egestas imperat,
Qui sibi semitam non sapiunt, alteri monstrant viam.

That it is equally easy to learn at first the polished and grammatical style of any speech, as it can be to acquire its corrupt and barbarous idiom, is a fact which will stand the test of every person's experience through all quarters of the globe, and in ~~more~~ more satisfactorily, than among the various nations of Hindoostan. It is true, that such a jargon as the intelligent writer quoted hereafter mentions, may be acquired very imperceptibly, though in reality the trouble is not less in doing this, than the small portion of manly exertion which is requisite, when properly directed, to attain so useful an object as the Hindoostanee language on sound principles ab initio.

The late philological performance of a Mr Lebedeff, who sojourned as a musician for some years in India, hath, by its appearance a few years ago, stamped a real value on Hadley's labours, for he may now comparatively be termed a Classic in Moorish jargon lore, by the acquisition of a second in that department, much more pernicious to learners than the principal ever could have proved, at any period of his reign. It is a melancholy reflection, that a space of thirty or forty years has rather heaped error upon error in the Hindooostanee publications from the London Press, than evinced the smallest tendency to eradicate them entirely. The presence of a Hindooostanee Mooshee, even in the metropolis, has apparently produced as yet no other than the postcreous effect of prefixing to the most common dialect of that useful language, a Bungalee alphabet; although we are informed in the same breath by Hadley's editors, that there is little or no affinity between these two dialects. This, however, is nothing to the discordant medley of oriental tongues, prepared by Mr Lebedeff for the instruction of his readers, who will find, by a few months residence in the East Indies, that all their previous labour and pains to acquire its languages by his aid, have proved wholly in vain. To obviate as soon as possible, to the utmost of my ability, so serious and galling a loss of time and money to my countrymen on their way to India, I have been once more induced to devote my leisure hours to their service. Having the fullest conviction, that no future stage of their progress will afford them cause to upbraid me with the charge here preferred against other authors, for that ignorance and incapacity which are still so evident in all the successive attempts at a grammar of the grand popular speech of Hindoostan, I can surely feel no hesitation to express my sentiments accordingly.

Feliciter is sapit qui periculo alieno sapit.

The experience of my friends, as well as my own observations, hath fully convinced me, that in the acquisition of oriental languages; we cannot, at starting, sufficiently shorten and smooth the road to the most useful of the whole; I have therefore submitted this abstract to the suffrages of an indulgent Public, but with no intention of entering the lists as an author against Mr Lebedeff, or any such writers, whatever I may do with more creditable opponents. That there are many very respectable individuals, whose stay is too transitory, or whose duties are too laborious and important in India, to admit of other than desultory study, is a truth which every one must allow, as well as the necessity for such persons still possessing a certain knowledge of the Hindoostane or current tongue. For people in either of these predicaments, I may safely recommend these sheets, as they deviate very little from the grammatical rules observed in my larger Works, could they even obtain those that are every day growing out of print, which many persons cannot always refer to or employ. This advice is offered in the conviction, that the present introduction is on the whole much easier and plainer than any thing yet published on the colloquial speech of India.

Practical utility has been the great object of my labours, and this has so completely engrossed my attention and time, that no leisure has yet been afforded me to dive deep in the literature of the East. The little I have acquired, has, however, taught me to expect much less solid information from that quarter than most people, in all the great and useful sciences of life, which have in fact been cultivated with much greater avidity, taste, candour, and judgment, in our own vernacular speech, than they have ever yet experienced in the most learned languages of the eastern world; to which our western hemisphere is now as superior in the best and finest arts of peace, as it has ever proved in the more formidable energies of war.

For the tautology unavoidable in a book that is intended to supply the want of a living instructor, whose whole business is repetition, little excuse can be expected, when the reader recollects, that he may require even some more of it before he can well remember many essential points in these sheets.

To insert the oriental letters in a scheme like this, would at once defeat the very object of so small a performance, and render it nearly as discouraging, from the intricacy of its character, as a complete Hindoostanee Grammar has hitherto been deemed tremendous by its bulk alone. When we advert to the rude state of oriental types even at this day, and to the great incorrectness from points dropping out, and letters often losing their heads or tails in the press, after the whole has been carefully adjusted from two or three revisions, we should almost prefer our own letters to all others, for the dissemination and easy acquirement of the Hindoostanee, among ourselves at least. This mode applies more especially in the grammatical department of that most useful language, the etymology and construction of which are much more evident and striking to us in the Roman, than in any other character. After the most ample experience in the application of the Roman alphabet, to no less than six oriental languages in the Polyglot translation of Esop's Fables, I have at last ventured to submit, what I conceive ~~my ne plus ultra~~ of Hindoo-Roman orthography, in the following sheets, to the inspection of a candid Public, as I have greatly improved on the various ways of discriminating those letters which have the same sound under different forms; still I can hardly alter any part of the general system of orthoepy and orthography for the better in other respects. Although the Nagree alphabet, peculiar to the Hindoos, have the vowel y, as well as ourselves, in the form of a simple letter, representing a compound sound, I have been tempted at last, for the sake of perfect uniformity, to express it always by ue or ui, in sue, sui, for sy, 100; for the diphthong uo even is also as simple a Nagree letter in suo, 100, likewise. This, in fact, was latterly the only inconsistent part of my scheme, which I have been able to discover, after the minutest care and attention to the subject. At first the writing myn, tyn, hy, myl, and other common words, muen, tuen, hue, muel, may prove a little troublesome and uncouth to the learner, but this, as we proceed in our career in the oriental languages, will be readily accounted for, as one of the unavoidable results of comparative perfection and improvement, which are not very compatible with the former inconveniency of using y, in the double capacity of a vowel and consonant. The person who can conceive that ou or uo, in sound, round, huol, muol, suo, is a diphthong, which expresses the sound of both its component vowels partially together, can be at no loss to comprehend how (huo) and why (hwue) ue is equivalent to y in (drue) dry, &c. more especially if he will, in both diphthongs, consider u as a short ā, and o, e, as sounds which, in the order I have assigned them, oscillate according to particular circumstances, from u to ā, a; o, to oo, ω; and from e to i, ee: thus, suo, sao, suoo, suω, suw, to an Indian ear, would all express very nearly the same diphthongal sound as our word for the animal called a sow. In like manner, lae, lai, lue, lui, luee, luy, le.ee, paste, among them, would hardly be discriminated from our words, lie, lye, ly.

The common changes and corruptions of a.o, jao, gao, rao, hae, ae, ue, tipa^{ater-} sipahee, duhee, daee, bhuoo, and oostanee more, to qw, jow, gae, gow, cow, py, y, roy, teapoy, seapoy, die, b will afford some useful informat^{exc.}
the above diphthongs, and help, ⁱⁿ this part of the system of oriental orthography analytically considered, to establish the accuracy of the uo and ue, now finally adopted to express such sounds. By doing this,
I am aware it will be observed, that ou and y, prima facie, were self-evident to an English reader, which uo, ue, cannot of course be. In reply it may be safely alleged, that ou was in general mistaken for oo, particularly by French scholars, and y either treated like the i of imp, or as a mere consonant, by those who would not previously consult my scheme of the alphabet. To make any thing of either uo or ue, people must now refer to the system itself, in pages 3, 4, &c. which, if they will not do, their indolence and apathy necessarily exclude them from the benefit of my labours, as well as from all the reasoning I have had recourse to on the present subject.

How far I have reached perfection, in my new and last attempt to attain it, would be impious in me to affirm, though I might well enough allege, that if persevering diligence in the cultivation of any human knowledge has entitled a mortal to arrive at so enviable a height in it, few men have the claims I possess to be perfect in this branch of Hindooostanee philology at least. If twenty-two years progressive improvement in this alone, crowned at last with an experiment upon no less than six oriental languages, for the express purpose of self-conviction, do not qualify me to decide with more precision on these matters than a casual critic, who may chuse to condemn my labours en passant, then indeed have I laboured, so hard and so long, in vain. Far, however, from conceiving myself infallible, among such quick-sands as the organs of hearing and speech confessedly are, I still call on those men who dissent from my opinions, to publish and speak out, in some way or other, their private sentiments, that we may have not only a fair hearing before the tribunal of our literary commonwealth, but that I also may thereby, if possible, escape the severe sentences which are sometimes passed on me and my works, by very incompetent judges of oriental literature in general, and of the Hind in particular.

Let such teach others, who themselves ... el,
And censure freely who have written well.
Some few in that, but numbers err in this;
Ten censure wrong, for one who writes amiss.

On the subject of pronunciation I may notice, en passant, that the derivatives, and even the inflexions of yih, yuh, this, and wooh, wuh, that, are likewise liable to fluctuate: thus, yihan, eehan, ihan, yuhan, hi.an, here; wuhan, woohan, whan, hoo.an, there; uesa, wuesa, so; os, wis. One would be induced from the last example to believe, that these pronouns were originally yih, wih, with yis, wis, as their inflexions; but we cannot prosecute the matter further now, as it might insensibly mislead us into a wide field of philological speculation. The scholar will soon perceive, that those letters which I have hitherto written singly, though double in the original, are now exhibited correctly, as they ought in strict propriety to have been long ago, agreeably to my own observations then upon them. As the Sunskrit, however, drops the first aspirate of two aspirated letters coming together, I have done the same thing also in words like uch-chha, muk-khee, ḫuṭ-tha, instead of uchhichha, mukhkhee, ḫuthīha. The hyphen now introduced in such examples, is merely to impress the scholar with the necessity of laying the requisite stress on the first letter of the two, which could not be observed in my former method of expressing them by one only, and the words were consequently very indistinct, nay frequently misunderstood by the natives. The true cause of many examples like the above, and those which will occur in my Works, seems to be the application of a general rule to reduplicated consonants, when long vowels become short, that what is lost from a vowel should so far assist its following consonant. Batee, buttee, a candle, chadur, chuddur, a sheet, chakoo, chukkoo, a knife, maṭee, miṭtee, muṭtee, earth, are common instances in point.

Infinitives, that in the pristine dialects had a in their first syllable, will sometimes appear in modern speech with the a converted to it, such as rakhna, pakna, chakna, to have, keep, place, &c. now apparently become rukhma, pukna, to ripen, chukhma, to taste. It is singular enough, that the Moosulmans generally appear in their pronunciation fully to preserve the tushdeed or doubling in ruk-kha, chuk-kha, pukka, for which there is no other way of accounting than to suppose, that both letters, agreeably to the rule just mentioned, existed in the infinitive, quasi pukkna, rukkhama; but as the natives are not very consistent with each other on this head, it may be left for future investigation. We have endeavoured of late to exhibit the double letters at the end of Arabic radicals, that were not expressed before; in order, not only to comply with the rules in that language, but also to facilitate the acquisition of these derivatives, mudqooq, hectic; murdood, rejected; muhscoos, sensible; muhdood, bounded; hooqooq, from diqq, rudd, hiss, lud, luqq.

While the above were written simply diq, rud, &c. their conversion in the passive participle, &c. must have proved much more puzzling to beginners, than it will ever be in future; especially to those who may occasionally consult the Hindee-Arabic

Table in page 413, &c. with sufficient diligence and attention. Wherever final double letters have not been expressed, this will be owing solely to inadvertency at the time, for their appearance can do no harm whatever, but may produce some good, as illustrated above by examples, which could be greatly increased were this the proper place for them.

The reversed, or Hindoostance and English Vocabulary, in the Second Volume, will rectify all orthographical omissions or deviations in the First, that may have escaped me, while compiling it from my other publications; in which the orthoepy alone was, and still must be, a matter of more moment to the great majority of my readers, than accurate spelling ever can be in the oriental characters.

For those readers who may still observe, that my present mode of spelling even is not always uniform, it may be necessary to remark, that a careful perusal of pages 33, 34, 35, &c. ought to convince them how impossible it must be to confer stability and consistency upon subjects, where they do not really exist. It is not so much my province to determine, whether shurmindu, shurmundu, shirmundu, shirmindu, ashamed, be the most accurate, as it is my duty to give them all at times, were it for no other purpose than to demonstrate the truth of the rules I have just quoted, and to accustom learners to such varieties as they will certainly meet with in their travels over India. This observation may be extended almost ad infinitum, whenever letters are so interchangeable as they certainly are in the Hindooostanee and other oriental languages ; whence, khenchna, khuenchna, kheenchna, to draw; khorshed, khorshued, khorsheed, the sun. I have at times been startled myself at the new and strange appearance of particular words, but when the Moonshees quoted the authority of excellent dictionaries for them, acquiescence on my part became a matter of course, and I trust the intelligent reader will not be less reasonable.

That there are many scholars in India who are deterred from studying the most useful and general language of which it can boast, from the apprehension of the difficulty they must encounter in the attempt, is a truth which few people will controvert, though every intelligent man must lament its baneful effects. When we learn, that a number of those very individuals are actually acquainted with one or more of the most classical languages of the East, our wonder is excited, that they, of all others, should neglect the Hindooostanee, after having proceeded as Orientalists half way at least, before they fairly begin this excellent tongue. Our astonishment, however, will cease, when we advert to the history of man in all ages and climes; because we shall every where perceive him so much of an imitative animal, in spite of all his boasted reason, that we can easily account for the following sentiment from the writers of antiquity.

Oscitante uno, deinde oscitat et alter.

Si juxta claudum habites, subclaudicare disces.

Had the last adage not been too fatally verified, our general vicious pronunciation and ignorance of the Hindooostanee, and of many local customs at this period, in both the civil and military services, would not appear so conspicuous as they must have been to every candid enquirer. When a native teacher or Moonshee strives to conceal his total incapacity to teach, or even comprehend, the rules of grammar in his vernacular speech, and is moreover uncandid enough to blame it, instead of his own pride, ignorance and stupidity, what can reasonably be expected from foreigners like us, in the acquisition and cultivation of their language? Nothing but the general neglect it has experienced, until a liberal Patron, worthy of so patriotic a task, appeared in the person of Marquis Wellesley, to give a new turn and laudable energy to useful literary pursuits in British India. His Lordship's vigorous mind and discriminating character would have effectually prevented every misrepresentation on this head, had there even been men found so fool-hardy as to make the attempt under his Government. It is saying a great deal for the candour and veracity of the community at large, that no such people did appear before his Lordship, when it is considered, that almost every gentleman, who might support the cause of the Hindooostanee, was liable to this little puzzling question—If it be really so useful in the official situation you have long filled, pray why did you not learn this fact and the language together many years ago? Few men willingly acknowledge the existence of ignorance and error for a series of years under such circumstances, as pride, prudence, and self-interest, commonly induce most people to conceal every thing of this kind as much as possible; although the truly wise and good must often perceive the force of these sentiments,

*Errare est hominis, sed non persistere, saepe
Optimus est portus, vertere consilium.*

and act accordingly. Even a useful truth may, like the sun itself, be suppressed or obscured for a time by the clouds of prejudice and overwhelming injustice, but the hour will come at last, as it has to the Hindooostanee, when reason and fact will break forth, as clear as noon-day, to dazzle the weak eyes of a few, who still shrink from those rays of light, which will expand in every direction through the British empire, under the auspices of a wise and liberal Government. The following sheets may go very far to extend a knowledge of the Hindooostanee among a respectable number of the King's and Company's civil and military servants, at the same time they will greatly assist the mere Hindooostanee, in his commencement of every other oriental language. Whoever shall have perseverance enough to go through this Volume, will, I am convinced, acquire some relish for the popular speech of India, and enough of it to carry him much farther in the pursuit of Eastern lore, than he at first expected.

Satus est recurrere quam currere male,
Dimidium facti, qui cœpit, habet, sapere aude.

Indeed this idea chiefly prevailed on me to prefer the plan I have adopted to many others which were suggested, in order to prevail on the youth destined to India to acquire at least some little knowledge of the Hindoostanee. When I once get them as far as they may go, with little or no trouble, in this publication, I shall trust to their own candour, good sense and experience to proceed some steps farther. Should the present attempt succeed, as I both wish and expect, it may induce me to publish a regular series, as already stated, of all my works.

There are not wanting some very warm advocates, even among expert Orientalists, for an exclusive adoption of the Roman letters in all Hindoostanee publications, intended expressly for beginners or for military men and others, who wish to learn the languages of the East, rather as acquisitions subservient to the due execution of their duty, than as classic accomplishments for the improvement of their minds, as men or scholars. I shall candidly admit, that my own opinion, nearly coincides with the notions of the gentlemen to whom I now allude, and of some learned men, who lately proposed to express the Greek, Hebrew, German, and other languages by the Roman letters (with certain modifications) alone. That such a project is practicable, with many advantages to the public, I have not the smallest doubt in my own mind ; but how far it would be politic or prudent, in a literary point of view, to substitute the Roman toga universally, for the ancient garb of those venerable tongues, is a question that may require more consideration than I can bestow upon it at present. Many people of sound judgment may probably object, that learning, like religion, ought not to appear too destitute of those ornaments and forms, which excite that respect and admiration at first sight, so conducive afterwards to the permanent and benign influence of Christianity and literature on the minds of men. This is far from being the case, however, with the Hindoostanee, and I shall be able to judge from the result of the present trial, whether simplicity of character can always command success in literary pursuits or not. In its application to six oriental languages, the candid scholar, by consulting page 49, will have a fair opportunity of observing its advantages and defects, as a general character, nor will the adept in any of these tongues, be now at a loss to expose the inefficacy of the Hindoostanee, as an introductory acquisition to the rest, provided any of my translations into them prove very incorrect.

The Roman alphabet, that I have used, is fully adequate to express all the various oriental sounds, however defective it must naturally appear, when two or more letters are employed to denote only one sound, against which, however, I have at last proposed a remedy, in page 45, that will, in general, answer all the purposes of Hindoo-Roman orthoepigraphy much better than the opposers of my system will yet allow. As an orthographical index, it certainly is more deficient in the Arabic, than in any other tongue, for this evident reason, that the Arabians, like ourselves, have cherished an orthoepy at variance with orthography, or vice versa, which the more philosophical Hindoo philologers have very sparingly done.

There are two modes of beginning to learn a language, the theoretic and practical, but in my opinion, each has its peculiar advantages. Men advanced in life who have many other pursuits, and at the same time are general grammarians, ought at once to have recourse to practice, and from it revert progressively to the theory of the language, with much less trouble than they otherwise could do. On the contrary, young people, or those who are not versed in the principles of general grammar, should invariably commence with the elementary rules, and finish with practice. Analogous to these general methods, we may also enumerate two, for the study of the oriental tongues in particular, with the greatest chance of ultimate success. When the public are in possession of good Sunskrit and Arabic grammars, the sooner a student, who is intended for the East, commences these acquisitions as classic languages, the greater progress he must afterwards make in almost every oriental tongue, when he reaches Asia, provided he starts with the assistance of those teachers only who deem the just pronunciation and practical knowledge of living languages, of far more consequence to the great body of our countrymen in the East, than all the learned lumber of dead tongues, in either hemisphere. Were he even to curtail a portion of his time from the Greek and Latin, and devote it to the study of Arabic and Sunskrit, in the British seminaries, he might gain much as an eastern linguist, without losing the most useful part of those ornamental pursuits for a gentleman and polite scholar in the western world, because with some improvement in the mode of teaching the classics, more may be gained in two years than has hitherto been acquired in four. The improvement to which I here allude, and on which I shall enlarge in the Second Volume, is simply to begin every learner with a well grounded grammatical knowledge of his own mother-tongue, as the most rational and easy prelude to adequate proficiency in the grammar of every other language.

With such a foundation as that proposed above, any youth of ordinary capacity must acquire all the dialects of India with the utmost facility, on the soundest principles, and, comparatively speaking, in a very short period of time. This plan I would term the regular and systematic mode, in which theory precedes practice, with no doubt many advantages; but as it cannot yet, nor always hereafter be pursued, especially with those not in the civil service, I shall subjoin a few words on the practical method, which I have hitherto recommended.

As the Hindooostanee is the most general colloquial tongue in India, and one of constant use and occurrence with our native officers, teachers, servants, and dependents of every description, the sooner it is learned, on real grammatical principles, the better; since such an acquisition, as matters are now conducted, never afterwards can militate against the student's proficiency in the more classic oriental languages.

Those Persian scholars who, entirely neglecting the Hindooostanee at first, acquire a barbarous jargon and defective pronunciation from their domestics and indifferent Moonshees, seldom get over these grand obstacles, without more labour than people so situated will commonly bestow. Such men may be very profound in oriental learning, without having any dexterity or useful knowledge in business; by which alone they can defend the illiterate multitude from the talons of those pedantic cormorants, who will otherwise prey on the blood and vitals of the great body of the people, in all the subordinate offices of our Indian empire, and of course clamour much against any gentleman condescending to learn the vulgar tongue, or deigning to converse directly with the common suitors in any court of justice.

It is this colloquial information also, by which, in fact, we can with propriety exact that reverence and respect from the native officers, between us and our Indian subjects, that will effectually restrain them, by due awe and subordination to us, from plundering and oppressing their own countrymen as they have hitherto, too often with impunity, done, in spite of all our former oriental classic lore.

In the Grammatical introduction, the subject of pronunciation has been adverted to, as one of the most formidable obstacles in acquiring the Hindoostanee language, but one also which may easily be overcome by attention and perseverance on the teacher and scholars' part, for a few weeks at first, which is a small matter, when contrasted with the great advantage of speaking intelligibly to the people of India, in their vernacular tongue.

It is a curious but a real fact, that they have added three letters to our alphabet, which it does not possess, viz. the harsh d, t, r, from their inability to perceive, that these letters among us rather approximate to the soft series, which alone exists in the Persian, than to those hard consonants in the Nagree alphabet that prove so troublesome to us in the acquisition of the Hindooostanee. As this innovation is founded upon fallacy and misconception entirely, and as it multiplies characters, not only unnecessarily, but also with a discordant effect, on words like doctor, captain, &c. when incorporated with the Hindooostanee, it would be well if every scholar were to set his face against so useless and erroneous a practice. It distorts our names, multiplies and disfigures our letters, for no one good purpose, except to prove, that hitherto our literary intercourse with the Hindooostanees has been extremely limited, otherwise they could not have persisted in this glaring error so long, which, like many more blunders of this nature, originates in that general inadvertency of the multitude to particular facts, till they are properly illustrated and explained by individual research.

That a reversed Hindooostanee Dictionary would be a valuable acquisition to oriental literature, is sufficiently apparent ; but if the students of that language will duly reflect on what follows, such a work is not quite so indispensable and essential to their progress as many people suppose. In the first place, I am just publishing an extensive reversed Vocabulary in the Second Volume, which may generally be of the greatest use, when such a Dictionary is required. In the second place, very few beginners will properly advert to the absolute necessity of learning a sufficient stock of words by heart, and to the inference that follows such an acquisition. With two or three thousand vocables and a competent idea of grammar, every scholar of common industry and penetration possesses the means of increasing the amount to any number, without consulting a dictionary.

The mere exertion, on this plan, gives opportunities of learning words that could not otherwise occur ; and, what is of far greater consequence, the meaning of every word thus found out by the student becomes partly a discovery, which is accordingly cherished with greater affection in the mind, as a creature of his own. That misconceptions will at times occur, nay, that every effort to learn the true sense of the word will now and then prove abortive, I am not so fool-hardy as to deny ; still, every body who fairly makes the experiment must find, that such an accident will be rare indeed, if he will form or select some easy sentences in which the vocables under discussion are used. There cannot be a great many useful words in any language, whose signification is not in general very evident from the tenor of the sentence or speech in which they appear. Let us illustrate this by two familiar examples, which every intelligent reader may extend, reverse, or modify, as he pleases. “ When rushk is excited among scholars, application and proficiency will be the result.” “ Every man from tuussoob conceives his own religion the best.” Little philological acumen will be requisite at once to determine, that rushk must signify emulation, competition, ambition, &c. nor can tuuscoob well be taken here for any thing but prejudice, prepossession, &c. Granting even, that habit or any other meaning strikes the learner first, he can easily put it to the test, in one or two more sentences, either of his own finding out, or if in the East, he can apply to his Moon-shee. Under circumstances like the above, which the learner may multiply ad libitum, let me earnestly entreat of him always to refer to the English words in my Vocabulary, that he may conceive right, and in all probability this will prove a complete confirmation of his own discoveries. I have been the more earnest on this head, because the spirit of procrastination, which is so apt to fetter European energies in a warm climate, too often broods with self-complacency on the non-existence of a reversed Dictionary, as an excellent apology for the want of exertion, wherever that evil genius takes entire possession of our faculties, and wheedles us from the acquisition of the Hindoostanee or any other useful pursuit. The procrastinators who fondly hope to make great progress the moment that I reverse my Dictionary, will then be as far removed from activity of mind as they are now, so they may take my word for it, that their progress in Hindoostanee will after all be very little advanced by the expected Work ; which may nevertheless form an early number among my intended volumes.

The directions given in some of my late Works, for the punctuation of sentences in the oriental languages, and their division into paragraphs or sections, will, I flatter myself, pave the way for a new era, in both the chirography and typography of the East, which have hitherto remained in their pristine state of confusion and obscurity. I have even gone so far as to enforce the principle, observed in our printing, which preserves words distinct from each other, by joining the letters of each as closely as possible, and interposing spaces between distinct vocables alone. Though the oriental types are not yet too well adapted to this great improvement, I have nevertheless tried it for the information of the reader, to prepare him for this excellent expedient, in all future works, which should invariably exhibit every individual word as separate and detached as these appear in the books and writings of the western world. That the lazy Indians, and their more indolent abettors, will declaim against this beneficial innovation, is very probable ; but a similar outcry has been the concomitant obstruction of every discovery or reformation among the sons of Adam, since the creation of the world to the present day ; I cannot therefore expect more indulgence than my predecessors in similar walks of improvement and reform, nor shall I feel less sanguine of ultimate success than the most fortunate of them have done. When the practical utility of my labours has had time to be diffused among the best judges of their merits, I despair not of converting those even, who, on a superficial view of the subject, would be the first to oppose every attempt of the kind. From one reflection I cannot avoid deriving the most heartfelt satisfaction, and it is this, that if my efforts to facilitate the acquisition of Hindoostanee, through the medium of an improved typographical system, prove successful, all the oriental languages may, and probably will, derive much advantage in the same department, which has hitherto proved the grand stumbling-block against a rapid progress in the eastern tongues, to all Europeans who have devoted their time to such pursuits. Were those who sojourn in India fully aware of the many evils which result from a very imperfect knowledge or absolute ignorance of the Hindoostanee, we would soon perceive an immense number of adepts in this most useful speech, even in the metropolis of the British Indian empire. Many men there most absurdly conceive, that as the Calcutta Bungalees generally can chatter a barbarous species of English, there is no necessity for a European learning the country languages. No mistake can be more fatal than this, because affairs of the utmost moment to the parties concerned are thus entrusted to the accidental conception of English by an apathetic native, who too often pretends to know a whole sentence in that language, when in reality he does not properly comprehend one word of it. Gentlemen who have important transactions to manage with the Indians, through the medium of Europeans, ought to weigh this matter well, before they employ any who have not at least a competent acquaintance with Hindoostanec or Bungalee, otherwise they must expect to meet with losses and crosses of the worst kind. That dangerous misconceptions, under such circumstances, do not more frequently happen to British Indians, must rather be attributed to our auspicious fortune, than our good management; or to that concealment and silence, which frequently prevent disasters of this nature from becoming public. The very discordant accounts by both ancient and modern travellers, relative to India, may doubtless originate in their too frequent ignorance of the languages current over the countries through which they travel, as historians or philosophers; and to the confidence they must, so situated, place in illiterate, stupid, or designing interpreters.

So far from wishing to pamper and confirm that mental torpor, to which our countrymen, on their arrival in India, are but too prone, from the enervating effects of a warm climate, and the still more dangerous influence of example, I have strained every nerve to obviate its baneful effects, by endeavouring to teach every youth there to think and act for himself on that important occasion. That my assertions are true, as far at least as the Hindoostanee language is concerned, we may learn from the annals of literature in that country, where, strange to tell, the men whose official situations alone ought to make them proficients in the popular tongue, have been, till lately, with a very few exceptions, quite ignorant of the matter. What is still worse, their Indian monitors are doubly interested in confirming that ignorance, of which every native, but those very men, as well every person not hoodwinked by misplaced partiality, with so much reason complain. The great experience which I lately enjoyed in this department enables me to declare with confidence, that where one Moonshee is to be found either inclined or qualified to teach the Hindoostanee on grammatical principles, there are ninety-nine, with some ability, eager and willing to instruct us in the Persian and Arabic languages. To counteract such accumulated and growing obstacles to the diffusion of the popular speech of Hindoostan, I have had recourse to the present publication, and I hope with some success. I feel perfectly convinced, that the happiness and prosperity of the British Indian empire is more intimately connected with our general progress in the most useful languages of India, than our great erudition in their learned tongues; and that those are the only safe medium, by which we can avoid many evils and some delusive errors among us, that are founded entirely on a misconception of the native character, by people under peculiar local attachments, not less injurious to them, than to the real interests of the British empire, both in Asia and Europe. In a country so situated as Hindoostan has long been, it requires very little discernment to predict the fatal consequences which must through time ensue from the fascinating influence of native favourites of either sex, when unfortunately exerted against the justice, respect, civility, and attention, which are due on many occasions to the national rights, spirit, and character of the conquerors of India, in the persons of individuals in that distant quarter of the globe. The extremes of virtues become real vices, and in regions like those it is difficult to say, whether oppression or too much indulgence be the greatest evil; though no one can doubt of a middle path being, as in other critical cases, by far the best.

On the particular theme of eastern pedantry, I have observed so much in page 295, that it would almost prove a mere repetition to state more to the same purpose here ; I cannot, however, suppress the following remarks. Although Persian writings are too often liable to the very same misplaced display of Arabic erudition, which every person will detect even in the best Hindooostanee authors, I have been credibly informed, that the present Monarch of Persia is very partial to simplicity of style in his epistolary correspondence and compositions ; consequently, that the modern language of his dominions now inclines much more to the ancient Puhluwee, than ever it has yet done, since the Moosulmans subjugated that delightful country, and its fascinating original tongue. How far the present countenance, which the Hindooostanee receives from the highest authority now in India, will be equally successful in reducing its compositions in future to the level of common sense, and the comprehension of the people at large, time only can tell ; and I fondly hope, that the hoary sage will not frustrate all my endeavours for so desirable an event to the natives of India, as well as ourselves.

To Persian works composed by the people of India, the very same objections may be started that actually exist against Hindooostanee compositions executed by Moosulmans born in Bungalu. To the former, the real vernacular speech of Persia must be very imperfectly known, and that it has a considerable bias to the Puhluwee seefns pretty evident from many particulars, which cannot with propriety be introduced here. Writers, under such circumstances, must conceal their want of local knowledge beneath the splendid cloak of that classic lore in which the Qooran is solely composed, and as they do not labour under the same impediments which naturally check the litterati of Europe from similar incroachments, the blind even may see, that the misapplication of oriental erudition is too often the genuine offspring of real ignorance. I shall illustrate this, I trust, to every candid reader's satisfaction, by the following fact: In Hindooostan, the local dialects everywhere assimilate so much with the pronunciation of the grand popular tongue, that numberless Hinduwee words pervade the current speech or Hindoostanee in that quarter, which are freely used and well understood by the Moosulmans as well as Hindoos. In the province of Bungalu, the whole phenomena are reversed, little or no intermixture of the provincial dialect can or does take place, consequently Arabic or Persian words must supply the want of local terms in that region. Let any oriental scholar attend carefully to the Hindoostanee, spoken in the markets by the bulk of the people beyond Bhagulpoor, and to that idiom of it which is current on the Bungalu side of the boundary, for the truth of my doctrines. If he find me wrong, and will come forwards with his observations and sentiments as a gentleman and a scholar, I shall do my best to meet him on the same footing, before the public tribunal, and I promise, when confuted there, to sign my recantation in the face of all the world.

I might also venture to extend my opinion even to the Hindoostanee writings, under the same limitations and terms, were I not conscious that the itch of pedantry has long been the literary epidemic of India, which may yet, in spite of every nostrum, become more inveterately confirmed than ever, and even spread its baneful influence to the British Isles.

The persevering efforts which I have made to banish all learned lumber from the Hindoostanee, will not, at this period, I flatter myself, be misconstrued into any wish for the expulsion also of all concord, propriety, accuracy of speech, and pronunciation, by those men who, not having at first acquired the grammar of that language, wisely affect afterwards to undervalue and despise it. The absurd and risible blunders that inexperienced or foolish scholars must at first commit, in their indiscriminate essays to speak grammatically to individuals of the various tribes and nations scattered over India, as Johnson observes on a similar occasion, “may for a time furnish folly with laughter and harden ignorance in contempt, but useful diligence will at last prevail, and there never can be wanting some who distinguish desert.” Should my exposure of Hindoostanee pedantry ever be maliciously represented as a hostile attack on the learned languages of the East, let my enemies carefully peruse the Polyglot translation of Esop's Fables, and then candidly declare, how little I merit such censure, and how much those very acquisitions are esteemed by me, though I have not yet made any great progress in them. That Arabic and Sunskrit are the grand sources of real oriental literature, I never was silly enough to deny ; on the contrary, I respect them in the higher regions of science, as they richly deserve. It is only when these pure fountains overflow their natural bounds and come sweeping down like a torrent on the plains of common language and ordinary discourse, that I take up arms to oppose their overwhelming career. I, perhaps absurdly, conceive that a wide diffusion of profound eastern erudition is neither very requisite for our general transactions in India, nor that it is on the whole so conducive to mental improvement, happiness, and morality, as our own, however much I may rejoice to see the British youth sufficiently initiated in the grammar, idiom, and useful works of all the languages spoken or understood in India. Whoever reflects for a moment, that the people who speak their own general language grammatically, are invariably understood much better by the vulgar in each province, than those men can comprehend the provincial dialects, I fancy he will not hesitate to decide in favour of learning the Hindoostanee on sound principles at once. If education be essential to the character of a gentleman among us, its limits must be narrow indeed, when they do not embrace a grammatical knowledge of our own tongue; then why despise the same criterion in other languages? Some very young students have been absolutely deterred from learning the popular language of India, by assurances, that neither I nor my scholars can make ourselves understood by the natives. If those good men, who so confidently say so, could only accompany my pupils or me, by way of trial, through all the intermediate stages of society in Hindoostan, I am confident of convincing them in person, that they never were more mischievously deceived or mistaken in their lives, and that to deter others, who cannot know better, from a useful pursuit, by fabricated stories of blunders, which never existed, is a species of bull-baiting, neither very manly nor becoming in any gentleman.

The Sunskrit being the grand palladium of every Hindoo art and science, a knowledge of it is indispensable for any person who expects to be an adept in the religious and civil history of ancient India: On the other hand, the Arabic is no less advantageous in all that relates to Moohummud and his followers.

Youths of extraordinary talents might be deputed, at the expence of the state, with encouraging allowances, to acquire beneficial arts and profound knowledge abroad, in the several walks of science, for which their various capacities may prove best adapted.

Men who leave their native homes, merely in quest of fortune in foreign climes, have commonly important duties to perform, which allow them little leisure to cultivate that knowledge and information with sufficient accuracy, which might be acquired in every region of the globe, were people resident there with no other official avocations. The former class of scholars may, with great propriety, be compared to simple gleaners in the wide fields of a literary harvest, from whom the public can expect but a slender stock for the commonwealth of letters; whereas men appointed purposely to this duty, must become reapers at once, and, to preserve their own character, will naturally return loaded with an ample supply of literary materials to their patrons and employers. In one way, a few years will effect more in the service of real science and learning, than a century possibly can procure by the other, in which it must be recollectcd, that more than half of the subsequent time is too often fruitlessly spent in forgetting or correcting all the mistakes, generated during the preceding period of desultory research.

To beginners, who can but ill brook any misconception by the natives, when speaking to them, I must observe, that until the voice, manner of speaking, or tone of the speaker, be a little familiar to a Hindoo-stanee hearer, he will not readily comprehend what has been said in his own language. This frequently affords a momentary triumph to the Jargonists of an audience, who very sapiently remark, that this is the natural consequence of preferring grammatical accuracy of speech to their usual Jargon. Let no man of sound judgment, however, be terrified by such a bug-bear, because every Jargonist, cæteris paribus, must be exposed to the very same disappointments. Independent of the natural stupidity and apathy, which too often disgrace the Hindoostanees on such occasions, there is a species of low cunning, or national policy, about many of them, which is no less vexatious in its consequences to a young scholar. He probably asks a very plain, disinterested question, which the native perfectly comprehends, and could answer immediately. His suspicious temper, or guilty conscience, takes the alarm, he fears there is something insidious in the interrogation, and, to prepare his mind for an evasive or defensive reply, he very adroitly pretends not to have understood the speech which was addressed to him. A short pause then intervenes, before the expression can well be repeated, and this generally gives the wily native leisure enough to recollect, in a guarded answer, his scattered senses, which had been beating every bush in the neighbourhood for the anguis in herba, that they constantly expect to encounter in every query. I appeal to the careful observer of Asiatic manners, who has not yet allowed his private affections entirely to mislead his judgment on their general character, for the truth of these remarks.

The learned reader will, I suspect, be surprised now to meet with oriental composition in the Roman character, unless he dispassionately considers my reasons for still persisting in that practice. I shall therefore close this long digression with a remark or two more upon that subject. Independent of the accuracy of pronunciation, and the competent idea of the inflexion and concord of words, which this plan affords to the learner of Hindoostanee, people forget, that the whole is a mere extension of the alphabetical principles, on which any foreign language is necessarily represented by our own letters individually to us, as the learners of such a tongue. If these principles be just originally, the superstructure upon them cannot be wrong, however requisite it may afterwards be to exhibit and read languages under their own appropriate symbols. Men who neglect system in these matters, at their first outset, and, in the true spirit of perverseness, affect to despise it ever after, afford very sufficient proofs of its value, by the inconsistent and ever varying modes they naturally follow, when forced to express oriental vocables in the Roman character to their readers. If the mere view of a strange character could alone convey its power to the reader's mind, and thereby confer the faculty of just pronunciation on his organs of speech, the common inconsiderate outcry against my Hindoo-Roman System would be well founded ; and, indeed, as it formerly stood, I must allow that one grand objection was properly started, viz. that my scholars were taught to speak accurately, sometimes at the future expence of their oriental spelling. The orthoepigraphical plan now followed obviates every thing of that nature, and rather paves the way for, than obstructs the acquisition of the oriental alphabets, as they become progressively requisite to the student, with the advantage of reconciling his mind gradually to all the difficulties he must afterwards encounter as an eastern scholar, which is an object, to most juvenile minds, of no small importance.

In the multitude of counsellors there may be safety, when these are duly qualified to offer the advice required ; every person, therefore, will do well, before he follows any relative to his own application to the languages, to ask his advisers to translate the following easy sentence in the Hindoo-stanee, or popular language : " Hindee zubaan murboot toom seekho to seekho, pur muen ne aj tuluk yoonhee seekhee hue."

If this be readily complied with, by furnishing a translation and analysis in writing, the beginner ought implicitly to follow the plan his friends may lay down for the future prosecution of his studies, otherwise he should hesitate and advert to the fate of the blind leading the blind in any pursuit whatever. At all events, my solicitude at the very commencement of such literary labours is so far pardonable, as I honestly wish the tyro should trust neque cæcum ducem, neque amentem consultorem, in all important matters of this kind.

Were the learner to task his self every day with carefully extracting so many words regularly from this volume, into a neat book, he would soon be master of the whole by heart ; and, by acquiring only those words first which occur progressively, he would very quickly lay in a stock of the utmost consequence to a beginner. When these objects have been attained, marginal spaces may be appropriated solely to encrease the original store, or to a reversed scheme of the whole, including such remarks and observations as the learner's progress may enable him occasionally to make on the subject of his studies. As he proceeds, his labour will be smoothed with the pleasing conviction, that almost every word acquired from these sheets may be brought to the profit side of his account at once, for most of the oriental tongues, without the smallest apprehension of being constrained by experience to insert many items to the score of loss, as he must inevitably do with the most of his acquisitions from Hadley, and others of that stamp.

On this theme I feel particular satisfaction in subjoining the following extract from the learned and ingenious philological lucubrations of Mr H. T. Colebrooke, in the 7th volume of the Asiatic Researches, page 223. "On the subject of the modern dialect of Upper India, I with pleasure refer to the works of Mr Gilchrist, whose labours have now made it easy to acquire the knowledge of an elegant language, which is used in every part of Hindoostan and the Dukhin; which is the common vehicle of colloquial intercourse among all well educated natives, and among the illiterate also, in many provinces of India; and which is almost every where intelligible to some among the inhabitants of every village.

“Without passing the limits of Hindoo-stan, it would be easy to collect a copious list of different dialects, in the various provinces which are inhabited by the ten principal Hindoo nations. The extensive region, which is nearly defined by the banks of the Suriswuttee and Gunga on the north, and which is strictly limited by the shores of the eastern and western seas towards the south, contains fifty-seven provinces according to some lists, and eighty-four according to others. Each of these provinces has its peculiar dialect, which appears, however, in most instances, to be a variety only of some one among the ten principal idioms. Thus Hindoostanee, which seems to be the lineal descendant of the Kanyukoobju, comprises numerous dialects, from the Oordoo zuban, or language of the royal camp and court, to the barbarous jargon, which reciprocal mistakes have introduced among European gentlemen and their native servants. The same tongue, under its more appropriate denomination of Hindee, comprehends many dialects strictly local and provincial. They differ in the proportion of Arabic, Persian, and Sunskrit, either pure or slightly corrupted, which they contain; and some shades of difference may be also found in the pronunciation, and even in the basis of each dialect.”*

To enable the Hindoostanee student to judge and decide for his self as soon as possible, I have here also deemed it my duty to insert the very judicious and irrefragable arguments in Mr W. B. Bayley’s Collegial Thesis, published a few years ago, on the importance and utility of that language.

“ The language which in my proposition I have specified by the name of Hindoostanee, is also frequently denominated Hindee, Oordoo, Moosulmanee, and Rekhtu. It is compounded of the Arabic, Persian, and Sunskrit, or Bhakha, which last appears to have been in former ages the current language of Hindoostan.

* The slight orthographical deviations in a few words from Sir William Jones’s plan to my own, will surely be pardoned here, as every author has the same right, on such occasions, to make free with mine.

“ Owing, in some measure, to the intercourse of the merchants of Arabia with this country, but more particularly to frequent invasions by the Moosulmans, and their ultimate settlement in it, a considerable number of Arabic and Persian words became engrafted on the original language of the natives, and out of this mixture arose a new language, the Hindooostanee, like a modern superstructure on an ancient foundation.

“ By degrees it assumed its present appearance and estimation, and the court of Dihlee made choice of it, as the medium in all affairs depending on colloquial intercourse. Hence its influence gradually spread abroad so widely, that it became universally used in the courts of the Moosulman princes. Many of the native inhabitants also grew familiarized to it, and used it in all concerns, the validity of which did not depend upon written documents.

“ As the intercourse and communication of the Moosulmans with the natives of India was greater or less, according to certain circumstances and situations, the Hindooostanee naturally varied considerably, with respect to the prevalence of one or other of the languages composing it. This cir-circumstance will sanction a division of it into three distinct dialects: namely, the pristine, or country; the middle, or familiar; and the learned, or court dialect; each of which are respectively useful in different districts, situations, and families.

“ In the first, or pristine dialect, there is a smaller admixture of foreign words; hence this is more nearly related to the original dialects of the country.

“ In the second, or familiar dialect, the number of foreign words bears nearly an equal proportion to the original ones.

“ In the third, or court dialect, Arabic and Persian words are by far the most numerous.

“ It is unnecessary for me to explain the various moral and physical causes, which have rendered the Hindooostanee less prevalent in some parts of India than in others, since they must be evident to every reflecting mind. This circumstance, however, by no means invalidates my proposition; for, although I can grant that particular dialects are spoken by the inhabitants of several districts and provinces of India, yet I assert, that no one of them, taken individually, is so generally useful and necessary as the Hindoostanee : Nor will my assertion appear too bold when it be considered, that, however extensive a country may be, and how numerous soever the dialects spoken in it, still the language of its court and metropolis will always be most generally known and understood, and must of consequence be that most worthy of attention and cultivation by foreigners.

“ I shall now advert to a few arguments, which I trust will be convincing and satisfactory proofs of the truth of my proposition.

“ In the whole of the vast country of Hindoostan, scarce any Moosulman will be found, who does not understand and speak the Hindoostanee.

“ Every Hindoo also, of any distinction, or who has the least connection either with the Moosulman or the British government, is, according to his situation, acquainted, more or less, with this language.

“ It is moreover the general medium by which many persons of various foreign nations, settled in Hindoostan, communicate their wants and ideas to each other. Of the truth of this indeed we ourselves are an evidence, as are the Portuguese, Dutch,

French, Danes, Arabs, Turks, Greeks, Armenians, Georgians, Persians, Mooghuls, and Chinese.

“ In almost all the armies of India this appears to be the universally used language, even though many of the individuals composing them be better acquainted with the dialects peculiar to their respective districts.

“ Nearly from Cape Comorin to Kabool, a country about 2000 miles in length, and 1400 in breadth, within the Ganges, few persons will be found in any large villages or towns, which have ever been conquered or much frequented by Moosulmans, who are not sufficiently conversant in the Hindooostanee ; and in many places beyond the Ganges, this language is current and familiar.

“ An accurate knowledge of the customs and manners of a nation, depends principally on an acquaintance with its colloquial languages ; and in no country, perhaps, is this knowledge more essential, or a more desirable object of attainment, than in Hindooostan, the inhabitants of which differ so widely in religion, laws, customs, and prejudices.

“ When the conquerors and rulers of a country are unacquainted with the current speech of their subjects, the natural consequences must evidently be, injustice on the one part, and disaffection on the other.

“ Although, in the popular language of any country, there may be a deficiency of books of science, still that language is the most proper and necessary for conducting the affairs of civil government and commerce, of military as well as judicial concerns. I may here observe, that many centuries have not elapsed since the learning, laws, and religion of our own country, were preserved and studied in a foreign language: that language, however, has been superseded by the English, a sufficient proof that the current language of the country was deemed most worthy of cultivation and study.

“ Although the Hindoostanee language does not boast of very many prose compositions, or works of science, yet how many elegant tales and beautiful poems have been composed in it! How universally are commercial and military concerns, and even political correspondence of the highest consequence, connected with it, and carried on in it ! And in this place I may observe, that the instructions of the learned natives, and all their disputations and arguments on subjects of literature, are conducted in it ; and that in every case, where a native of this country wishes either to compose or to dictate any thing to be written, he constantly arranges his ideas, and explains his meaning, in the Hindoostanee.

“ Lastly, a correct and general knowledge of this language greatly facilitates the acquisition of many others, and is the only mean by which we can prevent injustice and imposition.

“ If the assertions which I have here made be founded on truth, what argument can be brought to invalidate my proposition ? The conclusion from the premises is this, that to the merchant, the traveller, the civil and military officer, the philosopher and physician ; in short, to every one who carries on concerns of any moment in India, the Hindoostanee language is more generally necessary and advantageous than any other ; and, on this account, it ought to be the most cultivated and esteemed.”

Some years ago I received the following very acceptable note, from one of my juvenile friends, whose progress in all the oriental languages more than kept pace with the laudable ardour displayed here for the general diffusion of useful knowledge. As the publication of the extract which he communicated, may conduce powerfully to the speedy triumph of truth, in behalf of the Hindoostanee language at Madras, I have used the freedom to lay it before the public, in the conviction that the able Writer alluded to, never could take offence at a liberty, which may soon produce the most beneficial consequences, by communicating his judicious opinions to the gentlemen on that very valuable, extensive, and encreasing establishment.

“ Wherever I go, I shall carry with me the same grateful recollection of your kindness and assistance, the same zeal for the honourable cause in which you have been so long engaged.”

Soton kee neend men kurne ko khulul ja,oonga, Nootq kuhta hue mera aj yih hur natiq se;
Ankur honth ubhee tootee ke mul ja,oonga.

“ I send you the opinion of one of the first and best informed men at Madras, on the subject of the languages necessary for carrying on the duties at that Presidency, as far as the Hindoostanee is concerned."

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman at Madras, dated 19th June 1802.

It is scarcely necessary for me to notice the Hindoostanee dialect, the extent and force of which are sufficiently known to all persons, who have directed their attention, either to the business or to the literature of India. A copious knowledge of that dialect is, in my judgment, alone sufficient for the transaction of ordinary affairs in any part of the territories under this Government; but it will be obvious to you, that the use of it will be found more extensive and more common in those parts, which have been more immediately, and for a longer period of time, subjected to the Mahomedan yoke. Throughout the territories of the Nabob of Arcot, and the Balaghaut dominions of the late Tippoo Sultan, the use of the Hindoostanee dialect is familiar to all persons employed in the public offices of Government, and to a great portion of the common people; but this observation is more extensively applicable to Mysoor, than to the Carnatic. All the officers of the Sultan's government having been Mahomedans, who are generally too proud or too ignorant to understand any but their own language, the Hindoostanee necessarily became the general channel of communication in the departments of the army, the law, and the revenue. It is long since the same causes have ceased to affect the general manners of the Carnatic under the Nabobs of Arcot. The armies nominated for its protection, have been composed of natives of every description, and exclusively commanded by European officers : few traces of a judicial establishment are discoverable : the Nabobs of Arcot have taken into their service European ministers ; and those ministers have necessarily employed interpreters or dubashes, the effect of all which causes has tended to diminish the Mahomedans influence, and to revive the original manners of the Hindoo inhabitants of the different provinces. In the northern Circars, the traces of the Mahomedan conquest, in this respect, are more faint than in the Carnatic, and I believe that they are less perceptible in most of the southern provinces. In speaking therefore of the general utility of the Hindoostanee language, it may be proper to qualify it by an exception with respect to the judicial department, particularly in the northern Circars, and in the provinces south of the Coleroon; for I doubt that a person possessing a knowledge of the Hindoostanee dialect alone would be competent to discharge the duties of a judge in those districts."

The writer of the foregoing letter, Mr Webb, is since dead, and my late pupil, Mr Jonathan Henry Lovett, is, alas! no more, having died about a year ago in his passage from India, deeply regretted by all who had the happiness to know him.

If a knowledge of the languages of Europe has ever been deemed requisite for an accomplished officer, how much more so will the general language of India be to every military man in that region, where he may often command bodies of Sipahees, and always has to deal with the people at large, all of whom will pay more or less respect to the person who speaks their vernacular speech, the most or least like a gentleman among them. This consideration itself should prove an adequate stimulus to every reflecting youth, who means to try his fortune as a soldier in the East; to say nothing of the risk he constantly runs there of losing his life, by some dangerous blunder or other, when on emergencies giving the word of command to his men. In the war against Teepoo Sahib, conducted by the brave Cornwallis, on a very critical occasion, an officer, in ordering his men to move a little to the right, unfortunately said, huto! instead of, dabo! and the Sipahées fell back in a manner that must have exposed a whole army and their distinguished leader to inevitable destruction, had not the mistake been immediately rectified, before its ruinous effects became seriously perceptible by that contagious communication, which is generally the bane of an Indian army.

That I may not be accused of interested singularity in my notions about the current language of India, I shall subjoin an extract of a letter, which I lately read with great pleasure and satisfaction, from an old experienced brave officer in the service, to a young gentleman on his arrival there, and which I deem the most honourable testimony, though not intended as one, in my behalf, on the present occasion, and no less creditable to the writer himself, but whose name, however, I cannot use the freedom to mention.

"I advise your endeavouring to qualify yourself for the native line of the service, by attention to the common language of the country, as soon as possible. An officer going into a Sepoy battalion, as of course will be your lot, perhaps soon, without understanding the language, is not only useless to the service, but makes a very ridiculous figure; and I strongly recommend, as an amusement in your leisure hours, the study of the Persian language: you will have a good deal of spare time upon your hands, and you may be assured you cannot employ it in any manner that is likely to be so profitable to yourself: sooner or later the knowledge of it always leads a man to some advantageous situation, and, at any rate, you will feel a satisfaction in having qualified yourself, and put it in the power of your friends to serve you, should an opening present itself. You will pardon the liberty I take in giving you these hints—I wish I had any thing better to give you."

A very deserving scholar of mine, who is now rising high in the civil service at Bengal, arrived during my residence there, after he had learned the Persian pretty well at home. At first, like all Persian students, he felt no inclination to study the Hindoo-stanee, and kept away from my class accordingly, though his pronunciation, as an orientalist, was very incorrect, and might to this day have remained so, in spite of his rapid advancement in both Persic and Arabic lore, had he not met with a circumstance that at once made him think and act boldly for himself. One day, our Persian tyro was desired by a constable, in the streets of Calcutta, to attend as one of the jury at a coroner's inquest, then sitting on the corpse of a person who had been killed on the road by a carriage driving over him. He obeyed the summons, but was surprised to find that the witnesses spoke nothing but Hindoostanee or Bungalee; and his Persian tongue proved of so little use, that it might as well have been in his pocket as his head, for not one of the party either spoke or understood that language. This accident opened the young man's eyes most effectually; he very ingenuously stated the case to me himself, and commenced the study of the Hindoostanee forthwith. His progress was rapid in it, and I have since learned, with great pleasure, that he finds his intercourse with the Hindoostanees very much facilitated, by the instructions he received from me, in the popular language of the East, without a real knowledge of which he would now be often puzzled to transact business of the first importance with the natives of India. This gentleman's case, and some others, have been produced by people who differ from me on this head, to show that the Arabic and Persian languages ought to be acquired first, as a necessary prelude to the Hindoostanee ; but the very same effects would follow, were proficients in the Hindoostanee to prosecute the study of those tongues ; with this difference in their favour, that in the mean time they could converse with the natives on all subjects in their vernacular speech, which alone is an object of great consequence to nineteen of twenty that proceed to the East Indies.

Nothing will accelerate the student's real progress so much as an early discrimination of words into Hinduwee, Farsee, and Uru-bee, which can in general be done by adverting properly to the alphabet of each language separately, when studying them in the Orthoepigraphical Ultimatum lately published, and noticed in page 50 of this Work. All words that have bh, kh, &c. d t r, must be exclusively Hinduwee ; those wherein ch p zh g e o occur, cannot be Urubee, while such as have s s h kh z z z z zh t a u i o f q never are Hinduwee. Certain letters, as well as particular forms, like tufseel, katib, zarib, &c. in page 413, commonly show that a word is Urubee, instead of Farsee or Hinduwee.

There is one difficulty in acquiring all languages, and particularly those of the East, against which the scholar ought early to be put on his guard, namely, the want of coincidence in many instances between his own and the Hindooostanee, contrasted with its actual existence in a number of others. Thus, uch-chha, good, in both, applies to men, things, and abstracts, as a good man, a good house, and a good notion, these can therefore bear the same adjective in Hindooostanee ; bareek, fine, on the contrary, are as much at variance as possible, unless when we restrict it to good alone. We say, a correct man, book, &c. ; the natives of India would, on the contrary, use a very different word for each to express the idea intended. We talk of strong tea, meaning astringent, bitter, &c. while by a strong horse, bodily strength is clearly implied ; but in Hindoo-stanee, were a person to call for muzboot cha, merely because he can say muzboot ghora, a strong horse, he would be considered a perfect ignoramus by his servants, who generally say kuwa cha, i. e. bitter or strong tea, taking the leading quality denoted in most things by our general word strong. These observations may be extended amazingly, but must now be left to the learner's own sagacity.

The ludicrous, dangerous, and obscene blunders that must be daily committed, by bad and careless pronouncers of the Hindoo-stanee, is certainly one of the principal reasons for its being so long neglected and superseded by the Persian, in our diplomatic viva voce intercourse with the Indian courts, where that language is colloquially as much foreign as French is now at St James's ; and I will hazard the assertion, that for one Hindoo-stanee who thinks in Persian, there are millions to whom it is quite unknown.

Among a thousand proofs on the intricacy of pronunciation, the following may suffice : bhaee, a brother; baee, a lady, courtezan, pox, rheumatism, &c.; bhuee, friend! buhee, she floated, also a ledger; bahee, she pleased; bihee, a fruit; buy, selling; bay!, a seller. In treaties with the Rajas, the word baee, meaning a lady of rank, may be met with distorted to bhy, probably from some misconception of the Persian diplomatist employed in the negotiation, on the true import and pronunciation of the word baee in question, though it seems clearly the feminine form, by elongation of ba, often bee, whence beebee, so well known in the East Indies.

While Hadley lived, there might have been some charity in permitting him to levy a small contribution on his countrymen destined for the East; but since his death, it is consistent neither with reason nor justice, to suffer in silence a continuance of the imposition, in every sense of the word, any longer. How any person can be yet found fool-hardy enough to risk successive editions of an erroneous and pernicious performance is wonderful; but it is still more so to find a single abettor of Hadley's jargonic labours, after so much has been done for these some years past by Marquis Wellesley in the cause of oriental literature, on sound principles, the very reverse of every thing yet published in Hadley's name. I feel no hesitation in here warning my readers against his catchpenny performance, unless they wish to purchase it for the sole purpose of exposing and detecting the string of errors and absurdities, of which it is composed, from one end to the other, by way of amusement during the passage to India, while contrasting the whole with this Essay of mine.

To vindicate the severity of my animadversions, I shall here insert my Hindoostanee translation of Hadley's famous story; but, in justice to me, no attempt will I hope be made to read it to a native, until my orthography has been acquired, by giving every letter of the story the very individual sound it possesses in my Hindee-Roman system. The reader will also be pleased to recollect, that the English of this tale will be found in the late Captain Hadley's book, for the style of which no body can justly hold me responsible, though I certainly have made the Hindoostanee agree with it as much as possible. As the subjunctive or conditional mood and its tenses to beginners are more formidable in appearance than reality, I would advise them to compare my mode of expressing these here with others, and to recollect the great use of the present participle or tense, without its auxiliary signs, on all occasions of this kind. Few people will conceive this sentence, "Had I then been in Europe, I would not have allowed my brother to come to India," so very simple as it in fact is. Suppose the reader tries his own skill in Hindoostanee, before he looks at my version of it—Jo muen cos wuqt wilayut men hota to upne bhaee ko Hindoostan men nu ane deta. An adept will at one glance tell why the conditional jo is used and cos inflected, the utility of the illative or consequential to, and the reasons for upne being preferred to mere, as well as the use and nature of the permissive compound ane deta. It is by such phrases as the above, that the natives can in a moment discover, whether the person speaking to them is well versed in their language or not. Several instances of the same nature occur in the story as I have given it, which the reader may put to the test of experience whenever he pleases, as I have not the smallest idea of flinching from any ordeal that may be proposed on this subject.

Urubee qışṣu Hindoostanee zaban men.

cos Padshah kee Betee uor con Shahzadon ka jo cos ke iṣhq ke mare sufur ko guye the.

Teen suo burus hoo,e ki ek buṛa duolutmund Padshah Man Singh nam, Bungale men tha ; oske lakh suwar, nuo suo oont, pundruh suo hathee ruhen, oskee ek buṛee khoob-soorut be-tee thee, jis kee khoob-soortee kee dhoom buhöt moolkon men puhconchee. Teen bha,ee Shahzade buhöt uch-chhe oospur aşiq hoo,e, uor oske bap se oskee shadee kee durkhwast dee—Padshah ne upnee lurkee se kuha—In teenon Shahzadon men se ek upne byah ke wastē pusund kuro,— Shahzadee ne bap ko juwab diya, we sub mojhe burabur huen jis se ap kee murzee ho ; ooshee se muen shadee kuroongee,—Tud Padshah ne upnee uql se yih munsoobu ḥuhraya.—Shahzadon se kuha, toom to meree betee ko chahte ho ; pur osne upnee pusund hum pur muoqoof rukhee hue ; mera ḥokm sōno—Toomhen teen muheene ka sufur kurna hogā ; is men jo ko,ee oske wastē buhöt uch-chha toohfu lawega, uor wooh toohfu os lurkee ke liye fa{idu rukhe, so,ee osse shadee kurega.—Khuer teenon juwan Pad-shah ko mojra kurke bahur nikle ; kisee sura,e men jake apas men yih qurar kiya; jub muheena tumam ho to isee sura,e men awen upna upna tohfu apas men dekhlawen.—Jo kuha so kiya, phir ooshee sura,e men ek jugih hoo,e, bure bha,ee ne ek doorbeen upnee ankha pur rukh-ke kuha, jo muen upnee pyaree ko dekh sukta tuo kya khosh hota etne men uchanuk pokar ootha, hue! hue! kya bora nuseeb hue humara, jis Shahzadee pur hum ne mohubbut se dil lugaya tha so wooh to isee dum murtee hue—Tis pur munjhla bha,ee bola dekho yih sheeshee is men imrut hue yuune abi huyat, jo is wuqt men awahan puhonch sukta to cose muen bhula kurta—Phir chhoete bha,ee ne khoshee se kuha lo dekho yih ghaleechu hue is pur jo hum buethen uor juhan kuheen jaya chahen, ugur lakh kos ho tuo bhee ja suken.—Teenon Shahzade qaleeche pur buethkur pul marte os ke khilwut khané men apuhonche; Shahzade ko to imrut ka ghoont peetehee aram hoo,a, charpa,ee pur oothon buethhee—Tub yih teenon apas men jhugurne luge uor Padshah ke roo bu roo guye—Upne sufur ka uhwal uor pichhlee huqeequt sub kuh sconae. Padshah ko ee dum choop ruha, phir sochkur kuha—such hue juese toomhare tohfe wuesee hee toomharee khoobiyan huen, kyoon ke doorbeen wala jo meree betee ko nu dekhta tuo oske hal kee khubur kyoon kur toom eehan miltee, ugur ghaleeche ka malik toom ko eehan nu lata, to kis turih ate: uor imrut bina toomhara ana bhee eehan koochh

kam ka nu hota;—is liye toomhen pañsa dalna iroo a Shahzadee ke waste.

The English version may be taken from Hadley, or the scholar can hereafter try his own hand upon this story, as advised in page 453, and on the plan proposed in xxxvii and 112.

While I shall consider it as a most laudable effort to compile a naval vocabulary, as recommended in page 392, the learner must recollect, that any thing of this sort will be very far beyond his strength in the language for two or three years, as a great deal of explanatory circumlocution must take place between the Lushkurees (Lascars) and himself, before any thing can be put down as certain in such a work. Both parties must be liable to innumerable misconceptions, that nothing but great skill in the Hindoo-stanee can avoid and rectify completely, which can be accomplished by an experienced linguist alone, who has sojourned some years at least in the East Indies. All questions or observations, abruptly introduced to the natives there, puzzle them amazingly, though the same remarks, cautiously made, and progressively unfolded to their view, often appear easy in the extreme, and lead to a mutual understanding immediately. So many materials have been collected in these sheets, to form a rational etymologist, that every acute mind will insensibly become one during his career in the Hindooostanee alone, more especially as most words in that significant speech may be traced very satisfactorily to their origin or root in the Sunskrit and other languages. This process will be quickly attained by considering the initial, medial, and final portions of words attentively, and at the same time adverting to the euphonic mutability of letters, in the various and ever varying forms they assume in all languages. I am not very certain that the words disease in English, and chapeau in French, will strike every eye at the first glance as compounds of dis, without, and ease; of chat, a cat, and peau, skin; but I may safely take it for granted, that my more intelligent readers will hardly dispute the point, when reminded, that we call a hat, a beaver, on similar grounds. In such etymologies, supposing even that they are false, the bare exercise of the juvenile mind upon them is productive of much benefit, giving to words a sort of local habitation and a name in the memory, which otherwise they cannot possess, and consequently too often pass away without leaving a vestige behind. Puhaṛ signifies a hill, but when we analyse it as puh, the dawn, and aṛ, concealing, covering, into the dawn-hider, which, in a flat country, it might be called, there is very little chance of our ever forgetting the word puhaṛ again, whether the deduction here be right or wrong. On similar principles puhul-wan, a champion, or the first man who comes out to brave the enemy to combat; even puhul, puhla, first, may be deduced from puh, since the dawn of day would very naturally present itself to the mind of man, as a primary point of time to reckon from. I am aware that etymological deductions have been laughed to scorn, from the frequent abuse of this rational exercise of our mental powers, but where is the art or science that has escaped gross perversion and misuse any more than etymology, which will, at no distant period, break through the gloom of prejudice and misconception, and, with the never-failing light of truth and reason, carry conviction to every thinking breast. The want of thought in most schools, is owing to the great stress which is very absurdly laid there upon memory only ; the mind and judgment are consequently as little improved, after some years of memorial drudgery, as if they really required no care or cultivation whatever ; the consequence naturally is, that few people retain, after five or six years, any more of their classical lore than barely enough to constitute them tolerable etymologists in their own tongue, though probably not a little defective in its grammar. Were youths very early taught English grammar and arithmetic ; were they often obliged to complete sentences, taken progressively from different authors, in which a few of the leading words were purposely omitted, they would much sooner reason and think seriously on their studies than people are aware of ; and their real proficiency would, in general, so far surpass our most sanguine expectations, that I would stake every thing on the successful issue of an experiment founded on such grounds. See the Second Volume when published, also pages xxxvii. 111, 112, and 137, of the present or First.

The references from one part of the Work to another, are often made with the view to impress the subject more completely on the mind, and, in some cases, to let the scholar reap the fruits of his own diligence, by discovering a few omissions, which he cannot possibly find out, unless he reads and weighs every part with more than ordinary assiduity. In this event he certainly will catch me apparently tripping, and be thereby enabled to correct some errors purposely left for the due exercise of youthful reflection upon them. It would answer a very good end, were the letter a in rat, night, pat, a leaf, written in pencil upon every beginner's thumb nail thus, awe, that he may not make a little animal in English out of the first, and an Irishman from the second monosyllable, by not calling them raut, paut, with the long awe, but rat, pat, like a true Englishman, which will never do in the Hindooostanee, where a broad spoken Caledonian Sawney is much more at home, and cannot fail soon to acquire a just pronunciation. I would also recommend my e to be nailed on the memory from the first, in the same manner as ai, that tel, oil, bed, a cane, may be read as tail, bade, not as tell, bed. The short à that I express by u, should be put down likewise, to prevent its ever becoming you or ω, which otherwise it will be very apt to prove in most mouths, till fairly broken in to this letter's common sound in sun, run, must, up, under, &c. In this manner the reader may have every troublesome letter in my Hindee-Roman scheme, literally at his finger-ends, before he leaves the alphabet, that they may never afterwards puzzle him in their application to the words of the language ; and as this is half the battle in acquiring the Hindooostanee, as a useful living tongue, I hope the hint will not be lost on those pupils who are resolved to learn it well, by studying the subject from page 2 to 50, as it deserves. The inspirited series in page 3 should be acquired by heart, till perfectly easy and familiar to the learner, who ought at once to call every letter by the simple names they bear in my scheme.

In acquiring the Hindooostanee, through the medium of these sheets, the learner will find it his interest to go entirely through them in a cursory manner, that he may immediately possess a tolerably accurate idea of their contents in general, previous to that particular, reiterated perusal, which alone is calculated to stimulate thought and reflection to an adequate comprehension of every essential part, which ought to be indelibly imprinted on the memory, rather as the produce of intellectual exertion, than of mere parrot-like efforts by a thoughtless school-boy.

During the first six months residence in India, I have seldom known the attendance of a native teacher or Moonshee upon a scholar produce much benefit; on the contrary, except in the mere pronunciation of a few letters, such interference generally does a great deal of harm. To those readers who will so far confide in my judgment, as to follow my advice, I shall candidly impart it by desiring them in the above period, or previous to their departure from home, to acquire, if possible, the difficult sounds from some of their well informed European friends, and at the same time to make their selves complete masters of every word and rule in this Volume at least, before they sit regularly down to study the language with any Moonshee. Indeed if they can prevail on their selves to include the Second Volume in this counsel, they never will have cause to repent such precaution, as it may save them much vexation, trouble, disgust, a great deal of time, and even some cash, on the score of native instructors, of whom not one in a thousand has sufficient ability and sagacity combined to conduct the studies of a student with propriety and effect in the Hindoostanee, or any other oriental tongue. If the assistance, however, of such men be in the beginning unavailing and tormenting, the aid of the vulgar among them, who have a smattering of English, is still more pernicious and delusive ; every scholar, therefore, who intends ultimately to make his self a proficient in Hindoostanee, will find it his interest in many respects to believe, that I expect no adequate advantages which can instigate me to mislead and deceive him in any pursuit of this kind, by communicating my undisguised sentiments of these people, on the present occasion, and by deprecating all such premature equivocal aid accordingly.

I may now conclude with the Advertisement, which has long been published with a list of my books, as a perusal of it may still remove some prejudices against the Hindoostanee, as the most useful language in the East.

That gentlemen going to India, under the auspices of the Honourable East India Company, may not plead ignorance of existing regulations concerning their servants' acquirement of the oriental languages, the following extracts from the public orders of the Governor-General in Council at Bengal, are now laid before them.

*Fort-William, Public Department, December 11.
1798.*

“ The Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council, considering that the due administration of the internal government and affairs of the Company in Bengal, requires that no civil servant should be nominated to certain offices of trust and responsibility, until it shall have been ascertained that he is sufficiently acquainted with the laws and regulations enacted by the Governor-General in Council, and the several languages, the knowledge of which is requisite for the due discharge of the respective functions of such offices : His Lordship in Council hereby apprizes the civil servants of the Company in Bengal, that from and after the 1st of January 1801, no servant will be deemed eligible to any of the aforementioned offices, until he shall have passed an examination (the nature of which will be hereafter determined) in the laws and regulations, and in the languages, a knowledge of which is hereby declared to be an indispensable qualification for such respective offices.

“ The languages, a knowledge of which will be considered requisite in the several offices in the judicial, revenue, and commercial departments, are—

“ For the office of judge, or register, of any court of justice, in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, or Benares, the Hindooostanee and the Persian languages.

“ For the office of collector of revenue, or of customs, or commercial resident, or salt agent, in the provinces of Bengal or Orissa, the Bengal language. *

* It has been generally allowed, that a judge in Bengal should also know the local dialect of that province ; nor can

"For the office of collector of revenue, or of customs, or commercial resident, or agent, for the provision of opium, in the provinces of Behar or Benares, the Hindooostanee language.

G. H. BARLOW,
Secretary to Government."

To British Officers, and Gentlemen of every description, proceeding to India.

Since the above orders were published, a more regular System of Oriental Education has been adopted by the Bengal government for the civil and military establishments at Bengal, Madras, and Bombay; in all of which, the Hindooostanee (or Moors) has been justly considered an object of primary acquisition and importance, and taught accordingly to all writers and cadets on their arrival in India.

A knowledge of the Hindooostanee is not only essential for every stranger in British India, who must have a personal commu-

it be denied, that the collectors, &c. there, would be greatly benefited by adding the Hindooostanee and Persian to the Bengal tongue.

nication with the natives at large, but, moreover, paves the way for the speedy acquirement of the Persian and other oriental tongues, in that country, where alone they can be generally learned, as local classic languages, through the medium of the Hindooostanee, which is the vernacular speech of the people, and necessarily of all the Moonshees, or native teachers, in Hindoo-stan.

In the armies, maritime, and domestic affairs of India, no other language than the Hindooostanee is universally spoken or understood; nor is any other required from the cadets now studying it and tactics at the military academies, lately established in the three presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

As several modern and ancient tongues may be deemed both useful and ornamental to men of liberal education in Europe, the Sunskrit, Persian, Arabic, &c. will prove equally so in India; but it should always be recollected, that to every person there, the Hindooostanee is no less indispensable, than a knowledge of English evidently is to the inhabitants of the United Kingdom; and consequently should be treated as the most requisite qualification for gentlemen bound to the East Indies; because they will sooner or later find, that, comparatively, the learned languages are secondary considerations, which may be afterwards acquired in India, with greater facility, less expence, and much more effectually, than they can yet be attained in this country.

If the above reasoning be founded in facts, well known and established for some years past both at home and abroad, the public may reasonably hope, that the oriental departments of the civil and military colleges at Hertford and Marlow, will speedily embrace the Hindoostanee as an object of the first consideration to the students destined for India; since we must admit, that however learned our British judges, civil and military officers, might otherwise be, they would all prove now-a-days wholly unfit for their respective offices in our country, without an adequate knowledge of their mother tongue; and the Hindoostanee being exactly to India, what the English language is colloquially to the United Kingdom, or what the Turkish is to that empire, the inference is so very plain, that he who runs may read.

To students who wisely commence their oriental career with the grand popular speech of India, which has hitherto been very undeservedly superseded by the Persian, while degraded and misrepresented under the absurd term of Moorish Jargon, or Moors, all the Works enumerated in the Catalogue will necessarily prove of the highest utility and importance, either at their outset or progress through the most useful, to beginners, of all the Eastern tongues.

Those Publications most essential are inserted first, that should circumstances render economy unavoidable, even in such purchases, three, four, or five only may suffice, till the student can in India more conveniently supply his self with the rest, also procureable there, as they become requisite in the course of his more advanced studies, at his own expence, when not less willing, and probably more able, to defray every progressive charge of this sort.

ORIENTAL LITERATURE.

BLACKS AND PARRY,

BOOKSELLERS TO THE HONOURABLE THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY,

No. 7. Leadenhall-Street,

Have remaining a few Copies of the following Works,

By JOHN BORTHWICK GILCHRIST, Esq. LL.D.

late Professor of the Hindoostanee Language, at the College, Fort William, Calcutta. The whole are particularly useful for Writers, Cadets, and Gentlemen going to the East Indies ; being the Books, by which alone the Grand Popular Speech of India (commonly, but erroneously, called the Moors) can be acquired, on the Grammatical Principles now adopted in the Hindoostanee Department of the College.

£. s. d.

The British Indian Monitor, Vol.I. 2 0 0

Dialogues, English and Hindoostanee, on Domestic, Military, and Medi-

HINDOOSTANEE

L. s. d.

cal Subjects, including Jennerian Instructions for the general diffusion of Vaccination among the Natives of India, - - - - - 0 10 0

The Hindoo-Roman Orthoepigraphical Ultimatum, exemplified in the Popular Story of Sukoontula Natuk, with a Discriminative View of Oriental and Occidental Symbols and Sounds, 0 4 0

Oriental Fabulist, or Polyglot Fables in English, Hindooostanee, Persian, Arabic, BrijBhakha, Bongla, and Sunskrit, all in the Roman Character, - 1 0 0

The Hindoo Story Teller, or Entertaining Expositor of the Roman, Persian, and Nagree Characters, in their Application to the Hindooostanee Language, 2 vols. - - - - 1 10 0

The Hindoo Directory, or Student's Introductor to the Roman Orthoepy and Orthography of the Hindooostanee Language, with the first and general Principles of its Grammar, - 0 15 0

The Hindoo Moral Preceptor, or Persian Scholar's shortest Road to the PUBLICATIONS.

L. s. d.

Hindoostanee Language, and vice versa ; being a Translation of Suuddee's celebrated Pundnamu, in Hindoostanee, with an English Version in Prose and Verse. This Work also contains a Comparative View of Persian and Hindoo-stanee Grammar, with Dialogues, Letters, &c. in both Tongues,	1 0 0
The Hindoo-Arabic Mirror, or improved Tabular View of Arabic Words in the Hindoostanee Language, -	0 5 0
Bagho Buhar, or the entertaining Story of the Four Friars, in Hindoo-stanee Prose, - - - -	1 0 0
The Rose Garden of Hindooostan ; a Translation of Suuddee's celebrated Goolistan, in the Grand Popular Speech of India, erroneously called the Moors, 2 vols. - - - -	1 10 0
Gooli Bukawulee, a celebrated Eastern Romance, - - - -	0 16 0
Tota Kuhanee, or Tales of a Parrot, in Hindoostanee, - - - -	0 10 0
Hindee-Roman Alphabetical Prospectus, - - - -	0 2 6

HINDOOSTANEE PUBLICATIONS.

L. s. d.

Indian Ethics; a Hindoostanee Translation of Hitoopudes, from a Persian Version of that far-famed Work, 10 16 0

Nusri Benuzeer, an enchanting Fairy Tale, in Hindoostanee Prose, from the Original, by Meer Husun, in Verse, 10 16 0

Hidayut col Islam, in Hindoostanee and Arabic, or the Moosulman's Common Prayer Book, in 2 vols.—vol. I. 10 15 . 0

The Hindee Manual, or Casket of India; a Miscellaneous Hindoostanee Compilation in the Persian and Nagree Characters, 10 00 0

A New Theory of Persian Verbs, with their Hindoostanee Synonimes, 0 12 0

THE RUDIMENTS OF
HINDOOSTANEE GRAMMAR.

THE present performance being expressly intended for the two-fold purpose of teaching any student to acquire an accurate idea of the grand popular language of Hindoostan, by solitary study himself, and of qualifying him also to instruct others, during a passage of some months to India ; it is my intention to be as explicit and intelligible on the subject of pronunciation as the nature of the work will admit. In this place it becomes my particular duty to warn the learner against the very common practice of neglecting to read the preface ; because a perusal of it alone can obviate some difficulties, which may otherwise occur in these sheets, and should be considered as the indispensable preliminary step to a due knowledge of the nature, utility, application, and extent, of their contents. After this warning, the scholar who shall despise it, must rather blame Himself than Me, for the obstacles he may yet encounter in the acquisition of a most useful tongue; which, I am convinced, may be attained with great accuracy from a work like the present, if due attention be given to the following rules or first principles of Hindoostanee pronunciation, elucidated and explained by the Roman Letters, so modified as to discriminate and express, not only the orthoepy, but the orthography of each word in the original character.

The Hindoostanee alphabet, like the excellent abecedarian system of the Hindoos, as far as the mere sounds of the letters are concerned, may be here arranged, as nearly as possible in their natural order of enunciation, organic affinity, and consequent interchangeability, for every purpose of pronouncing the language in India, with the utmost precision and effect; but without servilely following the Sunskrit alphabet in every part.

VOWELS.

	cull	kill	wool	progressively the shortest possible sounds of
3	u	i	oo
	call	there	keel	cool
5	a	e	ee	o oo
	chyle		cowl
2		ue		uo
	hull	young	word
3	hu	yu	wu semivowels.

13

by which the whole of the foregoing vowels may be thus

expirated, hu hi hoo ha he hee ho hoo hue huo

inspirated, uh ili coh ah eh eeh oh ooh ueh uoh liquified, yu yi yoo ya ye yee yo yoo yue yuo wu wi woo wa we wee wo woowue wuo

REMARKS.

The Roman letters, in the present scheme of writing the Hindooostanee, preserve almost the same powers they actually possess in the Latin language, agreeably to the Scottish pronunciation, and in the most common unexceptionable combinations and sounds in our own tongue.

No mute nor superfluous characters ever occur at the end, nor in any other portion of a word, and two Roman letters are never used to express a sound which can be conveniently effected by one. There are in all forty-nine useful combinations, letters or sounds in this language, agreeably to the foregoing and following sub-division of the whole, in which, for the conveniency of the learner, all the vowels are illustrated by examples; the consonants are in general self-evident; but, where this is not the case, the subsequent prospectus will remove every doubt on the subject.

u is invariably the short ā or u in up, fun, sun, never sounded like oo; purdu or părdă, a curtain, therefore, cannot be purdoo, nor can moonshee, a teacher, goolistan, moosulman, become, with any propriety, gullistan, mussulman, as they are generally pronounced by persons who have not learned those words correctly from my works, or in India.

In no instance can u have the sound of our pronoun you, because such a word in this work would be written as in page 3, yoo; the scholar must therefore never call u (my very short ā) either you or oo, yoo being in fact the name of the letter which has with us, very absurdly, the various powers of oo oo you, while in this work its name u, and sound ā, are alike consistent throughout.

i & oo being respectively the shorts of e ee, and o oo, is the reason of only three short to five long vowels above.

- a must, at first, be protracted like the word awe, until the learner's own ear can discriminate when and where the medial sound, between the extreme long ā and short ā or u, will be most proper.
 - e resembles ai in hair, pair, fair, pain, rain, &c. ; but the medial shades of this letter, and ee, till they fall into the short i, must be acquired by practice only; I have, therefore, as in u a, marked in my system merely the extremes of short and long vowels.
 - ee as in bee, see, lee, fee, heel, feel, keel.
 - o always very long.
 - oo the longer the better.
 - ue composed of ā and e, sounded like the organ of sight, eye, or as ui in guide, guise.
- As e and ee are to i, so are o and oo to oo in the Oriental tongues.

- uo reversed by us in our, how, &c.; which, formed agreeably to the order of the component parts of this diphthong, ought to be uor, huo; thus when ought clearly, on similar principles, to be written hwen, or hooen, as Dr Lowth expresses it.
- h the perfect aspirate, either before the vowel or after it, as ha ah, in both situations to be as distinctly expressed with the expiration ha, and the inspiration ah, as b is in ba ab both fully sounded and heard.
- When h follows any consonant so bha, ee, a brother, it should always have the full expiration, unless denoted by the subservient h of which we shall treat among the consonants, page 9.
- y like h and w, rather a consonant than a vowel, though i e and ee before each other, or a, &c. are very apt to become y in most languages, and vice versa.
- w as y and i e ee are to each other, so is w to o oo uo; the series yu yi yoo ya, &c. wu wi woo wa, &c. may therefore be also represented as iu eea ooa, &c. recollecting that the hiatus is generally prevented by the change to yu ya wa, &c.

CONSONANTS.

6	bu	bhu	pu	phu	fu	vu	}	labials.
	b	bh	p	ph	f	v	}
5	ngu	nu	mu	lu	ru		}	liquids and
	nk	ng	n	m	l	r	}	nasals.
6	tu	thu	du	dhu	ru	rhу	}	palatials.
	t	th	d	dh	r	rh	}
4	tu	thu	du	dhu			}	dentals.
	t	th	d	dh			}
4	su	shu	zu	zhu			}	sibilants.
	s	sh	z	zh			}
4	tshu	tshhu	dzhu	dzhhu			}	dento-
	ch	chh	j	jh			}	sibilants.
7	ku	khu	khu	gu	ghu	ghu	qu
	k	kh	kh	g	gh	gh	q gutturals.

—

36 consonants } distinct sounds in the Hindoo stanee alphabet, the name 13 vowels &c. } and power of which individually are as much alike as possible;
 — being in all } our letter h or aitch, as it is most absurdly called, being simply termed hu, a breathing, 49 letters with } du also standing for delta, gu for gama, &c. though the particle kar may be subjoined to the whole; so ukar, ikar, akar, &c. bukar, hukar &c. as in the Hinduwee alphabets.

From the foregoing paragraph the reader will now perceive, that the series bu bhu pu phu, &c. ngu nu mu lu ru, &c. exhibits the name of each letter unconnectedly as such, while b bh p ph ng n m l r shows their sound or power connectedly, in the formation of words. Among the vowels the name and power may always be alike, but with the consonants it must, for obvious reasons, be otherwise, as here illustrated from the Oriental alphabets, which, like our own, require one vowel at least to give utterance to the consonants, as their name implies.

The consonants might be named by any of the vowels as auxiliaries, as well as by u, were not this the shortest sound of a, invariably inherent in the whole of the Nagree or Hindoo-stanee consonants. The vowel might also stand on either side subserviently, as bu, ub; da, ad; fi, if; pee, eep, with sufficient effect in any uniform system. Our alphabet partakes of both principles, as bee, dee, ef, el, perhaps to distinguish the mutes from the liquids, among which ess might be included, were this at the best, either a very consistent or convenient arrangement in any alphabet.

The ten expirated letters, bh ph th dh th dh chh jh kh gh, seem peculiar to the Hindoos, of which we can form no other idea, than by frequently repeating the following, and such words as I have exhibited them, in this place: viz. a-bhor, a-dhere, u-phill, chur-chhill, nu-thook, mil-khouse, do-ghouse, or by contracting them thus, bhor, dheer, thook, chhill, khuos, ghuos, &c. and ringing the changes with this aspirated pronunciation, until it become quite familiar to the scholar, which it must be in the course of two or three days devoted to this essential exercise, in the very threshhold of Oriental orthoepy, to prevent the most dangerous mistakes.

The expirates kh gh above must be most carefully distinguished from the gutturals kh gh explained below, because the h in these last and sh zh ch is a mere subservient to express a sound for which we have no character in our alphabet, not less defective in ch sh zh, though possessing the simple character j to denote the compound sound of dzh.

n as a nasal before j k g and t or d, requires no particular mark, sounding exactly like our own letters nj ng nk nt, &c. in change, rung, sunk, want, &c. but elsewhere it is the French nasal when marked n. Preceding the labials it becomes, as in most languages, m.

r should be every where expressed by a perfect vibration of the tip of the tongue on the upper teeth, as in the word l'amour, which few Englishmen can express well, though the Scottish and Irish find no difficulty whatever.

t & d are formed by carrying the tongue forcibly against the roof of the mouth, while articulating the common dentals t and d of our own alphabet, which are as much softer than t d, as these are harder than the oriental t d, formed with a slight protrusion of the tongue between the teeth. Tub, duck, do ; tube, duke, dew, due, will convey a tolerable idea of the difference between palatials and dentals in the eastern tongues ; the t d of the four last, even with us, being much softer than in the three first : for in fact some people seem to soften the liquified d and t with us, so far as to say, tshube, jook, jew for due, &c. The lisp of children, and others, will convey a tolerable notion of the very soft dentals d t in question, as essential sounds in the Oriental tongues, which require the utmost assiduity and practice before the learner can perfectly comprehend or express them in the Persian and Hindoostanee languages.

d frequently becomes a very harsh palatal r ; thus ghora, a horse, properly ghoda, though very seldom so pronounced.

th in thin and thine does not occur in the alphabets of India, though the Arabs appear to possess similar sounds among their letters ; th is therefore uniformly as in hothouse, quasi ho-thuos, according to my system in page 9, already explained.

s sh z zh are to each other as they stand in sin, shin, seize, seizure or seezhyoor, the h here being a mere subservient letter, as in gh kh ch, with no aspiration whatever.

ch j called dento sibilants to shew their component parts as dentals and sibilants, which might be denoted by tsh dzh, were these not more complex than our own soft ch in church (tshurtsh), j in judge (dzhudzh), to which, if due attention be paid now, the reader will never hereafter frenchify the j of just. (dzhust) to zhust, as he will probably do at first, until frequently apprised that our j in jam (dzham) is composed of the dental d and sibilant zh, stated above.

kh is the rough guttural k pronounced in the very act of hawking up phlegm from the throat, which becomes tremulous and ruffled, while the root of the tongue is with it forming the sound required. This letter is familiar enough to the Scottish and other northern nations, but very troublesome to the English, who should first try it in mukh, lukh, nukh, &c. before attempting it in khum, khul, and so on.

gh is to g gh, what kh is to k kh; consequently, the guttural Northumberland r, heard in the act of gargling the throat with water, as ghu, ghu, ghu; mugh, lugh, rugh, are much easier than ghum, ghul, &c. which learners will confound with gum, gul, &c. until the burr in the throat, as it is called, be duly acquired from some person who has this peculiarity, and who would call the word reolam, ghcolam, a slave, very properly, instead of golam, as those do who have not acquired the gh accurately.

q or our k articulated by raising the root of the tongue simply towards the throat, which must not be in the smallest degree ruffled, as in forming kh, or gh. The q may consequently be styled a deep but liquid lingual letter, produced by clinking the root of the tongue against the throat, so as to cause a sort of nausea. The same sound will be recognized when pouring water in a particular manner from a long necked guglet, as the liquid decanting may represent the lower part of the tongue acting upon the throat or neck of the vessel in question, unruffled by the water gushing from it. A few efforts will soon fix the q in the memory and on the organs of speech, perhaps at the expence of a slight nausea at first.

The vowels, particularly such as are homogeneous, either in quantity or quality, are very interchangeable; and this holds good among the consonants also, even sometimes where affinity is not very striking, as in y j and g, l n and s, m b and w.

The learner should recollect that c is never used but as a subservient in the combination tsh ch already explained.

To prevent letters coalescing, the , is often inserted between them, that ee oo nk ng sh zh may be distinctly articulated, when necessary, as two separate sounds; so, ee oo nk ng sh zh.

The number of syllables in a word is commonly regulated by the number of vowels. When two consonants intervene, they should be divided, ad-mee, a person; but if one only, it goes to the last, pa-nee, water, ba-hur, out, sa-yu, shade. This holds good likewise when the consonant is exspirated, whence du-khun, the south, not duk-hun, unless to teach a beginner to sound the h in this word, that he also may not miscall it deccan! as is generally done. Sometimes two consonants meet as in English, gurm, warm, fuṣl, season, swamee, lord, pran, life, though among the illiterate pronounced rather as gurum, fuṣul, puran, &c.

The Prospectus of such letters and combinations, agreeably to their invariable power in the Hindooostanee language, as can be farther illustrated by English examples, and which the reader might still otherwise mistake, may have its uses in this introduction. I have therefore exhibited it, in so obvious a manner, that no one acquainted with the English language can possibly misconceive the particular sound adopted from that tongue.

PROSPECTUS.

y	yu		yawn, yoke, your, &c.
	sh		shin, ship, rush.
the French	j or g	{ zh	pleasure, i. e. pleazhure.
	tsh ch		church, rich.
	dzh j		jugular, judge, (juj).
	ph		uphold, uphill.
	g hard	{ always sounded as in	jugular.
	nk		sink, brink,
	ng		rung, sung.
	n̄		sans, bon, in French.
	th		hot house, nut hook, as the th of thin and thine are not used in Hindoo- stanee, see page 11.

For the vowels and diphthongs consult page 3, and always consider u, short ā; a, long ā; i short, and ee long, in every situation; while the two diphthongs, ue and ou, are ever to be treated as the ui or y and ou in guide, gued; dry, drue; our, uor. Sans and bon will shew the sound of the nasal n̄, which is so common in the Hindoostanee.

U in purdu, a curtain; a in rat, night; e in bed, (baid) scripture; ue in uesa, so; i in mila, found; the hard g in gunge, o ganges! and perhaps a few others, are very liable to be misconceived by a mere English reader, who does not seriously attend to the fixed invariable power of such letters in pages 3, &c. q. v. before he attempts to derive any real benefit from the present plan; I am therefore under the necessity of inculcating again and again the present unavoidable retrospection to the letters and their sounds, to prevent all future disappointment on that head, if possible, before the student can commence the reading of sentences or dialogues, with any satisfaction to himself or advantage to those who may hear him.

Recapitulation, or General Rules for the Accurate Pronunciation of the Letters, intended chiefly for the guidance of those Scholars who may wisely confirm their own Knowledge, by generously instructing others in the grand Colloquial Language of the East, previous to, or during the Passage to India.

1. EVERY short vowel must be constantly sounded as short as possible.

2. All the long vowels in every situation ought, especially at first, to be pronounced as full, long and broad, as the learner can well sound them.

3. The soft d t r cannot be softened too much, and the harsh d̄ t̄ r̄ can hardly appear enough so, till their opposite natures be sufficiently understood from practice, and a sedulous retrospection to page 10, where the nature of these letters is more fully discussed.

4. Those, viz. d t r are formed by bringing the tip of the tongue forwards, almost between the teeth, as in due, tube, rue, while these, d̄ t̄ r̄, require that organ to be curved backwards and then struck against the roof of the mouth, as in dull, tub, rub. The first are much softer and the last a great deal harsher than our English d t r.

5. The expirated bh chh dh, &c. must all be very distinctly heard, with a full breathing of the h, as b-ha, ch-ha, to prevent innumerable mistakes of the most offensive nature. Whoever shall rapidly pronounce our words, abhor, adhere, for some time, and during reiterated efforts all at once, shall drop the initial a, he will readily say bhor, dhore, with the requisite expire, in its proper place. This one effort is alone applicable to all the other aspirable consonants, noted in page 8, and with the most certain effect, throughout the Hindoostanee tongue; but the student should cautiously shun the common error of converting these monosyllabic expirates, b̄ha ch̄ha, &c. to such dissyllables as buha chuha, &c. lest he frequently confound one thing with another, and be often vexed, disappointed, or abashed by his own blunders, from bad pronunciation entirely. Phūn, a snake's crest, has the expirated h as clear and as immediately after the p, as r is in prune: phun, therefore, by an intelligent scholar, cannot possibly be confounded with fun, art, or pun, because, added to the remark just made, he will recollect, that in page 4, it is said, two letters are never used to express a sound which can be done by one.

6. The above aspirated letters have been called expirates, to distinguish them from the inspirates buh, chuh, duh, and a thousand others. The aspirate here closes the syllable, and is consequently formed by a sort of inspired catching of the breath, much more difficult to learners than those described in Rule 5. Unless this final aspirate or inspirate be carefully attended to, in words like shah, a king, mah, month, no scholar can readily put such nouns in the Hindostanee oblique plural, shahon, mahon, with the h, now in its exspirated form. The inspirate under discussion may be acquired and retained, by saying aha aha aha, suddenly dropping the final a, but preserving the h as forcibly as inspiration can express it in ah oh eh, &c. without giving the h an Irish or Scotish twist to the guttural kh, which many are apt to do in uhmuq, a fool, by calling this ukhmuq, instead of uh-muq, with a smooth, distinct, inspirated h, which alone never can have the smallest guttural rough sound, though as a subservient it certainly makes k and g so, in mukh-mul, velvet, rugh-but, desire.

7. The gutturals kh and gh are best acquired by saying ku, khu, khu, (the last as it were with an effort to hawk up tough phlegm from the throat) gu, ghu, ghu, (the last in an effort to gargle the throat forms the Northumberland
r) because as ghu is to gu, so is khu to ku. The difficulty must now be much decreased to every person who possesses sagacity enough to discriminate the sounds produced in hawking up viscid phlegm from the throat, and in gargling it with water, or in an attempt to do so, by imitating what is termed the rattle in the throat

of a dying man. The true discriminative articulation of kh and gh depends on ruffling the throat in a particular manner, while prolatting k and g respectively. Experience has taught me, that kh and gh closing a syllable, of which the initial is one of the liquids or nasals, are more readily pronounced by beginners than vice versa; thus, rukh is easy, compared to khur, and rugh to ghur, mukh to khum, or mugh to ghum, and so on. If the proper vibration be given to r irr before ugh, the gh very naturally becomes the Northumberland r in rugh rogh, &c. as any one may try (who has not the burr naturally, and who can pronounce the r as directed in page 10, before the gh explained in page 12.) with the greatest success, though it may still be some time before ghur can be enounced otherwise than gur. Rugh rugh rugh, ghur ghur ghur, often repeated, may remedy the defect soon.

8. Though q be called a guttural, I would rather name it, a linqual letter, because its formation is almost entirely owing to the root of the tongue being raised to the roof of the palate or throat, which last is preserved perfectly unruffled in this operation, whence the real difference between q and the other gutturals already enumerated. Water poured in a particular manner from a long necked guglet, or the hiccup of a man more than half seas over, will, I believe, yield a sound very near the q, which, when duly articulated, has the peculiar property of exciting a nausea in the learner. When followed by u the scholar must never, as in English, change u to w, but call words like qulum, a pen, qazee, a judge, kulum, kazee, never qwulum, quazee, &c. nor queer, pitch, queer, but keer, or rather queer, qulum, &c. with the lingual q above described alone.

9. An anxiety to pronounce certain letters remarkably well, is very apt in beginners, not only to have an opposite effect, but also to make them aspirate letters which are not aspirated, such as ch sh zh d t, or to change our common gutturals k g to the rough kh gh and q, more especially when the organs of speech have been just employed in the formation of the q, &c. as in the words, qazee ka ghcolam ghur men hue, the judge's slave is at home. It is ten to one but ka ghur will become qa ghur, if the learner have by this time a perfect idea of the foregoing q and gh, as distinct sounds from k and gh. This tendency, and a trick of reading words like nisbut, relation, qismut, fortune, as if written nizbut, qizmut, should be carefully guarded against and corrected immediately, otherwise these bad habits will be confirmed with the most pernicious consequences, in spite of all my observations on the consistent uniformity of the Hindoo-Roman Alphabet, in which s never can express the power of z, though constantly doing so in our own absurd system of orthography, disgraced with sounds for which there are no characters, and with letters that possess no fixed sounds, whence a species of polygraphic orthoepy has arisen, more like the Babylonian confusion of tongues than a regular scheme, well calculated for the comprehension of juvenile minds during their first efforts on the very rudiments of vernacular speech and grammar.

10. Beginners must necessarily pronounce with great difficulty and harshness at their outset, but their own ears soon become the best correctors of such an evanescent fault, which has its uses even, and need not give the smallest real uneasiness to the learner, though it may for a time furnish fools with something to laugh at, instead of themselves, when the tables are turned completely upon them, in conversing with the natives, who, to a bad pronouncer, might bring keera, a worm or snake, for kheera, a cucumber; or gora, a European servant, instead of ghora, a horse.

11. In strict orthoepic propriety, the diphthongs ue (y) ue (ou) should be expressed by ui, uo, did not this mode militate considerably against Oriental orthography, with which, from an enlarged and progressive knowledge of the languages, we are strongly induced to conform, for reasons that need not be stated in this place.

12. The letters ḥ, ḫ, are rather nominal deviations from ḍ, ḍh, than formal characters in the Nagree system, still there is sufficient cause to preserve them, as distinct symbols, in a scheme of this kind.

13. Whoever recollects, that y, though called a semivowel, is now always treated as a consonant in my system, can meet with no trouble in pronouncing kiya, paya, beebyon, as ki-ya, pa-ya, beeby-on, nor in reconciling these with keea, pa-e-a, beebee-on, especially if he will at the same time consult the rules on the mutation of letters, in pages 6, 33, and 35.

14. In this work our English u in up, sup, cup, is, for cogent motives, still preserved to denote the shortest sound of a in America, (Umuriku) Calcutta, (Kulkuttu), I must consequently beseech the learner to observe, once for all, that in my mode, position does not alter the power of a letter, therefore purdu, (pärdä) a curtain, cannot become purdoo (pardoo) except by that perverseness and irregularity, which disgrace almost all the alphabets in the world: a censure from which the most philosophical of the whole, the Sunskrit even, is not altogether exempt.

15. The name of every letter comes as near its actual power as possible, whence a, bu, pu, lu, hu, are much more consistent and definite, than our be, pe, ell, aitch, or the Greek alpha, beta, &c. When consonants unite to form words, or appear as finals, the short inherent vowel is dropt before other vowels, whence bd in the Oriental characters is simply bud, not budu, and bad is neither bu-ad nor bu-adu, which it must be, were the names of separate letters in any language ignorantly confounded with their mere power, in the composition of words.

16. The number of syllables in a word, for the most part, depends on the number of vowels, as a.o come! ja.o, go! When two consonants occur between two vowels, they generally are divided, but when one is found, it is most convenient to give it to the last syllable, as bur-tun, a vessel, pa-nee, water, a-ya, came, pa-ya, found. The Arabic and Persian often have final consonants without an intermediate short vowel, as well as the Hindoos and ourselves, who admit of this in the beginning of words also, although no such coincidence as the last can occur in Arabic or Persian. Gurm, usl, hurn, buzm, rusm, are instances of the first species, swamee, kripa, of the last, all to be treated, as we would such combinations in our own language.

17. Those learners who content themselves with dialogues are not very likely to have much aid from Moonshees, or native teachers, in acquiring the true pronunciation; they will therefore do well to read the sentences aloud to themselves, after being thoroughly versed in the rules now delivered, as it may be thus in their power to acquire a very correct, distinct, and pleasing enunciation, during their progress through this work. Scholars who commence reading the language in the Oriental characters, will do well to persevere in acquiring a just pronunciation from my Roman Orthography, as I have seen some instances of a relapse to very great inaccuracy in good pronouncers, by a premature and ill judged preference of the Persian character.

When the foregoing principles and observations are well understood by the reader, he can meet with no obstacle in learning the sounds of the Hindoostanee alphabet; and after acquiring them completely, he should commence reading aloud every day, for one month, a few paragraphs of English, according to the plan laid down here for the Oriental tongues ; supposing his own language a piece of Persian or Hindoostanee, in which he must forget of course, in many words, the English orthoepy entirely. It will very soon be discovered, that where our letters and sounds follow any fixed general principle, they will commonly coincide exactly with my scheme, and vice versa. Mushroom, British, just, church, such, king, sung, sink, see, boor, fling, swim, war, " and thousands more, would be so written and pronounced in the Eastern tongues ; but to enable the scholar to read this last sentence according to the system proposed, I would be under the necessity at first of writing it in our character thus : "

Aund thō,usaunds mōrai wōuld bai sō writ-tain aund prōnō,unsaid in thai ai,austairn tōng-gu,ais (or -guiss, -gys) but tō ainaublai thai stshōlaur tō raiaud thiſ laust saintainsai akkōr-ding tō thai syustaim prōpōsaid, i wōuld bai undair thai naisaissityu aut furst ōf writing it in uor tshaurauktairs thus.

Such an exercise, for the period mentioned above, would confirm the learner's pronunciation more than any thing I know, and his own ears would, in a few days, teach him to call a invariably awe, never ai; e not ee but ai; u short ā, in no instance oo nor yoo; ch always tsh, and j dzh, &c. In the same manner he would acquire a habit of pronouncing the very soft dentals of due, duke, tube properly, as none of the very harsh sort d̄ t̄ can occur in any English paragraph, provided he at the same time apply closely to the Hindoostanee alphabet, as illustrated and explained in this section of the work. To the man who can forget his own language so far as to bend its sounds accurately to my scheme of letters, we may safely submit the following Hindoostanee story, first in my way, and then in that which many other people would at once adopt, without having studied the subject so long and deliberately as I have done.

Ek badshah ne upne wuzeer se poochha, ki
sub se bihtur mere huqq* men kya hue, urz kee, ki udl kurna uor ruueyut ka palna.

* The final duplicate here and in hudd, limit, kiss, sen-

Aick baudshauh nai apnai vizier sai puchhan, ke sub sai behtur mairai huck maing kea hy,
 arz kee, ke adl kurnau cur riot kau paulnau.

If these two, and the English sentence in page 26, read as it would be pronounced in Hindoostanee, do not convey my meaning to the reader, I shall be at a loss how to make it more obvious to him by any written instructions ; he should therefore study this part well before he condemns it either as obscure or unintelligible, and he will assuredly perceive that each perusal of the whole will render it more and more familiar to himself, and to the capacity of any person whom he may thus wish to instruct in the accurate pronunciation or vital portion of a living tongue, without which, profound Oriental learning, for all the useful purposes of life in India, will prove nought but vanity and vexation of spirit. In the belief that the subsequent extract on this theme, from the Antijargonist, may still render the subject more evident, it is herewith submitted to the reader.

The following English words attending to their true pronunciation, would, agreeably to my orthography, be written thus :

sation, with a few more, is preserved agreeably to the Arabic orthography, but one only of these finals can be pronounced.

bare, I would write, ber	gore, I would write, gor
age - - - - ej	ore - - - - or
bile - - - - buel	sage - - - - sej
hall - - - - hal	useful - - - yoosfool

The above words the learner should frequently repeat over, to accustom his eyes and his ears to the orthography of the Hindoostanee; and to the fixed sounds given to the English symbols, used here to express the words of that language.

For his further exercise and amusement, I shall here add an example of Addison's well known simile of the Angel,—first, according to our current English orthography,—secondly, according to the Hindoostanee orthography used here,—thirdly, according to that of the late Sir William Jones,—and, lastly, like the sentence in page 26, to confirm the practice there recommended, as the best I can devise for impressing on the reader's memory my mode of reading English, as so much Hindoostanee in the Hindee-Roman alphabet.

“ So when some Angel, by divine command,
 “ With rising tempests shakes a guilty land,
 “ Such as of late o'er pale Britannia past, “ Calm and serene he drives the furious blast,

" And, pleas'd th' Almighty's orders to perform,
 " Rides in the whirlwind and directs the storm."

This, according to my orthography, would be written as follows :

So hwen sum enjel, bue divuen kumānd,
 With ruezing tempests sheks a gilti land,
 Such az uv let or pel Britanyu past,
 Kam and siren hee druevz thi fyooryus blast,
 And, pleezd th' almuetiz ordurz too purform,
 Ruedz in the hwurlwind and duerekts thi storm.

But the learner will please to observe the sounds expressed above by a e, and th, not being found in the Hindoostanee system, do not properly belong to mine, though necessarily inserted in this specimen.

The following example of the late Sir William Jones's orthographical system is exhibited in the Asiatic Researches, Vol. I. page 33.

So hwen sm enjel, bai divain cămánd,
 Widh raisin tempests shécs a gilti land,
 Sch az áv lét ór pel Britanya pást,
 Cálm and sirín hi draivz dhi fyúras blást,
 And, plíz'd dh' álmaitiz árderz tu perfórm,
 Raids in dhi hwerlwind and dairekts dhi stárm.

As in page 26.

Sō hwain sōmai aung-gel, byu divinal kōmmaund,
 With rising taimpaists shaukais au gueltyu laund,
 Such auss of lautai òair paulai Britaunniau paust, Kaulm aund sairainai hai drivais thai furious blaust, &c.

A tolerably correct pronunciation of the under-mentioned Hindoostanee words might perhaps by many be acquired, if written agreeably to the uncertain orthography of the last column here:

bare (well)	thus,	baurey	gor (grave)	thus,	goar
age (before)	-	augey	or (a side)	-	oar
buel (a bull)	-	biel	sej (a bed)	-	sidge
hal (state)	-	haul

But how should we find symbols to express, agreeably to the analogy of English pronunciation, such words as the following: aya, came, sayu, shade, seahee, ink, or how distinguish gunge, ganges, from gunj, a market?

Certainly no two people would agree in regard to their pronunciation. The first three words would prove difficult in the extreme, and if the g were ever allowed the soft sound of j, it would often prove equivocal. Hence the necessity for a fixed system, adapted as nearly as possible to the existing sounds of the Hindoostanee language. By a little attention to the scale of letters in pages 3 and 7; by noting that the power of each letter in the Hindoostanee, is in all cases the same; by recollecting they never admit of a deviation in sound, however various the combination, (excepting in the instances of ee oo oo ch gh kh sh zh, provided for in the scheme already noticed); and by remembering that no letter is useless or mute, (saving the few orthographic examples by the note in page 27, for which an adequate reason will be assigned hereafter, when we treat of Arabic forms);—the pronunciation will come perfectly easy in a short time, thus, aya, sa yu, séāhee, and gungé with the hard g in both instances, as if written gung-gé. But a, being in the Hindoostanee invariably broad, as in hall, e long as in vérité, and u short as in sun, the prosodial marks, (-) broad, (^) long, and (◦) short, for those letters are unnecessary; and the dieresis, or division mark (,), is more frequently used here to facilitate the progress of a mere beginner, than from any necessity for it in a,o, ja,o, ao,jao, as these, by a person conversant in my system of orthography, would be pronounced exactly the same in both cases, though so,o, sleep, bo,o, sow, muz,hub, religion, and some others, require it as marked in page 13, that o o z h may not become oo zh.

General Rules for the Mutation of Letters.

1. The short vowels are all more or less liable to convertibility, not only with each other, but with long vowels and diphthongs also, especially when these are homogeneous. The long vowels are in like manner convertible among themselves.

2. Diphthongs on similar principles are interchangeable together, and with long vowels also; nay, they occasionally are permutable with the shorts, as already stated.

3. When e ee o or oo is followed by another vowel, a considerable change generally occurs, by the two first becoming y iy, and the last w oo v, or, in other words, these letters often become in ordinary discourse e ee o oo.

4. The vowels and semivowels, nay, some of the consonants, are met with interchangeable, particularly o oo for the labials b w, &c. yu and j.

5. Independent of the permutability of semivowels and liquids among themselves, h l become s; m changes more rarely to b w.

6. The consonants are more subject to change in their own immediate series, and a few even go beyond this, as j and g, ch and k, w and yu, t and r, d j and z, s and kh.

7. W reduplicated, or followed by i ee, is very often expressed as v; a sound which the illiterate in India seldom acquire.

8. One curious vowel consonant, viz. uen, is generally lost in the diacritical point or vowel on, before, or after it, among those who speak Hindoostanee without adverting to the power of this most equivocal letter, which we and the Hindoos, from the nature of our abecedarian system, must regard as a vowel, though the Arabs consider it always as a consonant.

9. Such changes as do not fall under the above rules must be treated rather as anomalies, to be acquired by extensive practice hereafter, than as objects worthy of much attention now; some of them, in fact, depending on the ignorance, affectation, or presumption of the natives, who frequently are desirous of appearing very profound adepts in the Hindoostanee, by introducing the nasal n, or giving the common letters k g w j s the more learned sound of kh gh v z sh, where these do not exist.

Examples of the above Rules.

1. Hurn, hirn, a deer; nimuk, numuk, salt; sur, sir, head; mojh, mijh, me; jul, jol, water; buttee, batee, a candle; tup, tap, a fever; phir, pher, again; idhur, eedhur, hither; chukhna, cheekhna, to taste; puhla, puhila, puehla, first; buhlana, buhilana, buehlana, to amuse; kheenchna, khenchna, khuenchna, to pull; bar, ber, at time; rikabee, rikebee, a dish; burabur, burobur, equal; thaasna, thoosna, to cram; age, agoo, before; peechhe, pachhe, behind; ko, koo, for; kyoon, kyon, why. Innumerable other instances might be produced here, and after all the examples, were that now requisite in these pages.

2. Bhue, bhuo, fear; suo, sue, a hundred; luo, lue, love; khuemu, khemu, kheemu, a tent; uor, ar, more; foolad, folad, fuolad, steel; biluor, biloor, bilor, crystal; kuon, kon, who? muel, mul, filth.

3. Ke,a, kya, what; keea, kiya, made, did; ae,a, aya, came; keon, kyon, why; sa,e,u, sayu, shade; Hindoo,ee, Hinduwee, Hindvee, Indian; tulowa, tuloo,a, sole of the foot; joo,a, jowa, dice, a game, hazard, &c.

4. Yumna, jumna, the river so called; yog, jog, junction; mapna, napna, to measure; neela, leela, blue; deewar, deewal, a wall; seb, seo, an apple; deo, deb, dew, a demon, god; suro, surv, surw, the cypress, &c. bundu, burdu, a slave; puhinna, puhirna, to put on.

5. Deemuk, deewuk, a white ant; mah, mas, a month; Bumbu_{ee}, Mumbu_{ee}, Bombay; nikulna, nikusna, to issue.

6. Suñskrit, shunskrit; khidmut, khizmut, kismut, duty; qumeş, kumeez, a shirt; zumeen, jumeen, land; bheegna, bheejna, to wet; chhima, khima, pardon; bhasha, bhakha, speech; dokhna, dosna, to blame; duhez, juhez, a dowry; khurj, khurch, expence; mushuylchee, musaljee, link boy; bawurchee, baburchee, baburjee, a cook; duuwā, daya, a claim; badshah, padshah, a king; peel, feel, an elephant; huwelee, huvelee, hubeelee, a mansion; huwaldar, havildar, a serjeant; butuk, butukh, a duck; ubtuk, ubtug, yet; deg, degh, a pot; aqa, agha, master; nuqshu, nukhshu, a plan; fikr, fiqr, thought; bed, bet, a cane; baroot, barood, powder; kaṭta, cuts; buethta, sits, and such verbs often become karta, buerhta, &c. ghorā, ghoda, a horse. In fact, there would be no end of the examples which might be collected under this rule, as the learner may see by consulting the large Grammar.

7. Nuwwab, nuvab, nabob! fidwee, fidvee, liege; huwelee, huvelee, mansion; nuwees, nuvees, writer; wis, vis, that.

8. This can be illustrated by practice only, among the endless instances which must every where occur of the extraordinary letter uen, when represented by u, just before or after any vowel. It is for the most part in Hindoostanee so entirely mute, as not to be distinguished from its accompanying long or short vowel, and following u as in buud, after; luul, red; ruuna, beautiful; tuureef, praise; mushuul, torch; the coalescence of the two shorts u and ü naturally produces the long sound awe, as bad, lal, rana, tareef, mushal, in the Hindoostanee mode of pronouncing these words, less accurate however than the uu now adopted. See pages 43, 44.

9. Among these we may enumerate guo, ga,e, a cow; nuo, nue,a, new; yuk, yek, ek, one; ufyoon, ufeem, opium; mueyoor, mor, a peacock; nam, na.on, name; roothna, roosna, to fret; kumul, kuñwul, the lotos; bhejna, bezna, to send, and some of those under 6 above.

When the foregoing rules, with their examples, are well understood, and when the scholar can extend them as far as they will go, he must also advert to those changes which depend upon the expansion, contraction and inversion of words in most languages, and in none more frequently than in the Hindoostanee. To assist him in this necessary exercise, the following instances may suffice. Tegha, tegh, a sword; umma, ma, mother; farigh khut̄ee, farkhut̄ee, a release; dust-khut̄, duskhut̄, signature; suwar, uswar, a trooper; wabustu, awabust, dependents; puhonchna, chuhonpna, to arrive; m̄ōulluq, umulluq, suspended; fuṣeel, sufeel, a rampart; durukht, durkut, a tree; inṣaf, nisaf, justice; qooful, qoo-luf, a lock; fuleetu, futeelu, a match or wick; hawun, humam, a mortar; and others too numerous for insertion. The scholar cannot pay sufficient attention to the great tendency which words in the Hindoostanee have to assume or drop short vowels, that occur or should be omitted between two consonants, such as usul, nuql, Urbee, wastu, for Urubee, wasitu, usl, nuql, &c. &c. but particular instances would be endless.

General rules for speaking to the Natives of India, with the greatest chance of understanding them and of being understood, after the learner has acquired an accurate idea of the sounds of their letters, as well as the various mutations or corruptions, to which these are subject.

1. An order or sentence should never be given or commenced abruptly, without prefacing it with some such expression as sōno, hear! lest one half of the words be spoken before the Native has been fairly put on his guard to hear them. Kyoon, why, how, well; kuho, say; bhu,ee, friend; with many others, are prefixed by the natives to sentences, and may in general be considered not only ornamental expletives, but also preparative words like attention, &c. among us, by which the hearer cocks his ears or makes ready for what is to follow. From our seldom or ever using this necessary precaution, it often happens, that before a native is put sufficiently on his guard, the half of an order is already communicated, of which he probably has not distinctly heard one single word, consequently either a repetition must take place or the execution of it will prove very unsatisfactory indeed.

2. The Hindooostanee being naturally very concise on many occasions, as few words as possible should be used at first, to prevent bad pronunciation or worse construction from confounding the hearer, and thereby defeating the speaker's wishes entirely. Thus, "give me a plate," and many such orders, will be perfectly plain by simply saying, "basun," a plate, with that emphasis and look, which in all countries and tongues, denote the want of a thing.

3. A stock of the most necessary nouns and verbs, with a small number of words of place and time, will soon enable a learner, who attends to the last rule, to get what he wants from the people, if he will only recollect, that by simply changing the na of every infinitive to o, he forms their imperative plural at once. This part, of all others, is the most useful to new comers in India, and ought to be acquired accordingly.

4. A slow, easy, distinct, and rather broad manner of speaking will sooner be comprehended by the Hindooostanees, than the reverse, which is moreover deemed a sign of vulgarity or culpable impetuosity, that the better sort of people among them carefully avoid: Their men of rank and genteel manners, are commonly much more readily understood, by a novice in the language, than those are who call themselves Moonshees, but who in reality know little or nothing of the very tongue they pretend to teach, while they endeavour to build their importance on a pedantic style and flippancy of speech, that must puzzle every beginner.

5. The Native who receives an order should always be made to repeat what he conceives is to be done, as in this way the chance of misconception is not only obviated, but the learner has often moreover a good opportunity of correcting his own sentences, thus repeated in the true idiom of the Hindoostanee, by the very people who know it best.

6. When the Natives speak English, they commonly give a very instructive lesson on the nature and idiom of their vernacular tongue, of which no scholar of any penetration will fail to avail himself, when he clothes his English ideas in the speech of Hindooostan.

7. There is something rather perplexing in the pronunciation of n before g and k, to those who are not aware, that it then has, even in our own tongue, the power of ng in hunger, hung-ger; anger, ang-ger; sinking, sing-king; thinking, thing-king: On this principle ng nk must be supposed always to imply the sound of ngk or n^gg, unless when thus divided, n₁k n₂g, whence Gunge, the Ganges; nunga, naked; kunkur, gravel; and all such words, should be spoken as if written so, Gung-ge, nung-ga, kung-kur, by those who are resolved to pronounce so as to be always understood.

8. When ch or k precedes chh and kh, as in uch-chha, good, muk-khee, a fly, it is more with a view of shewing how the originals are written, than with any solicitude to have them very accurately pronounced utsh-tshha, &c. as this is almost impossible, but in dekhkur, having seen; rukhkur, having placed; and all such words, the h must be very distinctly heard before and after the k, thus, dekh-kur, rukh-kur, &c. though this at first will be rather difficult.

9. After the consonants, y may prove at first troublesome in kya, what? pyar, love, &c. till the scholar adverts to its power as the consonant yu in young, yawn, &c. which, with k or p before them, I would write pyung, kyan; y never being a diphthongal vowel here as in our words dry, drue, by, bue, &c. The soft d and t will become dh th if the reader be not constantly on his guard against this deviation, proceeding from a strong desire to soften these letters as far as he can. If the word Jupiter come from deus pater, instead of juvans pater, as some suppose, it will prove that d was so mollified to j by the ancients, as well as by the moderns. See page 10, also 36, for duhez juhez, a dowry, recollecting at the same time, that d t are neither dzh nor tsh, but mere dentals, formed by protruding the tip of the tongue between the teeth while pronouncing them.

10. In cases of moment, when we have to converse with, or interrogate a Native, this should always be prefaced with some trivial discourse, not only to enable the person to overcome his apprehension, but to comprehend the address of a total stranger, whose tone of voice and manner of expression may seem at first so uncommon or indistinct, as to be, for a few minutes, almost unintelligible.

11. Sometimes this dulness of comprehension may be affected to gain time for an evasive or studied reply, as every Hindoostanee is too apt to conceive the most innocent of our queries only so many traps set to catch him in some villany or other. Should this occur to a man conscious of his abilities as a linguist, instead of being disconcerted, he will boldly proceed and convince the Native, that he is not to be put out of his way by any such subterfuges.

12. No attempt to speak to the people of India intelligibly, without a previous knowledge of the scheme of the Letters, can ever be expected to succeed, by those who do not conceive there exists some infallible spell in the very form of a strange character, or in the mere use of dialogues; (without either the proper sound or emphasis, which letters, words, and sentences require,) a property that I have never yet been able to discover in any alphabet or language, which was not previously illustrated and explained in my own, both respecting the individual power of letters, and the grammatical order and construction of sentences.

In drawing a comparison between the Roman alphabet, as applicable to the languages of Europe, and the Oriental, as it regards those of Asia, we may fairly say of both, that in the first, the powers of the letters are very absurdly ever varying; while, in the Eastern alphabets, their forms are not less liable to change, circumstances vexatious enough in each system to beginners. We have too few letters to express all our sounds, while the Hindoostanees, on the other hand, possess such a superabundance of characters, that one sound has often three letters, though one of ours have, rather unfortunately, at times four or five sounds in the English tongue.

Having premised every thing most essential for the just comprehension and pronunciation, or orthoepy, of the Hindoostanee, when spoken to or by us in India, we must now proceed to its orthography, that a similarity of sound may never hereafter mislead us, when we wish to transpose our knowledge from the Roman character, adopted here, to the Oriental alphabets, contrasted with the letters of our own tongue, which all agree well enough till we come to the—

ု and this, while pronounced as u before explained, merely reminds the learner of its representing the curious vowel consonant, that the Arabians call ȝen, for which, however, neither we nor the Hindoos have any corresponding letter: ု final, after a vowel, is almost mute, as in shoroု, beginning; while in shumု, a candle, it rather has the sound of a in water, and in the Hindoo-stanee the word is rendered shuma, like those examples produced in page 37, q. v. though, on the whole, it is best to preserve

the orthoepigraphical plan as much as we can, particularly when the sounds either way differ very little from each other, as any person will perceive who compares tu-ureef, rapidly sounded tu^ureef, with the common mode tareef, praise, in which last the uen is less obvious than in tu^ureef.

u expressing still the same sound of u in up, cup, only denote particular Arabic combinations, to be acquired hereafter.

a shows that uen precedes, but is almost lost in the sound of its following a; this, therefore, differs in the Hindooostanee very little from the broad sound awe in call, &c.

a in sound as above, but expressive of a peculiar form or combination in the Arabic, the knowledge of which may be at present dispensed with by the mere student of Hindooostanee.

a ditto.

i is to i exactly what u is to u above.

i no difference in the sound, though it certainly denotes rather e than i in the original.

ee are to ee and oo, respectively, just what a oo is to a.

oo see u and i.

় represents a semi-mute, oo or w, of the original.

় ditto.

় rather a harsher aspirate than h formerly described, and peculiar to the Arabic alphabet, but in Hindoostan pronounced just as the simple breathing hu.

় discriminate aspirates in the Suñskrit alphabet from h and each other, though the sound as such does not differ from h in the smallest degree.

় have been detailed in pages 9, 17, and 23, which the learner may now consult.

় the first is peculiar to the Hindoos, the second to the Arabs, still both are pronounced like the common n in run, nurse, &c.

় letters peculiar to the Hindoos in form, but exactly of the same power as r l.

় noticed in page 10.

় varieties of similar sounds by different letters, like our council, counsel, jilt, gin, &c.

় s in Arabic resembles our th in thin, but in the Hindoostanee it is merely s of sin, sun.

় like the above, mere formal varieties of the self-same sound; we write has (haz) haze,

় expressing the z by s in has, and by z in haze, while the sound is the same in both.

{ is to t, precisely what s is to s, and like it in Arabic, has the power of th in thine, but { in Hindooostanee is pronounced like t in tin, tune.

As the Hindooostanee student may often meet with my former publications, in which either the Hindoo-Roman system was not so correctly and ultimately fixed as it is now, or the orthography in the Oriental tongues was not deemed of so much consequence as the pronunciation, it is but just to submit the following prospectus to his consideration, to guide him through the present or any other of my Oriental works, in which he will nevertheless find very few deviations from my original plan, that do not entirely depend on the great progress we have made in the learning of the East, since I commenced my large Grammar and Dictionary of the Hindooostanee language. Among these, the words paṇw, the foot, gaṇw, a village, and a few others, were long expressed by gaṇṇ, paṇṇ, in which the inflexion plural was not half so distinct as it is now in paṇwon, gaṇwon, &c. though paṇw come as near the true pronunciation, if not more so, than paṇṇ formerly used.

u	{	u	and other Italic vowels, or a, &c.		a	Roman, when the word was i		i	in Italics.
ue	y	—
uo	ou	—
yoo	eu	—
w	w	w with ° over it.
h	h	h with the figure * over it.
n	n	n with ^ or ° ditto.
t	t or t	with ^ ditto.
t	t	t with the * over it.
d	d	d ditto ^.
r	r	r ditto ^.
s	s	or s with figures over them.
s
z	z	z ditto, all much more trouble-
z	z	some and less consistent than
z	z	the z z z, &c. of this Work.

In the whole of the foregoing, the letters t d r alone represent sounds that are not quite familiar to ourselves; for z z z are merely three forms of z for its one sound, as stated in pages 45—47.

Students, who may wisely resolve to proceed as far in the Oriental characters and tongues in this country as they possibly can, will receive every information on the above subject of redundant letters, to express the same sounds, by consulting my Hindoo-Roman Orthoepigraphical Ultimatum, lately published for this purpose. That it may prove as extensively useful as possible to those who may henceforth teach, or wish to be taught, a language, so prevalent and indispensable in India as the Hindooostanee is to gentlemen of every description in that distant region, on sound principles, I shall here strongly recommend a reference to the above publication, more especially after the reader has made adequate progress in the present work. In the mean time, by way of specimen, the following quotation from the popular story of Sukontula, given in the Ultimatum, is presented to the reader with a translation, in this place.

“ Ub age dastan ka yoon buyan hue, ki oos jung¹ men siwa Khooda ke, ooska ko ee khu-
bur lenewala nu tha, pur ek pukheroo oos pur upne puroon ka sayu kiye tha, is se ooska nam Sukontula hoo.a. Wuhan² puree hoo ee wooh rotee thee, ansowon³ ke motee. pulkon⁴ men pi-rotee thee ; doodh ke liye moonh pusar ruhee thee ; hath paaw upne, mar ruhee thee : ki Purwurdugari alum ne, upna fuzl kiya, jo Kun-

Moonee kuheen nuhane ko chule the, joñ cos turf se ho nikle, dekha, ki yih kya qoodruti ilahee hue, jo is soorut se nuzur atee hue !
 os nuo goole chumun ko goolistan se door dekh,
 hueran bu rungi boolbooli tuşweer ho gu.e.

* Ghultan dore yuteem see thee, lek khak pur, Ghultani coskee dekh, we dilgeer ho gu.e.

os pur conhen nihayut turs aya, duokur khak pur se oothaya, godee men lekur kuhne luge, yih Puree, Jinn, ya kisee quom kee uesee khoob soorut lurkee hue, ki dekhoo nu sonee, kochh kuha nuheen jata, uor kochh sumujh men nuheen ata ; kis ne is jungul men lakur khak ke oopur is chand ke tookre ko dal diya tha, cose chhatee se lugae hoo.e, ye dil men soch bichar kurte, ghor ko phire.

Mukan men puhoonchte hee upnee buhun Guotumee ko, coskee soorut dikhakur, pyar se kuha, ki “jee lugakur buhoot uch-chhee turh purwurish kurtee ruhiyo, uesa nu ho, ki kisee tuor se kotahee ho.”

Lurkee kee jo wooh soorut cosne dekhoo ;

* The Italic e here and elsewhere, denotes i made long, for the sake of the verse, and 'i' shows that ee has been shortened by the same poetic licence, for which we have no other expedient left than these Italics, applicable to u for a, &c. or vice versa.

uor bhaee kee, ooske huq men yih mihrbanee
 kee baten soneen, puhle ooskee bulan leen, phir god se lekur, upne gule luga, palne lugee;
 din rat chhatee pur oose loataee thee; mihr o muhubbut se doodhi pilwatee thee.

Wooh is soorut se pultee thee; uor jitne os jungul ke tupushwee the, sub os ko pyar kurte
 the; sub kee wooh pyaree thee; con subhon men mushhoor tha, ki yih Kunn kee betee hue.
 Din budin wooh buree hotee thee, uor teokhmi muhubbut hur dil men botee thee.

Uor bhee do lurkiyan wuhan theen, ek ka nam Uncosooya tha, doosree ka nam Pruyum-vuda; teenon purwurish pakur jub buree hoo-iyan aṭh puhur satḥ khelne lugiyān; con sub-hon ko apus men uese pyar ikhlaṣ tha, goya con kee ek jan uor jooda jooda qalib tha.

Hur ek con men thee zohru o mihr o mah,
 Jinheṇ dekhkur howe Yoosof ko chah.

Ugur chahe sha.ir kure sha.iree,
 Buyan con kee howe nu khoobee zuree.

Khooda ne upne dusti qodrut se, con teen-on ka surapa men surapa khoobiyan bhur dee theen.

Bhuwen jub ki ghosse men theen tanteen.
 Jigur teeri mizhgan se theen chhanteen.

Tulut tcof se jis dum ki we huñstiyāñ,
To zahid ko bhee soojhteen mustiyāñ.

Hur ek ka wcoh puree sa chihru jo nuzur
ata, koee to ghush khata, uor koee deewanu ho jata.

Jo zoofen theen zunjeeri pa,e joonoon,
Kufe pa,e rungeen thee surgurmi khoon.

Ugurchi zahir men we subhee sir se pañw tu-luk tumam hoosn o jumal, uor naz o uda theen, lekin huqeequt men wcoh shoulu bhubhooka, ki jis ka nam Sukcontula tha, upne ek julwe
se, dil o jan donon juhan ka phoonk detee thee;
shohru coskee gurm bazaree ka, dhoom coske hoosni alum soz kee, uesee thee, ki aftabi alum-tab ko ek zurru cos ke age tujullee nu thee.

Kuhan tuk buyan coskee hon khoobiyan,
Surapa theen cos men khosh cosloobiyan.

Ulqissu, Kunñ Moonee ne, ek din cos nazneen se yih bat kuhee, ki “ub muen teeruth kurne ko jata hoon, thore se dinon men nuha-kur phir ata hoon, tub tuluk too chuen uor aram se yuhan khosh ruhiyo; jo kochh, muñ-loob ho, Guotumee se kuha kuriyo, wcoh teree khatir hazir kiya kuregee, uor jan o dil se sudqe qorban hokur, sir se pañw tuluk teree bulaen liya kuregee. Pur jo koee Tupushwee yuhan awe, adur kur pañw puriyo, uor coskee

khidmut keejiyo, juhaṇtuk toojh se ho suke, kotahee mut keejo." Is is ṭurh wooh cose sum-jha, nuṣeehut dilasa de, ruwanu hoo,a.

"The story thus proceeds: In that wilderness she had no real protector but the Almighty, though an eagle shaded her with its wings, whence her name of Sukcontula. There the babe lay weeping and crying, while the pearly tears were flowing from her eyes; rolling and tossing on the ground, in vain did she continue opening her little mouth for milk, till the Omnipotent was graciously pleased to conduct the holy saint Kunū to his ablutions that way, and no sooner did he approach the place, than he saw and admired the goodness of divine Providence manifested in the scene that appeared before him.

Seeing this rose-bud lying torn far from the parent bush, he stood motionless with wonder, like a fascinated nightingale. The child seemed a lost pearl cast on the ground, for whose forlorn state he felt grieved to the heart.

Kunū, moved with compassion, ran and raised the infant from the dust, and, taking it in his bosom, thus said to himself. "I cannot comprehend nor say what this angel, fairy, or some body's lovely babe, whose beauty surpasses every thing seen or described, can possibly be : Who can have abandoned a form fairer than Diana, on the cold earth in this desert?" Pressing the child to his breast, and filled with such thoughts, he returned home.

On reaching his dwelling, he showed his sister Guotumee, the baby's face, and observed affectionately, " Pray continue to cherish it with the utmost care and attention ; never let me hear of any thing like the smallest neglect."

When she beheld the little cherub's countenance, and heard the kind injunctions of her brother respecting it, she first blessed the babe, and then embracing it, set about nourishing her tender charge, which was constantly afterwards dandled on her knee, and suckled with fondness and delight.

In this manner Sukontula was reared, and the hermits or holy men of the wilderness were all very much attached to her ; she was, in short, the darling of the whole, and passed for Kunn's daughter. She grew up apace, and sowed the seeds of affection in every heart.

There were also two other girls, one named Unosooya, and the other Pruyumvuda. When the three so fostered, increased in strength, they used to play together the livelong day, and were as cordial and fond of each other as if one soul had animated their separate bodies.

Each of them was a Venus, a Juno, or a Cynthia, whom, had even the chaste Joseph seen, he must have loved.

Should the muse attempt their praises in verse, her strains would fall far short of their excellence.

The plastic hand of the Creator had formed them in the image of loveliness itself.

When they shot angry glances at beholders, they pierced their hearts with the arrows of scorn ; but while arrayed in the blandishment of smiles, even anchorites themselves felt the fervour of love. The angelic faces of those charmers were no sooner beheld by any one, than he either fainted with delight, or became distracted with passion. Their jetty ringlets formed the chains of frantic lovers, whose blood seemed to tinge the glowing soles of those damsels snow-white feet.

Though the whole were apparently a constellation of the graces, still, in reality, that brilliant star named Sukontula, with a single spark of her beauty, so inflamed the hearts of both worlds as a universal toast, that the radiant sun himself grew dim with envying her lustre. How shall I describe those charms, which concentrated in her all that is lovely, personified?

At length, the hermit Kunn one day thus addressed that beauty: "I am now going on a pilgrimage, and, having performed my devotions, will in a few days return; till then, do thou stay contented here at rest and ease; whatever may be wanted, be sure to inform Guotumee, for she will not fail to please you, and, as a person devoted entirely to you, she will continue to bless and protect you. Should any saint sojourn this way, fall respectfully prostrate at his feet, and perform every office of hospitality to him, without omitting the smallest duty, to the utmost of your power." —In this manner having explained his wishes to Sukontula, he bade her farewell, and departed."

Before closing this section, the scholar must, for the last time, be reminded of its real utility and importance to him as an Orientalist; he should therefore study it again and again, more especially those portions which warn him to shun bad pronunciation, or point out the road to that which is right.

Much thought and constant practice will do more for the solitary student than he will all at once credit; and if he fortunately meet with a companion more diligent and acute than himself, the road will daily prove smoother and smoother, as they proceed together towards that stage of perfection, which is indispensable to every gentleman who desires to be useful to his employers, and comfortable within himself in British India. To speak and behave in that country as such on all occasions, is of more moment to every civil or military officer in particular, and to the state in general, than superficial observers can readily admit: Hence the subject has never, till lately, obtained that attention which its importance demands, and will yet command, either among the French or us.

The learner who may heedlessly proceed through these sheets, will run the risk of imperceptibly acquiring a pronunciation, which he must afterwards be forced to unlearn; whereas he who shall weigh every letter, syllable, and word well, before he quits this key to the current living speech of India, may yet feel, after his arrival in that country, some gratitude and respect for the only author who has paid unwearyed attention, during a space of twenty years, to this subject alone, and who may certainly enable every real student, if he chooses, to speak the Hindoostanee well, long before he sets a foot on our Eastern territories.

To profound erudition as an Orientalist, I make no pretensions ; but the point of accurate pronunciation in British India, as far as the Hindoostanee and Persian languages, now spoken there, are concerned, I cannot readily concede to any man, however learned he may otherwise be, or whatever opportunities he may have enjoyed of hearing the latter spoken in its local purity by the Persians themselves, who undoubtedly are apt to change the u of India to a sound like the English e, the Hindoostanee e to ee, a to oo, and some others, which need not be stated in this place.

That this portion of the Monitor is remarkable for repetitions cannot be denied ; still the learner, who means really to profit by this apparent blemish, may yet confess, that he required them all, before the various objects connected with much and speedy proficiency in the Hindee-Roman alphabet could arrest that attention, which the accurate pronunciation of living tongues, at our first outset, imperiously requires from every scholar.

Notwithstanding every thing said in page 20 on the gutturals kh and gh, I fear, that mughroor, proud, murghoob, delightful, mukhzun, a magazine, mukhsoo^s, special, and such words, may still try the reader's skill, and teach him, that retrospective patience and perseverance only can insure perfection. Even is, as, rusm, will, in spite of the caveat in page 21, become again in his mouth iz, az, ruzm, rather than the iss, auss, russm, intended. If my pupil have escaped the snare laid for him in the above instances, let him call me a tautologist with impunity, otherwise I beg leave to observe, that useful truths are not the worse recollected by being frequently repeated.

Words wherein two or more difficulties suddenly catch the tyro's eye, will generally create so much anxiety to pronounce well, that one only will be overcome, while the others escape correction entirely. He must syllable all long vocables before he can possibly do them ample justice as such; and the final h in koochh, &c. should not be allowed to mislead him so far as to say khooch, to which his tongue at first will be too prone, unless he every moment almost think, or say to himself—Take care! no expirate! long vowel! a short! a soft dental! a diphthongal vowel! the consonant yu! no French œu or u, as in œuvre, perdu! &c. this sound cannot therefore exist here. One's own ears will in a few days prove excellent correctors, provided the mind is stedfastly fixed upon the object in pursuit; and where there happens to be no better instructor, I see no other resource for the solitary scholar than a pertinacious trial of the above and similar expedients.

As I mean to take every favourable opportunity of communicating gratuitously my orthoepical knowledge to those who may wish to instruct others, students hereafter will probably have it in their power to obtain correct viva voce information on this essential, but arduous portion of their Oriental studies, and when attainable, it should never be neglected; for no perusal of a work can possibly supply the place of a living intelligent monitor.

The present, in default of a better, will answer every useful purpose, more especially where there are two or three studying it together, or where due attention is unremittingly paid to the context, and great assiduity evinced in reading much aloud, with a full manly voice, that the organs of hearing, more intellectually alert, may constantly regulate and correct those of sight and speech.

In this way, the memory, so requisite in the acquisition of languages, is progressively brought to a high degree of perfection, as experience daily confirms that influence which the eyes, ears, and tongue conjoined, evidently possess over the faculty of recollection. He who reads, hears, sees, and writes a word all at once, may be said to have four strings, instead of one, to the bow of his mind, which, properly bent on the objects of its pursuit, must eventually hit the mark in view, with the well-directed arrow of perception, to leave a vestige behind, which no length of time can obliterate.

Hindoostanee Significant Particles.

LONG experience in teaching the Hindoo-stanee has convinced me, that the shortest road to a very great proficiency in that and other Oriental tongues, is a previous acquaintance with their significant letters, syllables, and particles. I shall consequently exhibit the most common in the subsequent pages, leaving it entirely to the learner's option whether he shall try to acquire the Hindooostanee in this new way, or prefer the old beaten path of regular declensions, conjugation, &c.

These will be found in their proper place, together with the usual rules of syntax; the whole being illustrated and confirmed by the dialogues, exercises, &c. in the present performance, collected into one focus here from a great variety of my other publications, in every part of which the scholar will prove more or less expert, in proportion to the pains he may now take with the following etymological view of the Significant Particles, as initial, medial, or final, throughout the Hindooostanee language.

The letters u and a, being merely homogeneous short and long vowels, may be classed together as significant particles or terminations, as far as they will go, in this etymological department of the Oriental tongues: a or u in the nom. sing, becomes e in the inflexion sing. and nom. plur. and in the infl. plur. on; gol-a, a ball; infl. gole, a ball; nom. plur. gole, balls; infl. plur. golon; bund-u, bunde, a slave; bunde, bundon, slaves; sheeshu, sheeshe, a glass; sheeshe, sheeshon, glasses. They are both masculine terminations, which, particularly a, become ee in the feminine and diminutive form; beta, a son; betee, a daughter; ghora, a horse; ghoree, a mare; bhera, a ram; bheree, a ewe; gora, a fair man; goree, a fair woman; golee, a bullet; sheeshee, a vial; chooha, a rat; choohée, a mouse, bandee, a female slave, from bundu, below and above.

In words like gol, round; moord, dead; bund, bound; huft, seven; punj, five; gurm, warm; a and u appear as adjuncts thus: gol-a, a ball; moord-u, a corpse; bund-u, a slave; huft-u, a week; punj-u, a hand; gurm-a, warm weather, summer.

In verbs these terminations greatly resemble our perfect sign ed or d, en, &c.; chah, love; chah-a, loved; mar, beat; mar-a, beaten, a victim; purh-a, dan-a, learn-ed; azmood-u, experienced.

Compounds become adjectives like ours in ed, al, &c. so; doodil-a, distracted; doosal-u, triennial; chuogosh-u, quadrangular; and many are thus formed from nouns, piyas, thirst; piyas-a, thirsty; muel, filth; muel-a, filthy; bhookh, hunger; bhookh-a, hungry.

Sometimes a is a definite sign, bher, a sheep; bher-a, the ram; gung, a river; gung-a, the river, which we have miscalled ganges; khood, self; khood-a, self-existent, i. e. God; doomb, a tail; doomb-a, the sheep with a large tail; pu-

ṭun, a city; Puṭn-a, the city we call Patna; a, as a word, means come, in Persian and Hindoo-stanee, whence perhaps its use as a vocative sign in both languages occasionally; yar-a, O friend; jan-a, O beloved; buhin-a, O sister.

Terminating words, a resembles our adverbial ly; zahira, apparently; uṣl-a, truly; mōṭluq-a, entirely—often zahir-un, uṣl-un, &c. u (or un) is a common privative prefix, and sometimes a feminine sign; u-par, shore-less; u-phul, fruit-less; u-mur, im-mortal; u-chook, in-fallible; u-lug, disjoined; u-mol, in-estimable; u-haṇ, no, from haṇ, yes; shaṭr-u, a poet-ess; mulik-u, a prince-ss—a may be met with medially, as in bur a bur, breast to breast, equal; lub a lub, lip to lip, brimful; sur a pa, cap-a-pee; runga rung, various; sur a sur, end to end, entirely, &c.

Before na of neuter, and other verbs, a makes them active, or causal, thus; buchna, to escape; buchana, to save, preserve, &c.; busna, to dwell; busana, to people; sconna, to hear; sconana, to tell, or cause hear; or when substituted for u so, murna, to die; marna, to kill, or cause die; kutaṇa, to cut, v. n. kaṭna, v. a. buhukna, to stray; buhkana, to mislead; sumujhna, to comprehend; sumjhana, to explain—a and u are frequently dropt, more especially u, when it would be as troublesome as our e in words like tigress, hungry, angry, &c. never tigeress, hunger, &c.; kumeen, kumeenu, mean; unaj, naj, grain; ḍal, ḍala, a branch; eenṭ, eenṭa, a brick; sumujhna, sumjhana, not sumujhana; puṭna, as already stated, not puṭuna.

The nasal ṇ after a does not prevent its inflective and plural e, nor the feminine ee in words like duswan̄, duswen̄, dusween̄, the tenth boy, girl, &c.—an̄ forms the nominative plural of all feminines in ee, which last then becomes iy; golee, a bullet; goliyan̄, bullets; choohee, a mouse; choohiyaṇ, mice; and of some Persian masculines, as saqee, a cup-bearer; saqiyāṇ, cup-bearers;—a or o, followed by a, generally requires an intermediate y or w to prevent the hiatus of such homogeneous sounds, whence verbs, in ana, ona, have their perfect tense rather in aya, oya, than in a;a, o;a, and such plural inflexions, as ma-yon̄, mothers, duwa-yon̄, medicines, for ma-on̄, duwa-on̄, &c.; gana, gu-wana, to sing, &c. ch̄hana, ch̄huwana, to shade, overcast, are formed on this principle, as ga,ana, ch̄ha,ana, would be troublesome.

Almost every tense of the verb has a in the singular number, for all the persons masculine, ee for the feminine singular, e for the masculine plural, and iyan, or een, for the feminine; conjugation therefore is little more than a mere repetition of the declension of nouns, as now illustrated under this letter, or rather significant particle a or u, which are so often interchangeable as to be almost one and the same; whence bandee, for bundee, a female slave, with hundreds more.

The learner will do well to acquire a habit of ringing the changes of a e ee iyan on, till they become perfectly familiar to his ear, adverting at the same time to their various uses in grammar; viz. a is almost always a masculine, singular, uninflected sign; e is both a masculine singular inflexion and a nominative plural; ee is a feminine singular, iyan, or een, its nominative plural; on the plural inflexion of most nouns, in a or u, as formerly stated on the principles of substitution; but on is rather an adjunct to all the rest.

By inflexion is meant that part of a noun or pronoun, which, with the aid of prepositions, or postpositions, forms what are called the various cases of nouns:

I, infl. me, cases, of me, to me, &c.

We, infl. us, cases, of us, to us, &c.

Gola, a ball; gole ka, ke, kee, of a ball; gole ko, to a ball, a ball, &c.

Gole, balls; golon ka, ke, kee, of balls; golon ko, to balls, balls, &c. golon se, from, with, or by balls.

The postposition ka itself, coming under the inflective rule of a e ee, should always in the genitive be repeated so, gole-ka, ke, kee, of a ball, a ball's; which last translation is, for many reasons, by far the best, and ought alone to be used at first for of.

Gole and golon, from gola, are as much inflections from it, as me and us, him and her, are from I, we, he, she, and as such are governed by postpositions in the cases accordingly.

i is the genitive sign of Persian words, as ḥookm i ḥakim, the order of a judge; but, after a vowel, it becomes e, moōe sur, the hair of the head.

When the natural order of adjective and noun is inverted, i or e is thus used, murd i nek, a virtuous man; gomashtu,e chalak, a clever agent; otherwise nek murd, chalak gomashtu, as in our language.

Neuter verbs, having i as a radical letter in the active or other forms, change it to e or ee.

Phirna, v. n. pherna, v. a. to turn; veer.

chhilna, v. n. chheelna, v. a. to rub, scrape, &c.
sumitna, v. n. sumetna, v. a. to contract.

e is the masculine inflexion singular and nominative plural of a or u, to such an extent, that almost every final e may be treated by the learner as an inflexion of a or u, so—Kinaru, a side, edge, &c. kinare, aside, apart; aga, front, fore part; age, before; mara, beaten, driven, &c. mare, through, from, by; neecha, low; neeche, below, -&c. In Persian, e or ee restricts the noun to one, either definite or indefinite, as goole, a flower individually; durukhte, the particular tree, &c.

e may be met with as a vocative sign, e sahib, O sir! a singular postposition among the pronouns, oos-e, to him, him; and as the singular affix of the 2d and 3d persons of the aorist or subjunctive, mar-e, if thou or he beat, &c.; nor must we forget its use already noticed, as a genitive sign, lolee e fuluk, the courtezan of the sky, viz. Venus, or the star so called. A retrospective glance at i will show how e is used as an active sign among verbs, whence mitna, to be erazed; metna, to obliterate; mitwana, to cause eraze, &c.

As the final radical of a verb, it is apt to be dropt before another vowel, which will account, for de_eo, give you ; le_eo, take you ; becoming simply do, lo, from de, give thou ; le, take thou.

Sometimes e disappears in the aorist and future also, for similar reasons, ho, if thou or he be ; ja, if thou or he go ; hogā, he or it will be, instead of ho_ee, ja_ee, ho_eega. At other times the hiatus here is obviated by the intervention of w, thus, howe, jawe, howega, and elsewhere by y, or rather the change of ee before vowels to iy, agreeably to pages 23, &c. which contain observations of extensive use in all the Oriental tongues, and peculiarly applicable to Hindoo-stanee verbs.

By adding n̄ to e, so en̄, the nominative plural of all feminines, which do not terminate in ee, is formed ; bat-en̄, word-s ; kitab-en̄, book-s ; ubroo-en̄, eye brow-s ; in this way also the pronominal dative, and accusative signs plural, oon-en̄, to them, them ; besides the aorist plural, mar-en̄, if we or they beat ; jawen̄, if we or they go ; howen̄, if they or we be ; sometimes hon̄ hoen̄, for the reasons stated above.

ee has just been treated as the feminine and diminutive sign, naturally flowing from the masculine and augmentative a ; lurka, a boy ; lurkee, a girl ; russa, a rope ; russee, a string ; lurka gata, a boy sings ; lurkee gatee, a girl sings ; lurke gate, boys sing ; lurkiyan gatiyan, (or gateen) girls sing.

ee is a feminine termination, when the word is not by nature masculine : panee, water ; motee, a pearl ; ghee, melted butter ; jee, life ; duhee, curds—excepted, which are all masculine ; as also such words, sipah-ee, a soldier ; malee, a gardener, &c. for the reason now assigned.

Adjectives become nouns, or vice versa, by assuming ee ; khoob-ee, good-ness ; bhula-ee, well-fare ; burā-ee, great-ness ; beemar-ee, sickness ; wuzn-ee, weight-y ; puhaṛ-ee, a mountainer ; Khoda-ee, God-head ; murd-ee, man-hood ; dost-ee, friend-ship ; hath-ee, hand-y ; (whence, an elephant, as hath means the hand.*)

* This and similar words, with a final insiprative, are uncommonly troublesome to beginners, though the h be often a very essential discriminative letter as in sath, with ; bagh, a tiger ; doodh, milk ; gurh, a fort ; koochh, some ; thus distinguished from sat, seven ; bag, a bridle rein ; dood, smoke ; ghur, a house ; kooch, the breast ; and kooch, a march. In koochh, with a few such, the h is scarcely perceptible to the ear, and in all the rest, in fact, it is by no means a full very distinct aspirate ; sath must not therefore be made sathu nor satuh, but merely sath, Rusm-ee, custom-ary; kitab-ee, oblong, i. e. book-like; Hind-ee, India-n; azar-ee, disease-d; occasionally with an intervening w a or g, eesu-wee, Christ-ian; doonya-wee, world-ly; chuoksa_aee, alertness; chuokus, alert; bundugee, slave-ry; deewanu-gee, madness; udhik_aee, over-plus; sewuk-a_aee, service.

As an emphatic, -ee and hee are thus used, yih-ee, this very; wooh-ee, that very; muen-hee, myself; malik-hee, the owner's self; something like the e formerly explained, which the Persians call ee.

When final a of infinitives or participles becomes ee, they express instrumental, local, or abstract nouns; kuturnee, scissars; koorelnree, a poker; oṛhnee, a covering; bustee, a village; gintee, an account; d̄hurtee, the world; bolee, speech, from kuturna, to clip, &c.

The second person singular of every tense of the Persian verbs ends in ee; and as an affix to infinitives, in that tongue, it denotes propriety, fitness, &c. kooshtun-ee, worthy of death;

with a smooth gentle inspiration, as close after the t as l is to r in curl, purl, &c. in our language.

khoordun-ee, eatable, from the verbs to kill, to eat.

When one ee follows another, it is naturally dropt as troublesome, whence kee, dee, pee, lee, see, for kee-ee, dee-ee, &c. the regular feminine perfects of verbs with radical e, or ee.

Generally speaking, ee may be treated as a significant affix in the Hindooostanee, of such extensive use, that practice only can ascertain it; thus, after the a of many active imperatives, it forms a species of abstracts or participials, like our own, and applicable to season, price, &c. kuṭa-ee, cutting; bo-a-ee, sowing; dhol-a-ee, washing; luṛa-ee, battle, fighting, &c.

Followed by the particles aṇ, oṇ, it becomes iy in the nominative and inflexion plural, choohiyan, mice (unless when the a is omitted, as in choohiyan kheltiyan, or khelteen, mice play) choohiyon ko, to mice.

O, though sometimes a vocative prefix like e, is generally substituted for the nom. signs a or u, but affixed to every other letter to form the vocative plural of all nouns; beṭo, O sons; bundo, O slaves; lurkiyo, O girls; kitabo, O books;—oṇ has been already discussed as the plural inflexion by substitution, and by addition it must be evident enough in kitabon-ka, ke, kee, of books; ubroo-on se, from eye-brows; murdon ke age, before men.

O forms the second person of the aorist and imperative plural mar-o, if you beat, beat you, and after numerals seems definite; teen-o, the three; char-o, the four; but intermediately it has a conjunctive or adverbial influence, din o rat, day and night; hath o hath, from hand to hand; rat o rat, the whole night.

In Persian o is the conjunction, and also the pronoun he, o-ra, to him.

oo an instrumental or adjective affix, mar-oo, killing, fatal; jhaṛ-oo, a broom; dekha-oo seemly; deedar-oo, sight-ly.

As a prefix oo resembles the Latin ex, re, &c. oo-jarna, to extirpate, eradicate; oo-gulna, to reject, chew the cud; oo-tarna, to dismount, &c. Followed by the nasal n̄, it denotes the first person sing. of the aorist, mar-oon̄, if I beat, and the indicative of hona, to be, hoon̄, I am. Sometimes it looks like a privative oo-hoon̄, no, from hoon̄ or han̄, yes.

ue—the common vocative sign, ue luṛke, O boy; ue dost, O friend; constituting also the second and third person singular of hoon̄; hue, thou art, he is, made plural by n̄ huen̄, we or they are. As hona, to be, was probably at first hu-na, to breathe, or be, we can thus account for the seeming irregularity of this verb, by supposing the ancient regular aorist has now become the present of the indicative hu-ooñ, hu-e, hu-o, hu-en, omitting the u in hoon, ho, as the verb stands at present, a hypothesis confirmed by the future huega, of which hereafter. This diphthong is very conspicuous also among the pronouns, muen, I, tuen, thou.

uo, like o, is a conjunction, probably contracted from uor, and; as pu is sometimes from pur, on; it is a prominent letter in kuon, who; juon, who; tuon, that; and being often interchangeable with o and oo, the scholar should get a habit of treating all three, as one only and the same sound.

hu—appears to be the root of the verb huna, to be, now hona, as I have just explained. This letter is peculiar to the third personal pronouns, yih, wooh, he, she, it, but among these and the rest, it is frequently suppressed, whence conen for conhen, them, to them; toomh, toom, you: han or an, means place in composition; wuhan, there, that place; ha, like y, keera, a worm; keeruha, wormy.

ah, a sigh, is, I think, more expressive than our word, as it must be expressed by a full inspiration after a, and being feminine, the nom. pl. is ah-en, the infl. ah-on; ha,e, alas! dooha,e, tiha,e, help, help, alas! alas! ho, be; hue, is, art; hoon, am; han, yes; hee, very, self; he, the vocative sign, O.

Yu, a useful intervenient consonant between homogeneous vowels, aya, came, instead of aa; kiya, for keea, did; and kya, for kea, what? to prevent the hiatus, as formerly illustrated.

Ya, means or and O; ya khooda, ya eesa, O God! O Jesus! also or God, or Jesus; ye, these; yo, this; yoon, thus.

When y e i ee or ue, is the prefix of pronouns, it commonly conveys the idea of proximity, expressed in English by this, thus; itna, tantus; kitna, quantus; uesa, talis; kuesa, qualis; idhur, hither; kidhur, whither? yuhan, here; kuhan, where? yoon, thus; kyoon, which way? how? why? uela, this side; wuela, that side; puela, farthest off, &c.

wu, an intervenient like yu, homogeneous with o and oo, as y is with e and ee; it frequently expresses and, wu-ghueru, et cetera; and occurs as a subservient in ordinals, duswan, the tenth; panchwan, the fifth; omitted ad libitum, as chuothan, fourth; this an may therefore be deemed equivalent to our th in eleventh, egarhan, &c. and so on.

Every verb having a radical final vowel, assumes and drops w in the aorist and future at pleasure, but the others do not, whence bowe, bo,e, he may sow; bowenge, bo,enge, they will sow; chule, (never chulwe) he may walk or go. If the radical (i. e. the letter before the infinitive na) be ee, the effect is thus, seewe, siye, he may sew; seewe ga, siye ga, he will sew; partly explained in a former section.

wa, means a man, &c.; pesh-wa, a foreman, or leader, also open; wan, wen, ween, noted above as th: wa,e, alas! wa,e wuela, lack-a-day! wah, bravo! wah wah, admirable!

wōoh, wuh, (formerly wa) he, that, it, she.

we, they, wōoh bolta, he speaks; wōoh boltee, she speaks; we bolte, they speak; we boltyan, they (females) speak.

bu bur or ba, a preposition or adverbial prefix, ba-hoormut, with honour, honourably; bu-shid-dut, with violence, violently; bu-ja, in place, a-propos, right, properly; bur-wuqt, in time, seasonably; dur bu dur, from door to door; ja bu ja, from place to place; roo bu roo, tete-a-tete; roz bu roz, day after day, daily; ba insaf, with justice, justly; dust bu qubzu, sword in hand; dust bu sur, respectfully, i. e. with hand at head, viz. cap in hand; ba, father, son, generally reduplicated baba, (like ma, mother, mama,) whence bee, baee, and beebee, a lady, matron; baboo, nobleman, with ube, sirrah, in contempt.

be, without, also a useful privative, be-ja, mal-a-propos, out of place, unseasonably; be-aram, restless, be-dum, breathless; be-hoormut, dishonoured; intermediately, ja-be-ja, here and there.

As b is not only interchangeable with the other labials, but o oo also, the student will not be surprised to meet with seb, se,o, an apple; talab, tala,o, a pond; tub, tuo, then; jublug, juolug, until, &c. often tud, jud.—Bi, dis, &c. bi-lugna, to dis-join; bi-lug, a part; desee, native; bi-desee, foreign; bi-chulna, to retire.

This letter, being an expletive prefix to Persian imperatives, as bu, bi, boo, be, &c. is much used, boogo, speak; bidih, give; bya, come, &c. probably meaning, do speak, pray give, come along.

In Arabic it is met with so, bil-lah, by God, bu Ulee, by Ulee, &c.

Bee, the feminine of ba, must not be confounded with bhee, also; buhee, she floated, also a ledger; bhuee, friend, brother, &c.

Bo, boo, smell, scent; likewise sow, from bona, to sow.

bu, I suspect, is a root denoting stability, time, eternity, whence ub, now, this time; kub, when? jub, when; tub, then; bul, strength; bar, ber, time.

It is curious enough, that in some of the Indian tongues, b is a prominent letter in the future tense, as in abo, ibo, of the Latin; and not less so, that boo, ba, in both Persian and old Hindee differs little from our own verb be.

In every numerical series of two, b is the leading letter, baruh, twelve; bees, twenty; baees, twenty-two; butees, thirty-two, &c. whence one would suppose, that do, doo, two, was formerly ba; bis, biped, biennial, &c. confirm the supposition.

pu, as a contraction of pur, means on, at, &c. whence oopur, upon, above, &c.

phu seems a radical, denoting the blowing with the breath, and the blooming of a flower, or the expansion of any thing; phoonkna, to blow, breathe; phool, a flower; phul, a fruit; phoolna, to swell; phulna, to bear fruit; phun, a snake's hood or crest; phen, foam, froth; phootna, to burst; phutna, to crack; phoolka, light; phaha, a flake:—pa, pa.e, the foot, paw; occasionally ness, moṭa-pa, fat-ness ; doobla-pa, lean-ness, &c. ; sur a pa, from head to foot ; pa-bund, foot-bound, rivetted ; pa'e mal, trodden, destroyed ; pa-een, below, under ; ap, self, your honour, &c.

pee, a lover, the root of pee-na, to drink, whence, piy-as, thirst, viz. a desire to drink ; puh, a root connected with primary objects, perhaps from its meaning the dawn of day.

pue, payu, the same as pa, pue-zar, a shoe or slipper ; pue dur pue, successively, foot after foot.

pao, puo, a quarter, whence puone, a quarter less, as puone teen, $2\frac{1}{4}$, viz. a quarter less three.

op, lustre ; op-na, to polish ; op-chee, clad in armour.

fee, fi, equivalent to in, at, per, &c. fil-hal, at present ; fee guz, per ell, &c.

vu is not used, except as wu, for a significant particle, though useful enough to express the reduplicated w in nuwwab, nuvab, whence our corruption nabob.

n has before been noticed as a plural final in an, and en, een, on.

russiyan, ropes ; raten, nights ; bol-en, we or they may speak ; inh-en, to these ; bol-een, they, you, or we (females) spoke ; ah-on, sighs ; but in bol-oon, I may speak, muen, tuen, it is rather a singular sign, and the same among the ordinals, tees-wan-wen-ween, the thirtieth.

n is also a very conspicuous letter among adverbs of place, as yuhan, wuhan, &c. already enumerated: This n is often redundant, and at times omitted.

n occurs in the genitive of ap, like ka, ke, kee, upna, upne, upnee; and as the infinitive sign it is liable to the very same inflexion, na, ne, nee, as a verbal noun or adjective, according to the concord or government of the sentence. In one verb it is used for the sake of the sound, an ke, ake, having come.

Some adjectives, &c. are formed by na, doo-na, double; bhoot, a ghost; bhoot-na, an imp.

Under various forms of un, na, ni, nir, this radical may be met with as the paramount sign of negation, privation, &c. na tumam, imperfect; ni kumma, use-less; nir-as, hope-less; nir-mul, limped; nirala, uncommon.

Among the pronouns, the plural is marked by n instead of n, thus: in, these; con, those; jin, whom; kin, whom; for the very obvious reason, that mere nasals would make such words seem too insignificant.

Persian and other infinitives are apt to end in this letter, also many pronouns; nul, nue, a tube, pipe, &c. evince the prominent inanity of this sound, corroborated by words in most languages, as nemo, nihil, ninny.

Variously modified n marks feminines and diminutives, malee, gardener; malin, his wife; dhobee, a washerman; dhobin, a washerwoman; joolaha, a weaver; joolahin, joolahun, his wife; sher-nee, a tigress. Peer-un, Meer-un, diminutives from Meer and Peer, proper names.

The affix un resembles our ly, ittifaq-un, accidental-ly; quṣd-un, purpose-ly.

nuh, the nail; nakhoon in Persian.

nuo, nuya, new, likewise nine.

nue, a tube, reed, cane, pipe.

ne, an expletive before active verbs in the perfect tenses, muen ne diya, I gave, muen ne nuheen, I did not give, or I gave not.

nu, though in general a simple negative, occasionally expresses or; koochh nu koochh, something or other; kubhee nu kubhee, sometime or other; kuheen nu kuheen, somewhere or other.

The negative nu, in verse, may be made long, and pronounced ne.

nee, the fem. of na, also an affix to denote that gender, mor-nee, a pea-hen.

m belonging to the pronoun of the first person in several tongues, and in Arabic applicable by a peculiar inflexion to place, instrument, &c.; muqṣud, destination; muhkumu, judgment-seat; muqtul, place of execution; mis-tur, a rule; or reciprocity, as, moqatulu, carnage; moobahuṣu, argumentation.

As an affix in beg, khan, a lord, m denotes the feminine begum, khanum, a lady.

ma, man, mother; mah, a month.

moo, hair; moh, pity; muya, sympathy.

moonth, face, mouth.

mue, wine; müi, with; bu müi, along with.

muen, I.

men, in, at, on, &c.; menh, rain.

mu resembles the nu in khwah, mukhwah; nolens volens, expressed also by huq na huq, the hocknock of jargonists. Before the imperative this negation commonly assumes t, as mut, dont.

muo, some places or towns are so called in India.

lu, ru, differently modified with the vowels, as al, el, r, ar, &c. appear as radicals denoting possession, agency, existence, &c. which will be found, in some measure, to pervade our own and other tongues, puh-la, first, doos-ra, second, tees-ra, third, the s of these seems merely for the sound.

Sometimes these letters occur as mere subser-vients, in nir-as, hopeless, dholana for dho ana,
to cause wash, &c.

ra, re,ree, is to the first and second personal pronouns, &c. what ka, ke, kee, is to every other word in the genitive; mera, mere, meree, of me, my, mine; tera, tere, teree, of thee, thy,
thine; huma-ra, re, ree, our, our's; toomha-ra, &c. your, your's. In Persian, ra is equivalent to ko, to, for, o-ra, to him.

re, o, bap re, O father; ma ree, O mother,
reh, a sort of fuller's earth.

rah, a road; rah-ee, a traveller, wayfarer.

roo, the face; roo bu roo, face to face; ab-roo, reputation; ub-roo, eye-brow.

rooh, the soul.	}
rue, rate, ratio.
ru ee, bran. ra ee, mustard. ra e, opinion.

These, and others like them, prove the absolute necessity of great accuracy in pronunciation, as thousands such are met with in the Hindoostanee.

The palatials t d, with their aspirates th dh, are little if ever used as significant or even ex-pletive particles, nor am I yet aware of their application as Sanskrit radicals.

d very often becomes a harsh r, and t sometimes the soft r; as such they will occasionally be met with affixed to other words: thus, chum-ra, leather; chumree, cuticle; cham, hide; pug-ra, a large turban; pugree, a small one; pug, one very large; and though this application of ra, ree, ur, ar, do not always hold good, they may nevertheless be traced as subservient affixes of some sort or other, in many words terminating as above.

tho will often be heard in counting so, ek
tho, one (knife, &c.); panch tho, five (chairs, &c.);
and must be carefully discriminated from to,
the mere expletive, hue to, he is I believe.

t seems a leading letter in the second personal pronoun, too, tuen, thou; toom, you; tera, thy, &c. the correlatives, tuon, tuhan, tuesa, &c.
It is moreover the paramount sign of the present tense, immediately after the root of the verb, and before the a, e, ee, een, of masculines and feminines in both numbers; marta, I, thou, he, (males) beat; marte, we, you, they, (males) beat;
martee, I, thou, she, (females) beat; marteen,
or martiyan, we, you, they, (females) beat.

In the old verbs the use of t was even more obvious as a present sign, murun, to die; mu-runut, he dies, &c.

te, the old word for se, from, sometimes sitee.

ta, that, to, till; affixed, ness, sum-ta, same-ness ; komul-ta, soft-ness.

tha, was, had, did; the, thee, theen, &c.

thah, a bottom, ford; u-thah, bottom-less.

tuh, fold, doubling, down, below.

to, that, also, &c. in Persian, thou, and often contracted and affixed as ut or simply t.

too, toon, tueñ, thou.

tuo, then, yes, well; like tub, then.

This letter takes the lead in every series of three, under the various forms of tee, ti, tree, tir, te, and in many compounds from this number; thus, doo ha_{ee}, twice alas! ti ha_{ee}, thrice alas! ti-pa_{ee}, a tripod; tri-sool, trident.

ut or iyut, like the affix ta, will be found in many words; thus, admiyut, humanity, shukhsiyut, self-importance, and padshah-ut, king-dom.

at, Arabic plural sign, warid-at, accident-s; moofrid-at, simple-s.

at, the custard apple, affixed like ta booht-at, abundance, from buhcot, much, sometimes aet, puncha et, an assembly, a jury of five.

ath, eight (in composition); u_{th}, ur, us, as,

ot, shelter, cover; uti, very in Sunskrit.

tue, a fold, ply, correlatively, as many, so many. after kue, jue, how many, so many.

tue, passing over; tue-kurna, to cross.

tueen, like ko ; but a compound postposition requiring ke, murd ke tueen, to the man, or simply the man.

The other dentals are seldom of much use etymologically, except d, very conspicuous in the third persons of Persian verbs.

De, give, let ; de,o, do, the plural ; ane de, let come ; do, doo, two, used in several compounds, as doosra, a second ; doona, doogna, double.

donon, both ; doodila, distracted ; lit, two-hearted ; doo ha'ee, ti ha'ee, twice and thrice alas! help! help! justice! justice!

s being convertible with h, in duh, dus, ten, mah, mas, a month, &c. we can so far account for it as the pronominal inflexion in yih, is ; wooh, cos ; though more difficult to trace it in jo, jis ; kuon, kis ; tuon, tis, &c.

su, denotes association, su-kha, su-khee, a comrade ; suhna, to put up with, bear ; sujjun, a lover.

sa, se, see, son, like ; a particle of similitude discernible in uesa, wuesa, jueza, tuesa, kuesa ; from yih, wooh, jo, tuon, kuon, or kya, meaning like this, that, which, &c. it means also ish, as kala-sa, black-ish, hora-sa, green-ish.

se, from, with, by, to, &c. sometimes sitee, and formerly son, te, &c.

sa, sometimes is used discriminatively, as kuonsa, juonsa, tuonsa, ko eesa, whichever, which of two, or many, &c.; it often requires ka after the noun, huewan ka sa, brutal; lurke ka sa, boyish; ungoor ka sa, like a single grape.

sah, a banker; si, three; si puhur, 3 o'clock; sitara, a three-stringed instrument; sisalu, triennial; si goshu, triangular.

so, the same, so, he; so, sleep thou; so,o, sleep you.

soo, as a prefix, expresses any thing good, scor, angel; soochal, good conduct, &c. whence perhaps sona, to sleep, also gold, both of which the Asiatics are very fond of; sohna, to fit, become, evidently from soo and hona contracted to sohna.

suo, sue, 100.

sayu, saye, shade.

sa_{ee}, zealous; sa_{ee}, earnest to bind a bargain; sa_{een}, master, lord.

sahee, a porcupine.

su_{ee}, exertion, endeavour.

sh, of little use except in ish, at the end of Persian roots, or imperatives, as posh-ish, cloth- ing, saz-ish, collusion. In Persian, sh sometimes expresses the third personal pronoun.

sho, a washer, in composition; deg-sho, a scul-lion; moordu sho, a corpse cleaner.

z and zh, unless as a contraction of uz, from, &c. in the Persian, have no significant power.

za, from zadu, born, means a son; mir-za, a knight, being literally meer-za, the son of a lord.

jun, juna, have the same import in Hindoo-stancee, muha-jun, high-born; soowur ka juna, a pig, or hog's son.

zee and zoo, as prefixes, mean possessed of, &c.; zee-rooh, possessed of life, living; zoo-foonoon, artful.

chu, chee, eechu, sundooq-chu or -chee, a box; deg-chu, or -chee, a pot; bagheechu, a small garden, from sundooq, a chest, deg, a large pot.

*cha, or cha^ee, tea; chah, desire.

chi, what? chhee, sy! chhee chhee, sy for shame!

chee, a particle both of diminution and agency, bundooq-chee, musquet-eer; tumboor-chee, a drum-mer.

* Many words with final a assume e in this manner, to which the learner must constantly advert in his progress among the Oriental tongues.

chhu, six, in comp. s, chhi chhe; soluh, sixteen, is a change and contraction of chhu uor duh, six and ten.

chu, in comp. four; chuo-duh, fourteen; chugoshu, quadrangular; chuo-gird, around; chuo-kunna, circumspect; lit, four-eared.

j denotes the relative state of pronominals and adverbials, jo, who; juonṣa, whichever; jo ee, whoever; jub, when; juhaṇ, where; juesa, so, like which; jitna, so many; jita, so much; jue, as many; jyoon, just as; jidhur, whither; joheen, as soon as.

k is generally interrogative, kuon, who? kya, what? kub, when? kuonsa, which? kuhan, where? kuesa, how? kitna, kita, kue, how much, many? kyoon, why? kidhur, whither?—k. contraction for kurna, as h. d. a. r. &c. is respectively for hona, dena, ana, rukhna, &c.

ka, ke, kee, a genitive, possessive, or adjective sign, to be always translated by 's, and treated as an adjective affix; ubka sal, now's year, viz. the present year; ubke sal ka khurch, this year's expence; ubke sal ke khurch ko, this year's expence for; oos ka bap, his or her father; oos kee ma, his or her mother; oos ke bap se, from his or her father; oos kee ma ko, to his or her mother; oos ke do bhāee, his or her two brothers; oos kee do buhinen, his or her two sisters.

kee is often the fem. of kiya, done, made, &c.; urz kee, he said, as stated in page 73.

ko, to, for, at, or simply the accusative sign; ghore ko do, give (to) the horse; ghore ko mut maro, don't beat the horse.

uk, ak, k, the agent, &c. puet-ak, a swimmer; sewu-k, a servant; mend-uk, a frog; ghuo-k, ditto, from swim, service, a ditch, and ghuo ghuo, the cry of a frog, the largest of which are the best teachers I know of the burr, or Northumberland r, expressed by gh in my system, in this hoarse ghuo ghuo of the Indian frogs, which certainly articulate the sound required with great precision in their responsive salutes from one brink of a water to the other, during the rainy season in Bengal. If cats occasionally converse by a modulation of their voices not unlike the human speech, the frogs and crows of the East are not behind them in these gutturals of speech kha, qa, gha; and I have often heard the Indian starling, or muena, pronounce the word şahib, master, more correctly than most of our countrymen in the Eastern hemisphere, who generally say sab, instead of sau-hib, with a full, manly, distinct sound of the long syllable sa and the exspirated hib.

As a diminutive sign, k or uk is conspicuous in murd uk, a manikin, tifl uk, a little child, &c.

ke, kur, as, having, ly; mar-ke, mar-kur, having beaten; sometimes mar-kurke, mar-kur-kur, kyoon-ke, kyoon-kur, because, as how; jan-kur, knowing-ly.

ki, that, who, which, saying.

koo, bad, opposed to soo, koo-chal, misconduct, koo-dhung, un-mannerly.

kue, how many? ku ee, several.

que, reaching, vomiting.

g applies to the future tense of verbs, affixed to the aorist terminations oon e en o, and prefixed to the masc. sing. and plural a e, or the feminine ee, een, iyan; ja,oonga, ja,egaa, ja,enge, ja,oge, ja,oongee, ja,egee, ja,engeen, ja,ogeen, &c. I will go, and so on.

The foregoing significant particles will prove so truly convenient for the analytic and synthetic process with Oriental vocables, on which very great proficiency in the Hindoostanee must ultimately depend, that I cannot now resist the impulse to furnish every facility of this sort to the inquisitive scholar, by way of exercise to his memory, before he applies his judgment progressively in the derivation and composition of words, as they pass in review before him, through the whole of the examples. Under this impression, I have collected below, the most common prepositive, adjunctive, and intermediate inseparable particles, (or words used as such) which could not appear before as mere letters, that they also may be learned completely by heart with the postpositions, &c. which follow in pages 103, 104, &c.

Prepositives.

ghuer, other,	ghuer şuhēch̄, in-correct.
khilaf, opposite,	khilaf uçl, un-reasonable.
kum, less,	kum zor, pith-less.
üdum, without,	üdum foorşut, leisure-less.
bud, bad,	bud şoorut, ill-favoured.
zisht, ill,	zizht roo, ditto, ugly.
pust- } doon- } tung, narrow,	pust- } himmut, illiberal. doon- } tung dil, narrow minded.
goom, lost,	goom hosh, insensible.
door, bad,	door mut, un-wise.

which have all a privative, negative, or defective tendency, in a variety of compounds, such as the instances here produced, merely for the learner's future guidance through innumerable derivatives of the same species in this and all languages.

The particle la has been omitted in its proper place, though like na of great use as a privative : la-char, helpless; la-ghurz, dis-interested; la-hul, in-explicable.

khooşh, pleasant, khoohtubu, good-humoured.
khoob, good, khoobsoorut, well-favoured.
nek, virtuous, nek mizaj, good-natured.
shuh, } grand, shuh rah, high-way.
ra.e, } royal, &c. } ra.e bañs, the royal bamboo.
raj, } royal, &c. } raj hath, the head market.
 express good in their compounds ; the three last often apply to the vegetable and animal kingdom, importing bulk, excellence, &c.

qabil, able, qabil ilaj, remediable.
laiq, proper, laiq suza, punishable.
 sometimes the order of the words is inverted in these and other examples.

şahib, } lord, master, } şahib uql, a wise man.
meer, } &c. like præ- } meer mujlis, a president.
uhl, } ditus. } uhli kar, a tradesman.

ziyadu,	denote excess,	ziyadu tulub, exorbitant ; ziyadugo, talkative ; foozoolfoozool,		khidmut, officious .
hum, with ,	&c. concord,	hum muktab, a school-fellow ; hum dil, unanimous .
ek, one ,		ek jins, congenial ; ek dil, unanimous , &c.
neem,	half ,	neem pokht, half dressed .
udh,		udh mooa, half dead .
pesh, before ,		pesh-wa, fore-man .
pus, after ,		pus khoordu, leavings .
dur, in ,		dur soorut, in case .
		dur kar, in need .

Adjunctives.

huṭ,	ness, &c.	kuṛwa huṭ, bitterness .
wuṭ,		buna wuṭ, management .
gee,		tazu gee, freshness .
pun,		moṭa pun, fatness .
puna,		bewa puna, widowhood .
ana,		ghur ana, household .
anu,		nuzur anu, a present , &c. zunanu, womens apartments .

sal eenu,	yearly- daily-	pay, wages , &c.
roz eenu,		chob eenu, wooden .

the three last denote, fees, fines, places, adjectives, &c. as above.

wala,	man, &c.	doodh wala, a milk-man.
wal,		kot wal, police officer.
wuya,		nuchwuya, a dancer.
iya,		mukhun iya, a butter-man.
waha,		hul waha, a ploughman.
aha,		duor aha, a runner.
hara,		lukur hara, a wood-monger.
war,		ommewar, a candidate, hopeful.

The whole of the foregoing assume various forms in composition, such as al, el, eela, uela, har, uha, era, which are used as adjectives, agents, &c. thus, rus eela, juicy, luscious; ghuruula, domestic; pael, sure-footed, a good pacer; sump era, a snake-catcher, with many more.

In the feminine with many nouns they occur so:

walee, woman, doodh walee, a milk-woman, cheere walee, a virgin, ruseelee ankh, a luscious eye.

kar, bud kar, an evil-doer, kisht kar, a planter.
gar, khidmut gar, a waiting servant, goonuhgar, a sinner.

gur, suoda gur, a trader, saboon gur, a soap-boiler.

dar, dookan dar, a shop-keeper, zumeen dar, a landholder, farmer.

The whole of the above, and a number below, imply maker, doer, holder, keeper, &c. as agents in er or adjectives of our language.

burdar, bearer, hooqqu burdar, a pipe man, nishan burdar, standard bearer.

bur, carrier, pueghum bur, a messenger, prophet, ruh bur, a conductor.

ban, keeper, bagh ban, a gardener, durban, a door-keeper.

wan, —— garee wan, a carter, kishtee-wan, a boat-man.

man, —— goon man, an artist, boodh man, a wise man.

baz, player, shuṭrunj baz, a chess player, rindēe baz, a wencher, dum-baz, a puffer.

kush, drawer, tar kush, a wire drawer, hooqu kush, a smoker.

saz, maker, zumanu-saz, a time-server, sookhn-saz, an orator.

geer, taker, rah geer, a wayfarer, dust geer, a patron, goolgeer, snuffers.

furosh, seller, mue furosh, a wine merchant, puneer furosh, a cheese-monger.

khor, eater, khoon khor, khoon khwar, a murderer, blood-thirsty.

khwar, drinker,	shurab-khwar, or khor, a wine-bibber, sood khor, a usurer.
khan, teller,	qissu khan, a story-teller, Farsee khan, a Persian scholar.
go, speaker,	durogh go, a liar, rast go, a teller of truth, candid.
undaz, thrower,	gol undaz, a gunner, teer undaz, an archer, burq undaz, a musqueteer.
chula, ——	gol chula, a cannoneer.
cheen, seizer,	sookhn cheen, a carper at words, gool cheen, a florist.
rez, shedder,	khoon rez, a shedder of blood, a murderer, rung rez, a dyer.
kun, digger,	gor kun, a grave-digger, moohur kun, a seal-engraver.
zun, mar, &c.	striker, killer, &c. rug zun, a phlebotomist, rah-zun, butmar, a robber, high-way-man, foot-pad, &c. chiree mar, a bird-catcher.
shikar, catcher,	mahee shikar, a fish-catcher, ahoo shikar, a deer-catcher.
les, licker,	rikabee les, a plate-licker, a sycophant, a toad-eater.
doz, sewer,	khuemudoz, a tent-maker.
sho, washer,	deg sho, a pot-washer, a scullion, moordu sho, a corpse-washer.

dan, knower,	hisab dan, an accountant.
indu, ——	nuwees indu, a writer.
bos, kissing,	pa bos, kissing the foot, dust bos, kissing the hand.
jo, searcher,	ueb jo, a fault seeker, a critic.
shunas, } knower,	qudur shunas, a discerner of
fuham, } &c.	merit, a patron, kuj fuham, perverse.
suwar, mounted, &c.	shuh suwar, a swift rider.
nusheen, sitting,	tukht nusheen, seated on a throne.
bukhsh, giver,	khusta bukhsh, a pardoner of sins.
posh, hider,	purdu posh, a concealer or win- ker at faults.
purust, adorer,	shikum-purust, a belly-worship- per, an epicure.
purwur, } protector,	ghureeb purwur, protect-
nuwaz, } &c.	ing the poor, yuteem nu- waz, the orphan's friend.
bund, binder,	jild bund, a book-binder, nuul bund, a farrier.
amoz, taught,	nuo amoz, a novice, tyro, &c.
purdaz, manager,	kar purdaz, managing business, a factor.
ncoma, shewer,	rah ncoma, a conductor.
ashob, inflaming,	dil ashob, inflaming the heart.

fureb, stealer ,	dil fureb, a heart-stealer, a mistress.
ungez, exciter ,	atush ungez, an incendiary, fitnu ungez, a mutineer.
azar, disturber ,	murdcom-azar, a tyrant.
koosha, opener ,	mooshkil koosha, a solver of difficulties.
goodaz, melter ,	dil goodaz, heart-melting, affecting, tun goodaz, melting the body, enervating.
ruo, walking ,	tez ruo, swift-footed.
been, seeing ,	pesh been, foreseeing, provident.
khwah, } wisher ,	khuer khwah, a well-wisher.
undesh, } think-	door undesh, provident.
ṭulub, } er, &c.	rishwut ṭulub, wanting a bribe, corrupt.
soz, burner ,	ṭalum soz, burning the world, a great beauty, a tyrant. ufshan, shedding , gool ufshan, scattering roses.
fishan, ——	ushk fishan, shedding tears. ufroz, illuminating , buzm ufroz, cheering an assembly. mohun, } attractor ,	mun mohun, } heart-al- rooba, } luring. dil rooba. } ahun rooba, the magnet. kuh rooba, amber.

zadu,	born ,	shuh zadu, king's son, a prince .
zad,	&c.	khanu zad, domestic .
za,		wilayut za, born abroad .
bhur, full, all, &c.		pet bhur, a belly-full. rat bhur, all night. din bhur, the whole day. kumur bhur, up to the waist.
jog, able ,		khane jog, eatable, peene jog, drinkable.
wur,	possessing ,	jan wur, having life, an ani- mal, dilawur, brave.
mund,		fayudu mund, profitable, beneficial .
wunt,		bul wont, powerful, strong .
nak,		huol nak, fearful, timid .
geen,		ghum geen, sorrowful .
een,		chob een, wooden .
sar,		shurm sar, full of shame, ashamed .
aloodu,		gurd alloodu, dusty, khoon alloodu, bloody .
amez,		mukur amez, deceitful .
goon,		neel goon, blue coloured .
fam,		gool fam, rose-coloured .
mail,		subzee mail, greenish .
the last ten or twelve adjunctives apply to pos- session of quality, colour, &c.
dan,		nas dan, a snuff-box, numuk dan, a salt-cellar.

khanu,	bawurchee khanu, the cook-room, kitchen.
ghura,	bhoom ghura, a ground floor or cellar.
muḥul,	chor muḥul, a seraglio.
sura,e,	ḥurum sura,e, ditto.
sala, sal,	ṭuk sal, the mint, ga,o sala, a cow- house.
gah,	aram gah, a sleeping room.
stan,	Hindoo-stan, India.
istan,	gool-istan, a rose-garden.
usthan,	dew usthan, a temple, house of God.
shun,	gool shun, a rose bed.
zar,	lalu zar, a tulip bed.
baree,	goolab baree, a rose garden.
waṛee,	phool waṛee, a flower garden.
gunj,	nuwwab gunj, viceroy-market.
gola,	lon gola, the salt-market.
ṭola,	muchḥlee ṭola, fish-street, &c.
ṭolee,	ukbur abad, the city of Ukbur, viz.
abad,	Agra.
nugur,	chundur nugur, moon-town, our Chan- dernagore!
poor,	ghazee poor, hero-town.
shuhr,	unoop shuhr, the incomparable city. alias Anopshire!
guṛh,	futiḥ guṛh, Fort Victoria.

bhoom,	beer bhoom, warrior-land.
bazar,	qasim bazar, the market of Qasim.
khund,	rohil khund, the Rohila country.
gaṇw,	chuṭ gaṇw, lamp-town.
mala,	rag mala, a song or tune book.
namu,	shah namu, the book of kings.

the whole from dan might be termed local adjunctives, as they all seem to imply some place, repository, town, &c.

The intermediate particles have been almost all discussed among the significant letters or syllables, in pages 65, and 77, pur, on, dur, in, and ka, of, excepted; dugha pur dugha, tit for tat, afut pur afut, calamity on calamity, pue dur pue, successively, khet ka khet, the whole field, are examples enow to show the nature of such compounds.

Simple Postpositions.

ka, ke, kee, like—ra, re, ree, na, ne, nee, of, 's, to, &c.

ko, to, for, at, in, &c.

pur, on, at, after, by, &c.

se, sitee, with, from, by, to, &c.

men, in, on, after, at, &c.

tuk, tuluk, lug, toree, le, to, up to, &c.
hokur, through, by.

have been termed simple, from their governing the mere inflexion of the noun, seldom or never with it requiring ke, kee, &c. though the compounds often drop these, and rest satisfied with the simple inflected word, particularly pas, oopur, and a few others. Pur ko, pur se, men se, ke tu_{een} ko, ke pas se, as a sort of reduplicated postpositions, are used like our own,—from within, from below, &c.

I have inserted ra and na, &c. above, rather to show their great affinity to ka, ke, kee, than to have them also considered, like ka, postpositions, for they are merely pronominal genitive signs, like our own mine, thine, his, her, your, &c. His being just a contraction of he's, i. e. of him, may help to explain the coska, coske, coskee, his, her, in Hindoostanee; if we advert also to the Latin suus, sua; cuius, cuja; kiska, kiskee, whose, viz. who's, of whom, applying as adjectives to his, her, whose, in concord with the noun; sua mater, coskee ma, his or her mother.

Feminine Postpositions.

turuf, janib, near, towards, side.

turuḥ, manner, like, way, mode.

khatir, for, sake, mind, heart.

murifut, by, through, means, medium.

nisbut, respecting, compared with, relation.

have been so called because they require kee, ree, and nee, of the words which they govern, (being in fact all feminine nouns, used elliptically as postpositions) while the compounds (as masculines in the same manner) take ke, re, ne.

Compound Postpositions.

tueen, to, for, &c.

kune, to, for, &c.

pas, near, to, with, nigh to, &c.

yuhan, wuhan, chez, at, 's, here, there.

nuzdeek, qureeb, nere, or, near, by, &c. with.

copur, above, upon, besides.

neeche, tule, below, beneath, under.

undur, bheetur, in, within.

bahur, out, without, abroad.

sath, sung, sumet, scodhan, humrah, shamil,
with, together, along with, &c.

hath, to, with.

peechhe, buud, buuduz, after, behind.

pure, oedhur, osturuf, ospar, on that side, beyond.

wure, idhur, isturuf, ispar, on this side.

age, samhne, sunmokh, rooburoo, moqabil, hoozoor, hote, ruhte, before, against, opposite,
in presence of, &c. &c. during.

aspas, chuogird, gird, gird pesh, around, about.

buruks, bur khilaf, in opposition to, contrasted with, vice versa.

ghueruz, bujooz, wura'e, siwa'e, bughuer, chhor, bina, bidoon, besides, except, without.

beech, beechmen, durmiyan, mud, mabuen, be- tween, among, amid, in, &c.

waste, subub, ba_is, liye, karun, mare, laluch,
for, on account of, through, from, by, &c.

iwuz, budal, sunte, bumunzili, instead, for.

burabur, moowafiq, qabil, bu moojib, misal, musl, manund, like, according to.

la_iq, mconasib, worthy of, proper for.

huqmen, in regard to, respecting.

war par, through and through.

Though the simple postpositions cannot well occur prepositively, the compounds often do, and, in this way, the noun is frequently between them both, siwa khoođa ke, or khoođa ke siwa, besides God. The Persian prepositions, be, bur, muj, pesh, &c. are sometimes found so in the Hindoostanee, in which a number of other words, meaning reason, place, sake, side, way, &c. may be met with as postpositions, like huqq, right, above, to which men, in, with, &c. is of course either expressed or understood in such sentences as, beemar ke huqq men ubhee shurab-uch-chhee nuheen, with regard to the patient, wine is not good at present, meaning, as far as concerns, in respect to, considering, &c.

Local Adverbials.

Yuhan, here, wuhan, there, kuhan, where? juhan, where, tuhan, such or that place, kuheen, somewhere, anywhere, uor kuheen, elsewhere, kuheen nuheen, nowhere, hur kuheen, everywhere, kuheen nu kuheen, somewhere or other, juhan kuheen, wherever, yuhan kuheen, hereabouts, wuheen, that very place.

idhur, hither, oodhur, thither, kidhur, whither? jidhur, whither, tidhur, that place.

Yuhan se, hence, wuhan se, thence, kuhan se, whence? &c.

Temporal Adverbials.

* ub, now, kub, when? jub, when, tub, then.
 aj, to-day, now, kul, yesterday or to-morrow, purson, the day before or after.

ub tuk, aj tuk, hunoz, hitherto, yet, kub tuk,
how long? jub tuk, until, jub se, since, kub se, whence? &c.

tub tuk, so long, aj kul, now-a-days, ubhee,
just now, immediately, &c.

kubhee, ever, kubhee nuheen, never, kubhee kubhee, some times, seldom, kubhee nu kubhee, sometime or other, roz roz, daily, bar bar, often,
 kue bar, how many times, jue bar, so often, tuc
 bar, as often, pher or phir, again, baree baree, alternately, ek bar, once, do bar, twice, &c. tis pur, thereafter.

Adverbials of Quality, Quantity, Number, Manner, &c.

uesa, so, wuesa, such, kuesa, how? juesa, as,
 tuesa, thus.

* It is rather singular, that all the derivatives of this word frequently change b to d or o, whence kud, when? juo lug, until, &c.

ita, this much, oota, that much, kita, how much? jita, so much, tita, thus much.

itna, so many, cotna, witna, that many, kitna, how many? jitna, so many, titna, that many.

yoon, thus, woon, that way, kyoon, how? jyoon, as, so, &c. tyoon, that way, &c. yoon kur, this way, kyoon kur, how? what way? &c.

kuee, several, kue, how many? jue, as many, tue, so many.

khoab, well, khurab, ill, &c. from the adj. good, bad, &c. puhle, first, rather, doosre, secondly, &c.

han, yes, nu, nuheen, no, not, nor, neither, kyoon nuheen, why not? ulbuttu, certainly, mootluq, not at all, hurgiz, by no means, never, mut, don't.

shayud, perhaps, ho to ho, may be.

yuune, viz. to wit, namely, nuheen to, otherwise, else.

ulug, apart, jooda jooda, separately, ek ek, one by one.

milkur, leke, together, uksur, generally.

buhoot, ziyadu, much, too much, very, uor, more, bus, enough, qureeb, almost, thora, little, bura, great, very, goya, as if, sirf, fuqut, only.

Conjunctions.

uor, uo, o, wu, and; bhee, also, even, both, likewise.

ya, khwah, chaho, or, either, to, tuo, pus, well, then.

ugur, gur, jo, if, ugurchi, although, jubki, since.

kyoon kur, because, wherefore, isliye, therefore.
ki, jo, ta, that, whether, when, go ki, provided.
siwa, except, wurnu, unless, tis purbhée, tuobhee, still, nevertheless, at least, such, truly, such kur, indeed.

pur, lekin, but, umma, mugur, wulekin, bulki, nay, moreover, hurchund, although, tahum, uzbuski, halanki, still, notwithstanding, bu shurt ki, on condition that, provided.

Interjections.

Shabash ! afreen ! wah wah ! kya khoob !
dhuni dhun ! wah jee ! kya bat hue ! denote joy praise, like our bravo ! well done ! ha,e ha,e ! hue hue ! wa,e wa,e ! wa,e wuela ! imply grief, as alas ! lackaday ! chhee chhee ! chul chukhe ! doorho ! indicate aversion, disgust, fye fye ! be- gone! choop! choop ruhō! hush! silence! bus, stop! plenty! soono! kyoon jee! hear! you sir!

bap re bap! father father! ma ree ma! mother mother!

After what has been laid down in page 40, no one can find fault with the collection here made of all the most useful words in the language, which, as postpositions, adverbs, conjunctions, &c. often run so much into each other's divisions, that they cannot well be discriminated so exactly as could be wished. Among them all, hee, ever, just, &c.; sa, as; kur, as; liye, wastu, account; turuf, side, ward; turuh, manner; an, dhur, place; ta, quantum; is, this; os, that; kis, what; se, from, &c. will be very conspicuous; but kisliye, wherefore? &c. are so easily resolvable, like qua propter, and similar words in the Latin and other tongues, by reperusing the significant particles, and the chapter on the composition and derivation of words in this Work, that we need not enlarge farther.

In proportion as the student acquires a knowledge by heart of these vocables, selected in the foregoing pages for that express purpose, before he proceeds to the sentences hereafter given, in support of grammatical rules, the more ready-ly will he comprehend the drift of every example, especially if he will at the same time progressively encrease his mental store of adverbials from my Dictionary or Vocabulary, which can always be consulted for nouns, verbs, &c. as they may be required to explain any portion of Hindoostanee composition, when, from the context, the meaning is not quite obvious. Every real student will reflect on my earnest remarks in the preface, so applicable to the matter in hand; and in every practicable case of this kind should trust almost as much, if not more, to his own genius and resources, as to research and pains with any lexicon whatever.

— has been termed man's surest guide through life, and his great boast over the brute creation; yet animals are less subject to error, though they trust almost entirely to —, in the grand objects of their care and existence. To man — seems artificial, while to brutes — appears intuitive; the former therefore requires something very like —, before he can trust to —, in which the latter are said to have no — whatever, their hopes being limited to this — alone.

The scholar must now learn, from thought alone, to fill up the blanks of the preceding sentence as well as he can, and in future to do the very same thing with every Hindoostanee paragraph, of which he may happen to know, or find in a dictionary, the same proportion of words, as he does in the English above, remaining ignorant, however, of the rest, as they are supposed to be produced by his own manly perseverance and deep reflection.

The fruits of such efforts will be stamped with different degrees of value, as the learner feels impressed with the idea, that he in some measure discovered them himself, or owed them to the labours of another person. As the first, they will be fondly cherished and retained long in his mind, like the darling children of his own fancy and judgment, while, in the latter view, they may be more frequently treated as a mere spurious breed, and committed to a very fallible stepmother's charge, viz. the memory only. The man who cannot think, will not easily be taught, by this or any book, his own language, far less a foreign tongue, so difficult as those of the East in general are : I must therefore beseech my pupils, in this stage of their progress, to commence seriously with the art and practice of thinking, more fully elucidated in the Preface, to which they may hence refer with every advantage.

Hindoostanee Declension of Terminating Letters or Particles.

Singular.

Plural.

Nominative a or u. e, like the singular inflexion,

Inflexion e on, by substitution for a or u of the nom. singular.

Gen. Uninfl. e ka. on ka, } meaning of -'s,

Ditto Infl. e ke. on ke, } and being a sort

Ditto Femin. e kee. on kee. } of possessive or adjective form.

Accus. and Dat. e ko. on ko, to or for.

Vocative e re. o, substituted for a or u.

Ablative e se. on se, with, from, by, &c.

Nouns terminating with every other Letter.

Nom. b, d, ee, &c. when masc. b, d, &c. and to fem. en is added, or an, if they end in ee.

Infl. none on is added to the nom.

Gen. Uninfl. — ka. on ka. sing. the ee of

Singular.		Plural.
Ditto Infl.	— ke.	on ke. which, how-
Ditto Fem.	— kee.	on kee. ever, general-
Accus.&Dat.	— ko.	on ko. ly becomes iy
Voc.	— re.	o. before an, on,
Abl.	— se.	on se. as golee, a pill , goliyan, goli- yon, pills .

The learner may now form as many cases, with the whole of the postpositions, as he pleases, giving them such names as will most readily convey the idea intended, by the words so used, viz. donative, locative, instrumental, social, &c. but he should ever recollect, that the simple postpositions require the inflexion, if any, of the noun, while the compounds govern the inflected, and the fem. postpositions, the feminine genitive, thus, gole ke pas, near the ball; bundon kee khatir, for (the sake of) slaves; bandee ke sath, with the slave girl; bandiyon ke turuh, like slave girls; though it must be confessed, that ke is frequently omitted, ghur pas, near the house.

When a or u, as exceptions, happen to be indeclinable, they fall under the rule for nouns in b, d, ee, oo, &c. dana, a wise man or wise men;

dana ka, ke, kee, &c. dana_{on} ko, &c. bulā, evil; bulā_{en}, evils; bulā_{on} ka, ke, kee, &c.

Adjectives are declined exactly as nouns, only they have not the inflexion on nor añ, when their accompanying nouns have them.

gora murd, a fair man.	gore murd, fair men.
gore murd ka, ke, kee,	gore murdo _n ka, ke,
of a fair man, &c.	kee, fair men's, &c.

gora, a European.	gore, Europeans.
gore ka, ke, kee.	goro _n ka, ke, kee.

khoob lu <small>r</small> ka, a good boy.	khoob lu <small>r</small> ke, good boys.
khoob lu <small>r</small> ke ka, ke,	khoob lu <small>r</small> ko _n ka, ke,
kee, &c.	kee.

khoobon ka, ke, kee, of the good, opposed to—
of the wicked, budon ka, ke, kee.

bhulee lu <small>r</small> kee, a good girl.	bhulee lu <small>r</small> kiyan, good girls.
bhulee lu <small>r</small> kee ka, ke,	bhulee lu <small>r</small> kiyon ka, ke,
kee.	kee.

Comparison in Hindooostanee is very simple, and greatly assisted by se, meaning than, or by the words like our very, more, most, &c.

luke se lukee goree hue, the girl is fairer than the boy; lukee se luka gora hue, the boy is fairer than the girl ;* luka buhcot gora hue, the boy is very fair; pur lukee oos se uor goree, but the girl is more fair or fairer; such wooh sub se goree hue, true, she is the fairest of the whole.

Pronouns.

They follow the general rule of declension, with some slight deviations, so :

Nom.	muen, I.	hum, we.
Inf.	mojh, me.	hum or humon, us.
Gen.	me-ra, -re, -ree, of	hum -ara, -are, aree, of me, and my, mine. too, tuen, thou; toom, toomh, you, declined exactly as above.

N. yih, he, this, she, it; wooh, he, that, &c. ye, they, these; we, they, those.

I. is, him, her, and it, this; cos. him, &c. in or inhon, them, these; con, conhon, them, those.

And in like manner are the interrogative, relative, and correlative, pronouns declined.

* Lit. boy than girl fair is—girl than boy fair is; a transposition which finely elucidates the nature of Hindoo-stanee construction, thus contrasted with our language.

kuon, kis, who? juon, jo, jis, who; tuon, tis, that, &c.

koee, any, has kisee, and kya, what? kahe, in their respective inflexions.

ap, self, is commonly up-na, -ne, -nee, own, in the gen. though it also often admits of ka, ke, kee, instead of na, ne, nee.

In the same member of a sentence the pronoun and its possessive form cannot follow each other, as in our language, but rather take upne, upnee. I will go to my house; muen upne (never mere) ghur ko ja,oonga, if you will go to yours; ugur toom upne (never toomhare) ghur ko ja,o, and he to his; uor wooh upne (never oske) ghur ko.

They nevertheless say, I and my brother, as we do, muen uor mera bhaee; he and his friend, wooh uor ooska dost; they and their sisters, we uor conkee buhineen.

The pronouns yih, wooh, he, this, that, &c. are of course also adjectives.

N. yih lukka, this boy, ye lukke, these boys.

I. is lukke, in lukkon, never inhon lukkon.

N. wooh lukkee, that girl. we lukkiyan, those girls.

I. oos lukkee, oon lukkiyon, never oon-hon.

though as mere pronouns, inhoṇ and onhoṇ be in constant use.

We may here recapitulate, that moojh-e, toojh-e, is-e, oos-e, kis-e, tis-e, are equivalent to moojh-ko, &c. as hum en, toom hen, in hen, on-hen, &c. are to humko, humon ko; and at the same time observe of the other pronouns, that with other nouns in on they do not retain it, hum log, we people; hum teen buhinen, we three sisters; hum teen buhinoṇ ko, to us three sisters; hum teenon se, from us three; humon pur, on us. Mere, tere, humare, toomhare, occasionally supply the place of moojh, &c. or vice versa, but more rarely.

While ra is to the two first personals, what ka is to all nouns, the last may, by the intervention of a noun, be used after moojh, toojh, hum, toom, so—moojh ghureeb ka bap, the father of poor me; toojh bechare kee ma, the mother of helpless thee; hum duolut mundoṇ ke ghorē, the horses of us wealthy; toom bhulon ke bat, the speech of worthy you.

As the active preterite expletive ne inflects declinable nominatives, muen and tuen excepted, the learner must not be surprised to meet with inflexions as nominatives, thus; kuon aya, who came? wcoh admee jis ne diya, that man who gave; tis ne mara, he beat or killed; muen ne dekha, I saw; oos ne pukra, he seized.

Having thus given an abstract, or bird's eye view of declension in this language, for the benefit of the general grammarian, in his rapid flight through this region of Oriental philology, we shall next proceed to a similar sketch of the only conjugation to be found in the Hindoo-stanee tongue.

The auxiliary verb has been sufficiently discussed among the significant particles, we may therefore observe once for all, that na, to, being dropt, the root of the verb remains, which is moreover always the imperative second person singular; pal-na, to foster, foster-ing, with ne, nee, but the terminations alone will suffice in this way, as they will all branch off from the root of any verb, in this order; pal-a, -ee, -e, -een, or -iyan; -ke, -kur, -kurke, -kurkur, &c.; of which the subsequent scheme will give the learner an adequate notion, by studying the whole with due attention to the root pal, from pal-a, nourished, to pal-kurke, having nourished. This part of the verb very conveniently expresses many of our adverbs, bhoolkur, inadvertently, i. e. having forgotten.

was, did, had, &c.

m. f.	muen,	-a -ee	m. f.	hoon,	am, &c.
tuen,	-tuen,	ed, en,	-ta, -tee,	hue,	hue,
wooh,			-teen,	huen,	huen,
hum,	-een.		-te,	{ or ho,	the, theen,
toom,	-e and		{ -tiyan, huen,		thiyan,
we,	-iyan.

forms the past tense and participle, to which, by prefixing t, we have the present of every Hindoo-stanee verb.

having, as the past participle.

m. & f.	muen,	-oon-	m. f.	the aorist he, and	is formed the fu-tuen,	-tuen,	-e-	-ga	-gee	ture will or shall
wooh,			also the impera-		{ -ke, -kur,
hum,	-en-		tive, omitting e of	-green.	{ -be, viz. oonga, e-
toom,	-o-		the second person	{ -ga, -ge	{ -kurke, kukur,
we,	-en-		singular. With—	{ or -giyan	of all verbs.

Q

N. B. Pal, nourish thou, sometimes having nourished, is the root of the whole from pal-na, to nourish, to pal kurkur, having nourished, fostered, &c.

Hoo,a expresses our been, is, was, according to circumstances, and often appears to have no meaning at all, it is therefore omitted or expressed on such occasions at the discretion of the speaker; muen hoo,a hoon, &c. I have been, &c.; too hoo,a tha, &c. thou hadst been, &c.; panee gurm hue? is the water hot? han gurm hoo,a, yes it is hot. There may be a very nice distinction in the use of the present and perfect, apparently promiscuously, but it seems not less obscure than, he is arrived, he has arrived, &c. in our own language.

A species of second future of hona is formed from the indicative, instead of the aorist, viz. hoonga, huega, huenge, hoge, expressive perhaps of some doubt. A future, or polite imperative, is commonly formed by affixing iye, or iyo, to the imp. sing. second person, as, ja,iye, ja,iyo, go, pray go; and, you will be pleased to go, also expressed by ja,iyega.

With other verbs, instead of iye, &c, ja,iye occurs, or, changed thus; deejiye, pray give; keejiye, please do; khaja,iye, pray eat, or khaiye.

There are no irregular verbs in the language, because kiya, done, moo,a, dead, are merely redundants from keena, moona, the old words for kurna, to do; murna, to die.

Hoo, liya, diya, guya, are easily accounted for; the last would have been gaya, did not that mean he sung, and sometimes jaya still is used in its regular form.

It may be proper to remark, that hona means to be, exist, remain, &c. besides being like esse, often used inversely with datives for the verb rukhna, habere, to have, with which the learner will be on his guard, when translating the languages of India.

The expletive ne, before preterite active verbs, will be best learned from practice; but the scholar must recollect, that when nominatives are used accusatively, the verb agrees with them rather than with its own proper nominative, and that accusatives, on the other hand, with ne, keep the verb in an indeclinable state entirely so; lurkon ne lurkiyan mareen, boys beat girls; lurkiyon ne lurkon ko mara, girls beat boys; a curious regimen, which will soon become familiar by a little attention, as the rule certainly runs through the whole language, with very few exceptions. The pluperfect is often substituted for the perfect, sipahee kul aya tha, the soldier came (lit. had come) yesterday; and the other tenses, like those in most languages, run much into each other. . *

Before the tyro can possibly pronounce well, with ease and fluency conjoined, he will find it absolutely necessary to read and ponder over the whole of the preceding sheets, at least ten times, if he at the same time be resolved to comprehend the subject thoroughly, previous to his farther advancement in this language, a measure which I recommend sincerely to him, from a conviction, that he will yet feel grateful for the present importunity on my part, as his progress afterwards will certainly both delight and astonish himself. Not less than twenty readings of the extract from my Ultimatum, in page 50, will suffice to enable any scholar to read it with equal facility as so much Latin or English; but these readings must be performed in a loud audible voice, either for the reader's own ears to admonish and correct him as he proceeds, or for his fellow students, as hearers, to make their own remarks on the performance progressively, with the most beneficial effects to every one concerned in such a pursuit.

A literal version of the first paragraph in the story of Sukontula, carefully compared with the translation in page 54, may throw such light on the subject as will render the student's future labour light as a feather; I shall consequently indulge him with it in this place.

“ Now forewards story of thus relation is, that the wilderness in besides God of, her any care taking person not was, but a bird her over own wings of shade making was, this from, her name is Sukcontula. There fallen is she weeping was, tears of pearls eye-lids on stringing was, milk for taking mouth opening remained had, hands feet own continued striking had, when protector of world—own favour made, that Kunn saint somewhere bathing for gone had, just as that quarter from turned out, saw, that this what power divine is! that new flower of parterre to, flower place from far having seen, bewildered in manner of nightingale picture became, rolling pearl orphan like was, but ground on, rolling it of seeing, he sorrowful became.”

However uncouth, redundant, preposterous, or defective, this verbatim et literatim translation may seem, it cannot be much more so than a similar view of other tongues would often exhibit; and as the present mode is, after all, the most rational groundwork for rendering one language into another faithfully, the scholar may now, by way of exercise, turn my bald version here into the best English in his power, and then let him compare it with mine in page 54. Such a habit once acquired, will not only, in the first instance, give the learner a great command of words, with an accurate idea of the grammatical arrangement and idiom of the Hindoostanee, but may hereafter qualify him as a most faithful and expert translator or interpreter of Eastern tongues.

Taking it for granted, that my advice has been studiously followed, and the comparison made accordingly, it will probably appear, that my version cannot stand the test of rigid examination, and, on the whole, in point of elegance, may fall greatly short of my pupils efforts to excel me. To anticipate defence when the objections are unknown, might be premature, and to repine at superior talents would prove me illiberal in the extreme, more especially while stimulating my young friends to enter the lists in a fair trial of skill with their instructor.

I shall next analyse the first paragraph of the story, and as every word of it will be found in the Vocabulary, the student cannot be better employed than in finishing the whole, as I have begun, either at present, or when he has deliberately perused all the grammatical portion of this Work. See page 50, as we proceed.

Ub, now, well, whence ubhee, just now, immediately, already, le ub, well then, ub tub, on the go, just a-going, and many others ; age, before, on, forwards, henceforth, &c. inflected from aga, front, forepart, whence several derivatives, distinguishable by the initial ag or ug, all connected with the radical meaning; dastan, story, narrative, novel, romance, &c. ; ka, of, 's, agreeing with buyan, detail, relation, the nominative of hue, is, dastan ka buyan hue, story's detail is ; yoon, thus, in this way, so, from which yoon hee, just so, for nothing, without labour, &c. ; Hindoo-stanee zooban muen ne yoon hee seekhee, I learned the Hindoo-stanee tongue, the best way I could, without taking any pains to acquire it, may safely be said by many a Jargonist, who is not aware, that yoon hee expresses so much in this useful language ; ki, that, who, which, when, saying, thus, as follows, &c. a handy little word, which practice will elucidate much better than precept ; wooh, the, that, it, him, her, inflexion of wooh, generally implying remoteness of the object ; but when proximity is not essential, wooh is more applicable to our he, she,

it, used indefinitely than yih, this person or thing, nearest or last spoken of; cos is here an adjective in concord with jungul, a desert, wood, wild, waste, wilderness, jungle! &c. but governed by the postposition men, in, &c. Siwa, siwa e, besides, except, save, but, placed prepositively, though one of the compound postpositions; Khooða, God, an exception to the general rule of nouns in a u, being inflected to e; ke, of, 's, to, &c. often apparently redundant, being the inflected genitive sign governed by siwa, a compound postposition, for which in English we cannot always find any meaning; khooða ke siwa, will necessarily be rendered by us, besides God, the Almighty excepted, &c. in which, ke, as a significant word, can have no place, though on other occasions it may become to, as in hookm ke moowafiq, according to orders.

coska, her, his, its, of her, &c. From the nature of the English language, more attention is paid to the gender of the possessive person than the thing possessed of; in Latin and Hindoostanee it is the reverse, whence coska ghur, his or her house; coskee kitab, his or her book; coska bap, suus pater, his or her father; koee, any; khubur, care, heed, intelligence, notice, news, &c. lene, taking, infl. of lena, to take, being go- verned by wala, man, person, one, &c. in the compound here used; khubur lene wala, a protector, guardian, friend, care-taking-person, in the masc. to agree with Khoda, God.

Nu, not, tha, was. In the Oriental tongues, sound logic and grammar go often hand in hand, where with us they seem to separate, and in no instance more than in negative sentences like—I saw no body; I will give him nothing; he is nowhere to be found; no soldier will be permitted, &c. which can be rendered in Hindoostance by no other mode than—I saw not any body; he is not anywhere; any soldier will not be permitted; and, I will not give him any thing, muen cosko kcochh nuheen doonga.—Were we asked how it was possible to see nobody, nothing, &c. the question might puzzle us, and our answer could not be very satisfactory to people who make speech and common sense more subservient to each other than we do, at least in such examples as the present, not less perplexing than the ungrammatical phrase, my lord, used by one man individually, or a thousand together, when addressing a peer of the realm. Her of any protector was not—we would change to—she had no protector—or, she had not a protector—a case in point which will illustrate the subject, as well as a hundred more could do.

Pur, but, yet, &c. which may always be discriminated by position from pur, on, above, as this last never can be initial, though pur, a feather, may; ek, a, an, one; pukh-eroo, a bird, fowl, &c. from punkh, punchh, a wing, &c.; eroo, a modification of ar, er, hara, noted in pages 83 and 96; cos, her, him, it; pur, over; upne, own, inflected to agree with puron, wings, governed by ka, of, in concord with sayu, shade, shadow, shelter, protection, &c.; kiye, inflected from kiya, the redundant past participle of kurna, anciently keena, to do, make, act, &c. This form, and the inflected present participle kurte, doing, bear some analogy to the Latin ablative absolute, explicable in the Hindooostanee so—sayu kiye hooe kee halut men, in the state of sheltering. You will see him coming, cosko ate (hooe kee halut men) dekhoge; I hear them speaking, con ko bolte soonta hoon, that is, bolte hooe kee halut men, in the act of speaking; tha, was, stood, remained, &c. probably the perfect tense of the verb thana, to stay, remain, now obsolete, which would regularly be tha, subject, like kee, to the elision of the final homogeneous vowel, as stated in page 73.

Is, this, to which bat, a word, circumstance, affair, matter, particular, &c. is understood, being like res and negotium in Latin, of great use in the Hindooostanee ; se, from, to be carefully discriminated from se, inflected from sa, like, as, ish, of page 87 ; coska, her, agreeing with the masc. noun nam, name; Sukcontula, the Saccontala of Sir William Jones ; hoo,a, is, was, &c. In the use of such verbs, we and the Hindooostanees differ greatly. If told by any of us, which we would be very apt to do, “ the man you saw yesterday in my house was my uncle,” they would probably, with a smile, observe, “ and is he not your uncle to-day,” or with a look of condolence, might enquire how, when, and where he died, because their own idiom teaches them in all such sentences to use is for was, unless the person spoken of be since dead, and no longer the relative in question. On similar grounds, where we mention our having been at a particular time in a given place, thus,—recollect we also were that year at Dihlee,—they would often use are, so—yad rukho hum bhee cos sal Dihlee men huen.

Wuhan, there, that place; puree, fallen, fem. past part. of purna, to fall, with its auxiliary sign hoo ee, is, frequently redundant, and of course omitted ; wooh, she, he, it ; rotee thee, crying was, imperf. indicative fem. third person singular, in unison with wooh, she ; ansowon, infl. plural of ansoo, a tear, properly ansooon, for which consult pages 33, 35, &c. ; ke, of, plural, to agree with motee, pearls, this being one of the very few nouns in ee, which are not feminine by this termination, enumerated in page 71.

Pulkon, eye-lids, pl. infl. of puluk, whence the u is dropt, as explained in pages 65, 66, governed by men, on, in, &c. ; pirotee thee, threading was. It would require the hair-splitting genius of Eastern poets to divine the climax of beauties in the sentence before us, which they would term a sweet string of the most lovely pearls, formed by the eye-lashes of the child, piercing the lucid globules as they are shed by the eyes, rendered still more brilliant by minute pearly drops strung around them. This may be to Oriental fancy very fine, though it rather militates against our sounder judgment on all such similes, and the childish jingle of rotee and pirotee, with which, I recollect, the Hindoostanee bard was so delighted himself, that his eyes literally sparkled with joy, as he exclaimed, after a most significant but ineffable clink of the tongue, kya

khoob! how charming!

Doodh, milk, ke, of, for, governed by liye, taking, account, resolvable like kiye, already elucidated, into liye hooe kee halut men, in the state of taking; moṇh, mouth, face, &c.; pusar ruhee thee, stretching, remained, had, the pluperfect of the continuative verb pusar ruhna, to remain stretching, from pusarna, to stretch; hath paṇw, hands, feet; upne, own, plural in concord with hath paṇw, in the nom. pl. used for the accusative. Mar ruhee thee, striking, remained, had, just such another verb as the last, from marna, to beat, strike, kick, drive, and kill, &c.

ki, when, then, that, &c.; purwurdu-gar, the protector; i, of; alum, the world; ne — has no meaning though an active perfect expletive of constant occurrence in this language, before every perfect tense of transitive verbs, which has no present form; muen ne mara, I killed; toom ne nuheen mara, you killed not; wooh marga, he will kill; hum marte the, we were killing; too ne mara tha, thou hadst killed; upna, own; fuzl, grace, favour, &c.; kiya, made, did, acted, &c. whence the use of ne; jo, when, as, that, if, who, &c.; Kunn, moṇee, a saint, the holy man; kuheen, somewhere; nuhane, to bathe, inflected by ko, for, similar to our old infinitives, for to drink, for to speak, still common in the East; chule the, gone, had, in the plural, out of respect to the saint, though an individual, which is the common practice, and like our own address to one person, you were angry, you are pleased, instead of thou wast; thou art, retained by the Quakers very grammatically, though now-a-days rather a quaint mode of speaking to any one; jon, appears contracted from joheen, just as, the moment, instantly as; cos, that; turuf, or turf, side, quarter, &c.; se, from, on, at, &c.; ho nikle, came out; perfect tense, third person, plural for singular of the verb ho nikulna, to turn out, come out, issue forth, &c. a compound of hona, to be, and nikulna, to issue, &c.

The perfect should be nikula, but is generally contracted in such verbs, as by page 66.

We form similar verbs with the help of adverbs, which often materially alter the nature of the original; and the same effect follows in Hindoostanee, by the coalition of two verbs, thus; kaṭna, means simply, to cut; kaṭ-dalna, to cut off, from dalna, to throw, equivalent in composition to off, away, as dena, to give, de-dalna, to give away.

The reader may, by consulting the Section on the Verbs, acquire the most ample information on a subject, which he will soon find of the utmost importance in this language; dekha, beheld, saw, perceived, observed, &c.; ki, that, yih, this, kya, what? qoodrut, power; i, explained in page 68, under murdi nek, a man virtuous, for nek murd, a virtuous man; ilahee, divine, hue, is; yih kya qoodruti ilahee hue! implies wonder, admiration, &c. of the divine power, as we say,—alas! what a man he was!—when shall we see his like again? so do the natives of India, with congenial feelings, exclaim,—hae kya admee tha! coska burabur phir kub dekhenge? in other words,—he was an honest fellow, and we ne'er shall see his like again; jo, which, that, &c.; is, this; soorut, manner, way, appearance, countenance, &c.; se, in, from, with, by, on, &c.; nuzur, sight, atee, coming, feminine, to agree with soorut, of that gender from its termination t; hue, is, cos, that, nuo, new, fresh, &c.; gool, flower, rose; e, for i, of; chumun, a bed, parterre, walk, garden, &c.; ko, the accusative sign, governing retrospectively the only inflectible word, cos, that, near it; gool-istan, flower-place, rose-bed, garden, a famous book of Suudee's, which, like other roses, has its literary and moral thorns ; se, from, door, far, away, remote, &c. ; dekh, having seen, the root or imperative of dekhna, to see, behold, &c. used for the preterperfect participle, dekh-ke, dekh-kur, &c. as in pages 120, 121; hue-ran, bewildered, distracted, perplexed, fascinated, &c. In this and goolistan, the n is made nasal, merely for the sake of the verse, which is frequently the case in all such words, bu, in, one of the prepositions noticed in pages 107, and 77; rung, manner, style, colour, way, i, of, bool-bool, the nightingale, supposed by the Eastern poets to be captivated with the rose's blushing charms; i, of; tuşweer, picture, painting, image, &c. used here, either from the nightingale's partiality to the rose as the picture of beauty, or from some story of a painted rose, with which the bird may have been fascinated; ho gue, became, the perfect tense in the third person plural of ho-ja na, to become, which is rather expressed here, as to be go, though ho-ana, to become, be occasionally used; ghultan, rolling, tossing, tumbling, agitated, &c.; dcor, a pearl; e for i; yuteem, orphan; dcori yutem, is a common term for what we call the union pearl, as a non-pareil; see, like, as, in the fem. to agree with Sukontula, vide page 87, which this example will farther elucidate, con ko khoođa ne hum son̄ bunaya hue, God made them like us; thee, was, lek, for lekin, but, khak, ground, earth, dust, &c. pur, on; ghult̄ani, for ghult̄anee, agitation, from ghult̄an, agitated; coskee, her, in concord with the fem. noun ghult̄anee, dekh, as before; we, lit. they, but from veneration for Saint Kuñin, used for wooh, he; dilgeer, heart-seized, sorrowful, &c. see page 97; hogue, has been just mentioned.

A sedulous examination of this analysis will do more to pave the way for analysing the remainder of the quotation, or any other piece of Hindoostanee, than a thousand mere rules acquired by rote, with which a poor school-boy's memory is generally overloaded, like an ass's back, while his mind is allowed to remain as empty of thought, its proper food, as a heron's belly is of meat; whence from our public seminaries we have spouting automatons in abundance, who seldom evince great mental energy or conception, till they learn the positive necessity through life of thinking and acting for themselves, rather as intelligent, efficient beings, than sheer, passive machines or vehicles of useful knowledge.

In the whole of the preceding process, I have purposely omitted the technical terms, verb, noun, adjective, &c. as self-evident in English to every man, who can expect any real information from this performance, on which he ought not to enter, if still ignorant of the first grammatical principles in his own mother tongue, or if yet unable to generalise the grammar of any language, he may have preposterously learned before his own, so as to be applicable, with a few trifling exceptions, to every other in the world, which we could very readily accomplish, were we invariably to begin at the right end, with vernacular speech, on sound principles first.

For persons whose education has been conducted on a rational, thinking system or plan, the preceding sheets of this publication, retrospectively studied as recommended, will suffice to make them already very promising Hindoostanee scholars ; but for those who, from youth, inexperience, and want of thought, must follow the humdrum track of grammarians, the subsequent pages may contain superior advantages, being more in detail, and rendered easier, from repeated rules or observations, better calculated by dint of hammering, to drive something into every body, whose soul is sluggish enough to require hard knocking, before one can rouse it to persevering exertion, even during this very essential pursuit of future ease, honours, and fortune, in the distant regions of the East, through the medium of the grand colloquial speech of all India.

The Noun,—and first of the Article.

1. The articles a, the, as in Latin, are commonly inherent in the simple noun, kitab la o, may signify, according to circumstances, either bring a or the book, consequently every noun almost may assume a or the in declension, and elsewhere, thus; bęta, a son, or the son; bęte ka, of a son, or the son; murd, a or the man; murd ka ke kee, of a or the man; murdorı ka ke kee, of men, or the men.

2. Ek, one, sometimes ko ee, any, express the indefinite a, an; and woo h, he, she, it, that; yih, he, &c. this; hee, or ee, very, the definite article the. In Arabic words, ul is used, as ul-qorān, the koran.

Declension.

3. Nouns are declined, like those of both ancient and modern languages, on the twofold principle of inflexions and postpositions combined in one, which still exists among our pronouns, I, me; thou, thee; he, him. The necessity of the inflexion or oblique in all the real cases here, cannot escape the most superficial English scholar, although the mere nouns like —of a man, to a man, from a man, can give no adequate idea of pronominal inflexion in that tongue.

4. Particles termed, from their apparent preposterous situation, postpositions, perform the office of our prepositions, in the formation of the various cases of every noun, which must then appear, if declinable, in the inflexion, as our—of him, to him, from thee; never—of he, from thou.

5. Except the nom. gen. and voc. the number and names of the various cases depend entirely on the nature of the postpositions, which the learner may subdivide into objective, dative, locative, social, instrumental, ablative, causal, communicative, &c. thereby forming as many cases as he pleases, in the true spirit of logical subdivision.

6. The postpositions so nearly resemble the prepositions of other languages, that none of them require any particular notice here, but ka, of, 's, which last is by far the most convenient, as the possessive or adjective form, in almost all translations from the Hindoostanee.

7. Ka, of, 's, has not only all the governing qualities of a postposition in the Hindoostanee, but is itself a declinable adjunct, that admirably proves the intimate connexion between genitive and adjective forms in most languages. As an adjective affix, which every scholar should consider it, ka, ke, of the masculine, inflexion, and plural, becomes in the feminine kee for both numbers, without any further inflexion; in government it is retrospective, but in concord prospective.

8. Ka, followed by a masc. sing. noun, which is not affected by any subsequent postposition, may be termed the nominative or simple possessive case, uorut ka bēṭā, a woman's son; ke is the same in its inflected or plural state, uorut ke bēṭe ka, a woman's son's, or of a woman's son, uorut ke dus bēṭe, a woman's ten sons.

9. Kee is the foregoing genitive sign preceding a sing. or plural feminine noun in every case: murd kee bete, a man's daughter; murd kee betee ka bete, a man's daughter's son; murd kee betiyan, a man's daughters; yih kam kee kitab hue, this is a book of use, or a useful book; woh koochh kam kee nuheen, that is not of any use, or is a useless book.

10. The postpositions are simple and compound; the first require the mere inflexion of a noun, while the second govern its inflected or feminine genitive. The simple hardly exceed twelve in number, but the compounds are many, as may be seen in pages 103, 105, &c.

11. Ka, of, -s; ko, kune, to, for; se, sitee, from, by, to, with, on; pur, on, at, by; men, in, at; and the rest are a species of primitive particles, whose satisfactory deduction is now very difficult; on the contrary, sath, with; pas, near; tu^{een}, to, for; waste, for; age, before; hath, hand; mare, through, from; liye, khatir, for, are generally nouns, adjectives or verbs, which require ke or kee between them and the noun.

12. Bete ka, of a son, or a son's; beton-se, from sons; beton ke hath, (with verbs of selling) to sons, and bete ke sath, with a son, ought

now to demonstrate the difference of simple and compound postpositions, because the last example, including all such, is merely elliptical of bete ke sath men, in a son's company, or in the company of a son, sath in reality meaning company, as sathe does a companion.

13. Almost every word which terminates in e may be considered as inflected from a; the postpositions therefore that end in e are generally mere inflexions; bete ke age, before the son, when analysed, is bete ke age men, in front of the son, aga being a noun which signifies front, van, forepart, &c. ghur ke peechhe, behind the house, or in the house's rear, ghur ke peechhe men.

14. Simple postpositions seldom govern the inflected genitive, but compounds frequently require the mere noun or inflection only, the intermediate ke being dropt, bete pas, near a son; beton age, before sons.

15. When the compound postposition is otherwise a feminine noun, like turuh, manner, way; khaṭir, sake, for; turuf, side; nisbut, relation; the intermediate ke becomes kee, bete kee khaṭir (ko), for (the sake of) a son; luṛkee kee turuh (men or se), like a girl; on the very same elliptical principles as the rest; because were men or se added to the last example here, it would be just—in a girlish way, or, in the manner of a girl.

16. Although, strictly speaking, three or four declensions may be found in the Hindoostanee, it will be convenient here to reduce the whole to two, because every noun which ends in a u, or an, is declined like bet α , a son, thus :

First Declension.

Singular.	Plural.
N. bet α , a son.	bet α e, sons.
G. bet α , ka, ke, or kee, of a son, or a son's.	bet α on ka, ke, or kee, of sons, or sons'.
D. bet α ko, to a son.	bet α on ko, to sons.
A. bet α ko, a son.	bet α on ko, sons.
V. bet α re, O son.	bet α , O sons.
A. bet α se, with, from, &c. a son.	bet α on se, by, with, &c. sons.
N. purdu, a curtain.	purde, curtains.
G. purde ka, ke, or kee, of a curtain, or a curtain's.	purdon ka, ke, kee, of curtains.
D. purde ko, to a cur- tain.	purdon ko, to curtains.

Singular.

Plural.

A. purde ko, a curtain.	purdon̄ ko, curtains.
V. purde re, O curtain.	purdo, O curtains.
A. purde se, from, &c. curtains.	purdon̄ se, with, &c. curtains.

Second Declension.

Singular.

Plural.

N. murd, a man.	murd, men.
G. murd ka, ke, or kee, of a man, a man's.	murdon̄ ka, ke, or kee, of men, men's.
D. murd ko, to a man.	murdon̄ ko, to men.
A. murd ko, a man.	murdon̄ ko, men.
V. murd re, O man.	murdo, O men.
A. murd se, with, &c. a man.	murdon̄ se, from, &c. men.

17. Nouns in a, aŋ, and u, instead of being indeclinable, like the second declension, in the singular, substitute e for a or u in the first number, and nominative plural, but drop them entirely in every other case of the last number; whence gole ka, of a ball, or a ball's; gole se, with a ball; gole, balls; golon̄ ko, to balls, &c.

18. When words are feminine and terminate in ee, they assume aŋ in the nominative plural, converting ee to iy through all the plural cases; all other feminines take en—betiyan, daughters; kitab-en, books; but these affixes, an, en, are often dropt, especially when numerals denote the plural; in other respects, every noun not ending in a, an, or u, is declined like murd, as these also are when exceptions.

19. All the postpositions have a variety of meanings, which the learner ought carefully to recollect, as he may often meet with se and others signifying from, with, to, by, at, on, &c. according to various circumstances, which cannot be adverted to in a work of this kind,—yuhan, yihan, eehan, ihan, here, and wuhan, there, as adverbs or nouns of place, also require, ke, they commonly denote our 's and the French chez, discriminating this and that abode, when a person has two: şahib'ke yuhan ja,o, şahib ke wuhan nuheen, go to the gentleman's house here, not there, viz. in the country, or elsewhere.

20. The voc. sing. in the second declension, being like the nom. often requires the signs ue, e, he, ure, uree, o, prefixed; but in the plural the o is generally affixed, while re, ree, sometimes also occur so in the singular even, as ue bap! or bap re! O father! bap re bap! O father, father! ma ree ma! O mother, mother! yar-o! O friends!

raja-o! or rajo! O princes! The accus. post. is often omitted, and has with us no meaning,— lurkee (ko) mut maro, do not beat (to) the girl; or, in other words, the nom. is very often used for the accusative.

Gender.

21. Males and females are naturally masculine and feminine, whatever their terminations may be; ee, t, sh, are in general feminine, while a, u, and all the rest, there being no neuter in Hindooostanee, may be treated as masculine finals, till the scholar learns the reverse from practice, the Grammar and Dictionary.

22. Feminines are formed from masculines by substituting for, or adding ee, in, un, nee, anee, ain, a, &c. to their finals; lurka, a boy, lurkee, a girl; dhobee, a washer-man, dhobin, a washer-woman; sher, a tiger, shernee, a tigress; naik, a lad, naika, a lass.

23. Nur occasionally denotes the he, and ma-du the she, as in Persian. There are some nouns like admee, homo; usamee, a client; which have the common gender as applicable to either sex, and many others are doubtful, fikr, care; jan, life; tukrar, repetition; lufz, a word, &c. appearing sometimes in one gender, and at other times in another, among the best speakers and writers of Hindoostanee. A few words, viz. ma, a mother, bap, a father; murd, a man, qorut, a woman, as in other tongues, have no literal affinity in their genders.

24. All feminines, even those in a and u, belong to the second declension, with a considerable number of masculines also, as exceptions from the first, and a few are common to both declensions.

25. The plural inflexion in the second declension is a syllable longer than the singular, except in certain words, where the penult is a short vowel, which is then dropt,—Puthur, a stone, burus, a year, girih, a knot, have puthron, burson, girhon, not puthur-on, v. pages 65, 66.

26. Some nouns of the first and second declension may be confounded in the inflexion plural by on being a substitution for the final letter of the former, but an addition to it in the latter or second declension; bundu, a slave bunden ka, ke, or kee, of slaves; bund, a button, bund-on ka, ke, or kee, of buttons.

27. Sometimes a masculine noun, like saqee, a cup-bearer, admits of an in the nom. pl. as an adopted Persian nominative, (resembling radii, *data, phenomena, in English) which occasionally holds good for the inflexion also, especially in the dukhunee Hindoostanee, as this often prefers ruqeeb-an, yar-an, to ruqeeb-on, *rivals, yar-on, friends.

28. A great variety of plurals is adopted from the Arabic and Persian, viz. at, uen, ha, jat, &c. as will be exhibited hereafter, and the termination at is occasionally affixed to Hindoo-stanee nouns, as chookee, a post, chair, stool, watch, chuokiyat, stations, guards, &c.

29. The first and second declensions differ in the possession and want of a singular inflection, in the substitution and addition of inflectional, vocative, and nominative particles, and in the second admitting of both masculines and feminines, while the first is in a great measure restricted to the former only, though they agree in having the very same plural inflexions and vocative particles, in their masculine, nominative plurals, being almost entirely like the singular numbers, and in assuming the very same postpositions for all the cases.

30. The result of the foregoing premises is, that there are seven adventitious particles, divisible among the declensions as follows:

First	$\{ \begin{matrix} a \\ e \end{matrix} \}$	nom.	$\overset{\text{sg}}{g}$	lurk-a,
	$\{ \begin{matrix} e \\ ee \\ ee \end{matrix} \}$	inflec.	$\overset{\text{pl}}{g}$	lurk-e, singular as a substitute.
Second	$\{ \begin{matrix} an \\ an \\ en \end{matrix} \}$	nom. fem.	$\overset{\text{sg}}{ee}$ $\overset{\text{pl}}{ee}$	lurk-ee, lurkiy-aq, lurkiy-aq, any other let. after subs. as add. particles.
Common	$\{ \begin{matrix} on \\ o \end{matrix} \}$	inflective	$\overset{\text{sg}}{ee}$	lurk-ee, lurkiy-on, murd-on, men.
to both	$\{ \begin{matrix} o \\ o \end{matrix} \}$	vocative	$\overset{\text{pl}}{ee}$	murd-o, O men. lurk-o, or O boys.

31. In words like gæe, gæo, a cow; gæən, gæon, cows; gha_o, a wound; unkhiya, an eye; the nasal ñ alone is, for obvious reasons, added in the plural, Dhoo_{an}, smoke, ro_{an}, a hair, and words of this sort, have dhoōən, ro_{en}, unkhiyan, dhoō-on, unkhiyon, in the nom. pl. and inflexions.

Illustration of the preceding Principles.

I. and 2. page 139.

What is on the table?	Mez pur kya hue?
A book and a pen.	Kitab uor ek qulum.
Give me the book.	Kitab moojhe do.
Take the pen to my brother.	Qulum mere bhaee ke pas le chulo.
But return in a moment,	Pur ko ee dum men phirao.

When yih and wōoh occur as the, it will be equally convenient to resolve them into this and that, as proximate and remote pronouns for he, she, or it, to be illustrated as such hereafter.

hee and ee, as definite affixes, never can be very troublesome, since they merely give an emphasis or force to the word, similar to our very, self, indeed, self-same, even, just as, &c. in expressions like,—this is the very soldier who fled,—yih wōhee sipahee hue jo bhaga tha;—go thyself sirrah,—ube too hee ja; on which it would be premature to enlarge farther in this place.

3 and 4.

Get some grass from the groom and give it to the horse. Suees se koochh ghas mangla,o uor ghore ko do.

To which shall I give the grain, to this or that? Kis ko danu doon is ko ya cos ko?

Where are all the grooms? Sub su,ees kuhan huen?

Collect all our grooms here, don't omit even one, for the whole are required to be present just now. Sub humare su,eeson ko yuhan hazir kuro ek hee ko mut chho-ro, kyoon kur chahi-ye ki subhee ubhee muojood hon.

5.

Go to the dog and give him water to drink. Kcotte ke pas jakur uor cosko panee do pee-ne ko.

Come with the dog here and tie him with these ropes. Kcotte ke sath a,o yuhan uor cose russi-yon se bandho.

The donative and objective case above is distinguished by ko, the itinerant by ke pas, the social by ke sath, and the instrumental by se, but they only prove, that simple postpositions require the inflexion, while compounds govern the inflected genitive.

6, 7, 8, &c.

The boy's sister's friend's father's mother's brother's wife's three sons are now coming here.

The girl's brother's friend's mother's father's sister's husband's three daughters are now coming here.

Cows' milk is very useful, and better than buffaloes' milk, do not therefore pour the one's milk into the other's.

Chhokrē kee buhin ke dost ke bap kee madur ke bha,ee kee jo-roo ke teen bete ub-hee yuhan̄ ate huen̄.

Chhokrē ke bha,ee ke dost kee madur ke bap kee buhin ke khuşum kee teen betiyan̄ ubhee yuhan̄ atiyan̄ huen̄.

Gao ka doodh buhoot kam ka hue, uor bhuens ke doodh se bihtur, is liye ek ke doodh ko doosre ke doodh men̄ mut dalo.

With the assistance of a vocabulary, if the learner will form a few such sentences, without minding either their inelegance or even absurdity in English, he will soon overcome this bugbear, ka, ke, kee, to most beginners, and wonder, after analysing the above examples, and those of his own making, why it should hitherto have puzzled himself or any other body.

I shall repeat here, that its government is retrospective, and its concord prospective; whence chhokṛē kee buhin, &c. in the first instance, and chhokree ke bhaee, &c. in the second; chhokṛā, a boy; chhokṛē, the infl. governed by kee, feminine, because in concord with buhin, sister, and so forth.

Let ka be supposed a final declinable adjunct, that makes every genitive a sort of adjective; thus, kam means use, kam ka, of use, that is, useful.

Singular.

Plural.

N. kam ka kotta, a kam ke kōtte, useful useful dog.

G. kam ke kōtte ka, kam ke kōtton̄ ka, of a useful dog's.

D. kam ke kōtte ko, kam ke kōtton̄ ko, *to
to a useful dog.*

Singular.

Plural.

- A. kam ke kootte ko, kam ke kootton ko, use-
a useful dog. ful dogs.
- V. kam ke kootte re, kam ke kootto, O use-
O useful dog. ful dogs.
- A. kam ke kootte se, kam ke kootton se, with from a useful dog. useful dogs.

In the genitive singular, ka, ke, kee, are not fully inserted above, rather from want of room than any thing else:

A useful bitch's two kam kee koottee ke do pups, pille,

proves, however, that every genitive must be, as already inculcated, declined ka, ke, kee, to prepare the scholar for meeting one or all of them, according to circumstances in this very case, which should at first be invariably translated by 's, in preference to of.

Our own language has many such genitive adjectives, in lieu of others, more learned at least, if not so elegant; gao ka doodh, cow's milk; gudhee ka doodh, asses milk, to which we do not yet prefer vaccine, or asine, whatever may be done in half a century hence in matters of this sort; gao ke doodh ka, ke, kee, of cows milk, or cows milk's; gao ke doodh men, in cow's milk ; ga,o ke doodh ka rung scofued hue, cows milks colour is white ; ga,o ke doodh kee qeemut ka thikana aj kul koochh nuheen, there is no medium now-a-days in the price of cows milk ; literatim, cow's milk's price's medium to day to morrow any not is.

It is now to be hoped, that we have got fairly over this stumbling block, ka, ke, kee, which has long proved a formidable obstacle in every lazy fellow's way, who merely sat down to smoke his pipe, or dose over the Hindoostanee in India, instead of studying the subject with the avidity and resolution which its importance demands; as if a few whiffs of a chilum would inspire the student with grammatical knowledge, or that a sound nap over his book might enable him to find out this useful key to the language, by simply dreaming about it and the innumerable difficulties in the way of pronunciation alone, which must stare even a learned Persian in the face, the moment he turns it towards the popular speech of India.

10, 11, 12, 13, &c.

Mutja,o is pille kee ma Do not go near the moke pas deewane kee ther of this whelp, turuḥ (men subauditur).

like a madman, i. e.
in the manner of a madman, in a madman's way.

Here kee governs pillā, a whelp, in the infl.; and is, this, is the pronominal adjective, also inflected by kee to agree with pille; pas, as a compound postposition, requires the inflected genitive ma ke; and turuḥ, being a feminine noun, elliptically used as a postposition in this sentence, very naturally governs the feminine genitive deewane kee.

The principles in pages 140, 144, with the ample list of postpositions in page 103, cannot fail to make the learner master of this department, provided he will revise the whole, and recollect, that those words which end in e come from nominatives in a, inflected to e, by some other invisible postposition that may easily be understood from the examples already produced.

19.

The context alone of any sentence can demonstrate the particular meaning of the postpositions in question.

- He hit with a ball. gole se mara.
 He brought from with- bahur se laya.
 out.
 He said to the boy. lurke se kuha.
 Seize him by the hand. osko hath se pukuro.

Under principle 14th, ke, with compound postpositions, is often dropt, and even they at times are omitted, leaving the ke in apparent discord with the noun following.

- A king who had (no son) not a son. Ek padshah jiske (yuhan) beta nu tha.
 page 129.
 A king whose son was not a poet. Ek padshah jiska beta shair nu tha.

Yuhan above, is more frequently understood than expressed; the student should, therefore, on seeing a final e, ke, or kee, for which he cannot otherwise account, presume some ellipsis or other, as in jiske beta nu tha, meaning—in whose house, family, &c. there was no heir.

Adverbials assume ka, ke, kee, on all occasions, whence,

Kuheen̄ ka ḥakim yuhan̄ ke ḥakim ke
sath jāega, wuhan̄ ke ḥakim kee kha-
t̄ir kuhan̄ ke ḥakim
ke yuhan̄, ub ke sal.
*i. e. now's year, now
of year in.*

The governor of some place will go with the commander of this place, for the chief of that place's sake, to the house of the magistrate of (what do you call) yon place,
this year.

Bahur̄ ka sahib̄ aya hue
khubur̄ deejiyō! i. e.
without's gentleman.

A strange gentleman (or one from without) has arrived, pass
the word.

This used formerly to be the exclamation of the durwan, or porter, in India, to apprise the master or mistress of the house, that some visitor or other had arrived ; but when I left that country, it was becoming less common.

21, &c.

Gender, as in the French and other tongues, is a subject of considerable difficulty, which can be overcome by constant practice and attention alone. Most words having an initial t, with a penult ee, like tuṣweer, a picture, tujweez, determination, are feminine. The examples, as they occur under other heads, will sufficiently illustrate that of gender, both in its formation and concord, provided the learner will only recollect that ee merely denotes the feminine of adjectives ending in u or a: uch-chha ghora, a good horse; uchchhee ghoree, a good mare; nek murd, a good man; nek uorut, a good woman; murd uor uorut kee nekee, the man's and woman's goodness; puhaṛ-ee koṭta, or koṭtee, a highland dog, or bitch; jungulee bukṛa, or bukree, a wild goat, he or she. A retrospect to ee, as a significant particle, in pages 70, 71, &c. will obviate all future ambiguity respecting this termination, which is so common in the Hindooostanee.

24.

N. bula, evil.	bula-en , evils.
G. bula ka, ke, kee, of evil.	bula-on ka, ke, kee, of evils, &c.
D. &c. bula ko, to evil.	bula-on ko, evils.
V. bula re, O evil.	bula-o, O evils.
being feminine, is declined like kitab, a book.

dana, a wise man.	dana, wise men.
dana ka, ke, kee, a wise man's, of a wise man.	dana-on ka, ke, kee, &c.
dana ko, &c.	dana-o, &c.

The student must be prepared to encounter a good many nouns similar to bula and dana in the course of his reading, and the way to discriminate them as such is to note every word terminating with a-en as a nom. pl. of some feminine in a, consequently of the second declension, and indeclinable in the singular. When the postpositions do not inflect final a or u to e, or when a-on terminates any word, it also must either prove a masc. or fem. of the second declension, as an exception from the first, and should ever after be treated accordingly ; dana_{on} ke nuzdeek is zindugee kee bulae_n khoda kee turuf barha awen_n ki hum sub bur wuqt bihisht ke wast_e kumur bandhen_n, In the opinion of the wise, the miseries of this life often proceed from God, that we may all in time prepare for heaven.

Singular.

Plural.

raja, a prince. raja or raje, princes.

raja,	{	ka, ke, kee, a	raja _{on} ,	{	ka, ke, kee, of or raje,

25 and 26.

Singular.

Plural.

raj, *a kingdom.*raj, *kingdoms.*raj ka, ke, kee, a king- *dom's.*rajon ka, ke, kee, of *kingdoms.*gor, *a grave.*goron ka, *of graves,*gor ka, ke, kee, of a *grave, a grave's.*also of Europeans, page 116.N. tegh or teghu, *a sword.*G. &c. tegh or teghe ka, ke, kee, *of a sword, &c.*N. chushm, *the eye, chushmu, a fountain.*G. chushm ka, of the eye, chushme ka, of a foun- *tain, chushmon ka, of eyes, or fountains.*N. shohrut or shohru, *a report.*G. shohrut, or shohre ka, ke, kee, *of a report, &c.*N. juguh, a place. jughen, *places.*G. jugih ka, ke, kee, jughon ka, ke, kee, of
of a place. places, &c.

Like the last may be declined turuh, manner, shobuh, doubt, with a very few more, in all of which the singular inflexion of u to i or e is more or less perceptible. The plural cases drop the u entirely, as juguhen juguhon would be much more troublesome than jughen, &c. above.

Juguh, being feminine, is in the plural like bula in page 160, though in the singular it seems rather to be of the first declension, as jughih, jugeh, something resembles the purdu, purde, of page 144; but there are too few words in nh, to assign a third declension for them only.

When shoohrut assumes t, it is feminine, but masculine as shoohru. Qubeelu, family, wife, is a regular masculine of the first declension, and ruueyut, a subject, even with masculines is constantly feminine. Wooh murd meree ruueyut hue, that man is my tenant, vassal, subject, &c.

Adjectives.

32. Adjectives are of the first and second declension, declined exactly as substantives having the same terminations; they are consequently subject to inflexion, like ka, ke, kee, and when used as nouns they can assume the plural an and inflexion on, but not otherwise, as already explained in page 116, q. v.

a a, boy; e, e, boys.
 gor- lurk- a fair gor- lurk- fair
 ee ee, girl; ee, iy-an, girls.

e man's; on men.
 gor- ka, a fair gor- se, from fair
 ee woman's; iy-on women.

In poetry, lurkiyan gorian is admissible, but not gorian lurkiyan, fair girls.

33. Ordinals require the addition of wan to the cardinals, whence,

wan- a, boy; wen- e boy.
 dus- lurk- the 10th dus- lurk- se, from the 10th.
 ween- ee, girl; ween- ee- girl.

34. The adjunct of similitude sa, se, see, son, denoting like, ly, ish, resembles ka, as an adjective particle of infinite use in the Hindoostanee, being commonly affixed to one or other of the pronominals in their correlative series; thus, uesa, wuesa, kuesa, juesa, tuesa, all of which, as well as others, for which we have no room here, may be resolvable into is-sa, like this, os-sa, like that, kis-sa, like what, &c.

35. When compounded with adjectives, sa alone does not require in them the inflexion, kala-sa, blackish, with nouns, or when changed to se, see; it commonly does.

sa lurka, boy; see lurkee, girl.
 lurke- a childish lurkee a girlish
 see lurkee, girl; sa lurka, boy.

kala sa ghora, a blackish horse.

kale se ghore ka, ke, kee, a blackish horse's.

kale se ghore, blackish horses.

kaleesee ghoree, a blackish mare.

kaleesee ghoree ka, ke, kee, a blackish mare's.

kalee see ghorian, blackish mares.

in which the declension seems double, as in jistis, whosoever, and some other pronouns.

36. The comp. and super. degrees, being best formed by se, than, men se, sub se, or by repeating the adjective, the reader can form these at pleasure, either in this way, wooh mcojh se bhula hy, he is better than me; of those fair ones she is the fairest, con goriyon men yih sub se goree hy; gorec goree lurkee, a very fair girl, or by inserting more, very, &c. the boy is very fair, yih lur̄ka buhoot gora hy, as in our own language.

Iur̄ke Iur̄kee goree girl boy.

se hue, the is fairer than the Iur̄kee Iur̄ka gora boy girl.

gore gora gora, boy,

se or sub se the fairest &c.

goree goree goree, girl,

are sufficient in the mean time to shew the regimen and concord here.

37. When comparison relates to an individual or one of many, ka intervenes: ungoor ka sa ch̄hala, a blister like a single grape; ungoor sa nuya gosht, new flesh like a cluster of grapes, or the granulations of a wound. Expertness, however, in the proper use of ka and sa, on such occasions, can be gained by great practice and experience alone.

38. When Persian or Arabic comp. and sup. are used, it is generally thus,—bih, good, bih-tur, better, bih-tur-een, best, kh̄oosh, kh̄oosh-tur, kh̄oosh-tureen, like our own pleasant, pleasanter, -est, or most pleasant, &c. fazil, doctus, uſ̄ul, doctior, fuzzal, doctissimus, and many more, are formed in a manner that will be fully detailed hereafter.

39. The cardinal numbers are declined like other nouns, with this peculiarity, that both the vocative and inflexion are often substituted for the mere nominative; thus, teen, teeno, teenon, seem all to denote three, the three, although used adjectively and with nouns, they occur so, teenon fuqeeron se, from the three mendicants, perhaps definitely.

40. These numerals are not in fact the only words of the above description, as burson, dinon, muheenon, puhron, and such inflexions, frequently supplant the nom. pl. burus, years; din, days; muheene, months; puhur, watches; in expressions like burson goozre, years have elapsed, perhaps elliptical of burson ke din goozre, years' days have passed.

After what has been stated in this place, and in pages 114, 115, 116, &c. the declension of nouns and adjectives can hardly require any farther illustration, except to observe, that all adjectives which do not end in a, u, or nu, are, as in English, indeclinable, and that many of those even, which have these terminations, admit of no more change than our own, as the circumspective reader will soon perceive in his progress through this language.

Certain Arabic words have their feminines in u, before noticed in page 65, to which we may now add, hamil, bearing, carrying, hamilu, pregnant, fazilu, docta, from fazil of page 166, to which the learner may refer, before going any farther, since the references, in which I often indulge, are partly intended to supply that pause in a concatenation of reflection and remarks, so essential to rational minds, when employed upon any subject so interesting as the grammar of a living language.

The Persian genitive and adjective sign, i or e, has been discussed in page 68, and resembles our of, while ka is like 's, hakim ka hōkm, the judge's order; ashiq i pak for pak ashiq, a chaste lover.

If nouns in ee convert it to iy, before aŋ and oŋ, those in oo will, on similar grounds, change this to oow, as in ansoowon, tears, quoted in page 132. Some exceptions in a are apt to be inflected by the illiterate; so, huwa, air, duwa, medicine, becoming improperly huwe, duwe, duwon, &c. instead of duwa, duwaen, duwaon, huwaen, huwaon, &c.

The Pronouns Personal, &c. are as follows.

1st Person.

Singular.

Plural.

N. muen, I.	hum, we.
G. me-ra, re, or ree, my mine, or of me.	hum-ara, are, or aree, our, our's, of us.
D. mojh ko, to me.	humon ko, to us.
A. mojh-e, me.	hum-en, us.
V.
A. mojh se, from, &c. me.	humon se, from, &c. us.

2d Person.

N. tuen*, thou.	toom, ye, or you.
G. te-ra, re, or ree, of thee, thy, &c.	toomh-ara, are, or aree, of you, your, &c.
D. toojh ko, to thee.	toomhon ko, to you.
A. toojh-e, thee.	toomh-en, you.
V. too-re, O thou.	toom re, O you.
A. toojh se, from, &c. thee.	toomhon se, from, &c. you.

* Too, or toon, more common, though less conciliating after muen here than tuen; as too, however, is retained in the voc. or reciprocating case with the nom. the reader can readily call on too also, whenever he pleases.

3d Person Proximate.

Singular.

Plural.

N. yih, he, she, it, this ye, they, these.
the.

G. is-ka, ke, or kee, of inhoñ-ka, ke, or kee,
him, her, this, his, their, their's, of them.
its.

D. is-ko, to him, to her, inhoñ ko, to these, to
it, or this. them.

A. is-e, him, her, it. inh-en, them, these.

V. yih-re, O this. ye re, O these.

A. is-se, from, &c. him, inhoñ se, from these, from her, it, or this. them, &c.

3d Person Remote.

N. wooh, he, &c. that. we, they, those.

G. cos-ka, ke, kee, of conhoñ-ka, ke, kee, &c.
him, his, her, &c. their, theirs, of those,
them.

D. cos-ko, to him, &c. conhoñ-ko, to them, to that. those.

A. cos-e, him, that. conh-en, them, those.

V. wooh-re, O that. we-re, O those.

A. cos-se, from, &c. conhoñ-se, from, &c.
him, &c. that. them, those.

As adjectives, yih and wooh may be seen in
page 118.

The (reciprocal, reflective, or general personal and possessive) pronoun ap, upna, self, own.

Singular and Plural.

N. ap, self, I, thou, &c. he, she, &c.

G. up-na, &c. ap-ka, &c. of self, own, my, thy, his, her, &c.

D. ap-ko, upne ko, to self, &c. me, thee, &c.

A. ap ko, upne-ko, self, me, &c.

V.

A. ap se, upne se, from, &c. self, &c.

This last pronoun is the same in both numbers, and applicable to I, we, you, he, as well as to self, selves, my own, his own, their own, &c.

41. The genitive or possessive form above, inflected so,—ra, re, ree, na, ne, nee, (as ka, ke, kee) is not only used adjectively, but personally even in preference to the others, which may in general be accounted for by the inflected or feminine genitive being required before compound, and sometimes even with simple postpositions.

Mere tueen kuha, he told me; mere oopur, upon me; tere pur, on thee; teree turuf, towards thee; ap ne upne tueen mara, he slew his self.

Never mojh ke copur, or mere-ke tu'en, &c. ra and na, being in fact anomalous substitutes for ka, ke, this seldom or never can immediately follow them as a postposition, in their pronominal capacity.

42. The dat. and acc. are used almost promiscuously in the Hindoostanee, so that the learner must not follow them too rigidly as stated in the sketch, which is done merely in compliance with our customary forms: he should moreover recollect that e and en, are postpositions peculiar to the pronouns, and occur like ko as dat. or acc. signs occasionally.

43. The on and hon, of all the pronouns, may be omitted without invalidating their plurality in the least; whence hum, toom, in, &c. are in constant use, instead of humhon, toomhon, inhon, of the foregoing series, and kin, jin, &c. for kinhon, jinhon, of the next.

44. Ap and upna are very puzzling words; the last is much used reflectively, and even in cases where we would say my, thy, &c. only.

He speaks to himself, ap se ap bolta hy.

He fights with his self, upne se ap luta hy, which may likewise mean, he fights with his own people, family, &c.

45. The final h, after toomh, inh, &c. is very arbitrarily inserted, and by the moderns much omitted, especially in speech.

INTERROGATIVES.

Example 1.

Singular.	Plural.
N. kuon.	kuon, who, what, which?
G. kis-ka, -ke, or -kee.	kinhon̄ ka, &c. whose, of whom? &c.
D. kis-ko.	kinhon̄ ko, to whom? &c.
A. kis-e.	kinhen̄, whom? &c.
V. kuon re.	kuon re, O who, what?
A. kis-se.	kinhon̄ se, from whom?

Example 2.—which has no Plural in the Hindoo stanee.

- N. kya, which, what?
- G. kahe ka, &c. of which? &c.
- D. kahe ko, to or for which, to what?
- A. kahe ko, which, what?
- V. kya re, O which, what?
- A. kahe se, from which?

Relative.

Singular.

Plural.

N. juon.	juon, who, which, what.
G. jis-ka, &c.	jinhon̄ ka, &c. whose, of which, &c.
D. jis-ko.	jinhon̄ ko, to whom, to which.
A. jis-e.	jinhon̄, whom, which, &c.
V.
A. jis-se.	jinhon̄ se, from whom, from what, &c.

46. The English of each of the above three Examples is the same in both numbers, and the whole are much used in a reiterated form, both in the nom. and inflexion. They also occur in the formation of many adverbials, and often assume the sa, se, see, already noticed in the preceding pages, but more fully explained among the subsequent illustrations, which may now be consulted by the intelligent scholar.

Singular,

Correlative.

Plural.

N. tuon,	that, or this.	tuon,	these,
G. tis-ka, ke, kee, of	he, she, it,	tinhon-ka, of	those.
D. tis-ko, to	&c. also him,	tinhon-ko, to	they,
A. tis-e,	her, his, &c.	tinhon,	them.
V.	correlative-	ly:	&c.
A. tis-se, from	tinhon-se, from

Example 1.

Pronominal Adjectives.

Example 2.

N. koee,	koochh,	some,
G. kisee ka, &c. of	kisoo ka, of	little,
D. kisee ko, to	one person,	few,
A. kisee ko,	body, or	persons,
V. koee re,	thing.	bodies, or
A. kisee se, from	kisoo-se, from	things.

47. Kon, or ko, ke, jo, je, so, ko oo, are still in use for kuon, &c. especially jo, so, which are in truth even more familiar than juon, tuon, and must be employed accordingly. When a noun intervenes, kuon, ko ee, &c. are frequently un-inflected. Toom kuon sahib ke nuokur ho? what gentleman's servant are you? too ko_eee sahib ka noukur hue? art thou any gentleman's servant.

48. Ko_eee and koochh are often so blended with each other, both in their meaning and inflexions, that it is no easy matter to separate them by any discrimination whatever. In the plural they occasionally admit of kinhoon, kinheen, kinoo, kinee. Jo-ko_eee, whoever, and some others are doubly inflected to jiskisee, jin-kin-hoon, jistis, &c.

49. The declension of all the nouns and pronouns is founded on one general principle, that every case, but the nominative, requires a postposition expressed or understood for its formation, along with the simple oblique or inflexion of the noun or pronoun which the postposition governs, when such nouns are capable of having any change whatever.

50. In our language, the pronouns alone can illustrate the general doctrine of the difference between a case and an inflexion here; he, wcoh; him, cos; his (contracted from he's) ooska; I, muen; me, moojh; of me, mine, mera. As we therefore cannot form the various cases of the above, without the inflexion and preposition united, neither can the Hindoostanees make their cases without observing the same rules, wherever the word is inflectible.

51. They differ from us essentially in one point only,—to me,—from me,—on me,—are common to both grammars, but the moment a compound postposition occurs, it commonly requires the inflected or feminine genitive. Near me, mere pas ; toomharee turuh, like you, is an idiom that appears to us rather near mine, near of me, your manner, and in fact may often be so applied; meree bat bolta hy, he is speaking of me, or repeating my words.

52. As all the pronouns are inflected in the singular, they may be placed so far under Declen. 1. and every learner who knows to which nominative the obliques moojh, toojh, humon, toomhon, is, in, cos, on, kis, kin, jis, jin, tis, tin, kahe, kisoo, kisee, kinhoon, &c. belong, after what has been said above, will be able to decline the whole series, with the aid of simple and compound postpositions, in every possible case and form.

53. The scholar cannot too often observe, that the genitive here is also a possessive or adjective pronoun, which may always be made still more obvious in the whole series, by affixing ka, as an inherent component part of almost all the pronouns, with which this declinable commodious particle can assimilate, instead of the ra, na, already discussed. Kiska, kiske, kiskee, resembles the Latin cujus, cuja, and jinhon ka, ke, kee, quorum, quarum.

54. Every such genitive, therefore, as well as all pronominal words in a, whether this termination prove innate or adventitious, may be treated as adjectives, and inflected in the same way.

55. Before we take leave of the pronouns entirely, I must observe, that muen and tuen are perhaps the only declinable words which the affix ne, mentioned in page 119, does not put in the oblique; muen ne diya, I gave; tuen ne liya, thou took.

56. All the pronouns require the ka to agree in number with them; muen upne bap ka beta hoon, or hum upne bap ke beta hue, may both mean, I am the son of my father, notwithstanding the difference of construction. Among us, no scholar would say, you was taught, though speaking to one person. I hope the following examples, and those in page 176, will put this matter beyond all doubt in future.

Too ujub turih ka luonda hue, thou art a strange brat.

Toom zor tunashe ke lurke ho, you are a very comical boy.

Illustrations.

On the personal pronouns we must recollect, that the courtesy and arrogance of the natives make the plural often apply to one person : toom kuon ho, who are you? hum sipahee huen, I am a soldier; uor we humare bhaee huen, and he is my brother; hum toom jate the, you and I were going. This will prove at first rather perplexing to the scholar, but he may readily overcome the difficulty with a little attention, and should from the commencement learn to speak in the singular or plural number, with facility and ease, as he may find it his interest or duty to do so among the natives hereafter.

41.

As mere, tere, are used for mojh, toojh, these last are by the poets occasionally substituted for the former, in expressions like toojh ishq, thy love, mojh dil, my heart, but they seldom occur so in common discourse.

Moojh natuwan_n kee halut, the condition of hapless me, with the examples in page 119, clearly shows how ka, ke, kee, may follow such pronouns in the genitive, which is properly formed by ra, re, ree.

42.

Kyoon cose bcolate ho, why do you call him?
 yih (toomhen or) toojhe kya hue, what is this to (you, or) thee? When e en_n are found as pronominal postpositions, ko, &c. cannot appear, but the emphatic ee may sometimes deceive the learner, if not apprized of this, in sentences such as, isee ko maro cosee ko mut, beat this (here) one, not that (there) one; moojhee se kuha toom ne, you told me indeed, or myself.

43.

It is probable enough, that in, con, &c. are the remains of some dual form, and inhon, conhon, &c. the real plural, though the distinction, if it ever existed in the Hindoostanee, seems now-a-days to cause little or no difference in the application of these pronouns, unless perhaps to apply in, con, from courtesy to one person, that inhon, conhon, may more readily discriminate many, or that the addition of on rather belongs to such words in the pronominal than adjective state. Danū con ghoron ko do put paneē ubhee conhon̄ ko mut pila,o, give those horses grain, but do not yet give them water to drink,—in which, though conhon̄ ghoron̄, cannot be used; either con ko, or conhon̄ ko, may. See page 118.

44.

Ap; self, is subject to the same rule that khōd is in Persian. I will tell my friend, if you will inform your brother, that he also may apprise his acquaintance, muen̄ upne dost se kuhoonga jo toom upne bhaee se kuhoge, ki wooh bhee upne ashna ko khubur dewe; mun̄ bu dosti khōd khahum goft, ugur shooma buraduri khōd ra khaheed goft ki o neez bu ashna,e khōd khubur bidihud. In page 118, enough will be found to elucidate the rule; but perfection must, after all, depend more upon practice than precept.

46.

Kuon kuon, kis kis, kya kya, jis jis, jiskis, jis kisee, jistis, somewhat resemble the Latin quisquis, cuius cuius, &c.

Kuonsa, juonsa, tuonsa, ko'esa, rather assimilate with qui libet, quivis. We kuon k' on kitaben huen? what sort of books are these? mojhe kuonsee doge? which of them will you give me? juonsee chaho tuonsee lo, whichever you choose, take the same; kis turuh cose bunaoon, how shall I make it? jis turuh ho suke tis turuh bunaao, in the way it can be done, make it in that manner. Consult pages 111, 164, &c.

47, &c.

Woh dhobee jo pichhle sal humare yuhan tha so aj phir aya hue, the washerman who was with us last year, the same has returned.

As both jo and so are occasionally other parts of speech than pronouns, the student must distinguish them from the context. Jo woh uesa kure so too bhee kur, if he act thus, do thou do so. Ki, from the Persian, is frequently met with, as who, which, that, or, than, when, saying, viz. and must through time be acquired by dint of practice.

54.

Kuonsa din, what day, uor kuonsee rat, and which night, toojh bin, without thee, khoshee se goozre, have passed with pleasure.

55,

cos lurke ne kāta durukht ko, that boy cut the tree; kis ne cose chhcoree dee thee, who gave him a knife? cosee se poochho muen ne kisee ko chhooree dete nuheen dekha, ask himself, I did not see any body give a knife.

56.

The remarks in page 176, will render this evident enough to those who know why you requires are, were, in our language, and that my, thy, your, our, may be plural in one sense, while singular in the other, and vice versa. Mere ghoṛे, my horses, humara ghur, our house, in which mere is plural as to horses, but singular respecting me; and humara singular as to house, but plural regarding its owners, &c.

The Verb.

57. The imperative in the second person singular, is the root or radical portion of every verb in the Hindooostanee, which must always be discovered by 58; and in general, as in our language, is also a significant, useful noun.

58. Every infinitive terminates in the inflectional particle na, ne, nee, mentioned in page 81, but here meaning to, which, like the other post-positive particles, is invariably affixed to the second person sing. of the imperative, chah-na, to love, the Hindoostanee being in this respect of position, as in some others, diametrically opposite to ours.

59. The perfect tense, including the participle, is formed by adding (masc.) a, e, (fem.) ee, een, iyan, to the root of the verb, the final letter of which, if a vowel, assumes y, or is changed to iy, as explained in pages 73, 77.

60. The present tense and participle merely require the letter t, as a temporal sign, to precede the several particles enumerated as past signs in 59, and which all occur here exactly under similar circumstances: chah-ta, chah-te, chah-tee, chah-teen, chah-tiyan, love, lovest.

61. The aorist, subjunctive present, or imperative, assumes for both genders, oon, e, e, singular, and en, o, en, plural, in the order of persons observed here, and; like the present of the indicative has often the auxiliary signs.

62. The future springs from the aorist by adding g, as a fut. sign prefixt to the perf. a., &c. thus ga, ge, exactly in the order of persons observed in 61, and with respect to genders, &c. as in 59.

63. The pluperfect participle is either expressed by the root or imperative's self, or by the various particles ke, kur, e, kurke, and kur-kur, promiscuously affixed to the root, for that most useful portion of the verb.

64. The result of the foregoing principles on the verb palna, to breed, or any other, is as follows, in the scheme below, which the diligent student will carefully compare with the sketch already exhibited in page 121, that a real knowledge of both may at once enable him to master every Hindooostanee verb, the moment it falls under his discussion, either in a sentence or the vocabulary: This can instantly be accomplished, by separating the root from na, or any other of the moveable particles, like oon, e, kur, and in this manner even the auxiliary hona, to be, exist, can be regularly conjugated.

Singular.

In all the Persons.

Plural.

M. & Inf. Fem.

M. Fem.

Inf. ger. noun, &c.

-na, ne, -nee.

-ne, neen, niyan.

Pres. tense and part.

-ta, te, -tee.

-te, teen, tiyan.

Perf. tense and part.

-a, e, -ee.

-e, een, iyan.

Imp. & aor. M. & F.

Pal -oof. e-een-o-en.

Future } above aorist } particles.

-ga,

-gee.

-ge

-geen

-gian.

Pluperf. part.

-ke, kur, e, kunke, or kurkur.

N. B. The inf. or gerund masc. belongs to the first, and the fem. to the second declension. The root pal is also used as a pluperfect participle.

65. As the particles above enumerated are applicable, in the very same manner, to all verbs whatever, and as the whole drop e in the second person sing. of the aorist to form the root, or rather the second person sing. of the imp. it naturally follows, that there is but one conjugation in the language.

66. By taking for granted, what may almost be proved, that kee-na, moo-na, dee-na, lee-na, are the ancient infinitives of kurna, to do; mur-na, to die; de-na, to give; le-na, to take; and also supposing that o and oo, j and g, are nearly the same interchangeable letters, we shall not find one single irregular verb in the whole Hindooostanee language.

67. Hoon, &c. affixed to participles present and past, has exactly the same power and use as our am, do, have, &c. muen hota hoon, I am existing, or do exist. He hath been, wooh hoo-a hue. Hoo-a, means is, was, or been, and occasionally appears redundant.

68. When these signs are omitted, the mere present becomes not only indefinite, but also a past tense in the subjunctive mood. Jo muen luṅka hota uesa nuheen kurta, were I a boy I would not act so, or had I been a boy I would not have done so; jo muen wuhan̄ sota kisee ko nuheen jugata, had I slept there, I would not have waked any one.

69. To express the imperfect of the auxiliary ho-na, the word tha, was, did, had, is in use, and is probably a contracted perfect of the obsolete regular verb thana, to stay, be stationed, which to this day means a station, post.

70. From the above tha, and the indefinite present or participle, comes the imperfect tense, muen hota tha, I was existing, or did (then) exist; too hoo,a tha, thou did exist, or had been.

71. The whole of the compounds have just now been elucidated, and the simple tenses, having formerly been adjusted in 64, they require no repetition here. The frequent substitution of one tense for another, especially the pluperfect for the perfect, will be evident enough in the Exercises.

72. In the passive voice, the perfect participle of the active verb assumes jana, to go, be, affixed through its various tenses, which may nevertheless be followed by such parts of hona, as particular tenses may still require. Hum mare gu'e the, we had been beaten; toom mare gu'e hoge, you may have been beaten.

73. The perfect participle passive, in all compound tenses, seems to require guya, but commonly drops it in those which are simple. Muen mara guya hoon, I have been beaten; muen mara ja,oonga, I shall be beaten.

74. The personal pronouns, as in Latin, are not always expressed, the termination, auxiliary or sense, generally pointing out the particular person.

75. When they do occur, it is commonly so: Muen, I; too, thou; wooh, he. } yih, he, this. Hum, we; toom, you; we, they. } ye, they, these. are used only when requisite, in contra-distinction to that, those.

76. The third person is often substituted for the other two, from the Oriental practice of introducing words like slave for I, and worship, honour, gentleman, &c. for you.

77. Although the Hindooostanee verbs have often inherently potential, permissive and other properties, they nevertheless require also certain compound forms to express them, the last or subservient portion of which is generally conjugated like all other verbs.

78. These compounds are formed in five different ways, and may be conveniently termed radical, preteritive, inflective, participial, and reiterative, from the nature of their composition.

79. The radical (1.) is a very extensive class, comprehending, besides numberless adverbial infinitives, the potential and completive forms.

80. Under the preteritives, (2.) are all the passives, desideratives, requisitives, proximatives, and frequentatives.

81. When the infinitive occurs in the inflected, (3.) instead of the radical form, a considerable number of inceptive, permissive, and acquisitive verbs are produced, all highly useful in the Hindoo tongue.

82. The participial (4.) combinations are also very numerous, and may be sub-divided into continuative and stationary.

83. A very few come under the reiterative (5.) class, in which the subservient part has of itself little or no very obvious meaning whatever, although certainly deducible from other significant words.

84. The result of the above enumeration, systematically considered, is thus :

1. Radicals.

1. Adverbials, from their signification with us, kaṭ-dalna, to cut off; gir-puṇa, to fall down; kha-jana, to eat up.
2. Potentials, bol-sukna, to be able to speak.
3. Completives, pee-chookna, to be done drinking; kha-chookna, to finish eating.

2. Preteritives.

1. Passives, mara-jana, to be beaten.
2. Desideratives, } to wish
3. Requisitives, } mura-chahna, ought } to die.
4. Proximatives, } also to be about
5. Frequentatives, bola-kurna, to make a habit of speaking; jaya-kurna, to have a trick of going; pyra-kurna, to practise swimming; aya-kurna, to make a practice of coming.

3. • Inflectives.

1. Inceptives, seekhne-lugna, to begin to learn; bolne-lugna, to begin to speak.
2. Permissives, jane-dena, to let, or permit to go; ane-dena, to let come.
3. Acquisitives, ane-pana, to be allowed to come; jane-pana, to be allowed to go.

4. Participials.

1. Continuatives, purhita-jana, or ruhna, to continue reading.
2. Statistical, gate-ana, to come singing; rote-duorna, to run crying.

5. Reiteratives.

1. Subservients, bolna-chalna, to converse, &c. byahna-burna, to marry, with perhaps a few more.

85. The inflected infinitive at times supplants the radical and preteritive forms. In this way, however, muen nu chul sukta, I cannot walk, muen chulne sukta, I can, are very liable to confusion; and as muen nuheen chulne sukta, is not a very musical sentence, the ne therefore, I think, ought always, on such occasions, to be entirely avoided.

86. The passives and participials change in both their component parts, according to the gender and number of their nominatives.—
Woo h maree gu ee thee, she was slain; we gate ae the, they came singing; wooh rotee ruhee, she continued weeping.

87. The reiteratives are in fact doubly conjugated, cos se muen nu kubhoo bola nu chala, I never had any thing to say to him, resembling in this respect the pronouns in page 181.

88. Mueñ kuh chooka, I have already said; uesa mut bola kuro upne nuokur se, do not make a habit of speaking so to your servant; jo muen ane pa oon toomhare yihan, to toom ko jane de oon upne yihan, if I be allowed to come to your house I will permit you to go to mine, with a few such, are well calculated to elucidate this department now. In the Exercises they will again appear, but on the whole are so essential for immediate colloquial purposes, that the learner ought to lose no time in acquiring this most useful part of the language.

89. The power which transitives have of prefixing ne is lost the moment they are compounded with any neuter verb. Muen ne khaana khaya, I have eat my dinner; muen kha-chooka, I have done eating.

90. Bolna, to speak; lana, to bring; chookna, to miss, end, &c.; lurna, to fight, and a few others, though apparently transitives, nevertheless do not admit ne; tuen ne kuha, thou said; tuen bola, thou spoke; toom ne liya, you took; we lae the, they had brought.

91. The addition of negatives in the Hindostanee is so very easy, that a few examples only can be requisite to illustrate the mode completely; nu is common to all the modes, mut peculiar to the imp. and nuheen to the rest; toom jante nuheen? don't you know? muen nu janta tha, I did not know; mut poochho, don't ask; nu janiyo, don't suppose.

92. The learner must be careful not to confound emphatic interrogatives and affirmatives with negative expressions; muen ne bheja hue, I have sent; tuen ne bheja, thou hast sent; muen nu-heen bola hoon, I have not spoken; toom nuheen lae ho, you have not brought.

93. Hindoostanee syntax and construction will appear so easy and simple in the Dialogues or Exercises hereafter presented to the scholar, as to preclude the necessity of all further observation, in a short introduction of this kind. Persons versed in the analysis of a sentence in any language, can be at no loss, after a few trials, with the examples which may occur here; and such as really wish to become masters of the Hindoostanee, need not limit their enquiries to these pages, as long as my other works are in print.

94. The composition and derivation of words is equally obvious and attainable, after recollecting the contents of pages 65, &c. with the few particulars inserted below, for the use of mere beginners.

95. When the infinitive is thus met with—chah-na, to love, phir-na, to turn, khel-na, to play, dur-na, to fear, little penetration can be wanted to discover the noun, as in our own tongue, 57. Should the root end in n, the scholar must recollect not to confound the infin. and perfect together, which he will at first be apt to do in ginna, to count; sconna, to hear;

janna, to know, and some others, as their perfects are gina, soona, jana.

96. Sometimes the inf. and noun are the same, as khana, to eat, also food. In the fem. this occasionally denotes the instrument, as kutur-nee, a pair of scissars, from kutur-na, to clip. The perfect, or participle, is also the noun, as chooma, a kiss, kuha, order, advice, mara, or mara hoo,a, a victim, &c. from choom-na, to kiss, kuhnā, to tell, marna, to beat, kill. This also as a fem. is a noun like bolee, speech. The present part. likewise is a noun in both genders, as khata, a waste book, receiver or granary, from khana, to suffer, admit, &c. bustee, a village, from busna, to dwell, inhabit; gintee, a muster, reckoning, from ginna, to count, &c.

97. Adjectives require kurna to become active compound verbs; with hona they are neuter, khura, erect, khura-k. to raise, khura-h. to rise, gurm, hot, gurm-k. to heat actively, gurm-h. to heat, or grow warm. Nouns are also used in a similar manner with kurna, to make, khana, to eat, suffer, receive, dena, to give, pana, milna, to get, rukhna, to place, bandhna, to tie, ana, to come, in such combinations as fikr-k. to think, galee-d. to abuse, galee-khana, to be abused, nuzur-ana, to appear, or come in sight.

98. In some instances the auxiliaries in 97 are preferred to the regular passive form, whence mar-khana, to get a beating; or mara-jana, to be beaten, have often the same meaning.

99. The neuters and actives are in general so well distinguished in this language, from each other, that the learner can seldom confound them, as in our tongue, together. The transitive forms generally spring from the neuter or intransitive by assuming a before na, or by prolonging the short vowel of the neuter, in the active infinitive. For the causals wa commonly suffices before na; julna, julana, julwana, to burn, to cause burn; khoolna, kholna, khowlana, to open, cause open, &c.

100. The scholar should always recollect, that in this way he may discover a number of very useful verbs by a slight attention to the connection between one and the other form: chulna, to go, chulana, to drive; sconna, to hear, sconana, to tell; buchna, to escape, buchana, to save; seekhna, to learn, sikhana, to teach; mur-na, to die, marna, to kill; bhoolna, to forget, bhoolana, to mislead, are a convincing proof of the truth of my remarks and assertions, which, as the scholar proceeds in his career, he will find more and more worthy of his assiduous observation.

101. From the foregoing hints the learner may almost at pleasure furnish his self with many verbs apparently not inserted in this work, agreeably to the same principles in his own tongue, evident in the examples—to make haste, to take care, to give vent, to tie fast, to get a beating,—but for ample information on this portion of the Hindoostanee, he must attend to the Exercises and Vocabulary, and in the mean time recollect that the above auxiliaries will there be contracted to k. kh. h. d. p. m. a. r. &c.

A summary of the whole verbal principles will now be conspicuous enough in the following table, which comprises the form of every intransitive and transitive verb in the language, with the entire passive voice of every active verb, comprehended in one conjugation, from which there is hardly a single exception or irregular in the Hindoostanee.

Imp. bol, speak. Inf. and Ger. bol-na, to speak.		Pres. and Part. bol-ta, speaking.		Perf. and Part. bol-a, spoke, spoken.*
Present.		Perf. Ind. and Def.		Aorist, Imp. and Future.
Imperfect.		Pluperfect.
muen̄ } too } wooth } hum } toom } we }	hoon̄ } hue, } hue, } huen̄ } ho, } huen̄ ,	bola } hue, } hue, } huen̄ , } ho, } huenḡ ,	bola tha, } &c. spoke, or have spoken, &c.	boloon̄ } -ga,
			I, thou, he, &c. speak, do speak, or am speaking.	bole } bole } bolen̄ } -ge,
			I, &c. may have spoken, &c.	bole } bolo } bolen̄ } -ge,
			I, &c. did speak, or was speaking, &c.	bole the, } I, &c. had spoken, did speak, or spoke.
Conditional and Potential.		Future-Compleitive.		Aorist, Imp. and Future.
Had I spoken, I would have spoken, or I, thou, &c. might have spoken, were I, &c. speaking, &c.		I shall have spoken, thou, &c. shalt have spoken, &c.		chookonga, chookega, chookenga, chookenge, chookoge,
bol-		chookenge, chookoge,		chookenga, chookega, chookenge, chookoge,
suka, sukte,		I shall have spoken, thou, &c. shalt have spoken, &c.		I, &c. speak, may, can, shall, or will speak, may I speak, let me speak, speak thou, let us speak, speak you, &c. &c.
suke, or

* The present and perfect participles, strictly speaking, are discriminated by hoo-a affixed; this however is so often omitted as to confound the two parts of the verb together, but the context commonly prevents misconception. Hoo-a (for hoo-a) the perfect of ho-na, to be, has been already noticed, and accounted for in 66, 67, &c.

When the verb is transitive, all the perfect tenses will often remain wholly uninflected, while their pronouns, on the contrary, will be thrown by ne into the inflexion, as far as they can, thus :

muen	ne mara hue,	I, thou, he, &c. beat, or have beaten.	ne mara hogā,	I, thou, he, &c. may have beaten.	ne mara tha, I, he, &c. had beaten, did beat, or simply beat.
too
oos
hum toom
oon

The pluperfect participle bol-kur, bol-ke, &c. having spoken, has appeared in detail, and merits every attention from the learner, not only as the participle which joins two or more members of a sentence, by suspending the meaning, till it closes, but also as a convenient adverbial form of the greatest use in the language, in such expressions,—şahib ke yihan jakur, humara sulam kuhke ooskee topee mang-ke, cose lekur phir a.o, having gone to the gentleman's, given my compliments, and having borrowed his hat, return with it here. Whatever you do, act deliberately, jo koochh ki toom kuro

so soch-ke kuro, from sochna, to think; duor-ke ja,o, go quickly, i. e. having run.

The future of the infinitive and participle generally occurs so, bola-chahna, to be about to speak, bolne-pur, bolne-wala, about to speak, but such combinations can give little or no trouble to any scholar, who has really studied the foregoing principles. The scholar cannot well forget that a for the fem. sing. becomes ee, and that ee in the fem. plural must be een or iyan, as exhibited in 59; he must moreover recollect, that e of the 2d person imperative singular is always dropt in that mood; whence, bol too, speak thou; ugur too bole, if thou speak.

No transitive verb can now be difficult in the active, we shall therefore here exhibit the passive, from which the learner will also acquire the verb jana, to go, or to be, as the auxiliary with hona, in this voice.

Inf. and Ger. mara-jana, to be beaten.

Pres. and Part. mara-jata, being beaten.

Perf. and Part. mara-guya, beaten.

Present.

Perfect, Ind. and Def.

Imperfect.

Pluperfect.

Aorist, Imp. and Future.

muen } hoon, too } hue, woh } hue,
hum } huen, toon } ho, we } huen,
I, &c. am beaten.

mare jate mara jata } tha,
mare guye mara guya } tha,
I, &c. was or have been beaten.

mare jate mara jata } tha,
the } I, &c. was then beaten.

mare guye mara guya } tha,
the } I, &c. had been beaten, also I was beaten.

mare } jawen mara } ja,oon { ja,o } jawe } -gaw, { jawen } -ge,

I, &c. may, can, will or shall be beaten, let him, &c. be beaten.

Dubious.

Conditional and Potential

Future-Complete.

muen } hoon, too } hue, woh } hue,
hum } huen, toon } ho, we } huen,
I, &c. may be beaten.

mare guye mara guya } hoonga,
mare jate mara jata } hoonga,
I, &c. may have been beaten, &c.

Had I been beaten, I would have been beaten, or I, thou, &c. might have been beaten, &c.

mareja- maraja- } sukta, { or } suka,
sukte, or suke,

I can or could be beaten, &c.
he can or could be beaten, &c.

mareja- maraja- } chookoonga, { chookenge, chookoge,
chookenge,

I, thou, he, you, &c. shall have been beaten.

The w may be omitted or inserted at pleasure in all verbs whose root ends in a vowel. They even occasionally drop the e and o also, whence ho_o, howe, ho_e, ho; howen_ı, ho_{eñ}, hon_ı, are all used promiscuously, and consequently ho_{oon}, hoon, ho_{oonga}, hoonga, howega, ho_{ega}, hogha, in the future. This tense in the auxiliary is often pronounced huega, huenge, (with rather a present than future meaning) being formed by affixing ga, ge, to the present of hona, exactly as the future is upon the aorist in the above table. We may now reconcile do, lo, bo, and doon_ı, loon_ı, with de_o, le_o, bo_o, de_{oonga}, le_{oonga}, and all contractions of this kind, from verbs like dena, lena, bona, hona, &c. On similar principles the short vowel u, in many infinitives, is omitted in other parts of the verb, whence sumjha, nikla, &c. in the perf. sumjhooonga, nikloonga, in the future, (never sumujha, &c.) from sumujhna, to understand, nikulna, to issue; but on this theme the reflecting student will look attentively back to the significant particles at the beginning of this Work, whence he will learn how to reconcile and account for every trifling literal deviation that can present itself, in any portion of the Hindooostanee.

Cardinals.

1 Ek	26 Chhubees
2 Do	27 Sutaees
3 Teen	28 Ut̄haees
4 Char	29 contees
5 Panch	30 Tees
6 Chhu	31 Ektees
7 Sat	32 Butees
8 Ath	33 Tetees
9 Nuo	34 Chuotees
10 Dus	35 Puentees
11 Egaruh	36 Chhutees
12 Baruh	37 Suentees
13 Teruh	38 Ut̄htees
14 Chuoduh	39 contalees
15 Pundruh	40 Chalees
16 Soluh	41 Ektalees
17 Sutruh	42 Bealees
18 Ut̄haruh	43 Tetalees
19 connees	44 Chuoalees
20 Bees	45 Puentealees
21 Ekees	46 Chhealees
22 Baees	47 Suentalees
23 Teees	48 Ut̄htalees
24 Chuobees	49 onchas
25 Puchees	50 Puchas

51	Ekawun	76	Ch̄ihuttur
52	Bawun	77	Suthuttur
53	Tirpun	78	Uṭhuttur
54	Chuowun	79	conasee
55	Puchpun	80	Ussee
56	Ch̄huppun	81	Ekasee
57	Sutawun	82	Be,asee
58	Uṭhawun	83	Tirasee
59	consuṭh	84	Chuorasee
60	Sath	85	Puchasee
61	Eksuṭh	86	Ch̄he,asee
62	Basuṭh	87	Sutasee
63	Tirsuṭh	88	Uṭhasee
64	Chuosuṭh	89	Nuo,asee
65	Pueṇsuṭh	90	Nuwwe
66	Ch̄he,asuṭh	91	Ekanwe
67	Sutsuṭh	92	Banwe
68	Uṭhsuṭh	93	Tiranwe
69	conhuttur	94	Chuoranwe
70	Suttur	95	Puchanwe
71	Ekhuttur	96	Ch̄he,anwe
72	Buhuttur	97	Sutanwe
73	Tihuttur	98	Uṭhanwe
74	Chuohuttur	99	Ninnanwe
75	Puchhuttur	100	Suo.

As several of the foregoing are pronounced differently, I shall here insert such, in order to prevent any misconception, in this place:—

Chhe,	- - - - 6	Chhachhut,	- - 66
Tuentees,	- - 33	Ursuth,	- - - 88
Chuontees,	- - 34	Birasee,	- - - 82
Urtees,	- - - 38	Ekanuwwe,	- - 91
conchalees,	- - 39	Biranuwwe,	- - 92
Tuentalees,	- - - 43	Tiranuwwe,	- - 93
Urtalees,	- - - 48	and so forth:
Tripun,	- - - 53	also Nubbe, &c.
Puchawun,	- - 55	Sue,	- - - 100
Tresuth,	- - - 63

Ordinals.

1st	Puehla.	6th	Chhut-wan.
2d	Doosra.	7th	Sat-wan.
3d	Teesra.	8th	Ath-wan.
4th	Chuotha.	9th	Nuo-wan.
5th	Panch-wan.	10th	Dus-wan, &c.

Collectives.

Gunda,	four.	Suekṛa,	a hundred.
Gahee,	five.	Huzar,	a thousand.
Besee,	a score.	Lakh,	a hundred thou-
Chaleesa,	forty.	Kuroṛ,	ten million.

N. B. The whole series of numbers, from ten to ninety, may be rendered very simple indeed in this way, dus o ek, bees o do, tees o teen, chalees o char, teen beesee, char beesee, &c.; but dus ek, bees ek, rather mean about 10 (9 or 11) or 20 (19 or 21) as an elliptical mode of expressing—dus, ek kum ya zee, ad, ten, one more or less.

Fractionals.

The following fractionals are so intricate, that practice only can make them agreeable :

Tiha, ee	$\frac{1}{3}$	Sarhe teen	$3\frac{1}{2}$
Pa,o, chuoth, or chuoth, ee	$\frac{1}{4}$	Puone char	$3\frac{3}{4}$
Adha	$\frac{1}{5}$	Sarhe char	$4\frac{1}{4}$
Do tiha, ee	$\frac{2}{3}$	Puone panch	$4\frac{5}{6}$
Puwun, puona, or teen pa,o	$\frac{3}{4}$	Suwa panch	$5\frac{1}{4}$
Suwa	$1\frac{1}{4}$	Sarhe panch	$5\frac{1}{2}$
Derh	$1\frac{1}{2}$	Puone chhu	$5\frac{3}{4}$
Puone do	$1\frac{3}{4}$	Suwa chhu	$6\frac{1}{4}$
Suwa do	$2\frac{1}{4}$	Sarhe chhu	$6\frac{1}{2}$
Utha, ee	$2\frac{1}{2}$	Puone sat	$6\frac{3}{4}$
Puone teen	$2\frac{3}{4}$	Suwa bees	$20\frac{1}{4}$
Suwa teen	$3\frac{1}{4}$	Sarhe tees	$30\frac{1}{4}$
		Puone puchas	$49\frac{3}{4}$

Suwa suo	125	Sarhe nuo suo	950
Derh suo	150	Suwa huzar	1250
Puone do suo	175	Derh huzar	1500
Suwa do suo	225	Puone do huzar	1750
Urhaee suo	250	Suwa do huzar	2250
Puone teen suo	275	Urhaee huzar	2500
Suwa teen suo	325	Sarhe teen hu-
Sarhe teen suo	350	zar, &c.	3500
Sarhe sat suo	750

Days of the Week.

Hindoostanee.	Hinduwee.	English.
Etwar*	Rubee-bar	Sunday
Som-war, or Peer	Som-bar	Monday
Mungul	Mungulbar	Tuesday

* The Moosulman's Etwar, or Sunday, commences with what we, as well as the Hindoos, call Saturday night, Suneechur kee rat, and so on throughout the week. As this confusion of time may be productive of mischief, in cases of evidence for capital offences, the reader will not, I trust, be displeased with the present digression. Suppose a Moosulman were on his trial for murdering a Hindoo on Tuesday night, Mungul kee rat, in our, and the Hindoos sense of the word, all the witnesses, if Moosulmans, and aware of the above circumstance, could

Hindoostanee.	Hinduwee.	English.
Boodh	Boodhbar	Wednesday
Joomerat, or Biphe	Brihsputbar, or Lukheebar	Thursday
Jooma	Sookrbar	Friday
Suneechur, or Bar	Suneebar	Saturday

save the criminal though guilty, by swearing positively to his being far from the spot on Mungul kee rat; because this, in their way of reckoning time, coincides with what we, and the Hindoos, call Somwar kee rat, Monday night; while our Mungul kee rat, on the other hand, is in fact named Boodh kee rat, by the followers of Moohummud, though we and the Hindoos would certainly call this Wednesday night of theirs, our Tuesday night, and vice versa. Now, in such a case, an alibi might be clearly established by the evidences upon oath, and that too without being guilty of perjury, as they are here supposed to know that their different depositions will be taken down, and translated verbatim as they make them, viz. Mungul kee rat, which we would interpret as Tuesday night, and the alibi set up on this foundation, clears the prisoner, while it screens the witnesses also, because they may safely say, we swore to his being absent from the spot where the murder was committed, on Tuesday

N. B. Din, is a day, aj, this or to-day, aj rat, this night. But war or bar only occurs in composition, unless we admit mas ka bar, the last day of the month, as an exception; but I question night it is true, according to your ideas of the matter, yet we undoubtedly meant no more by doing so, than that on our Monday night, the culprit was many miles distant from the place the crime was perpetrated at, upon your and the Hindoos Tuesday night. If this proposition can be reversed, so as to affect the life of an innocent man, I tremble at the very idea of it, and shall feel truly happy indeed, if the present extended digression put people in future more on their guard, in all matters depending upon time; particularly my military readers, who may yet be employed on the most important services, whose success must often depend on the accuracy of the instructions, given in Hindostanee, to an inferior native officer. In night attacks, ambuscades, signals, sallies, &c. to be concerted some days previous to their execution, between a Moosulman and a British officer, if the latter has ordered the former to carry a particular operation into effect on Mungul kee rat, as Tuesday night, his expectations will evidently be anticipated one whole day, as the Moosulman, according to his notion of time, will in this case do the duty required upon Mon-

if this be good Hindoostanee, although much used by all our domestics in Bungala, either for the last or first day of the month, as these may be connected with muster or pay day.

Lunar Time.

Mcohurrum	Rujub
ṣufur	Shuūban
1. Rubeeū-col uwuwul	Rumuzan
2. Rubeeū { cos ṣanee { col akhir	Shuwwal
1. Jumad-col uwuwul	zilqad, or zeeqadu
2. Jumad- { -cos ṣanee { -col akhir	zilhij, or zeehijju

Hindoo and English Months.

Chuet, commences from the } March.
11th to 13th,

Buesakh,	April.
Jeth,	May.
Usarh,	June.
Sawun, or Srawun,	July.

day night. To point out the possible fatal tendency of such a blunder, on particular occasions, is a task that I shall leave entirely to the reader's own imagination, being much easier conceived than described, in its fullest extent.

Bhadon,	August.
Koonar, or Asin,	September.
Katik, or Kartik,	October.
Ughun,	November.
Poos, or Poh,	December.
Magh, or Mah,	January.
Phagcon, or Phalgcon,	February.

Money Table.

Dam, Uddhee, Dumree, Chhedam, Udhela,
$1\frac{1}{2}$ =	1 and 2 =	1 and 2 =	1 and 2 =	1 and 2 =
Puesa, Tuka,* Ana, Paolee or Sookee, Udhelee,
1 and 2 =	1 and 2 =	1 and 4 =	1 and 2 =	1 and 2 =
Roopiyu, Mcohur or Ushrufee.
1 and 16 =	— one.

This however varies much in its value, and the extremes may probably be 18 and 14 roo-

* Or pukka puesa, a double puesa, the other being named kucha, or single. The Bungalees call roopiyu, tuka; and the one-fourth sookee, sekee; the final ee is frequently changed to a, in such words, without affecting their meaning, whence sooka, seeka, paola, &c. though udhela, and udhelee, as may be seen above, are very different things. The Chhedam is moreover termed dookra; but, after all, except pees to the moohur, according to its intrinsic worth in gold, or the caprices of the money-changers at the time, as they frequently extort whatever they please in this way, from all other classes of people. As very satisfactory lists, and most useful tables of weights and measures, are now inserted in the several Registers published in the East Indies, it would be absurd in me to reprint them; I shall therefore refer all sojourners, for every information of this sort, to the most accurate Works, which are procureable at the printing-offices of the several Presidencies in British India.

with the puesa, ana, roopiyu, and moohur, the stranger will not at first have much business or connection. As he prolongs his stay or extends his enquiries, he will learn what kuorees and puns also are.

DIALOGUES.*

EK padshah tha jiske (yuhan) ek betee thee, pur ko ee beta nu tha.

Is bazar ka dustoor kya
 hue?

Yih wooh-ee hue.

THERE was a king
 who had a daughter,
 but he had not a son.

What is the custom of this market?

This is the (he or) man.

* The student must refer to the large Collection of Dialogues just published, for that extensive variety which cannot be expected in a small Work of this kind.

The words dustoor, bazar, begum, soorut, surdar, Moosulman, Moonshee, feel, mooftee, Hindoo, being frequently written correctly at once by most people, so far establishes the general propriety of my system of Hindee-Roman orthography. On this occasion let me caution the scholar not to allow any Moonshee to insist, that particular examples are never used among them, until he can speak Hindoostanee well enough to convince all such wiseacres of their total inability to comprehend the nature and

Ko ee dum men phire- He will return in a
ga.

Ul ghurz yih hue, ki The short of it is this, muen kul ja oonga. that I will go tomorrow.

Wuhan sub hee hue. The whole are there.

Muen toojh se kam I will take the business loonga uor cose from thee and give doonga. it to him.

tendency of what is asserted here, without being sufficiently versed in both languages. As no native can patiently submit to too and toojh, all of them have an interest in crushing expressions similar to that in the text, without having penetration enough to perceive, that in cases of displeasure, endearment, familiarity, and adoration, these are perfectly just. They cannot even comprehend the introduction of a single member of a sentence to illustrate a rule, and therefore often observe, Who will return? What man is to go? Why will he go? We never speak so. This cannot be right—after instances which may be produced by the scholar in the course of his reading. The learner gets perplexed, the Moonshee persists in a speech, of which the other cannot comprehend one-third, the dispute naturally ends in mutual chagrin, if not abuse, without the smallest advantage to either party.

Woo h koon hue?	Who is he?
Ap (or sahib) ke ba-wurchee ka bhaee.	The brother of your worship's cook.
Saees ke pas jakur, yih danu cos ke age rukhkur, dekho ki wooh ghore ko khlata hue.	Go to the groom, put this grain before him, and see that he gives it to the horse.
Muen elchee hokur isee surkar men aya hoon padshah kee turuf se.	I have come on the part of the king as ambassador to this government.
Ye kuonse janwur huen?	What sort of animals are these?
Moorghabee huen.	They are wild ducks.
Ketne ko mere khawind ke hath * behchoge.	For what will you sell them to my master?
Toomharee danist men is ghur ka peechha	In your opinion is the rear of this house

* Were ko here used instead of ke hath, the meaning would be perverted to—For how much will you sell my master as a slave? A learner once in my presence asked a Moonshee about a book, and concluded with saying, will you sell it to me? in these words: Hum ko (for humare

age se khooshnooma
hue?

handsomer than the front?

Hurgiz, bur uks mere khiyal men iska aga peechhe se buhoot
soothra hue.

By no means; on the contrary, I conceive the front is much more elegant than the rear.

Bat yoon ho to ho wu-zeer ke nuokuron
age, pur bukhshee
ke chakuron ke nuz-deek koochh uor hue.

The matter may be so among the minister's servants, but it is otherwise with the general's domestics.

Kuhan raja ka beta uor
kuhan yih shoohru.

What connection is there between the prince's son and this report?*

Raje ke bete uor is shoohre men yih lu-
ga,o hue.

There is this connection between the prince's son and this report.

hath) bechoge? Will you sell me? The man very respectfully replied, muqdoor kya, ap mera ghoolam nuheen, how can I do so, your honour is not my slave?

* Lit. where is the prince's son, and where this report?

Khansaman ke yuhan
aj ke bazar ke khurch
ko ek puela bhee nu-heen, suoda kuhan
se lawega, uor mere yuhan jo such poochho ek phootee kuo-ree bhee nuheen.

Jub ki murdon ke yuhan bawurchee, khid-mutgar uor khuwas
conkee khidmut pur
ruhen chahiye ki yo-rutan ke yuhan bhee bawurchin, khidmutgarin o suheliyan,
bhee ruhen.

Yih kuhne men kis
soorut se awe hue?

Kya hoo,a or hue?

Toomhara iradu kya?

Kuon shor kurta hue?

Toom kya kuhte ho?

Boolao cose.

Toomharee kya sulah
hue?

The steward has not a single penny about him for to-day's market expences, how will he bring provisions, and in fact I have not even a bad farthing.

If men have their male cooks, men servants and pages to serve them, women surely ought to have their cook maids, waiting maids, and damsels
to attend them.

In what manner is it expressed?

What is the matter?

What do you mean?

Who makes a noise?

What do you say?

Call him.

What is your advice?

Yih sub se bihtur hoga.	This will be better than all.
Ekhee hue.	It is the same thing.
Koochh furq nuheen.	There is no difference.
Toom buhoot ahiste (or dubee awaz se) bolte ho.	You speak very low.
Toom Ungrezee bol sukte ho?	Can you speak English?
Sulees Hindoostanee to kuho.	Speak easy Hindoostanee.
Wooh phir kuho.	Speak that again.
Toom buhoot juldee bolte.	You speak too quick.
Muen nuheen sumujhta hoon.	I do not understand.
Kuho to wooh kya kuhata hue.	Tell me what he says.
Bhooliyo mut.	Do not forget.
Kuhan se ae ho?	Whence came you?
Idhur a.o.	Come hither.
Pas (or nuzdeek) a.o.	Come near.
Chule ja.o. Rookhsut.	Go away.
Aj kee kya khubur? lit. day's what news?	Is there any news today?
Toom kuese ho or khuerafiyut?	How do you do?

- Toomharee oomr kya ? What is you age?
- Moojhe uor durkar nu-heen. i. e. me to more necessary not. I do not want more.
- Uor nuheen chahiye. More is not required.
- Kuho saees se ki ghora tueyar kure. Tell the groom to get the horse ready.
- Chabook uor gol topee
do. Give me the whip and round hat.
- Palkee mere pas bhejo. Send the palkee to me.
- Upna kam jo bihtur nukuro to muen toom-hen juwab doonga. If you don't do your business better, I will turn you away.
- Lao hazree. Bring breakfast.
- Misree do. Give me the sugar-candy.
- Koochh uor doodh to
lao. Bring some more milk.
- Muen ubhee bahur
jaya chahta hoon. I want to go out directly.
- Khane ko kya hue ? What is there for dinner?
- Hath dhoné ka paneet
lao. Bring water to wash
my hands.
- Soono ek nao hum ko
durkar hue Kulkutte tuk jane ko. I want a boat to go to Calcutta.

- Is ka bhaṛa keta hue? What is the fare of it?
 Toom kubtuk chul su- When can you go?
 koge?
- Hum ubhee ja_oenge. We will go immediately.
- Juld na_o eehan̄ la_o. Bring the boat here quickly.
- Is wuqt juwar hue? Is the tide in now?
 Nuheen̄ sahib bhaṭha No, Sir, it is out, or hue. ebb.
- Hum ko kinare pur Put me on shore.
 oṭaro.
- Idhur ko chulo. Go this way. Turn that hur ko phiro. way.
- Kya hue oos bustee ka What is the name of nam? that place?
- Wuhan̄ kūon̄ ruhta Who stays there?
 hue?
- Wuhan̄ koochh khane Can we get any thing
 peene kee cheez mil- to eat or drink there?
 tee hue?
- Uch-chha, wuhan̄ na_o Well, take the boat le chulo ou luga_o. there and put to.
- Dekho na_o isee juguh Keep the boat here, and rukho, our toom sub- remain all at hand, hazir ruho, hum ub- as we shall return hee phir ate huen̄. immediately.

- Chulo na o juldee kho-lo: , Come, let us set off quickly.
- Maro dand, zor se tano, soostee mut kuro. Row fast, pull away, don't be lazy.
- Kochh khura kuro
dhoop kee ar ke Put up something to waste. shelter us from the sun.
- Kue ghuree din churha What o'clock is it ?
hue? or
- Kue ghuree din hue?
- Palkee juldee munga,o. Bring a chair quickly.
- Moothiyon ko boola,o, Get porters, and send our humare sathee my baggage along sath humaree cheez- with me.
bust bhejwa do.
- Toom sahib kuhan co- Where do you mean to troge? go Sir?
- Sub se uch-chhe punch- Let them carry me at wale ke ghur hum once to the best tako ek bargee le pu- vern.
- hoonchawen.
- Chulo hum ko puhcon- Come take me to Mr cha,o D— sahib ke D—'s.
yuhan.
- Woo hkuon hue?—toom Who is that? who are kuon ho? you?
- Ko ee hue? Is any body there?

Kyoon top (bujee, Has the gun fired?
chhoṭee, or) dughee?

Han sahib. Yes, Sir.

Khidmutgar ja o hath moonth dhone ka pa-nee la o. Boy, go bring water to wash with.

Miswak munjun de. Hand me the toothbrush and powder.

Dekh keta din churha hue. See what o'clock it is.

Khodawund ghuree Your honour! three teen ek aya hue. bells or so.

Kuhar, ek jora kupra Bearer, bring me a suit
la o. of clothes.

Koortee our topee ko Brush my coat and hat.
jharo.

Bal buna o. Dress my hair.

Moze kanjon sumet Give me my boots and humen do. spurs.

Ghoṛe pur zeen band- Is the horse saddled or hee hue ki nuheen? not?

Garee tueyar kura o. Get the carriage, coach, &c. ready.

Nu nu munu kuro. No, countermand it.

Suwarcce ke ghoṛe ko Order the saddle horse.
hazir kuro.

- Humare sat̄h toomhen jāna hoga. You must go along with me.
- Ubtuk sahib ooṭha hue? Is your master up yet?
- Han sahib pur kuheen bahur guya hue. Yes Sir, but is gone out somewhere.
- Ton̄ ko koochh muyl̄oom hue ki kuhan̄ guya? Do you know where he is gone to?
- Moojhe muyl̄oom nuhgen. I don't know.
- Hazree tueyar hue? Is breakfast ready?
- Han sahib ub kurta hoon. Yes, Sir, I am now making it.
- Khoob khuolta paneelao. Bring the water boiling hot.
- Cha bunaao. Make the tea.
- Humen̄ do ek piyalu, doodh, misree, ek unda, mukhun, rotee, chumcha, moolie, halim, moorubbu. Give me a cup, milk, sugar, an egg, butter, bread, a spoon, raddish, cresses, jam.
- Ek palkee (ya bocha) our kuhar zuroor hue. I want a palkee, (or a chair) and bearers.
- Ek din ka bhāra kya hue? What is the fare per day?

Seedha age chule ja,o.	Go straight forwards.
Duehne phiro.	Turn to the right.
Ba'en (hath) phiro.	Turn to the left (hand.)
Juldee chulo.	Go fast.
Ahiste zuru chulo.	Go a little slower.
Wuhan ja,o,—burhke ja,o,—khu're ruho.	Go there,—go on— stop.
Eehan ruho jub tuk ki hum phir awen.	Stop here till I return.
Isee dum hum * phir awenge.	I will be back imme- diately.
Age dou'ke ja,o khubur le ki——şahib ghur men hue ki nuheen.	Run on before, and en- quire if Mr —— be at home or not.
Ruh, ruho, palkee neechhe rukh do.	Stop, stop, put the chair down.
Toomhara şahib ghur men hue?	Is your master at home?
Palkee ootha,o ourchu- lo ghur ko.	Take up the chair and go home.
Is gu'three ko le chulo ghur.	Carry this bundle home.
Palkee men se ye chee- zen cotha lo.	Hand these things out of the chair.
Hum khana kha'enge ——şahib ke yuhan,	I dine at Mr ——'s, you must go there

* This hum can only be defended on the plea, that as the natives, in this respect, hum us, we must in return hum them.

toomhen̄ sipuhree ko wūhan̄ jana hoga.	in the afternoon.
A,o moze cotaro.	Come take off my boots.
Koochh shurab panee la,o.	Bring some wine and water.
Panee khoob thundha kuro.	Cool the water well.
Jo khana tueyar hue, to la,o.	Bring dinner, if ready.
Khaṇa mez pur aya.	Dinner is on the table.
Thoree roṭee la,o.	Bring some bread.
Saf chhooree kanṭa do.	Give me a clean knife and fork.
Humeṇ do numuk, ra- ee, mirch, achar, sir- ka, shurab, panee, gosht, saf basun.	Give me salt, mustard, pepper, pickles, vi- negar, wine, water, meat, a clean plate.
Burtun ootha leja,o.	Take away the things.
Jhilmil ootha,o.	Open the venetians.
Duwat, qulum, kaghuz la,o.	Bring pen, ink, and pa- per.
Yih khut — sahib ke pas leja,o, uor ju- wab ke liye buethe ruho.	Carry this letter to Mr —'s, and wait for an answer.
Is chithee ko leja,o Bee- bee — ke yihan,	Take this one to Mrs —'s, and if she be jo bahur gu'een ho, to coske durban ke

hath de a.o.

out, deliver it to the porter.

Woo h gora kuon hue.

What European is that?

Woo h kiska ghor'a?

Whose horse is that?

Yih kiska ghur hue?

Whose house is this?

Palkee ka hookm de.

Order the chair.

Hum ko dak ke ghur
men puhconchao.

Take me to the postoffice.

Bunarus tuk dak ka
muhsool keta?

How much is the postage to Bunarus?

Jub dak wala yuhan awe tuo poochho ki
humare waste ko ee
khut hue ki nuheen.

When the postman comes, enquire if he have any letters for me or not.

Humara nam toom jan-
te ho?

Do you know my name?

Han sahib Pin hue.

Yes, Sir, it is Pin.

Nuheen, bewuqoof, nam humara Fin hue, wo likha hoo a hue isee kaghuz pur ki dak ka piyadu
dak ke sahib ko
dikhlawe.

No, blockhead, my name is Fin, and is written on this paper, that the postman may shew it to the postmaster.

Toom kya chahte ho?

What do you want?

- Toom se muen koochh I have nothing to ask mangta nuheen from you, but have hoon, pur ek pue- come with a mesyam lekur aya. sage.
- Pokarke bolo, tuo hum Speak loud, and I shall soonenge. hear you.
- Chop ruho. Hold your tongue.
- Ruh ruhke uor bolbol Speak slowly and dis-joda kur, bolo, tuo tinctly, I shall then hum sumjheng³ understand you.
 toomharee bat.
- Toomhara nam kya? What is your name?
- Toom kuhañ ruhte ho? Where do you live?
- Humara sulam upne Give my compliments sahib se kuho. to your master.
- Toom jante cos admee Do you know that ko? man?
- Poochho to cos se toom Ask him what he wants.
 kya chahte ho.
- Kuho cos se ki toom Tell him to go away,
 ub chule ja,o, kul fu- and call to-morrow
 jur pher a,o. morning.
- Jud puhoonche tud hum When he comes, let ko khubur do. me know.
- Is ko Hindoostanee zu- What do you call this ban men kya kuhte in Hindoostanee?
 ho?

Chuokee ke neeche se oṭha la,o os kaghuz ko.	Bring that paper from under the chair.
Humaree ghuree mez pur rukho.	Lay my watch on the table.
Aj din phurchha hue?	Is it a fair day?
Nuheen, şahib, budlee hue, bulki burusta hue.	No, Sir, it is cloudy, nay it rains.
Dekho asman koochh khola hue.	See if the weather be cleared up.
Koochh ek şaf hone lu- ga.	It is about clearing a little.
Bichhana bichhaya hue?	Is my bed made?
Ubtuk nuheen kiya.	I have not yet made it.
Musihree khoob jhaṛo jo muchhur nu ruhe.	Brush the curtains well, that no mosquitoes may remain.
Jootee ko uchhee turuh şaf kuro.	Clean my shoes well.
Hum ko buṛee fujur juga,o.	Wake me very early in the morning.
Chiragh jula,o.	Light the lamp.
Buttee bojhā,o.	Blow out the candle.
Durwazu bund kuro.	Shut the door.

- Koochh duehne hath Move a little to the right.
dubo..
- Do teen qudum ba'en Move a few steps to the left.
surko.
- Ek do qudum huṭo. Fall back a step or two.
- Doošmun huṭne luge. The enemy are about retreating.
- Ue sipahee toom ne
kuha ki kul we admee awenge. O soldier, you said those men would come to-morrow.
- Kin ne yih bat toom se kuhee. Who told you this?
- Admee oon ka bola ki
we fujur ko awenge. Their man said, that they would come in the morning.
- Hum ne wooh cheez
jo ap ne bhejee oon
ko dikhla ee uor үrz
kee jo bat ap ne
mojh se kuhee. The thing which you sent I shewed him, and represented what you had told me.
- Sono: khidmutgar se poochho ki toom ne
hazree tueyar kee hue ya nuheen ? Hear : ask the khidmutgar whether he hath prepared the breakfast, or no?
- Ue suhaf kul hum ne
toom ko hookm diya
Meer Husun kee Well bookbinder, yesterday I gave you an order to bring Muṣnuwee lane ko,

toom nu lae is liye
toomharee ghuflut
se humara khulul
hooa.

Hum ne cosko kuha tha kul, too fulane
ke bagh men jakur
fulane malee se goo-lab jamun thoṛe se mangla iye, wcoh to nu guya humare
kuhne kee kya pur-wa hue cosko?

Meer Husun's Mus-nuwee, you have not brought it; by this,
through your neglect, I have been interrupted.

I said to him yesterday, having gone to such a one's garden, beg a few rose-apples from such a gardener, he did not go; what obedience does he pay to my orders?

Ne can only occur with an active preterite verb. To this rule there are exceptions, as ne never can occur with the imperfect, neither can it with some few verbs, such as bolna, lana, bhoolna. If the sign of the accusative be not in the sentence, the verb is governed by the object; if ko be in the sentence, the verb partakes of a neuter state, remaining totally unchanged. Some words may be compounded with verbs at pleasure. For instance, үrz, fikr, which may either be governed or remain compounded ; as muen ne urz kee, muen ne fikr kee, might with equal propriety be kiya ; the sentence being the accusative. A native would imagine the scholar a sorry Jargonist were he not to use ne when necessary, or make use of it ~~improperly~~, and the knowledge of this may be productive of much benefit. If a servant were to say to his master, muen ne diya ; he would probably conceive, that what had been sent was not delivered : the master might naturally desire the reasons : the servant would persist, in the very same words, on its having been delivered ; which the other, through ignorance, would construe the reverse : the master becoming incensed, the servant frightened, blows or abuse might follow. Thus, a good servant may be lost for having performed what he had been ordered, and whose only fault was, speaking too grammatically ; or, in other words, above his employer's comprehension. The ne will be met with, as well as the preposterous concord of preterites with their objects, in many parts of these sheets, which from every novice ought to meet with due attention, that this intricate, but essential portion of Hindoostanee Grammar may be duly acquired.

Kuhar, Muhra, Bhoee,
&c. A Chairman, or a Pal-kee Bearer.

Kyon muhre toom kis
ke echan kuharee
kurte ho uor kud ke
ae ho Kulkuttemen?

Toomhare sath ketne
uor kuhar hueñ?

We sub nire toomhare
des bhaee hueñ ki
nate rishte ke?

Kuonsee zat kuharon
kee uesee hue ki ziyadu roopiyu uoron
se echan kumawe?

Hur ek mas kee kumaee se toom log kya kurte ho?

Upne pas toom poon-
jee kur rukhte ho ki mas mas upne des
ko bhejte ho?

Humare yuhan toom log upne ap ko bueh-ra (ya bearer) kahe
ko kuhlate ho?

Come! chairman, in whose service are you, and when did you arrive in Calcutta?

How many other chairmen are with you?
Are they all your countrymen only, or your relations?

What tribe of chairmen is there here who make more money than the rest?

What do you do with every month's earnings?

Do you preserve it as a stock by you, or remit it every month to your own country?

With us why do you term yourselves
buehra, (or bearer)?

Kya aj tuk toom ko
kisoo ne nuheen̄ ku-ha hue, ki bearer humaree zuban men̄
buṛee neech bat hue,
juesa qoolee ya muzdoor, uo ki buehra
cosko kuhte jo soon-ta nuheen̄?

Le ub chule ja,o. .

What! has no one yet told you, that bearer is in our tongue a very low word, like slave, or drudge, and you know that bueh-ra means a deaf
man?*

Well, now walk off.

Surishtedar ya uhli kar moolkee.

A Revenue or other Civil Officer.

Kyoon̄ jee toom mal-goozaree ke kam se
koochh waqif ho?

Pray, my friend, are you well versed in the revenue department?

Put̄ta kis ko kuhte
hueñ uor qubooliyut
kya hue?

What do you call a lease, and its counterpart what?

Rue uor ruebundee ka

Have you any other

* So very tenacious are the meanest Indians of rank, title, and respectability, that it is a known fact the chairmen here have an idea, that bearer is an appellation little below lord or duke. This is the mystic charm which makes them detest their own word kuhar.

uor koee nam hue?

names for the rate or rent adjustment of lands?

Rue ke burabur jo uor
koee nam yad nu
ho tuo oos ka uhwal
buyan war kuho?

Should you not recollect another word for the rate, you can explain the nature of it in detail?

Malgoozar jo huen so qistbundee pur sur-karee muhsool puhconchate huen ya
ekuthan?

Do the farmers pay the revenue by instalments to government, or in the gross?

Is turuh ka khiraj uk-sur fuṣl ke age beech men ya pеechhe pu-hconchta hue?

Does this species of revenue commonly come in before, or during, or after the crop?

Muaftee yuune lakhirajee zumeen se koochh bhee hoozoor men dakhil hota hue ya mu-heen, peshkush ya
tabuidaree ke roose?

Does free land or that not assessed pay any thing at all to Government, or not, by way of acknowledgement?

Purgunon kee tush-
khees age kuon kur-ta tha?

Who formerly settled the assessment of the several districts?

Qanoongo uor puṭwa-ree men, kya furq
hue?

Kisee kaghuz puttur ka nam baz-namu hue, uor os kee
muṇnee kya?

Dur een wila jud kisee zumreendar pur mo-
ḥuṣṣil chhōṭte hueṇ, ṭulubanu lugta hue
ki nuheen, uo kis
qudr?

Moofuṣṣul men moostajir ko nankar mil-tee hue ki zumeendar ko?

Jis kaghuz men kisee
gaṇw kee zumeen,
talab, baghat, siwa-
nu wughuere ka uh-
wal likha hoo, a ho
to is ka kya nam hue? Moowazinu ya Ruqbu-bundee kuh-late hueṇ.

In what respects do the county register and town or village-clerks differ?

Is any paper called a deed of abdication or rejection, and what does it imply?

In these days when constables are put over any landholder, is dunage exacted
or not, and to what amount?

In the country, do the contracting farmers or landholders receive the sustenance money?

What is the name of the paper which contains an account of the tanks, orchards, boundaries, &c. of any village? They call it moowazinu,
&c.

Uch-chha, ub toomhen
rookhsut hue.

Good, you are at liberty to withdraw.

Moonshee.

Secretary, or Teacher.

Kuho şahib, toomharee danist men Hindee
zuban ki Farsee
kuonsee ziyadu
moshkil hue?

Pray, Sir, in your opinion, whether is the Hindoostanee or Persian language the most difficult?

Hindee ke ishkal men
koochh shoobul nu-heen, lekin Farsee
se ziyadu durkar, isee waste hum muq-
door bhur seekhte
huen—toom hum ko
sikhla sukoge?

As to the difficulty of the Hindee there can be no doubt, but it is more necessary than the Persian ;
we therefore are striving to learn it. Can you teach us ?

Bhula toomhare khiyal men kuho to os
shukhs ke waste jo mo'amilu ya suro-kar rukhta hue kya
awam kya khuwas
se Hindoostan bhur
men in dono zuba-
non men se yuune
Farsee uor Hindee

Do say, in your idea, for the person who has transactions of all sorts, with both the high and the low throughout Hindoostan—of these two languages, viz. the Hindoostanee and Persian, which is the

kuonsee poorzuroor
hue?

Sirf Farsee uor Urubee
ulfaz jo rekhte men shamil huen con ko jo poochho tuo chun-dan dooshwar nu-heen, pur tanees uor tuzkeer bumui tumeezi. tuluffcoz
then Hinduwhee
ko duryaft kurna
yihan tuk sunglakh
hue jo aj tuk kisee
se bu khoobee hasil nu hooa uor nuho-
ga kyoon kur ki mu-harut ilmee goyaek
tilismee chiree a hue ki jyon jyon ko ee
ose pukra chahe
tyon tyon wooh kafir
hath se door bhagtee.

Hindee zaban kee tuhseel ke liye toomha-ree kya sulah hue,

most requisite?

In regard to the mere Arabic and Persian words which occur in the mixed languages, they are not so very difficult, but the masculine and feminine, with the discrimination of pronunciation in the pure Hinduwhee, to learn them is so arduous a task, that no one as yet hath properly acquired it, nay, never will, for perfection in science is like an enchanted bird, which the more one tries to catch, the farther it flies from him.

In acquiring the Hindoostanee tongue, what is your advice,

şaf kuho to ki muen
os ke bu moojib zuban sikhoon our toomharee is bat ka humeshu ihsanmund
ruhoonga.

speak candidly, that I may learn the language accordingly,
and remain eternally obliged to you on that account.

Ko,ee oħdedar.

An Officer.

Kuho myan toom kuon
pulṭun ke ho ?

Pray, Sir, to what regiment do you bēlong?

Toomhen koochh muu-loom hue ki os kee bhurtee puehle ku-han hoo,ee thee ?

Do you know where it was first raised ?

Aj kul toomharee tu-mam pulṭun yuhan
tueenat hue ki uor kuheen ?

Is the whole regiment
on duty here or not ?

Toom kya oħħdu rukħte
ho uor kubse oħħde-dar hoo,e ?

What office do you hold, and how long have you been an officer ?

Toom se (or uese) oħħedaron ke tabui hu-mare yuhan ke lush-kur men ketne juwan
uksur ruhte huen ?

Under such officers as you in our army, how many men are generally placed ?

Jad toom kuheen dihat men ja o tu.eenatee pur wooh shukhs ya
hakim jis ke yuhan
toomharee chuokee puhru ruhta hue so toom ko koochh deta hue kudhee ki
nuheen?

Toomharee shuru h kya hue toomhen mah
bu mah pooree mil-
tee hue ki nuheen?

Kuho to jis wuqt ko ee
toomhare sipahiyon men se kisooru eyut
pur koochh zoolm
kure tub toom is ka
kya fikr kurte ho
jo phir uesee hurukut hone nu pawe?

Jo toomhare ruhte ku-ee ek admee kee tu-ruf se surkar ke khuzane pur daka pur-ta tuo toom muqdoor
bhur dukueton ko

When you are stationed any where in the country, does the person or magistrate where you are on duty, ever make you a present of any thing or not?

What is your pay, and do you receive the whole monthly or not?

Well, when any of your soldiers is guilty of any oppression on the country people,
what steps do you take to prevent such an offence again?

If in your presence several people were to attack the treasure
of government,
would you, to the utmost of your power,

jeete jee pukurte ki
troont durobust ko
mardalte?

seize the robbers alive, or would you kill the whole on the spot?

Fujur se puhur bhur si-pahiyon ka puhru
ruhtahue, ya ki fujur
se do puhur tuk?

Does a soldier's continuance on guard last front sun rise till nine o'clock, or till twelve o'clock?

Jo bat hum ne kuhee hue toom se so toom-hen hur soorut se
şaf muşloom ho ee ki
nuheen? juwab dene men kooch h chinta
mut kuro jo ee ho be luga o kuho hum hurgiz bora nu ma-nenge.

Do you clearly understand all that I have told you or not? in answering me be not in the least apprehensive, speak whatever you please without reserve, I will not take it in the least amiss.

Khuer ub ja iye.

Well, you may now go.

Khansaman ya Khid-
mutgar.

A waiting servant, Butler, or Steward.

Sono to toomhara nam
kya hue? uor upne
şahib ka bhee nam
butla o.

Pray what is your name?
let me know also your master's name.

- Kud se ḡos ṣahib ke
eehan̄ nuokur ruhe ho ? How long have you been in that gentleman's service?
- Toomhara wuṭun ku-han̄ hue uor eehan̄
se ketee door hoga ? Where is your native country, and how far may it be hence?
- Log ukṣur wuhan̄ jate
hueñ khooshkee kee
rah ki turee kee ? Do people in general go there by land or water ?
- Bharee jins ḡos moolk men̄ kya kya hotee hue ? uor kis cheez
kee ziyadu puela išh hue ? What is the most important article of trade in that country, and what things are produced in greatest abundance there ?
- Toomhare ma bap jeete
hueñ ki nuheen̄, uor toom kudhee jate ho
upne logon̄ kee moom-laqat ke liye ? Are your friends alive or not, and do you ever go to see your friends ?
- Toomhen̄ koochh khubur hue ki tamba
eehan̄ ke bazar men̄ kis bhao bikta hue ? Do you know at what rate copper sells in the market here ?
- Kya toom etee bat nu-heen̄ kuh suko ki ek puese ka tamba pue- What, cannot you even say that one penny's worth of copper will

sa b̄hur hoga ki nu-heen ?

In dinon̄ toom jante ho ki ek ser doodh kete
ko bikta hue shuhur men̄, uor bahur ket-ne ko.

Bus ub toom ja o.

be the weight or size
of a penny or not?

Do you know now a-days at what rate a quart of milk sells in the city and in the country, for how much ?

You may now depart.

When the reader is able to analyse and comprehend the foregoing dialogues on grammatical principles, he may then safely venture upon my large Collection, from which, and the Exercises in these sheets, he will quickly attain a facility of speaking the Hindoostanee on all occasions. The word yuhan̄, here, is so variously pronounced yihan̄, eehan̄, ihañ, and even hiāñ, that I sometimes let it pass, for obvious reasons as eehan̄, &c.

EXERCISES.

THE subsequent verbal, and free translations, will do more to unfold the idiom and syntax of the Hindoostanee to beginners, than a volume expressly written on the subject. Whoever shall persist for a few months, with other stories or extracts, in this manner, will not only acquire an extensive stock of words, but a great facility of producing extempore the most accurate, if not elegant, English versions, from any portion of a Hindoostanee work, and vice versa, as more particularly illustrated by the 9th exercise. A — is placed to represent any particle, which cannot well be translated, like ne, &c. that the reader may be able to follow every word, with ease and advantage, as he proceeds through the whole of the exercises.

I.

Do lurke bhookhe piyase kisee ke yuhan gu'e, cosne hur ek ke shu'oor kee azma'ish ke waste

ek turuf mez pur koochh shurab uor misree rukh dee, uor doosree turuf thora thundha paneer uor rookhee rotee. Uql-mund lurke ne rotee uor paneer se upne pet ko bhura uor piyas ko boojhaya, ulmuq lurke ne shurab kee lal rungut uor misree kee mithas jo dekhee, buhoot rugbut se conko piya uor khaya, pur fayudu koochh nu hoo,a, bulki oskee piyas ziyadu hoo,ee, mugur upne pet ko khalee huwa se bhura hoo,a paya, lekin upnee chook ka elaj koochh nu kur suka, kyoon ki wuqt goozur guya tha. Such hue ki buhoot cheezan buzahir khoobtur huen, uor ba-tin men hasil conka thora hue, choonanchi phool-na goolab ka, sath rung uor boo ke, ugurchi khooshnoma hue, lekin phoolna kupas ka in-san ke huqq men duhchund moofeed hue.

Two children hungry, thirsty, some one's house went, he—each one's abilities of trial for sake, one side table on, some wine and sugar place gave, and other side, a little cold water and plain bread. The wise boy—bread and water with, his own belly—filled and thirst—quenched, the silly boy—the wine's red colour and the sugar's sweetness when saw, much delight with, them—drank and ate, but good any not was, nay his thirst more became, though his belly—mere air with filled—found, but own mistakes remedy any not make could, because the time past gone had. True it is, that many things apparently excellent are, and interior in produce their little is, for instance, the blooming rose of, with colour and fragrance—although beautiful is, yet the flowering cotton of, mankind of respect in, ten fold beneficial is.

Two hungry and thirsty boys went to a person's house, who, in order to try their several abilities, placed before them on one side of the table some wine and sugar, and on the other side, a little plain bread and cold water. The intelligent boy filled his belly and quenched his thirst with the bread and water, while the foolish youth, attracted by the red colour of the wine and the sweetness of the sugar, eat and drank them with great avidity, but without the smallest advantage. On the contrary, his thirst increased, while he found his belly filled with mere air ; but he could not rectify his error, because the opportunity was lost. The fact is, that many things apparently are excellent, yet their intrinsic value is small indeed ; thus, although the rose blooms with all the charms of fragrance and beauty, still the flowering of the cotton tree is ten times more beneficial to mankind.*

II.

Jo dana lū̄ka hue, upnee kitab upne ghur men̄ be kuhe pur̄hta hue, uor lū̄ka nadan upnee kitab ko khel ke waste ṭaq pur dal ruk̄hta hue, ugurchi coske ma bap is bud chal se huzar mun̄ kuren̄. Puehla lū̄ka cos useel ghoṛe kec turuh̄ hue, ki jis ke waste kora zuroor aulzeen̄, uor doosra cos khuchre moṇh-zor ke burabur hue jo lugam nuheen̄ manta. Ghuruz ek lū̄ka jo such poochho to goya zoomboor ke shuhd ke peechhe hue, uor coske nesh kee turuf nužur nuheen̄ kurta, uor doosra nacheez teetree ke peechhe duṛta hue, uor yoonheen̄ upnee miḥ-nut ko ſirf coske rungeen̄ puroṇ pur burbad de-ta hue.

Whoever wise lad is, his book own house in without bidding read does, and a boy ignorant

* The moral is obvious, that one's own language, as the most useful, should be first cultivated and well understood; ergo, the vernacular tongues of the countries we visit as rational beings, should be attained before we commence their learned languages.

own book—play on account, a shelf on tossing place doth, although his mother father this bad conduct from, thousand prohibitions make. The first youth that noble steed's manner is, that whom for whip necessary not is, and the second that mule headstrong to like is, which bridle not obeys. In short, the one boy, if truth you ask, then as if bee's honey after is, and its sting towards sight not makes, and the other, worthless butterfly after running is, and thus his labour—merely its painted wings after, on the wind giving is.

A boy who is wise, reads his book at home without orders, and an ignorant youth, for the sake of play, throws his book on the shelf, although his parents forbid such misconduct a thousand times. The former lad resembles the noble steed for whom no whip is required, and the latter is like that headstrong mule which does not obey the bridle. In short, one boy seems in reality to be in pursuit of the bee's honey, regardless of its sting; while the other hies after a worthless butterfly, and thus, for its painted wings alone, he gives all his labour to the winds.*

* Many military men, who, comparatively speaking, can

III.

Ek burā suodagur tha, coske do bete the thore dinon men, wooh suodagur murguya, bap kee duolut dono ne banṭ lee, ek ne do teen muheene men upnee sub duolut ḡoradee boore admiyon kee şulah se. Doosre ne suodaguree ikhtiyar kee, bhule admee ke kuhne se, ek fuqeer hooa, doosra duolutmund. Pus jo koṭe bhule kee bat manega coska bhula hoga, uor jo koṭe boore kee manega coska boora hoga juesa in donon ka hooa.

A great merchant was, his two sons were, few days in the merchant died, father's property both—share took, one—two three months in, his own whole wealth dissipated bad men of counsel by, the other traffic selection made, good men of advising from, one a beggar became, the other wealthy. Thus, whoever the have little to do with the Persian, have wasted days upon it, that might have produced much more solid advantage, had they been devoted to Hindoostanee, since hardly one in a hundred can expect situations, in which the learned languages of India are requisite, and even then the Hindoostanee is indispensable, for such obvious reasons, that he who runs may read.

virtuous of direction shall obey, his welfare will be, and whoever wicked of (words) shall follow, his evil will be, as these two of was.

There was an opulent merchant who had two sons; the merchant died in a short space of time, and both divided their father's property between them. One of them in a few months dissipated the whole of his fortune, at the instigation of bad men, the other engaged in commerce by the advice of good people. The first became a beggar, the second, a rich man. Thus, whoever shall follow the counsel of the good, will prosper, and he who lends an ear to the wicked, will not succeed, as in these two examples here.*

IV.

Ek luke ne tufawoot se dekha ki chumun
ke kinare pur ek phool nihayut khoosh rung

* Had a taste for literary improvement sooner met with but a small share of the countenance that hath too often been given, by example, to dissipation, pride, ostentation, and folly in India, that country would have long ago produced better Orientalists than it can even yet do, and many more men able to converse with the natives, as gentlemen, in their several vernacular tongues.

phool ruha hue, jub luka coske nuzdeek pa-hconcha to cos gool kee khooshboo uor rung ne yuhañ tuk lobhaya ki be ikhtiyar coske torne kee khwahish coske dilmen puela hoo,ee, jo-heen upna hath coske putton lug puhoonchaya woheen cosko buhoot se kanter paton ke neeché nuzur ae, mare duhshut ke, hath khuench liya uor khalee hath chula guya. Ittifaq-un coska chhot a bha,ee door se dekhta tha is bat ko duryaft kurguya, ugurchi comr men chhot a tha pur dil ka bura, con kanton se nudura, nidhruck phool tor liya, bulki satr coske ek phul bhee uesa toohfu hath aya ki jitna cos phool ke torne men dookh suha tha so bhee dil se bhoola diya. Pus jo shukhs ki kanton ke dur se phool nu le suka coska dimagh kub mowuttur hoo,a uor kya phul cosne paya?

A child—distance from saw, that avenue's side on, a flower extremely well coloured bloom continuing is, when child its' vicinity arrived, then that blossom's fragrance and hue—here to allured, that without will, it's plucking of desire, his heart in created was, just as own hand its leaves to had conveyed, instantly him to a great many thorns, leaves beneath, sight came, through fear—hand pulled back and empty

urded went away. By chance his young brother far off seeing was this matter—conception made notwithstanding age in little was, but heart in big, those thorns of not afraid, boldly the flower plucked off, nay with it a fruit also so fine hand (to) came, that as much that flower's plucking in pain borne had, that even heart from forget made. Then whatever person, who prickles of fear from, blossom not take can; his senses when perfumed was and what fruit hath he got?*.

A boy saw a very beautiful flower at the side of a walk ; when he approached the place where it was, the fragrance and hue of the flower were such, as to create an irresistible desire in his breast to pluck it. Just as his hand reached the leaves, he discovered a number of thorns under them, and, struck with fear, he withdrew his hand, and went away without his object. The boy's younger brother by chance perceived at a distance what had past ; and although he was very little, having a stout heart, he was not afraid of the prickles. He boldly plucked the flower, and along with it obtained also a very fine fruit, which soon made him forget the pain he suffered in procuring it. When a person is deterred from possessing a rose by the appearance of its thorns, his organs of smelling will never be regaled by its fragrance, nor will he derive the least advantage from any fruit, under similar circumstances.*

* These interrogatives become idiomatical negatives in the Hindoostanee, and should be recollected as such by the learner.

V.

Do lurke nuo juwan ek hee sath ilm seekhne luge, ek lurka conh men buhoot uch-chha nek-bukht tha, costad jo subuq cose purha deta so yad kurleta, uor upnee kitab upne ghur men purha kiya kurta. Doosra ghafil bura shureer tha, jo upne hum-qomr kee mihnut pur hunsra kurta, uor humeshu yih bat upne hum-muktub se kuha kurta, "too gudha hue," cose uksur yih juwab diya kurta, "yar thore dinon men dekha chahiye kuon ho." Akhir imtihan ka roz an puhooncha conh donon ko ilm ke durya men puerna pura, dana lurke ne is ulmuq ko buhoot peechhe ju-

* The rose may represent the flowery Persian; the fruit, a useful tongue like the Hindooostanee; and the thorns, such difficulties as must at first occur in the acquisition of either.

halut ke girdab men, shurm se doobte hoo,e chhoṛa, uor poorkarne luga. Ue yar! jo toomhare khyial men be-wooqoof nuzur ate huen, so we ukşuron ke nuzdeek ुqlmund ho niklenge, uor jo uese wuqt toom ne seekha to toomhare kam nuheen ane ka, la haṣil hue. Ugur upne hum-jolee pur ub hum bhee ṭhuthé maren to humaree baree hotee, moowafiq is muṣul ke, ki jo jeete so hunse, lekin danaon ke nuzdeek nihayut buṛeed hue, kya dostee uor kya ुql se, ueseet halut men ufsos kee juguh tuz heek kurna.
 Ub muen upnee bat ko muoqoof kuroonga, is nuṣehut uor kuhawut se ki hona ek khoobee ka der kur bihtur hue nuhone se uor jitnee jul-dee ho suke boore kam ko chhoṛkur bhule kee turuf ana uch-chha hue.

Two boys—young, one very society (in) science a learning began, one boy them of very good well-disposed was, the master, whatever lesson him to read gave, it remembrance made,
 and his book own house at, to read made a practice. The other inattentive very wicked was, who his comrade's labour at to laugh used,
 and always this observation his own school-fellow on to repeat used, “ thou an ass art.”
 He him to generally this answer to give used,

Friend! few days in to see behoves who may-be. At last trial's day having come arrived, them both to science's sea in to swim behoved, the wise boy—this fool—much behind ignorance's whirlpool in, shame through sinking—left, and to exclaim began. O friend! who your opinion in foolish sight coming are, the same they generality's presence wise turn out, and what such time you—have learned, it your use not coming of, without effect is. If own companion at, now we also jokes could crack, then our turn would be, according this saying to, that who wins may laugh, but wise men among very remote is both friendship, and also reason from, such situation in, regret stead ridicule to make, now I own remark—finished will make this advice and proverb with, that being one good of, late, better is, not being than, and the more speed be can, bad conduct having left, good towards to come, proper is.

Two youths began to study together, one was a good prudent young man, who read his book at home and acquired whatever his master desired him; the other was an idle wicked boy, who always laughed at his companion's labour, and used to say to him, what a fool you are! on which his school-fellow commonly replied, we shall see by and bye who is the greatest. At last the day of trial came, when they were both obliged to swim in the ocean of science; the wise boy left the blockhead far behind him, sinking through shame in the whirlpool of ignorance. The promising scholar then exclaimed, My friend! I think fools in your estimation will turn out wise men in other peoples' eyes, and that you have now learned this fact, when perhaps too late. Were I inclined to laugh at the folly of a comrade, it would now be my turn, agreeably to the proverb, "he may laugh who wins;" but it is inconsistent with both friendship and wisdom, to substitute ridicule for regret, on such occasions; I shall therefore conclude with beseeching you to recollect, that "better late than never," and to turn over a new leaf as soon as possible.*

* Were my young military readers aware of all the fatal consequences which may yet ensue from their ignorance or deficiency in the Hindoostanee, they would here anticipate that day of trial, which may otherwise terminate in the loss of honour, fortune, and life, and set seriously to work immediately; since to attempt to direct and command men advantageously in the hour of peril, with whose language one is not well acquainted, is a task, which even presence of mind in other respects cannot always accomplish with any prospect of success.

VI.

Do shukhs bahum hokur nikle ki kisee door
des men ja ruhiye, thore dinon ke beech ek molk men ja puhoonche. Ek ne duryaft kiya ki diljumuee uor khoobee ke sat̄h jo yuhan ruhiye to zuroor hue ki puhle yuhan ke ruhne-haron kee bhakha seekhiye, ghuruz con ne seekhee, doosra itna mughoor tha ki uwamoon-nas kee zaban ko hijarut se nu seekha, sirf durbaree uor alimon kee zaban tuliseel kee.
Quzakar buud ku ee burus ke dono kisee bustee men ae, wuhan kee bhakha uor os molk kee ek thee, pur wuhan ke ruhne walon ne hunga-mu muchakur ghuer molk ke hakimoni ko qutl kurda la tha. We dono mosafir jode jode mukanon men bazar men the ki conheen kho-niyon ne conheen pukra uor ulug lejakur hur ek se poochhne luge ki toomhara yuhan kya kam hue? Jis ne moohawuru uwam ka seekha tha khoobee se juwab diya osko conhon ne sula-mut chhora, uor doosre mosafir ne jo sirf hakimoni heen kee zaban se juwab diye, os umboh ne jul kur khufgee se sir oska kat dala.

Two men together being set out, that a certain distant country in should go stay, a few days of space in, a country in having gone, arrived. One recollection made that, satisfaction and welfare with if here would dwell, then necessary is that first here of inhabitants of dialect, should learn, in short he—acquired (it); the other so proud was, that vulgar of language —contempt from not learned, only the court and literati's speech acquisition made. Chance by, after some years—both same village in came, that where of tongue, and that country's one was, but there of residents—tumult having made strange country's magistrates—execution performed. These two travellers separate places seized and aside having taken each one of asking began, that your here what business is? Who—dialect vulgar of, learned had, propriety with answer gave, him—they—safety (in) left, and the other traveller—who only the magistrates of tongue in reply gave, that crowd—inflamed anger with head his cut off.

Two travellers set out together to live in a distant country; one of them found, that to remain there with safety, satisfaction and pleasure, it was necessary first to learn the common language of the inhabitants, and he did so accordingly. The other was too proud to acquire the vulgar tongue, he therefore despised it, and studied the language of the court and learned alone. By chance a few years afterwards, they both met in a village, where the people had risen upon the foreign magistrates of the place, and destroyed them. In their way from this massacre, they observed our two travellers in different parts of the market, and interrogated them separately as to their business there. He who spoke the vulgar tongue, answered them so mildly and clearly, that they allowed him to depart safe and sound; the other traveller, however, could only speak to them in the native language of the very magistrates who had been murdered, which enraged the populace to such a degree, that they cut off his head.*

* This is so possible and probable, that a resident in Turkey will do well to learn the Turkish speech before he dabbles in mere Arabic lore, lest an insurgent rabble make him shorter by the head, for not keeping an intelligible tongue in it. A heedless youth may affect to treat this tragedy as a farce; but he may yet find his self all in the wrong, when acting a comedy of errors on the stage of real life in British India, unless he now heeds the moral as he ought, and arms in good time against the risk of future mishaps.

VII.

Nuql hue, ki ek kishtee men do shukhs su-war hoo,e, ek con men mun̄iqee tha, doosra puerak. Mun̄iqee ne puerak se poochha, kuho yar toomne koochh ilm mun̄iq ka bhee seekha hue ki nuheen, wooh bola, ki muen ne ubtuk mun̄iq ka nam bhee nuheen scona, seekhne ka to zikr kya. Sconkur ufsos luga kurne, ki toom ne upnee adhee comr juhalut ke durya men doobaee. Itne men ek toofan numood hoo,a, puerak ne thutholee se mun̄iqee ko kuha, kuho sahib koochh puerna bhee ap ko ata hue ki nuheen, yih bola mocluq nuheen, phir cosne huef khakur kuha, ki toomne upnee saree comr burbad kee.

A story is, that a boat in, two people seated were, one them of a logician was, the other a swimmer, the logician—swimmer of asked, say friend you—any science logic of even learned have or not, he said, that I—as yet logic's name even not have heard, acquiring of then mention what, having heard, regret began to make, that you, your half life ignorance's sea in have sunk. Such (discourse) in, a storm appearing was, the swimmer—joking with logician to observed, say Sir, any swimming even you to coming is or not, he replied at all not, then he—sorrow feeling cried, then you, your whole life (to) the winds have given.

It is related, that two people were on board the same vessel, one of them was a logician, the other an expert swimmer. The logician addressed the swimmer thus, "Pray tell me, my friend, if you have also acquired the science of logic or not." He replied, I have not till this moment even heard of the name of logic, learning it therefore is out of the question entirely. When the enquirer heard this, he began to pity the other in these words: Alas! you have sunk the half of your life in the ocean of ignorance. On this a storm arose, the swimmer jocosely thus questioned the logician. Well, Sir, does your worship understand any thing of the art of swimming or not? He answered, I really know nothing at all about it. Then said the swimmer, heaving a profound sigh, you have indeed thrown away your whole life on the winds.*

* A profound Orientalist in India, without Hindoostanee, might often be as unfortunate as the logician, if he were to

VIII.

Ek Padshah ne upne Wuzeer uor Meer-bukhshee se şulah-un poochha, mal uor lushkur ke jumü kurne men meree uql koochh kam nuheen kurtee, ugur mal jumü kuroon to lushkur nuheen ruhta, jo fuoj rukhoon to duolut nuheen ruhtee. Wuzeer ne үrz kee, Khoodawund ! duolut jumü keeje, jo fuoj nu ruhegee to koochh nooqşan nuheen, kyoon ke, jub zuroor hogee rukh leejega. Jo meree bat ka ap ko bħurosa nu ho, to coskee yih duleel hue, ki ek burtun men thora shuhd rukhwadeeje, ubhee huzaron mukhiyan gird coske a jumü hongeen. Joheen shuhd ka basun rukhwaya, lakhon mukhiyan bat kurte coske gird a-liptiyan, tub cosne kuha, ki, dekho huzrut, jo fidwee ne үrz kiya tha, so ap ne dekha. Phir Meer-bukhshee ne kuha, ugur meree үrz soono to fuoj rukhiye jo wuqt pur kam awe, cos wuqt mal hurgiz koochh faydu nu kurega, ugur ap ko yuqeen nu ho to meree bat ko imtihan kur leeje, ek handee men shuhd rat ko is jugih rukhwa deeje, jo mukhi-confide in his learning alone to carry him over that extensive region, with honour and safety, through either the ordinary or extraordinary occurrences of life.

yan̄ cospur a-lugen̄, to meree bat jhooth̄ hue, uor jo nuheen̄ to such, coske kuhne pur rat ko shuhd ka basun̄ jo rukhwaya, to ek mukhee bhee nu aee. Kholaṣu iska yih hue, jub up-nee fuoj upne qubze se guee, phir rozi siyah men̄ mal bhee khurch keejega to moyussur wuesee nu hogee.

The following analysis of this eighth exercise, will serve as a most useful specimen for the Hindoostanee scholar, because I have endeavoured to blend the Oriental practice in this operation, as far as possible with our own. To make these completely assimilate is impossible; all therefore which we can expect is, that practical approximation which I have now attempted. In doing this, I employed four learned natives, and selected from their separate labours every thing which could aid the general design of the present exposition, without sacrificing either our or their notions of grammar too far to each other. To expect always uniformity in the construing or parsing a long sentence in any language, is, in fact, to look for consistency and perfection, where they probably never will be invariably found. The learner should not be surprised if his Mconshee objects to, or differs from, many parts of this analysis; since it is given rather as an imperfect specimen of what has been done, than as the faultless mode of what may be yet accomplished in Hindoo-stanee grammar. Lest the scholar prematurely and imprudently venture on grammatical disquisitions with his native teacher, I conceive it my duty to refer him to the Technical Terms in the Vocabulary, that he may not only acquire the words in question, but also learn to regulate his flights in Hindoostanee Philology among the natives, by the extent and quantity of his verbal plumage in that popular tongue.

Ek, one, an, a, ismi ुdud, a numeral; but here tunkeer or nukiru, the indefinite article. Padshah, king, ism, a noun, fi_ıl ka fa_ıl, the nominative of the verb. Ne, mazee mootu_ुddee ke fa_ıl ka ہurfi lazim, the active preterite's nominative's expletive, which, as it cannot be translated in English, has been expressed by a — in these*

* Means a noun of number, as may be seen in the Vocabulary under ism, i, and udud, or noun, of, and number. Tunkeer and nukiru may be prosecuted in the same manner, as soon as the student finds a knowledge of the Hindoostanee technicals in Grammar very necessary.

sheets. It must be carefully discrimated from the negative nu, and the learner should always recollect, that ne throws every inflectible word into the inflexion. A little attention to the effects of this particle on nouns, and its occurrence, either expressed or understood, with the preterite of transitive verbs only, in the stories exhibited here, will soon make the subject plain enough to every capacity; especially if a proper reference be made occasionally to the remarks already made on this apparently puzzling, but easy and useful expletive. Upne, his, own, &c. zumeeri mooshturuk, moetusurruf haluti izafut men, a general pronoun in the inflected genitive, termed by us reciprocal, reflective, or emphatic, and equivalent to the possessive adjective or genitive form of all such pronominal words. It is here introduced for oske, his, by a rule in both the Hindooostanee and Persian languages, which always requires the reflective pronoun, upna and khod, in the same member of a sentence after muen, &c. instead of mera, tera, oska, &c. This regimen will be met with so often, that the scholar cannot fail to discover very soon the nature of it in the course of his progress through this and other works. Wuzeer, minister, ismi şifutee, mozaaf mufool, a kind of concrete noun, agreeing with upne, and governed by se. Uor, and, hurfi үтф, a conjunction. Meer-bukhshee, generalissimo, ismi şifutee mcorukkub, a compound concrete noun. Se, from, (with, to, of, at,) hurfi muunuwee moofrid, a simple postposition. şulah-үн, deliberately, tumeez, an adverb, formed by the affix үн in many Arabic words like qusd-үн, purposely, uwuwul-үн, firstly, &c. Poochha, asked, fi üli mazee moottu, üddees moottluq wahidi moozukkuri muu-roof, a transitive verb in the indefinite preterite masculine, singular number and active voice. The nominative to it is padshah, with its appropriate expletive ne, already explained. Mal, treasure, ismi jins, muutoof iluehi, an appellative noun, conjoined with the next substantive. Uor,* and, үтф. Lushkur, army, ismi jins muutoof moozaf iluehi, an appellative noun, conjoined with the preceding and connected with the next, by— Ke, of, 's, hurfi muunuwee moofrid moottusurruf, үламути izafut, a simple inflected postposition, and

* This word, having been already mentioned, requires no farther notice, a circumstance that will of course occur to many more, as the contrary practice would subject us to endless and useless repetitions, no less tiresome to the reader, than inconvenient for the limits of so small a work.

the genitive sign. Jumū kurne, collection making, muşduri mōrukkub mötuşurruf, inflected compound infinitive, or gerund. Men, in, hūrfi muñnuwee mōofrid ülamuti žurf, a simple postposition, and a local or temporal sign. Meree, my, zumeeri mötukullimi wahidi mōowunnuş haluti iżafut men, the first personal pronoun in the feminine genitive singular, as a possessive or adjective form, agreeing with—uql, judgment, ismi mōwunnuş sumaaee, an arbitrary feminine noun. Kočchh, any, (some, &c.) ismi tunkeer, an indefinite noun, like ek, though we would rather term it, in this place, zumeer or şifut, a pronoun or adjective. Kam, use, ism, and here the mufool, or accusative to the verb, as the sign ko is either understood, or the nom. is used for the accus.* Nuheen, not, hūrfi nufee, a negative particle. Kurtee, makes, fi'uli hal mōowunnuş muuroof, the feminine present tense, active voice, in con-

* This constantly happens, especially in short familiar sentences, or when the verb has a second case, and wherever a noun assimilates with a verb, as in the present instance, to form a species of simple verb, like kam-k. to avail, fikr-k. to make reflection, or to think, &c. in which the ko would prove very inconvenient. The learner will thus, in future, be able to reconcile the idea of mufool with the mere nominative of a noun.

cord with the nom. üql. Ugur, if, ḥurfi shurt, a conditional conjunction, which requires the aorist or subjunctive. Mal, treasure, ḥaluti fa'il burae mufool, the nominative used for the accusative, as illustrated in the note below. Jumu kuroon, collection would I make, fi üli moorukkub moozaru mootukullimi wahid, a compound verb in the aorist, first person singular. To, then, ḥurfi juza, the inferential subjunctive particle to ugur. Lushkur, army, ḥaluti fa'il, nominative. Nuheen, not. Ruhta, remains, fi üli lazimee hal moozukkur, a neuter verb in the present tense masculine, (to which hue is understood) to agree with lushkur. Jo, if, ḥurfi shurt, a conditional conjunction. This like uor, and, other, is also a pronoun, to which the learner should always advert in those sentences where much of their explanation might depend on a recollection of this fact. Fuoj, army, ismi moowunnuşı sumace mufool, an arbitrary feminine noun in the accusative, whose ko is dropt. Rukhoon, I would, &c. keep, fi üli moozaru mootu uddee mootukullimi wahid, a transitive verb in the aorist first person singular. To, ḥurfi juza. Duolut, riches, ismi jins moowunnuşı qiyasee, a regular appellative feminine noun. Nuheen ruhtee, not remains, fi üli hal moowunnuşı munfee, a negative present fe- minine, in concord with duolut. Wuzeer ne, the minister, both explained above. urz, representation, ismi mcowunnusi sumaae mufool, an arbitrary feminine noun accusative. Kee, made, fiuli mazee mcoṭluq mcoṭuydee moonwunnuši wahid, a transitive verb in the indefinite preterite singular feminine, to agree with its mufool, accusative, urz. Kiya, keea in the feminine should be kee ee, but one ee is dropt, tuhseeni tuluffooz ke waste, euphonice gratia. This would subject the feminine genitive sign kee, and the feminine perfect, to great confusion, did not the context generally prevent it. It is a curious, and probably a peculiar fact, that transitive preterites rather assume the genders and numbers of their accusatives than nominatives, whence kee above, the nominative of which is wuzeer. Khoodawund, Sire, ismi moonada h̄urfi nida muhzoof, a noun in the vocative whose sign is omitted, or, in other words, the nom. is used for the voc. Duolut, wealth. Jumu keeje, or keejiye, pray collection make, fiuli mcorukkuþ umri tuuzeemee, fail moozmir, a compound verb in the respectful imperative, whose nominative is concealed. Jo, if, h̄urfi shurt a conjunction. Fuoj, the army, fail, nom. Nu ruhegee, should not remain, fiuli moostuqbul moowunnuşि ghaibi wahid, munfee, * a negative verb, in the third person singular feminine of the future. To koochh, then any. Ncoqşan, injury, ism, noun. Nuheen, not, but the auxiliary hue, is, seems either expressed in, or understood to, this negative. Kyoon ke, because, hurfi tuuleel, an efficient particle. Jub, when, zurfı zuman buræ shurt, an adverb of time used conditionally. zuroor, necessary, şifut, an adjective. Hogee, will be, but here with zuroor, fi yli moostuqboli morukub wahidi moowunnus, hurfi juza moquddur, a compound verb in the future feminine singular, to which the inferential subjunctive particle is understood. This verb hona, is generally termed rabiṭi zumanee, a temporal conjunction, as what we consider substantive verbs are often called ruwabit connectors, or joiners, from the root rubt construction, &c. Jo, if. Meree bat, my observation, ismi jinsi moowunnus moɔzaf o

* The Oriental mode of terming a verb munfee, negative, because connected with nufee, a negative, has no advantage that I can perceive; on the contrary, it tends to make a distinction where there is no real difference, and thus introduces an endless string of negative conjugations, which are the mere affirmatives repeated before or after a negative particle.

moozaf iluchi, an appellative fem. noun, connected with meree in the possessive state. Ka, of, 's, hurfi muunuwee moofrid ularut haluti izafuti ghuer mottusurruf kee, a simple postposition, and the uninflected sign of the genitive case, agreeing with bhurosa. Ap, you, (yourself, your worship,) zumeeri mooshturuk tuuzeemee, the common respectful pronoun; but here equivalent to zumeeri moohatub, the second personal. Ko, to, hurfi muunuwee moofrid o ularut haluti mufool kee, a simple postposition and the sign of the accusative or dative. Bhurosa, confidence, ismi moozaf, fa'il, a noun in the nom. connected with bat. Nuho, may not be, si'li moozaru munfee wahidi ghaib, a negative verb aorist third person singular, contracted from nu-howe, like ho, hoe, as detailed in the Verbal Table. To, then. os, it, zumeeri ghaibi wahid mottusurruf moozaf iluehi, the third inflected personal singular, forming the genitive case with—Kee, of, 's, as before, but here taneeş men, in the feminine. Yih, this, ismi isharu'e qureeb haluti fail wahid men, *the proximate demonstrative in the nominative singular.

* In Hindoostanee, every noun to which the genitive signs, ka, ke, kee; ra, re,ree; na, ne, nee, are affixed, is termed moozaf iluehi, and it

Duleel, proof, ismi wahid moowunnuši sumaae moosharun iluehi moozaf, an arbitrary fem. noun, connected with both the remote and proximate demonstrative, though in Arabic şifuti mo-shubbuh, a species of adjective. Hue, is, rabiti zumancee, the temporal conjunctive particle, which is not considered by the natives as a verb. Ki, that, kafi buyaniyu, the descriptive ki, which is of the utmost consequence in this language, as it frequently saves much circumlocution, though at other times it certainly appears to us more like a mere expletive. Ek, a, hurfi tunkeer, indefinite article. Burtun, a vessel, ismi jins muh-dood, zurf, an appellative limited noun of reception. Men, in. Thora, a little, şifuti moofrid may either precede or follow the moozaf or governing noun; in the Persian, on the contrary, the moozaf must always precede the moo-zaf iluehi. Very little attention to this note will prevent the scholar's ever forgetting a matter which will otherwise often escape his memory. Duleel having been demonstrated by the isharu, yih, is here also termed moosharun iluehi, by the reciprocal effect which the Orientalists denote; by such words as fa'il, mufool;

 şifit, muşoof; izafut, moozaf; utf, muuttoof;
 nida, moonada, &c.

wahidi moozukkur, a simple adjective in the masculine singular. Shuhd, honey, ismi jins, muosoof, mufool, an appellative qualified noun in the accusative. Rukhwaddeeje, pray cause to place, umri haziri moorukkub tuuzeemee mootuuddee bilghuer, zumeer ap os men fa'il, a compound causal verb in the respectful imperative second person, having the pronoun ap as the nominat. noticed under keeje. Ubhee, just now, zurfi zumani takeedee, an emphatic adverb of time, compounded of ub, now, and hee, just, every, the. This particle hee, ee, in the plural heen, een, is of the utmost importance, and should be carefully observed wherever it occurs, that it may not be confounded with the postposition e, en, in mojhee ko diya, he gave to me indeed, to my very self; conheen ko diya, he gave to their selves, to these very men. Huzaron, thou- sands, ismi udad jumu tuşreefee burae haluti fa'il, a numeral used in the inflexion for the nominative plural, on principles already detailed. Mukhiyan, flies, ismi moowunnus haluti fa'il jumu men, a feminine noun in the nominative plural. Gird, round, hurfi muunuwee moorukkub, ya zurfi mukani ghuer muhdood, moozaf, a com- ound postposition, or unlimited adverb of place, connected with—oske, it, ismi isharue bueed mootusurruf haluti izafut men, the remote demonstrative inflected genitive, governed by gird, transposed, like many others, from the ordinary construction, coske gird. A, having come, fi

i
li muutoof, a verb used as a conjunction. An is often met with for a by assuming n, either burae tulseeni tuluffooz, the euphony of speech, in this part of the verb ana, to come, or to prevent its being mistaken for the imperative or root of the verb, as stated in 81. Jumu, collected, sıfut, an adjective, or rather a participial word, forming here a compound neuter verb with hona. The learner ought on this occasion and many others to recollect, that Oriental and occidental grammarians often see things in a very different point of view, he will never therefore wrangle or dispute with a Moonshee on such a theme, until he acquires an adequate command of language for such abstruse and difficult discussions. Hongeen, will be, fi

i
li istiqbali ghaib jumu, mowunnus, a verb in the third person plural feminine future tense. The nasal n of such plurals as have another n, is commonly lost in the kuşruti istiñal or hurry of practice; whence hongee for hongeen, or hongiyan, and jatee huen for jateen, or jatiyan huen. Jooken, the instant, zurfi zumani takeedee, the em- phatic adverb of time, corresponding with wohseen, that moment, toheen, the moment. Shuhd, honey, ism, moozaf iluehi. Ka, of, 's, in concord with—Basun, a vessel, ism, fa'il bura'e mufool, a noun in the nominative instead of the accusative, governed by—Rukhwaya, caused place, already explained. Had the accusative been used, the sentence would have been shuhd ke basun ko rukhwaya. Lakhon myriads, ismi udad kuşrut ke waste, a numeral of frequency, or number, like huzaron. Mukhiyan, flies. Bat kurte making speech, ismi ḥaliyu moorukkub fil hal ke muñee men, the compound absolute case denoting the immediate state of a thing. No portion of the verb is more useful than this, nor less understood by us. If we suppose all such expressions elliptical, and supply what is wanted by hoo'e kee halut men, of state in, the difficulty vanishes at once, and the state expressed by the verb becomes perfectly evident without any relation to the gender or the number of the nominative. I heard him (in the state of a speaker or while) speaking, muen ne cose bolte (hoo'e kee halut men) soona hue. cos cheez ko muen ne girte (hoo'e kee halut men) dekha hue, I saw the thing falling. These expressions must often prove ambiguous, because we cannot positively say here, whether the speaker or the thing was falling, and others may certainly occur still more equivocal than this. coske gird, it around, formerly explained, A-liptiyan, adhered, *fi

üli lazimee mօrukkub mazee mօtluqi ghaib jumū mօowunnus*; a compound neuter verb in the indefinite feminine perfect, third person plural, to which mukhiyan is the nominative. Most, if not the whole, of such compounds may be analysed by considering the first portion as the mazee mu^utoofu, pluperf. participle, thus—A, an, akur, ankur, anke, &c. having come, liptiyan, they clung, but as this is of little moment to the mere beginner, it requires no further elucidation at present. Tub, then, zurfi zumani ghuer mu^hdood juza, shurt mu^hzoof, an unlimited adverb of time, correlative to a relative adverb here omitted. cosne, he, zumeeri ghaibi wahid mօotusurruf haluti faⁱl men muⁱ mazee mօotu^udde ke faⁱl ka h^urf, the personal pronoun's third person singular inflexion, used for the nominative case along with the transitive perfect particle, or expletive ne before discussed. Kuha, said, *fi

üli mazee mօtluq ghaib wahid*, a transitive verb in the indefinite third person singular, requiring cosne for woo, and the whole sentence as its accusative. Ki, that, hursi buyan, and generally precedes such accusative sentences to kuha, which, by bat being understood, may become kuhee, though the nominative be masculine. Dekho, behold, umri hazir jumu, the imperative in the second person plural. huzrut, your worship, ismi mconada, a noun in the vocative, like khodawund. Jo, what, ismi muosool, the relative. Fidwee ne, servant, ismi munsoob fa'il, a derivative noun as a nominative with ne, like wuzeer ne. urz, representation, ism, a noun. Kiya tha, made; (made had, make did,) fiuli mazeemootu uddee bueed wa-hidi ghaib, a transitive verb in the third person singular of the pluperfect, but here, as very often happens in the Hindooostanee, equivalent to the perfect only. Had not urz here been considered a component part of the verb, and jo uhwal, the statement, its accusative, kee thee, would have been preferred, for reasons already assigned. So, the same, juwabi muosool, the correlative particle after the relative. Ap ne dekha, your honour saw, formerly analysed. Phir, then, hursi utsf, a conjunction. Meer bukhshee ne kuha, ugur meree urz, the general observed, if my representation, all illustrated before.* Soon, you would hear, fiuli moozaru mookhatub jumū, the uorist in the second

* Among polite people, the personal pronouns are used nearly on the same principles that we observe among ourselves. The speaker commonly puts his self in the singular, and the person addressed in the plural number. In our presence it has become a practice, which has been gaining ground for a century past, among the natives; for the speaker to exalt his self also by assuming the plural number, to the great confusion of all grammar and propriety. We have very naturally proved as arrogant as our Indian subjects, and consequently adopt hum, we, for muen, I; and humara, our, for mera, my, on all occasions; nor can we relinquish this bad habit, without running the risk of voluntary degradation, among a race of men, who lose no opportunity of taking that trouble out of our hands, wherever they possess art or power enough to do so with impunity. The learner, while aware of the above circumstance, should nevertheless, as much as possible, follow the regular grammatical mode in all translations or speeches where his dignity cannot be affected in the humble garb of muen, I, mera, my, as it might be when contrasted with his servant's consequential hum, we, humara, our. They occasionally carry their insolence so far person plural, which, except in the second person singular, is exactly the imperative, as exhibited in 61 and the Table. To, then, juza to the hurfi shurt ugur, the inferential particle to the conditional if. Fuoj, army, ism. Rukhiye, pray keep. Jo, which. Wuqt, time, zurfi zumani ghuer muhdood, an unlimited noun or even, as to salute their masters with too, thou, and tera, thy, which is very seldom proper, except in some precative sentences that cannot well be mistaken or misconstrued as disrespectful. The third person is frequently substituted for the other two, which rather adds to the confusion in this department of the language; especially as the third person is also put in the plural, when speaking either civilly or respectfully of any individual. The dative is likewise, with many neuter or inverse verbs, equivalent to our nominative, as we must in general prefer the direct mode of translating expressions like hum ko muylloom hue, it is known to us, we know; os ko shuoq hue, a desire is to him, he has a desire. Milna, to meet, accrue; hona, to be; lugna, to seem; ana, to come; with a few others, often require the inverse form just discussed, and consequently add still more to the apparent intricacy of pronominal construction in this tongue.

adverb of time. Pur, in, on, hurfi muunuwee moofrid, a simple postposition. Kam, use, ism. Awe, may come, fi

i
li moozaru gha_ibi wahid, aorist third person singular, the nominative being fuoj, and the relative jo, which may nevertheless be the *u*_tf conjunction that. Kam-ana, in fact, is a species of inverse compound verb, a form of great use to express to avail, benefit, &c. os wuqt, then, or that time, ismi isharu_e bu_eed moottu_ruf, mui wuqt jis pur, men, ko, wughuere moquddur hueñ, the inflected remote demonstrative with wuqt, to which men, ko, &c. are understood. This, in fact, is the cause of wooh, &c. being inflected to os, is, kis, when joined with wuqt, turuh, juguh, &c. page 106. Mal, treasure, ism, fa_il, a noun, nominative. Hurgiz, ever, hurfi nufee takeed, the emphatic negative particle, which has always nu expressed or understood. Koochh, any. Fai_{du} advantage, ismi nukiru, an indefinite noun. Nu kurega, not will make, fi

i
li moostuqboli munfee wahidi gha_iib, the negative future in the third person singular. Ugur ap ko, if to you. Yuqeen, certain, ismi sifuti mooshubbuh, a concrete noun, but properly an adjective, in this place. Nu ho to meree bat ko, not may be, then my observation. Imti_{han}, trial, ism, a noun. Kurleeje, ek handee men shuhd rat, make, a vessel in, honey night. Ko, at, yuhan ulamuti zurf i zuman, here the sign of a noun of time. Is, this, ismi isharu e qureeb moetusurruf, the proximate demonstrative pronoun inflected. Jugih, place, (in) zurfi mukani ghuer muhdood, an unlimited adverbial noun of place. We may again notice that men, in, is understood, and inflects yih to is, and juguh to jugih, by a rule in the grammar, stated in page 162, &c. Rukhwadeeje, cause place. Jo mukhiyan cospur a-lugen to meree bat jhooth, uor jo nuheen to such hue, if flies it on a-light, then my remark a falsehood is, and if not, then truth is. It would be a mere repetition to elucidate this farther, but the learner may profit by observing the partial coincidence here between the compounds, a-light from light, and a-lugna, from lugna; because this may lead him to reflect beneficially on this mode of composition in his own and other languages, however much its nature and existence may escape ordinary observers, or be obscured by the corruptions of long usage. To arise, awake, alight, besal, become, mistake, and a hundred more, so nearly resemble ho-ana, jag-oothna, cotur-purna, a-purna, ho-jana, that no one can fail to discover the analogy here, or be at a loss to account for it in many tongues. ḡoske, his, (he's) ismī išharu,e bu^qeed muⁱ hūrfi mu^unūwee mōfrid mōtuşurruf ȳlamut iżafuti mōzukkur kee, a remote demonstrative along with a simple postposi-tion, the inflected sign of the masculine genitive, agreeing with—Kuhne, speaking, muşduri mō-tuşurruf, the inflected infinitive or gerund, governed by—Pur, according to, &c. As all infinitives, and most participles, are likewise nouns which fall under the first declension, the reader will advert to this circumstance, and be hereafter prepared to treat every part of the verb ending in a by that rule. Rat ko shuhd ka basun, night at honey's vessel. Jo, zaⁱd bura^e tuzeeni kulam, an expletive by way of ornament to the sentence.

 Rukhwaya, caused place. To, zaⁱd bura^e tu-zeeni kulam, as before. Ek mukhee bhee nu
 a^{ee}, one fly even not came. All plain enough, except bhee, even, ȳtf bura^e takeed, an empha- tic conjunction. Khoolaşu iska yih hue jub, the result it of this is when, nothing can be easier to an English scholar. Upnee fuoj upne qubże se gu^{ee}, one's army one's power from hath de- parted. In this sentence, as in many others, the zumeeri mōsheturuk, or common pronoun
 ap, upna, assumes the power of one, any person,
 and in that point of view is a most useful word, though it certainly may also mean, here and elsewhere, your, my, &c. Phir, then, hursi tuy-qeeb waste juza ke, a conjunction, connected with the inferential to hereafter. Rozi, day, ismi zurf zuman muozoof,* a noun of time, qualified by—Siyah, dark, sıfut, an adjective. Men mal bhee khurch keejiyega to mooyussur wuesee nu hogee, in, treasure even expenditure one should make, still procurable such not will be. As fuoj is feminine, these words wuesee, &c. follow in that gender. Keejiye, keeje, keejiyo, keejo, keejega, keejiyega, a precative imperative, conditional reflective, or impersonal form of the Hindoostanee verb, not easily explained. The natives term it umri istuqbalee or khoozooee, the imperative future or precative; but whether this is compounded of the verb jana to go, be, or jee life, sir, with a vocative particle, may yet be ful-

* In the Hindoostanee, the muosoof, as in the Persian, naturally follows the sıfut, but this order can be reversed in the former, without any effect on the adjective or noun; whereas, in the latter, an ızafut is requisite as in rozi-siyah, the present example, and in nek murd, or murdi nek, a good man, a man good; gora lurka, or lurka gora, a fair boy, a boy fair.

ly considered in some other Work ; it is however certain, that ap, self, your worship, one, (the French on) in the third person, either expressed or understood, seems its only proper nominative in such expressions. Muen rah pur chula jata tha, uor ek a ek jee men aya ki (ap) coske yuhan jaiye, I was going along the road, when suddenly it occurred to me that (myself) should go to his house. This last may also be rendered, ki muen coske yuhan ja oon, which so far proves the nature and extent of this subjunctive form.

The learner should now collect the whole of the foregoing words of the exercise as a rigid literal translation, thus :

“ A king—own minister and generalissimo of deliberately asked, treasure and army, of collection making in my judgment any use not makes, if treasure collection would I make, then army not remains, if army I would keep then riches not remains;” finishing it exactly as I have begun.

He may afterwards try his hand at an idiomatical English version in this way :

"A certain king had occasion to consult his prime minister and commander in chief. He observed, that his judgment was embarrassed with the alternative of filling the treasury or collecting an army : for, said the monarch, if I amass treasure, my forces are disbanded; should I raise an army, I must part with my money." In these momentous times the discussion may both amuse and instruct the scholar, who will, I think, join issue with the old warrior, " That in days of calamity and darkness an army cannot always be had for either love or money."

IX.

The eye, nose, ear, and tongue, one day began to quarrel among themselves, each affirming that it was more advantageous to mankind than the other. The eye observed, without me day and night would prove alike, for nothing but darkness would reign on the face of the earth. In short, every one said a great deal in his own behalf, when the tongue made this observation: What you mention my friends may be all very true, yet surely none of you can be ignorant of the fact, that as my powers alone distinguish man from brute, it therefore behoves, that I be greater than you all in the estimation of the wise. Yes, cried the ear, recollecting itself, my forward scholar! after the lessons which you have received from me, as your master.

The subsequent literal version of the above, will clearly point out where, and how far both languages coincide with or differ from each other. This is the practice I so strongly recommend to every scholar at first, who really desires to acquire through time, and from the natives themselves, a facility of blending the elegance and fidelity of translation as much as possible together, because I conceive it the one best calculated to insure complete success, after sufficient practice with their aid, in the manner now illustrated.

Ankh, nak, kan, uor zooban, ek roz luge jhugurne apus men, ek ek kuhta ki wooh tha ziyadu fajidumund insan ko doosre se—ankh bolee, bina mere din o rat hote dono burabur. Bare hur ek ne kuha buhoot koochh coske upne huqq men, jub zuban ne kiya yih kulam. Jo toom kuhte ho yaro howe sub buhoot rast, pur ulbuttu toomhon men ko ee nu ho suke na waqif is bat se. Ki meree qoodrut ukelee jooda kur-tee insan huewan se, isliye chahiye ki muen̄ ho үzeez toom sub se, beech khiyal үqlmundon̄ ke. Han̄ kan pokara, ap sochke, mere honhar sha-gird! buud tuuleem ke jo toom ne sonee mojh se, toomhara costad hokur.

It will not prove a very easy task to produce a version more true to the original than the present, a reversion therefore would only waste time to no purpose. The very few places in which the two differ, must by this time strike every student's eye, who has not taken a premature, and consequently an unprofitable glance, at this portion of the work. I need hardly observe, that the more literal and faithful a translation is rendered in any language, there is the less chance of its being either elegant or even intelligible among the people, who are best qualified to judge of its merits, in both these points. When this English story was submitted in the above literal dress to the natives, it certainly did not require much explanation to make them fully comprehend the meaning and purport of the whole, which they, much more idiomatically and elegantly, expressed thus:

Ankh, kan, nak, uor zaban, ek roz apus men jhugurne luge, hur ek inh men se kuh ruha tha ki muen admee ke waste sub se ziyadu mo-feed hoon. Puhle ankh bolee ki mojh bu-ghuer doonya men rat din burabur ruhta, siwa e tareekhee ke, roo e zumeen pur kochh nu nuzur ata, ghuruz hur ek ne upne upne huqq men bu-hoot kochh bura ee kee. Is men zaban ne yih bat kuhee, yaro jo toom kuhte ho so ho sukta hue, lekin jo muen kuhtee hoon, cose toom men se ko ee inkar nukur sukega, dekho sirf meree goya ee se insan uor huewan men imtiyaz hotee hue, is liye chahiye ki muen aqilon ke nuzdeek sub se ziyadu uzeez ruhoon. Kan phir soon kur bol ootha, han shagirdi rusheed! yih bat such hue, pur buyd meree tuyleem ke.

The next exercise, which is a species of allegorical tale in the Oriental manner, is left without an idiomatical translation, as a task, or trial of skill, for the scholar, when farther advanced in his own and this language. The style is of course more elevated and flowery than any of the preceding, it will therefore serve as an excellent introduction to the higher and more difficult compositions, in prose and verse, of the Hindoostanee tongue, which the student must never attempt, until not only well grounded in the grammatical principles, but in the necessary stock of Arabic and Persian words for such an enterprise. In the Poetical Exercises, by making some allowance for the unavoidable transposition of words in a poem, the assiduous scholar will perceive nothing very formidable even in the learned or Court dialect of the Hindoostanee, because, if he knows the rudiments well, he can at once reduce these Odes, or any other, into plain prose, which, through a literal version, must lose every appearance of intricacy and difficulty, that may at first have alarmed him. The Paraphrases will, it is hoped, prove no bad specimens of the poetical productions of the East, in an English dress, if we mean to express rather what the Poet would have written, as a European author, than what he has done as an Orientalist.

X.

Do juwan the, ek ka nam Istiqlal Mothi-hummil tha, doosre ka Ghoroor Aram-tulub, conhon ne bahum milkur moolki nadanee ko chhora, uor quşri surfurazee kee tulash men kishwuri ilm kee rah lee. Chundan door nu

burhe the, ki kohi pusund ko puhonche, cos pur se upnee munzili muqsood ko kale koson dekha. Tub wuhan se cotre uor age burhkur jo nigah kee to ek doraha nuzur pura, dekhte hee hueran hooe, donon ne duryaft kiya ki hur ek rustu isee muqam se surfurazee ke quşr ko jata hue, is waste ke wuhan do nishan the, ek pur khutti julee se saf yih likha tha, ki yih kam kee rah hue, uor doosre pur oosee khutt se, nam kee rah, lekin yih rustu ugurchi pechdar tha, pur chaura saf soothra. Buhoot se na-azmood dukar cos pur chulte the, uor coske donon ku naron pur goolab phoola hooa buhar de ruha tha, uor bure bure durukht sayedar nihayut phuele hooe, aftab kee kuree dhoop se conko buchate the. Ghuruz conhen boolboolon ke chuhchuhe uor loliyon kee khoosh ilhaniyan os rahi door duraz ko yon tue kurwatee theen jo suobut sufur kee moṭluq muylloom nu ho tee thee, uor ruste ke hur ek moṭ pur ek ek sa qee turruhdar khooshwuz imrut ka piyalu hath men liye hooe, uiyash raihyon kee mihmanee ke waste nuzur ata tha. We qish o ushrut ke khueme ki ja bu ja manund meenaron ke khure
 the, mosafir jo con men buethe ya sote the con kee khidmut men ek ek chauraee burdar muk hee jhulne ko hazir tha, is men rah ke moowuk

kilon ne Ghoroor ko isharu kiya uor turgheeb dee, ki aao humare peechhe peechhe chulo, conke kuhne ke bumoojib betu ummtol chula uor Istiqlal se kuha, toom humaree moowafuqut kuro, soonte hee is juwan ne cosse kuhá ki su-furi asa ish toomhen moobaruk ho. Ghuruz Istiqlal kam kee rah ko uql uor tumeez kee door-been se bukhoobee dekhne luga, akhir duryaft kiya ugurchi yih rah behur ket sunghakh con-chee neechee hue, pur seedhco uor qureeo to hute, uor is juwan ke waste isse bhee uchhee ek bat bun aee ki aftabi rastee kee kirn se hijarut uor tuussob kee ghuṭa jo moddut sé chha ru-hee thee, so woheen phutne lugee uor coskee roshnee se ja bu ja raste men kitne mewe uor khoshue ungoori muash uor insaf ke jo coljhe hooe durukhton men paton ke ojhul luṭke hooe
 the mazur a,e, ulawu is ke con durukhton kee juron ke puthron se kuee ek chushme diyanutdaree uor khod mookhtaree ke josh marte dekhe, yih sub koochhi dhyan kur Istiqlal ne upnee hee sulah pur himmut bandh kam kee rah ko turjeeb dee. Yih bat such hue ki coske kanon ne nughmu o surd kee awaz se koochhi loṭf nu oṭhaya, uor coskee ankhon ko wuhan ke julwue rungarung se chukachuondh nu lu-gee, pur sufur men zad rahi moqawwee wuhan ke puhconchne tuk ku mnu hoo a, lekin muhulli surfurazee men dakhil hoke jo phirkur ni-gah kee, to upne humsufur ko usna e rah men dekha, uor quzakar wcoh os wuqt rustu chhorke kisee bostani rungeen men ek khoosh rung gooldoom ke peechhe be tuhasha duor ruha tha.

 Akhir is juwan ko coskee numood uor turuh-daree kee kushish ne yuhan tuk nach nuchwa-ya uor do dila kiya, ki duorte duorte narusa ee
 o ghuflut ke ghar men gira, uor woheen os ghar ka moonh bund ho guya. Istiqlal yih majura e huebut ufza qusri surfurazee kee bu-lundee se dekh kur, upnee tudbeer kee khoobee
 o muzbootee pur bagh bagh hoo a uor afreen kee, phir upne dilmen kuha, kya khloob hoo a ki yuen ne kam kee rah lee bur khilaf Ghoroor ke, uor bud sulahon ke bur uks umul kurke bur wuqt munzili morad ko puhconcha.

Two youths were, one's name Perseverance Patient was, the other's Pride Lazy, they together associating country of ignorance left and palace of promotion's search in Province of Science's road took. Very far not advanced had when Hill of Selection at arrived, it on from, own stage's end black miles at desried.
 Then thence descended and forwards marching when observation made, then a cross road sight came, seeing on, perplexed became, both conception made that each way this very place from, exaltation's palace to leading is, because that there two posts were, one upon writing conspicuous in plain this written was, that this useful road is and other upon the same writing in, famous way, yet this road though winding was still broad, clean, pleasant was—many novices it upon going were and its both sides upon, the rose blooming its charms to give remain did, and great great trees umbrageous much spread sun's beams fierce rays from them saving were. In short, them the nightingales warbling and damsels' melodious notes, the road long thus beguiling were, that toil journey's at all felt not was and way's every one turn at, individual individual cup-bearer comely well bred, nectar's cup hand in holding, jovial way-farers of entertainment for, sight coming was. The delight and pleasures tents that here and there like minarets standing were, travellers who them in seated or sleeping were, their service for one one fan-holder flies driving away for ready was, this on, the highways Genii, Pride to sign made and temptation gave, thus come us after after along, their bidding to according thoughtless went and Perseverance to said, you us like do, hearing just, this youth him to said, well path of ease you to welcome be. In fine Perseverance useful way reason and discrimination's spy-glass with well examine to began, lastly perception made, although this path rugged, stony up down is, nevertheless straight and short is, and this lad's sake for, him to also auspicious one circumstance happened, that sun of truth's rays from, contempt and prejudice's lowering clouds, that long since overcasting were, the same that instant break to began and its light from here and there road on, how many fruits and clusters of the grapes of ordinary life and justice, which entangled trees on, leaves of covering under, hanging were, sight came, besides this, those trees' roots of rocks from, many a fountain honesty and self guidance of bubbling up saw, this all something reflection making, Perseverance own very counsel on resolution assuming, useful road to preference gave. This matter truth is, that his ears melody and songs from any delight not obtained, and his eyes to there of splendour, variegated from, dazzling not came, but journey in viaticum comfortable, there of arriving till wanting not was,

and place of promotion in entered having, when turning look gave, then own fellow traveller half way espied, and as fate would have it, he that time road having left, some garden flowery in a beautiful goldfinch after, without reflection to run continue did. At last this lad its appearance and beauty's attraction here to dance led and distracted made, that running running incapacity and neglect's abyss in fell and instantly the pit's mouth shut became.

Perseverance this calamity terrour exciting palace of promotion's height from seen having, own determination goodness and firmness at rejoiced was and praise made, then own mind in said, how good was that I useful road in opposition Pride to, and bad advisers to contrary acted having; in time end of wishes to have arrived.

This will prove one more opportunity for the learner to display his prowess as an English composer, somewhat in the style of the celebrated Vision of Mirza, though the allusions here can forcibly strike those minds only, who seriously observed the preposterous policy in the College of Fort William, of allowing the students, for some years after its first establishment, to study any Oriental language they pleased. The consequence naturally was, that the idle and gay flocked to the Persian class, and deserted all the rest. Many expulsions became from time to time necessary, and terminated in an order, still in force, that every student should commence with the Hindoo-stanee at least, without which, from its great difficulty in the pronunciation alone, it would have been almost entirely deserted.

Whatever may be asserted on the brilliancy of fancy which sparkles through many literary works in the East, few men will dispute the palm in favour of the Oriental writers, for that correct taste and sound judgment, which are so conspicuous on comparison in the classics of the West. Among many other instances of bad taste, the most prominent in my estimation is, the pedantic style which disfigures almost every prose production now extant in the Hindoo-stanee language, and which renders it often wholly unintelligible to every reader, who is not as deep in Arabic or Persian lore, as the learned man who composed the book itself. If excellence in a popular tongue consisted in writing any thing far above the conception of the people for whom it is intended, every body must allow, that the Hindoostanee authors and translators stand unrivalled in this species of composition. In fact, to say the least that can be observed on so absurd a perversion of talents and learning, most of the literary efforts of this description, that I have yet seen, might be very good Arabic or Persian, for any thing I know to the contrary, were they not disjointed and disfigured by the occasional introduction of a Hindoostanee postposition or verb, which, like the casual flash of lightning in a dreary night, serve but to render the surrounding darkness still more visible. This false taste is no where more discernible and preposterous than in the prefaces of Oriental works, which are in general composed in an affected idiom, so much beyond the level of ordinary capacities and acquirements, that very few of the men, who can comprehend the body of the publication itself, are qualified to wade through the wonderful display of erudition which announces its birth. Such a profound harbinger, one would imagine, is absolutely requisite in India, to stamp a proper value on any literary performance, of which, in the preliminary portion, at least, it may commonly be asserted with great truth, that it must be an incomparable book, because nobody can well understand the introduction to its contents. To expose and explode this monstrous abuse of a living colloquial language, by giving it a new and impartial bias, has been my constant study, for some years past, and I am not altogether without hopes of yet establishing my success, on the broad basis of public utility to ourselves, as the Rulers of British India, and to its inhabitants of every description also, as our subjects. If we are to indulge any prepossessions on the score of language or laws, I think sound policy and justice will point out the Hindoos as the most proper objects, being still the great, ancient, and useful mass of the people in our East Indian Empire. At all events, it cannot be disputed, that our Magistrates ought to be as well qualified to comprehend a Hindoo's complaint, viva voce et propria persona, as to understand a Moosulman of any rank or description whatever. In spite of the clamour which the soi disant FAITHFUL, and their abettors at home or abroad, may raise against all my exertions of the present nature, I shall persevere in the great work of reform which I have so successfully begun. As nothing can facilitate this object more than easy, familiar, and accurate translations from one tongue to the other, the learner is here presented with the first Fable in Dodsley's excellent Collection, as a specimen of all the rest, which have lately been published in that plain, general, useful, middle style, which ought ever to take the lead in a popular speech, whose worth depends much less on its literature, when contrasted with the languages of Europe, than on its general prevalence and utility, when compared with any other Oriental tongue, in the extensive regions of India. Those Moosulmans who, from local circumstances, and a habitual tendency to pedantry, know little of the wonderful pliancy and copiousness of the Hindooostanee tongue, independent of its modern sources, will no doubt object to many Hinduwee words that may be safely introduced into the broad, conciliating, unaffected style, which I have recommended. To them, from real experience, I can oppose a whole host of Hindoos, with a potent band of those Mooslims also, who in Hindooostan maintain that intercourse with the bulk of the people, among whom they have resided for centuries, which is so favourable to the formation and existence of a grand popular language. When Moosulmans treat of abstruse and scientific subjects, they must lean to Arabic, as the Hindoos cæteris paribus will do to the Suṇskrit; but in the ordinary concerns of life, and in the judicial, military, commercial, and revenue departments, such necessity and predilection are less frequent, except where local dialects or circumstances impose a preference, to the partial exclusion of some, or all the rest.

XI.

The Israelites, ever murmuring and discontented under the reign of Jehovah, were desirous of having a king like the rest of the nations. They offered the kingdom to Gideon their deliverer, to him, and to his posterity after him : he generously refused their offer, and reminded them, that Jehovah was their king. When Gideon was dead, Abimelech, his son by a concubine, slew all his other sons to the number of seventy, Jotham alone escaping ; and by the assistance of the Shechemites, made himself king. Jotham, to represent to them their folly, and to shew them, that the most deserving are generally the least ambitious, whereas the worthless grasp at power with eagerness, and exercise it with insolence and tyranny, spake to them in the following manner :

Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, so may God hearken unto you. The trees, grown weary of the state of freedom and equality in which God had placed them, met together to choose and to anoint a king over them: and they said to the Olive-tree, Reign thou over us. But the Olive-tree said unto them, Shall I quit my fatness wherewith God and man is honoured, to disquiet myself with the cares of government, and to rule over the trees? And they said unto the Fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us. But the Fig-tree said unto them, Shall I bid adieu to my sweetness and my pleasant fruit, to take upon me the painful charge of royalty, and to be set over the trees? Then said the trees unto the Vine, Come thou and reign over us. But the Vine said also unto them, Shall I leave my wine, which honoureth God and cheereth man, to bring upon myself nothing but trouble and anxiety, and to become king of the trees? we are happy in our present lot: seek some other to reign over you. Then said all the trees unto the Bramble, Come thou and reign over us. And the Bramble said unto them, I will be your king; come ye all under my shadow, and be safe; obey me, and I will grant you my protection. But if you obey me not, out of the bramble shall come forth a fire, which shall devour even the cedars of Lebanon.

Bunee Israeel humeshu khoda kee badshahut men koṛkōṛaya buṛburaya kurte the, is wastē ki manund uor quomon kee con men badshah nu tha. Akhir Juedoon ki conka himayutee tha os se kuha ki too badshahut kur, hum ne teree posht dur posht kee sultumut qubool kee, osne juwan-murdee se upnee numana, bulki con logon ko jutaya ki badshah toṁhara khoda hue. Jub woh murguya, Ubee mulik, ki oska beta hurum se tha, osne Jotham chhooṭ, Juedoon ke jo uor suttur bete the, con ko mardala uor Shuekhmiyon kee mudud se badshah hooa. Tub Jotham ne, con kee himaqut ke jutane ko uor is bat ke sabit kurne ko, ki jo bharee bhurkhum hote huen conko uksur huokha kum hota hue, bur uksos ke kumeenon ko raj kee khwahish buhoot hotee hue, ki is men zoolm uor ghoroor buhoot sa keeje, kuha is tuor se ki soono ue Shuekhmiyo meree bat ki khoda toomharee bhee sonega. Ek wuqt durukhton ne bhee upnee be purwae uor buraburee kee halut se, ki jis pur khoda ne con ko rukha tha, bezar hokur, apus men ek

badshah ṭhuhrane ke liye mushwurut kee, uor zuetoon se kuha, humara too badshah ho. cos ne kuha ki muen upnee chikna ee kee khoobee ki jis se khoda uor khilqut khoosh huen oose chhoṭkur hakimee ke bojh se nakhoshee oṭhaoonga uor rookhon pur ḥoṭkoomut kuroonga?
 Buḍ ooske unjeer se kuha ki too humaree surdaree qubool kur. cosne bhee juwab diya ki muen ḥoṭkoomut kee kuṛwahuṭ ke liye upne uch-chhe phulon kee miṭhas chhoṭoonga, uor durukhton ka surdar bunoonga? Phir gachhon ne ungoor se kuha ki too ṣahibee qubool kur.
 Woḥ bola ki muen upnee shurab kee luzzut, ki jis se ullah uor ooske bunde khoosh huen, tu-joonga, uor peron kee badshahee ke waste dōkh durd riyasut ka suhoonga? hum upnee upnee qismut pur razee huen, ja-o kisee uor ko sultunut ke liye dhoondho. Tub sub brichhon ne muko ee se kuha ki a too humara badshah ho.
 cosne kuha ki muen ne toomharee badshahut qubool kee, toom sub mere saye tule chuen se ruho, ugur mojhe manoge to punah men rukhoonga, nuheen to mere kanton men se ek ag puela hogee, ki toom sub ko Lubnaṇ ke surw sumet jula kur khak kurdegee.

It being pretty generally conceived, that there is no such thing as a Hindooostanee story without either Arabic or Persian, I now submit the following to the Public. In it there is not one word of these languages; still the Hindooostanee here preserves its character and regimen so perfectly, that I am convinced the whole will be understood by all classes of men in India, who have yet learned what Hindooostanee means.

XII.

Koee kuheen ko chitheeb likhta tha, ek tiha et os ke pas a buetha, os ke likhe ko luga dekhne, tuo os ne chitheeb men likha, jo buhootsee ba-ten likhnee theen so nuheen likhee guseen, kyoon ki mere kune ek nipi chibilla buetha hue, is liye nuheen likheen. Wooh bola, upne bhed kee batcheet jo likhnee ho so likhte kyoon nuheen, muen to koochh toomhara likha hoo a nuheen dekha, tub is ne kuha, bhula jo toom ne nuheen dekha, kuho to, yih kyoon kur jana jo muen yoon likha hue. Is bat se buhoot lujaya, ankhen neeché keen uor sir oopur nu oojhaya.

A person was writing a letter to send somewhere, when another came and sat down beside him, who began to look at the letter. He then inserted in the epistle, thus, "I had a number of circumstances to state, which have not been put down, because there is a very silly fellow sitting by me, on this account they are omitted." The other said, "Why don't you write any secrets which you intended; for my part I have not seen a syllable of your writing." On which the writer observed, "Well, if you have not seen it, pray inform me how you know that I have written so and so?" At this the other was so much abashed, that he fixed his eyes on the ground, and could not lift up his head, to look the writer in the face.

I would recommend the next story, of the man who heard badly, to the serious attention of all indolent dialogists, who will not often be in a better situation, with those they address, than the deaf man was in with his friend. In fact, to expect much good from mere dialogue knowledge, is nearly as preposterous, as to wonder why a blind man does not recover his sight by placing a pair of spectacles on his nose.

XIII.

Kisee suodagur ka ek shukhs buehra ashna tha, quzakar suodagur beemar hooa.—Buehra ooskee yadut ko chula, rah men chulte hooe yih bundish bandhee, jo sahib sulamut ke peechhe puehle yih poochhoonga. Kuho sahib mizaj kuesa hue, wooh kuhega uch-chha, muen kuhoonga ameen, phir poochhoonga ghiiza kya khate ho, wooh kuhega da k khooshka, muen kuhoonga nosh jan, tis pur yih suwal kuroonga, toomhara mo alij kuon hue? Wooh kuhega Mirza fulan beg, muen kuhoonga, khoda ooske hath ko shufa e kamil bukhshe. Akhirush yihee munsoo bu thuhrukur ooske ghur pulooncha, sulamcon ulek kurke nuzdeek ja buetha. Luga poochhne, kuho yar tubiyut kuesee hue, mureez ne kuha kya poochhte ho mare tup ke murta hoot, soonthehee bola ameen, khoda uesa kure. Becharu beemar ek to beemaree se julta hee tha, is bat ne uor bhee julaya, phir poochha, yar ghiiza kya khate ho? kuha khak; bola nosh jan bad, yih soonkur uor bhee doona khufu hooa. Phir kuha, soono dost toomhara mo alij kuon hue, ghossse men to bhura hooa tha hee bola, Mulik wal muot; kuha buhot moobarik, khoda ooske bath ko juld shufa bukhshe.

A certain merchant had a friend who was hard of hearing; by chance the merchant fell ill. The deaf man went to enquire after him, and, while going along the road, he made up this discourse. Then after salutation I will first ask this—"Well, Sir, how are you?" he will say, "better;" and I shall rejoin, "very good." When I inquire as to the diet he uses, he will say, "rice-pudding;" to which I shall answer, "may it do you much service." I shall afterwards put the question, "pray who is your physician?" he will of course tell me, "Dr such a one is," and I may safely add, "may God prosper his hands in the accomplishment of his work." At length having settled this plan he reached the house, and, after the usual compliments, he seated himself near the patient. "My friend," says he, "how are you?" the sick man replied, "do not you see that I am dying of a fever;" on hearing which he observed, "excellent! I hope God will keep you so." The poor patient was already peevish enough with his disease, but this made him much more so. The deaf man next asked, "what is your diet my friend?" and was answered, "fiddlesticks;" "may they do you much good" the other rejoined; on hearing this he became in fact doubly enraged. His visitor then inquired thus, "do you my good fellow, say which of the faculty attends you?" boiling with indignation, he cried, "his worship Dr Death." "I give you joy," quoth the deaf man, "and may the Lord speed his prescriptions."

The following story, translated from the Persian, will serve as a useful exercise for beginners; I have therefore given it without an English translation.

XIV.

Ek shukhs ne kisee durwesh ke pas jakur teen suwal kiye, ek to yih, kuhte ho ki khoda hazir hue muen to kuheen nuheen dekhta hoon, jo hue to mojhe dekha o wooh kuhan hue. Doosre yih, ki admee ko tuqseer ke liye uziyut kyoon dete huen, jo koochh kurta hue so khoda kurta hue, insan ko hurgiz koochh qoodrut nuheen, kyoon ki be chahe khoda ke ko ee koochh kur nuheen sukta, dur soorut ugur insan ko qoodrut hotee, tuo sub kam upne wasté bhitur kurta. Teesre yih, ki dozukh kee ag men Shuetan ko khoda kyoon kur jula ega, kyoon ki khumeer ooska ag hue; pus ag se ag ko kya dur? Durwesh ne ek dhela muttee ka ootha-

kur coske sir men mara, wooh iota Qazee ke yihan chula guya. Ya huzrut ! fulane Dur-wesh se teen suwal muen kiye, tis ka mojhe kochh juwab nu diya, bulki matee ka ek dhema mere sir men uesa mara jo ubtuk durd kur-ta hue. Qazee ne Durwesh ko bolake kuha, kyoon iske, toom ne, sir men matee ka dula mara uor iske suwal ka juwab nu diya. Durwesh ne kuha dhelpa hee iska juwab hue, yih kuhta hue mere sir men durd hue, wooh kuhan, kuesa hue, mojhe dekhade, tuo muen khoda ko dek-hadoon. Kyoon meree naliq huzrut ke pas kee, jo kiya khoda ne kiya, be irade khoda ke ise nuheen mara, mojhe kya taqut jo muen maroon, surisht iske khak se hue, khak se kyoon kur isko dookh puhoncha ? Wooh shukhs na-dim hooa, Qazee ne juwab Durwesh ka pusund kiya.

XV.

Ode from Wulee.

1.

Khoobroo khoob kam kurte huen,
 Yek niguh men ghoolam kurte huen,

2.

Dekh khooban ko wuqt milne ke,
 Kis uda se sulam kurte huen.

3.

Kum nigahēe soon̄ dekhte huen— wule,
Kam upna tumam kurte huen.

4.

Kholte huen̄ jub upnee zoolfan̄ ko,
sobuh ḫadiq ko sham kurte huen̄.

5.

Kya wufadar huenge milne men̄,
Dil se sub ram ram kurte huen̄.

6.

sahibi lufz̄ cos ko kuh nu suke,
Jisko khooban̄ kulam kurte huen̄.

7.

Dil lejate huen̄ ue Wulee mera,
Gool-rookhan̄ jub khiram kurte huen̄.

Paraphrase.

1.

What havock yon beauties display,
Where thousands of hearts they enslave :
One look is enough for the gay,—
And more than enough for the brave.

2.

Behold how the fair ones draw nigh,
So graceful their motions appear ;
Each step is admir'd with a sigh,
Each sigh is condens'd to a tear.

3.

Though glancing they carelessly dart,
 Fell arrows of scorn from their eyes,
 Those lodge in so mortal a part,
 Our souls are their victims and prize.

4.

If damsels, Aurora! combine,
 To spread their dark locks o'er thy car,
 The curtains of Night will be thine,
 Each face—a bright evening star.

5.

In loving how can they be true,
 While honey distills from each tongue;
 We captives bid freedom adieu,
 They spare not the old—nor the young.

6.

The bard whom those maidens address,
 In silence quaffs all that they say;
 Nay—wisdom is forc'd to confess,
 His wits have been ravish'd away.

7.

Lo! Wulee the pride of our swains,
 Hath lately forsaken his lyre—
 To gaze on the maids of the plains,
 Whose gait fills his breast with desire.

Sonnet by the Late Nuwwab Asuf ood Duolu.

1.

Yih ushk chushmon men ub jum ruhe nu ruhe,
Hoobab war ko ee dum ruhe ruhe nu ruhe;

2.

Too upne shewu i juor o jufa se mut goozre,
Teree bula se mera dum ruhe ruhe nu ruhe;

3.

Qumur ko hota hue hur mah men kumal o
zuwal,

Tere bhee hoosn ka alam ruhe ruhe nu ruhe.

4.

urq hue rookh pur tere khoosh nooma sunum,
lekin,

Humeshu gool pur yih shubnum ruhe ruhe nu
ruhe.

5.

Yih wusf teree jooda ee ka kya likhe Asuf? *

Yih ittifaq hue bahum ruhe ruhe nu ruhe †

* What can Asuf say of thy absence,—how describe it?

† The constant reiteration of ruhe in the Hindoostanee verses, has rather a monotonous appearance than effect, when pronounced with the impressive cadence and emphasis that are here required; but how shall I transfuse the 6.

Juhan̄ men̄ too mera pyara humeshu qāim
ruhe,

Lubon̄ pur dum hue mera thum ruhe ruhe nu
ruhe.

Translation.

1.

Are lucid drops in either eye,
Love's magic gems set there?
Or do they glisten, sink and die—
Mere twinkling spheres of air.

elegance which the intervening negative nu diffuses over this portion of the original, in which similar expressions are no less beautiful than significant. Ruhe ruhe nu ruhe, transcends my powers of communication in our own language, I shall therefore either cherish the hope, that future trials will prove more fortunate, or rest contented in the interim, with comparing it to those passages, so well known in the unrivalled soliloquy of Hamlet, “To be or not to be,” &c. which I fancy will fade in every version from our mother tongue.

The words literally considered will run thus, ruhe, if it stay; ruhe, it will stay; nu ruhe, should it not remain; nu ruhe, it will not remain. By phrases of this sort the great uncertainty of any circumstance is denoted.

2.

Each killing charm at once display,
 Here, tyrant! strike thy dart ;
 Take full revenge—but near me stay,
 'Tis worse than death to part.

3.

Thy rival planet if we see,
 Through monthly changes run,
 From waning where is beauty free,
 Though radiant as the sun ?

4.

True, on thy cheeks youth blooming glows.
 But, oh, frail mortal hear !
 Yon virgin dew which decks the rose,
 Just shines—to disappear.

5.

Yet, Asuf, why the boon deplore,
 That chance alone can give !
 Sure, absence wounds his breast no more,
 Who slighted,—hates to live.

6.

May thou, beloved ! here remain
 In bliss, like saints above ;
 Take this last breath ! returned again,
 To sigh—how much I love.

XVI.

An Ode from Suoda.

1.

Ghuer ke pas yih upnahee gooman̄ hue ki nuheen̄,
Julwugur yar mera wurnu kuhan̄ hue ki nuheen̄?

2.

Mihr hur zurre men̄ mojh ko to nuzur ata hue,
Toom bhee took dekhiyo sahib i nuzran, hue ki
nuheen̄?

3.

Dil ke poorzon̄ ko bughul men̄ muen̄ liye phirta hoon̄,

Koochh ilaj oon ka bhee ue sheesheguran̄ hue ki
nuheen̄?

4.

Pas i namoos mojhe ishq ka hue ue boolbool, Wurnu eehan̄ kuonsa undazi fighan̄ hue ki nu-
heen̄?

5.

Age shumsher toomharee ke bhula yih gurdun,
Moo se bareektur ue khosh-kumuran̄ hue ki
nuheen̄?

6.

Jorm hue ooskee wufa ka ki jufa kee tuqseer,
Ko ee to bolo yuhan̄ moonh men̄ zubaan̄ hue ki
nuheen̄?

7.

Poochha Suoda se muen ek roz ki ue aware,
 Tere ruhne ka mooyiyun bhee mukan hue ki
 nuheen?

8.

Yek bu yek hoke bur-ashooftu luga yih kuhne,
 Kochh toojhe uql se buhra bhee miyan hue ki
 nuheen?

9.

Dekha muen qurri Fureedoon ke dur oopur hue
 ek shukhs,
 hulqe-zun hoke pookara koee eehan hue ki
 nuheen?

Freely Translated.

1.

I often wonder, whether the radiant object of my adoration smiles upon others or not, yet where is the spot that God is not there?

2.

Yon glorious orb to me appears in every beam; do you also, O ye enlightened! pray behold if this be really so or not.

3.

I am wandering about with the fragments of a broken heart in my hand, say, O doctors!
 if there be any balm for cementing them or not?

4.

Songstress of the night, I also feel the mild influence of divine love, were it otherwise, what degree of noisy praise is there that my voice could not reach?

5.

Before thy faulchion, this neck of mine indeed is more slender than the finest hair, is it so or not, O ye daughters of genuine devotion!

6.

Is the justice of providence to blame, or is it the fault of my wayward fate? do let some people say here, if a tongue be in their head or not.

7.

I one day asked of Suoda, O wanderer! hast thou or not any fixed residence on earth?

8.

All at once becoming enraged, he began to say, "Silly body, is there one atom of sense in thy possession or not?"

9.

I have long since with my mind's eye espied a weary wight at the palace gate even of the mighty Fureedoon, who knocking roars out—
" Is there any one here or not?"

Closely Translated.

1.

In my foolish imagination I conceived another possessed not
The radiant object of my love—else where is he not?

2.

The sun of the universe in every atom shines
to my perception;
Look, ye enlightened, for a moment—and see if he be there or not!

3.

A broken heart, I wandering, carry within my bosom!
Have you a cure for this, ye skill'd in art? or have you not?

4.

O nightingale! I feel the reverence due to love;
Else what is thy cause of lamentation that I have not!

5.

Say, is my love to blame? or my hard fate?
Tell me who can—is there a tongue to speak or not?

6.

Before the sword divine, this little neck
Is smaller than a hair—say, angel, is it not?

7.

I one day enquired of Suoda the pilgrim—
 “ Hast thou a fixed dwelling-place or not?”

8.

Empassioned at the question, abrupt he answered—

“ Hast thou the light of reason, friend, or not?

9.

“ Behold! at the palace-gate of the (late) monarch Fureedoon,

“ A man calls aloud—is any one here or not?”

Paraphrase.

1.

What else, I oftentimes pensive ween,
 Can various creeds and tenets mean,

Whence flow the ardent pray'r,
 But that of Mooslim, Pagan, Jew,
 Must, as the Christian's, each be true ;
 For God is every where.

2.

Thus in one circle we divine,
 The radii from its bounding line
 Concentric still unite ;

So from the wide extended round
 Of all religions, will be found
 One only Lord of light.

3.

Yon solar orb in every ray Shines forth the glorious god of day,

Oft with refracted beam ;
On shifting clouds does he retire ?
Or can they quench his awful fire ?
Speak, sages ! do I dream ?

4.

With broken heart and wounded soul,
I wandering search from pole to pole,
For balm to heal my woes ;
Still not one doctor can I find,
Like death to cure my tortur'd mind,
O come and bring repose !

5.

Sweet bird of eve, thy plaintive note
Could never drown my louder throat,
If rev'rence due to love,
Did not silence my moans and sighs,
And bid me turn these streaming eyes,
To the great God above.

6.

Before whose dreadful sword, this neck
Is like the cobweb's finest wreck,
That floats upon the air ;
Look, angels ! tell me ay or nay,
Ye surely can the truth display,
And will the whole declare.

7.

That providence is just I own,
Though fortune sternly on me frown;

The fault perhaps is mine:
Come, cherubs! teach the soothing plan
Of calm content to wayward man,
And let me not repine.

8.

Once I the pilgrim Suoda spied,
And then in earnest to him cried,
“Hast thou no fix’d retreat?”

Enrag’d, responsive, thus he spoke,
“Sure, silly friend, you only joke,
“Or never heard of fate.

9.

“With reason’s eye here take a glance—
“Through time and space’s vast expanse, “(Nor blink it with a tear)
“At one, by Cesar’s palace doors,
“Who knocking there incessant roars,
“Is any body here?”

The freedom of paraphrase has led me to introduce one stanza, viz. the 2d, which is not in the original, to compensate for the loss of another, by condensing its 7th and 8th here, into the latter only, as the reader will easily perceive on comparing both together.

XVII.

Ghuzul, Mirza Kazim Ulee Juwan* kee.

1.

Ueyam hueñ juwanee ke jüb tuk buhar hue;
Peeree jo aee phir to khizan ashkar hue.

2.

Ghuflut nuheen hue khoob ghuneemut yih wuqt
jan,

Son goshi jan se þund, ugur hoshiyar hue.

3.

Moo e soñfued lawega puegham ujul ka jub;
Tub koochh nu ho sukega, ubhee ikhtiyar hue.

4.

Gur hue tumeez furq soñfued o siyuh men kur,
Eksan nu yar gurdishi luel o nuhar hue.

5.

Tuhseel kurke ilm kee, uch-chhe umul too kur,
alum men admee ka isee se wuqar hue.

* Juwan is the assumed poetical name termed Tukhulloş, which the native poets are so fond of, that very few of them omit it. It is customary to introduce the Tukhulloş in the last stanza of every ode, in the most appropriate and neatest manner, as in the poems now before us.

6.

Chahe ugur üzeez ho, puela kumal kur,
Uor be kumal chushmi khula iq men khwar hue.

7.

Namurd keene kee jo zoobañ kurte hueñ duraz,
Toohmut, conhon kee tegh o qulum ka shi ur hue.

8.

Kurte hueñ nek namee ko dum se husud ke qutl,
Hur ek con men ghathee hue uor nabukar hue.

9.

Nuosheerwan o Hatim o Rcostum se ub hue kuon?
Name niko conhon ka suda yadgar hue.

10.

üdl o sukhawut uor shuja ut kur ikhtiyar,
Ek ek kee juhan men bina pa edar hue.

11.

Muhwe jumal coska ho, jisko nuheen zuwal,
Dil hoosni arizee pu tera bequrar hue.

12.

Peekur mue e ghoroor nu bud must hoojiyo,
Jooz durdi sur, nu uor koochh coska khoomar
hue.

13.

Jis ko, Juwan! kisee se koodoorut nuheen hue
koochh,
Dil coska aeene kee numut be ghoobar hue.

A verbal Version of the above.

An Ode, Mirza Kazim Ulee Juwan by.

1.

Season is youth of when till, spring is ;
Age when arrived, then indeed autumn evident is.

2.

Inattention not is good, blessing this time reckon,
Hear thou ear of soul with counsel, if wise be.

3.

Hairs white bring will the message fate of when ;
Than any thing not be able will, now power is.

4.

If be discrimination, difference white and black in make,

Alike not, friend ! revolution of night and day is.

5.

Acquisition made having science of, good deeds
thou perform,

World in man of, this indeed from, honour is.

6.

Wish may if dear to be, exist perfection-cause.
World worthless (man) eyes of people in despicable is.

7.

Cowards malice of who tongue making are long,
 Calumny, them of sword and pen of employment is.

8.

Making are reputation to breath with envy of slaughter,
 Every one them of assassin is and worthless is.

9.

Nuosheerwan, and Hatim and Roostum of, now is what?

Name good their, ever memorial is.

10.

Equity and generosity and bravery make choice,
 Each one of, world in, foundation firm is.

11.

Absorbed (in) glory its be, which to not decay,
 Heart, beauty fading on, thy unsteady is.

12.

Drunk having the wine of pride, not intox-cated be.

Besides a headach no other else its crop sickness is.

13.

Whom to, youth! something with stain not is any,
 Heart his, mirror of manner without spot is.

A Free Translation.

1.

While the season of youth continues, we may really enjoy it as the spring of our lives, but when age comes on, we must perceive winter's approach through the falling leaves of autumn.

2.

Oh! consider the present time as a precious blessing, which folly alone can despise; and if you be prudent, now lend an attentive ear to my admonitions.

3.

When grey hairs summon man to the grave, it will be too late to reform, youth is therefore the season for mental exertion.

4.

If you can discriminate light from darkness, O my friend! then immediately learn a most useful lesson from the regular vicissitudes of day and night.

5.

Now store your mind with science, and perform worthy actions, since from these alone a man is esteemed in the world.

6.

Should you court popularity, cultivate your genius and talents, for the illiberal and illiterate are despicable in the eyes of mankind.

7.

Cowards who dart their tongues envenomed with malice, employ their dagger and pen in calumny's service.

8.

They who blast innocence with the breath of envy, are all to a man worthless assassins.

9.

Though not a vestige of Nuosheerwan, Hatim, and Roostum, now remains upon earth, still the fame of their great actions will prove eternal.

10.

Practise justice, generosity, and every noble virtue, because each of these will prove more durable than a monument of brass.

11.

As the mind loses its energies by admiring perishable beauty, do you contemplate that glory which alone is a stranger to decay.

12.

Never allow the favours of fortune to intoxicate you with pride, lest you subject yourself to its giddiness and distraction.

13.

He whose heart, O youth ! is free from every stain, has a conscience clear as the limpid stream.

Paraphrase.

1.

Fair youth is the season which mortals should prize,

As the spring of both body and mind,
Through summer and autumn, see life swiftly flies !

With old age, its cold winter, behind.

2.

Awake ! now sweet Hebe benignantly cheers,
Like Aurora, the morn with her rays !

O hear, my young friends, ere the dark night appears !

For improvement, these—these are the days.

3.

Exert every nerve while the soul is in tune,
The high summits of learning to gain ; ↘
Should time's hoary locks bring death's warning
at noon,

Then indeed you may labour in vain.

4.

If reason or genius your bosoms yet fires,
 With advantage contemplate this truth!
 As daylight itself before darkness retires,
 Clouds may lower on the sunshine of youth!

5.

Now quickly employ every moment you can,
 Adolescence with honour to crown,
 For science should ever distinguish the man
 Who aspires or to rank or renown.

6.

In arts and accomplishments emulate all,
 Persevere to fame's temple, in view;
 While envy and ignorance shamefully fall,
 Merit's bays, there, are waving for you.

7.

The dictates of malice let cowards obey,
 Armed with pencil, stiletto, or pen,
 Leave slander's base weapons, which innocence
 slay,
 To assassins—the basest of men.

8.

True-worth is a lamp, with celestial flame,
 That will shine when this globe shall decay.
 Though monuments sink in the dust,—a good name
 Is the dawn of eternity's day.

9.

By just and magnanimous actions the brave Gather laurels unfading on high;
From earth far removed, and the sting of the grave,

In heaven,—where they never can die.

10.

See pleasure and fortune both fade like the rose,
When its dew drops of morn disappear!

But glory's immortal fresh blossoms disclose,
Like the myrtle, spring's charms through the year.

11.

Indulge not too freely in pride nor in wine,
Those false lights of this visible gloom!
Which coxcombs and profligates borrow to shine,
As mere glow-worms in vice's dark tomb:

12.

While juvenile minds, which no passion inspires,
That an angel might blush to descry,
Reflect the pure image that virtue admires,
In the tear of mild sympathy's eye.

XVIII.

Ghuzuli Hafiz.*

1.

hijabi chihru e jan meeshuwud ghoobari tunum, Khosh aŋ dume ki uzan chihru purdu bur figunum.

2.

Chooneen qufus nu suza e choo mun khosh il-
 han ust,

Ruwum bu goolshuni rizwan ki morghi aŋ
 chumunum.

3.

uyaŋ nu shood ki koja amudum kœja boodum,
 Diregh o durd ki ghafil zi kari khweshtunum.

4.

Chigoonu tuof koonum dur hureemi alum qods,
 Ki dur surachu e turkeeb tukhtubundi tunum.

* The intimate connection between the Hindooostanee and Persian languages, renders every apology for the appearance of the above Ode from Hafiz unnecessary, because we can no more separate the grammar of these tongues entirely from each other, than we can totally disjoin the Greek and Latin rudiments.

5.

Mura ki munzuri ḥoor ust muskun o mawa,
Chura bu koo e khurabatiyan bawwud wutunum.

6.

Ugur zi khooni dilum bo'e mooshk mee ayud,
ujub mudar ki humdurdi nafu e khootunam.

7.

tirazi pueruhune zur kushum mubeen choon
shumū,
Ki soz hast nihanee durooni pueruhunum.

8.

Biya o hustiye hafiz zi peshi oo burdar,
Ki bawwajoodi to kus nushnuwud zi mun ki
munum.

A Free Translation.

1.

The shade of this body obscures the radiance of my soul, welcome that hour, when I may tear the veil from its celestial countenance.

2.

Such a cage doth not become a warbler like me, who soars, as a bird of Paradise, to the regions of bliss.

3.

I know not where I now am, nor where I formerly was; woe is me, I have neglected my own self!

4.

How can I wing my flight round the temple of the pure empyrean, while confined within the bars of this terrestrial frame?

5.

Why should I, who aspire to the asylum and abode of cherubs, find a mansion here among the haunts of degraded forms?

6.

Should my heart's blood be stained with the dark hue of musk, be not surprised, for I am a fellow-sufferer with the musk-deer of Khotun.

7.

Do not contemplate the gay form of my orient robes alone, while I like a taper am consuming with the internal fires, which this breast of mine conceals.

8.

Come, my soul! draw the curtain of delusion from the eyes of Hafiz, for while thou art, no body shall learn from him, that he can really exist without thee.

XIX.

Ghuzul Meer Ummun Looṭf kee.

1.

Hue oṭ julwue jan̄ ka gilee budun mera,
Khoda kure ki oṛe khak ho yih tun mera.

2.

Qufus men̄ dooniya ke kya bole mojh sa khoosh ahung,
udun men̄ chuhchuhe maroon, wooh hue chumun mera.

3.

Nu sumjha yih ki kuhaṇ tha uor ub kuhan̄ aya.
Huzar huef ki ghafil hue fuhm o zun mera.

4.

Kuroon̄ muen̄ kyoon̄ ke bhula lamukan̄ kee
suer, ki ub
Phun̄sa hue qued men̄ khakee budun kee mun mera.

5.

Humara għur to hue hooron̄ kee ankh kee pootlee, Gulee men̄ muekushon̄ kee kyoon̄ ki ho wutun mera.

6.

Khuṭa nuheen̄ jo mere khooni dil se mooshk
kee boo,
Mile tcojhe ki hue dil nafu'e khootun mera.

7.

Yih nuqshi jamu'e zurkush mera nuheen̄ jon
shumū,

Ki huega purdu'e fanoos pueruhun mera.

8.

oṭha too hustee ko Hafiz kee ake uz ruhi Loṭif,
Ki ko'ee soone nu tere samjhne scokhun mera.

Paraphrase of the above.

1.

Hail, heavenly spark ! that glorious day,
When thou, releas'd from circling clay,

May soar to realms of bliss :
No longer shall this frame confine,
A soul inspir'd by love divine,— Pure bird of Paradise !

2.

God's mystic scheme I vainly scan,
And grasp his mind infus'd in man ;

These—far transcend my song.
Thro' death's deep gloom, how wing my flight,
To that eternal source of light—
Eclips'd from me so long ?

3.

Eccentric spirit ! why first roam—
To earth—from heav'n thy native home,
Where kindred angels dwell ?

How like the bounding musky deer,
 Thou still art doom'd to anguish here—
 This yearning heart can tell.*

4.

Those radiant orbs, earth's vernal bloom,
 Lose all their charms, while I consume
 With melting sighs on sighs :
 Yes, bright Intelligence ! I see,
 My SELF† cannot ascend to thee,
 Till mortal HAFIZ dies.

* The animated allusion to the musk-deer by Hafiz, in this verse, can be relished by those only who will examine the natural history of this animal. If we add to this, the coagulated contents and general structure of the musk-bag, evident upon dissection, we shall find they are not very dissimilar to a heart, supposed to have its blood curdled and scorched by the ardour and anguish of disappointed love.

† The reader will perceive my notions of Self, both in Metaphysics and Philology, in this extract, from the Persian Grammar, by Sir W. JONES, whom in this respect I implicitly follow.

I here use his self and their selves instead of the corrupted words himself and themselves; in which usage I am justified by the authority of

A Translation of the above Paraphrase.

1.

Ue purinde khcold ke is dami khakee se riha,
Hoke corjae too cos ja tha juhan basa tera.

2.

Upnee phoolwaree qudeemee kee kure phir
deed too,
Juon se din men, tojhe wooh din moobaruk
hoega.

3.

Ue ki too jeeta hue ishq e ezudee ke shuoq men, Kur sukega phir nu tojh ko qued pinjra khak ka.

4.

Rooh insan kee lutafut ke subub pata nuheen,
Phir milega kisturuhi mojh ko nishane kibriya.

Sidney, and of other writers in the golden age of our language; self seems to have been originally a noun, and was, perhaps, a synonymous word for soul, according to Locke's definition of it: "Self is that conscious thinking thing, which is sensible or conscious of pleasure and pain, capable of happiness and misery." If this observation be just, the Arabs have exactly the same idiom; for their nufs, soul, answers precisely to our self, as—subiyoon rum a nufsu hoo fee nuhrin, a boy threw his self into a river.

5.

Jo chhipa ankhoṇ se ho kis turuh se awe nuzur, Dekhiye kyoon kur cose, upna kuhan yih murtubu.

6.

Uor jo yih chahooṇ ki oska bhed koochh zāhir kuroon,
 Moṇh nuheen rukhta hoon uesa, upnee go-yaee so kya.

7.

Muot ka muedani teeru tue kurega kis turuh,
 Uese undhiyare se kyoon kur jaega tojh se cora.

8.

Is kuṣafut men jo tha too, kub phir awega nuzur, Chushmu e nooree qudeemee hue jo mooddut se chhipa.

9.

Huen muluk humjins jis men os wutun ko
 chhoṛ kur,
 Bhoola bhulka duhr men phirta hue kyoon ue
 bewufa.

10.

Moṣturub ahoo e moṣhkeen sa jo dōkh bhur-
 ta hue too,
 Bun men yuhan osko dile khustu hue mera
 janta.

11.

Jub muen juljata hooñ upnee ahi atushbar se,
 Ye sitare poor ziya uor baghi dooniya poor fizā:

12.

Tub nipiñ be rootbu uor nacheez ate hueñ nuñur, Yuñne ub hañil nu kcochh howega inse mood-du,a.

13.

Ue khoda! tub tuk nuhogee jan kee toojh tuk
 puhoonch,
 Jub tuluk jawe nu mur yih Hafize khakee mera.

XX.

1.

Baten kidhur gueen we teree bholee bholiyan,
 Dil leke bolta hue jo too ub ye boliyan.

2.

Hur bat hue luñefu o hur yek sookhcon hue rumz,
 Hur an hue kinayu o hur dum thuthholiyan.

3.

huerut ne cosko bund nu kurne dee phir kubhoo,
 Unkhian jis arsee ne tere moonh pu kholiyan.

4.

Undam i gool pu ho nu quba is muze se chak,
 Jyoñ khosh-chhuboñ ke tun pu musuktee
 hueñ cholliyan.

5.

Kin ne kiya khiram chumun men ki ub suba,
 Latee hue bo'e naz se bhur bhur ke jholiyan.

6.

Saqee puhonch shitab ki toojh bin is ubr se,
 Purte nuheen tugurg burustee hue golliyan.

7.

Kya chahiye toojhe sur i ungcosht pur hina,
 Jis be goonuh ke khoon men chahen dooboliyan.

8.

Jyon burf hogue huen khonuk ub bootani hind,
 Nisbut conhon kee gurm huen kabool kee loliyan.

9.

Suoda ke dil se saf nu ruhtee thee zoolfi yar,
 Shane ne beech pur ke girhen coskee kholiyan.

Literal Translation.

Where are thy kind innocent expressions now,
 that, having captivated my heart, thou talkest to me thus?—All thy words are gibes, and every sentence is railery.

Not a moment without sarcasm, and each breath has become a taunting joke.

Admiration hath not yet allowed the mirror to sleep, that opened its eyes on thy coun-nance.

The capsule of the flower doth not burst with such charms, as when the garment of the fair gives way.

Who hath been walking in the garden, that now the zephyrs come overloaded with the perfumes of blandishment?

Come quickly, my beloved, for without thee the clouds are not discharging hail, but bullets.

Why shouldst thou dye the tips of thy fingers with *hina, while they can be dipped in the blood of victims (to thy love)?

The damsels of India have become as cold as ice, and are rivalled in affection by the maids of Kabool.

The tresses of my love were not in concord with Suoda, till the comb, interposing, unravelled their (prejudices) contortions.

* The ligustrum indicum, or eastern privet, called also menhdee, and much used for staining the nails, hands, and feet, of a red colour.

Paraphrase.

1.

Was thy innocent prattle divested of art,
That formerly ravish'd my ear,
With the view of insidiously stealing this heart?
Ah! whence these harsh words I now hear?

2.

Why thus constantly poison whate'er you express,
With scoffs, gibes, and taunting unkind?
Can satirical wit on a lover's distress
Become a benevolent mind?

3.

Since the morn I beheld thee so lovely and gay,
These eyes have been strangers to sleep;
All the night for my fairest I ravingly pray,
Whole days, can do nothing but weep.

4.

Not a bud where the lily just peers do I see,
So charms its admirer above,
As the muslin receding can fascinate me,
To gaze on thy snow-balls of love.

5.

When Aurora from Phœbus comes tripping it by,
Her shape, breath ambrosial, and air,
Are so much my dear nymph's, I distractedly cry,
Whence, whither thus early, my fair?

6.

Though yon clouds burst with peals we have nothing to fear,
 Since the skies will relenting avert,
 While such innocence, beauty, and goodness,
 are near,
 Each shaft but thy own from my heart.

7.

If kind nature, not art, lilies, roses, can grace,
 With pencil and colours divine,
 Shall paint sacrilegiously beauties deface,
 Each bloom sees with envy in thine?

8.

How, ye damsels of Hind, prove more frigid and cool,
 Than hills cover'd over with snow,
 As our genial warm plains, while the maids of Kabool
 With love amid icicles glow.

9.

Are those locks not intended to rivet thy chain?
 Fly, Suoda, enchantment is there!
What comb hath the power to release thee
 again,
 From jetty fell ringlets of hair?

By way of variety, and to accommodate my juvenile military students with something more immediately in their department, I shall in this place present them with the words of command, generally adopted in the British Indian armies, and also with a few of the Articles of War, in the Hindooostanee language, as a knowledge of these will serve to introduce them to all the rest, to be found either in those works I have already published, or in some future publication, for the particular use of East India cadets.

Preliminary and Supplementary Observations, by the late Lieutenant ROBERT WEBSTER, of the Bengal Military Service, and by the AUTHOR of these Sheets.

The following Military Terms, made use of by the natives in their own and our armies, may be of service to any young officer who is appointed to a Sipahee corps, immediately on his arrival in India. After becoming master of them, he might attend every drill, observing carefully the expressions which the drill-serjeant makes use of in explaining the English words of command, when teaching the recruits their exercise. The whole should then be noted down, very carefully and alphabetically, in a memorandum book, the officer paying due attention to their orthography. When he thinks he has obtained a sufficient number of words to be able to instruct a squad, he might, with his commander's leave, take charge of one, which he should exercise, morning and evening, for near two months; pronouncing the words of command at first slowly and distinctly with the extent of his voice. Rapidity of utterance will come of its own accord afterwards. By so doing he will get acquainted with the men, and they accustomed to his command, the advantages attendant on which are well known to every officer, but more especially to those who belong to the native regiments.

The military scholar will do well to recollect, that many useful words must be omitted in the Vocabulary, from their having no such expressions in the Hindoostanee. In these instances, however, he must use the English word more or less corrupted, according to circumstances, with which a little practice will soon familiarize the learner. Some few of the corruptions in question will appear in the Second Volume, which will afford no bad clue to all the rest, and those in Italics here, are commonly preferred in our armies. It cannot be expected that the natives, in every regiment of the service, will make use of all the words of command exactly as they occur in these pages, since every one will take a certain latitude in his own translation of the English. At all events, those used by the late Lieutenant Webster will be generally understood, and may serve as a good model for others, who may feel inclined to bring this department of military duty to the perfection which it certainly merits, in every point of view, in our armies. Many of the words which are inserted in the Second Volume, are probably omitted here, and a few in the present list belong exclusively to the artillery, as I at first intended to have given, not only all their terms, but those belonging to the sea service also.

After examining the written materials that my friends had collected for the above purpose, I found such a chaos of corruptions and inter-mixture of tongues, as to make me relinquish

the attempt, at least for the present. I may at some future period be induced to prepare a more complete military and naval vocabulary, than I could accomplish now, especially if I be fortunate enough to receive any intermediate assistance and encouragement, to enable me to proceed in such a task, with private satisfaction and public advantage.

A.

Accoutrements, keel kanta, saz saman.

Aim, deeth, shust, (to take) shust-bandhna.

Advance to, samne chulna, bujhna.

Ambush, danw, gara, ghat.

Ammunition, jungee-tonta, baroot golee, saman jungee.

Angle, goshu, kona.

Anvil, ghun, nihaee, sundan.

Approaches, morchu, morchal, urgura.

Alarm, pokar, hank pokar.

Armistice, wuqfu, moohlut, thuhrawa.

Armour, buktur, jhool, charaeenu.

Arms, huthiyar, hurbu, silah.

Arsenal, silah-khanu.

Articles of war, lushkuree ae'en.

Artillery, topen, top-khanu, (man) golundaz.

Attack, hulla, dhabwa, churhaee, humlu.

To attack, (in front) moohra marna, (the rear)

pichhaṛee-marna, (in flank) kumur-(ya) ka nee-marna, v. flank.

Axle-tree, dhooree.

Axe, tubur, tubul, koolhaṛee, (pick) guentee.

B.

Baggage, boongah, cheezbust, buheer.

Barrel, peepa, (gun) nulee.

Barrier, uṛgura, phatuk.

Base, neo, jur, booniyad.

Bastion, boorj.

Battery, morchu, dumdumu.

Belt, purtula, dab, duwal.

To blockade, gher-lena, nakabundee-k. moḥa
ṣiru-k. gird-k.

Blunderbuss, dhumaka, qurabeen.

Body of men, guroh, risalu, ghol, toomun.

Bomb, ḥooqqu, ghobaré ka gola.

Bombardier, golundaz.

Breach, koombhul, boogharu, durar, phoot,
shigaf, (practicable) chulta boogharu.

Breast-plate, chupras.

Brigade, dustu.

Brimstone, gundhuk.

C.

Carriage, ruhroo, ruhkulu, tukht.

Camp, purao, lushkur-gah.

Cantonments, chhaonee.

Cavalier, dumdumu, v. trooper.

Capitulation, quo^l qurar.

Carabine, qurabeen, dhumaka.

Cartouch, tosdan.

Cartridge, ṭonṭa, (light) juloosee, sulamee, (grape) chhurra.

Casement, murhulu.

Cavalry, toork-suwar.

Centre, beech, naf, qulb.

Cessation of arms, moothlut, sooljok.

Chamade, chadur-doputṭa-hilana*.

* To wave a sheet or cloth of any kind round the head repeatedly, implies that the people who do so, consider their selves in the power of the enemy, and mean to submit accordingly. This in day light answers every purpose; but the rude state of military tactics in the East, has not yet provided an adequate expedient, during hostile attacks at night. The natives would, under such circumstances, give over firing, call out uluman, uluman, or uman, uman, and probably wave a light or torch circularly in the air, to show that they had submitted, and expected mercy accordingly. In the day time, even when a man leaves the ranks and approaches the enemy unarmed, he is considered as sacred as a person among us.

Chamber of a gun, top kee koṭhee.

Chain, zunjeer.

Challenge to, luṛā ee mangna, mcoqabulu-chahna,
(as a sentry) ṭokna, rokṭok-k.

Colours, nishan, jhunda, bueruq.

Commission, cohdedaree-sunud.

Company, biraduree.

Compliment, sulam.

Convoy, qafīlu, budruqu rusancee.

To countermarch, kawa deke phirna.

Court-Martial, lushkuree ȳdalut.

Cuirass, chara'eenu, jhool.

Cymbal, jhanjh, munjeera.

D.

Decamp to, chule-jana, ooṭh-j. kooch-k.

Defences, ar, ot, urḡuṛa, bucha'o.

Defile, duru, naka, ghaṭ, gulee.

Deserter, bhugora, firaree.

Detachment, ghol, risalu, v. brigade, &c. tu, eenatee.

Division, ṭola, ṭolee, v. body.

Discharge, burturfee kee chithee, (to) nam-kaṭna juwab-d.

Drum, ṭumboor, ṭublu.

bearing a flag of truce, and will be received in the light of a pacific messenger demanding a parley, &c. from the adverse army.

Drummer, tumboor-chee.

Duty, baree, khidmut, kam, nuokuree, chukee.

E.

Embrasure, rund, top ka jhuroka.

To Enfilade, aga-marna, or bandhna.

Encamp to, deru- or moakam-k.

Evolution, hurkut.

Exercise, quwa id.

F.

Fascine, jhonka, antee, lukree.*

Feather-spring, kumanee.

Feint, bholawa, dhokha, buhanu.

Field-piece, top ruhkulu, top julebee.

Flank, bughul, kumur, kunee, kanee.

File, pant, pura, qutar.

File off to, qutar qutar-or kawa de ke-chulna.

Forlorn hope, * commedwar sipahiyoñ ka jutha, janbazon ka ghol.

Forage, kuhee, rusud, luhna, seedha, panee.

Form to, bunna, bunana, pura-bandhna.

Fort, qulū, gurh, gurhee.

* Were this translated literally, the inauspicious name alone would prevent the natives from comprehending what was intended by the expression among us. It is in cases of this nature, where not only the skill of a linguist is Fosse, khunduq, pueghar. v. ditch.

Furlough, ruza, chhoottee.

G.

Gabion, tokree.

Gate, phatuk, durwazu.

General, surdar, bukhshee, (in chief) meer-bukhshee.

Gin, thekeec.

Glacis, poshtu, dugram.

Grenade, hooqqa, (thrower) hooqqe-baz.

To Ground, solana.

Guard, chukee, puhr, (advanced) hurawul, qurawul, ugaree, (rear) chundawul, pichharee.

To Guard, nigahbanee-k, khubur-lena, hifazut-k.

Guide, hurkaru, duoraha, rah-bur.

Gun-carriage, urabu, v. carriage.

H.

Helmet, top, khod.

Hide, cham, chursa.

Howitzer, urabu.

Hospital, beemar-khanu.

Hurdle, thuthur.

requisite, but that discrimination also, which can be attained from a real knowledge of the manners and customs of the people, through their vernacular tongue alone.

I.

Infantry, pue dul, piyade.

Intrench to, morchu bundee- or sulabut koochu-k.

K.

Knapsack, jhola.

L.

Laddle, chumuch, do ee.

Laboratory, baroot- or kar-khanu.

Limber, ruhroo, v. carriage.

Line, pura, suf.

M.

Magazine, mukhzun, v. arsenal.

Mallet, mekh-choo, mogree.

Match, jamgee, diya sula ee.

Mine, soorung, (to spring) soorung-marna.

Mortar, hooqqu, ban, ghobara.

Motion, hurkut.

Mould, sancha.

Mutiny, dunga, fusad, hungamu, fitnu.

O.

Oblique, kona kanee, tirchha.

Officer, surdar, cohde-dar, v. general.

Ordnance, chuo chukkee, v. gun.

Outpost, aspas kee tu eenatee.

P.

Parade, quwa id-gah, v. exercise.

Parley, juwab suwal, (to beat) kupra-hilana,
v. chamade.

- Party, jutha, risalu, tuçenatee.
- Pass*, nikasee kee chithee, dustuk rahdaree, purwanu, (strait) dura, ghat, v. desile.
- Patrole*, tilawa, tilayu.
- Park, top-khanu.
- Palisade, kutghura.
- Peace, mel, şooluh.
- Picket, mekh, khoontee.
- Picquet*, tilayu, girdawurree, itaqee.
- Pivot*, khoont.
- Pioneer, bel-dar.
- Plan, nuqshu.
- Platform, chubootru, muchan.
- Port-fire, muhtabee, huth-phool, v. match.
- Pole, phur, joo,a, bum.
- Priming wire, sozun, soo,a.
- Priming (powder) runjuk, (pouch, &c.) runjuk-dan.

Q.

Quadrant, costcorlab.

R.

- Rammer or pounder, moosul, doormos.
- Rampart, fuṣeel, kumur-koṭa, deewar.
- Range (of shot, gole ka) tappa, pulla, mar, chot.
- Rear, pichhwara, peechha.
- To recoil, puluṇna, huṭana.
- Redoubt, mørchu.

Y y

To relieve, budul-lena, budlee-kurna.

Rendezvous, uḍḍa, mujmū.

Reserve, phaltoo, oobaroo, fazil.

Retreat, puhloo-tihee, (to) huṇna.

Rocket, ban.

Roll, ismnuweesee, furd, firhist.

S.

Sally to, khorooj-k. oobhūṇna.

Sand bags, baloo kee thuelee.

Sash, jalpuṭka.

Scaling ladder, kumund, v. ladder.

Shovel or spade, belchu, koodal, phuora.

Sight, mussa, mukhee, deed-ban.

Sling, duwalee, v. belt.

Sponge staff, soombha.

Squadron, ghol, dustu, jhond.

Stockade, kumur koṭa, v. palisade.

Sword, kirch, neemchu, tulwar.

T.

Target, chand.

Tarpaulin, ghuṭa ṭop, mom-jamu.

Tent, deru, khuemu, tumboo, pal.

Touch-hole, runjuk-ghura, (ya) -soorakh.

Tompion, ḍuṭṭa.

Trigger, lublubee, kul.

Troop, toomun, risalu.

Trooper, suwar.

Trunnions, purkan.

Tumbril, peṭee.

V.

Vanguard, hurawul, agarēe, mohra, v. guard.

U.

Uniform, sipahiyanu bana

W. :

Wadding, kusun, nuwalu.

War, jung, luraee.

Weapons, ḥurbū, huthiyar, v. arms.

Wing, puhloo, bughul, kanee, (right) muemuna, (left) muesura.

Y.

Yoke, jooa, joowat, juwalee.

Order arms, bundooq ootaro.

Fix bayonets, sungeen churhao.

Shoulder arms, bundooq kandhe pur rukho.

Present arms, sulamee ka hath.

Charge bayonets, sungeen ka hath.

Make ready, ghora do pa'e pur churhao.

Half-cock firelocks, ek pa'e pur ghora rukho.

Present, shust lo (ya) bundooq jhookao.

Fire, chhoṭo, dagho, or maro.

Handle cartridge, ṭonje pur hath rukho.

Open pans, phirjoola- (ya) piyalu-kholo.

Prime, runjuk pila,o.

Load, ṭonṭa bhuro.

Draw ramrod, guz nikalo.

Ram down cartridge, ṭonṭa guz se maro,

Return ramrod, guz phir do.

Seize the firelock with a firm grasp, bundooq moothiyake pukuṛo.

Prime and load, runjuk pila,o, ṭonṭa bhuro.

Recover arms, kan se mar.

Dress by the right, duheene nuzur kuro, burabur
hoja,o.

Dress by the left, baen nuzur kuro, burabur
hoja,o.

Eyes to the right, duheene nuzur.

Eyes to the left, baen nuzur.

By the right backwards dress, duheene dekh peechhe huṭke burabur hoja,o.

By the left backwards dress, baen dekh peechhe
huṭke burabur hoja,o.

By the right forwards dress, duheene dekh age buṛhke burabur hoja,o.

By the left forwards dress, baen dekh age buṛhke
burabur hoja,o.

To the right face, duheene phiṛo.

To the left face, baen phiṛo.

To the right about face, duheene se adha chukkur phiro.

To the left about face, baen se adha chukkur phiro.

Rear ranks take open order, pichharee kholo.

Rear ranks take close order, pichharee milo.

Pile arms, bundooq jeooree kuro.

Ground arms, bundooq solaao.

Stand at ease, hath milao (ya) maro.

Attention, jaing se hath milao.

Keep up your heads, sir oothao.

Ordinary time, march, thumbe qudum se age chulo.

Step short, eree angoothie ke pas rukh dheere qudum chulo.

Quick march, juldee qudum oothao.

Step out, lumba qudum rukho.

Change the step, qudum budlo.

Halt, khure ruho.

To the right wheel, duheene khont pur samne se chukkur khaao.

To the left wheel, baen khont pur samne se chukkur khaao.

On your right backwards wheel, duheene khont pur peechhe se chukkur khaao.

On your left backwards wheel, baen khont pur peechhe se chukkur maro.

The company will step back six paces, kum-punee ch̄hu qudum peechhe hutega.

To the left or right oblique, baen ya duheene tirchha qudum chulo.

Point your toes, pañw ke punje dubao.

To wheel on the center, beench ke khoon pur chukkur marna.

Mark time, upnee juguh khure ho qudum ooṭha,o.

To march in file, qutar qutar chulna.

The company will advance, kumpunee age buho.

To recruits will go to ball practice every evening, hir roz sham ko niye sipahee chand mree ke waste jaenge.

There will be an inspection of arms to-morrow morning, see that they are all very clean, fujur kul kante kee dekh ee hogee, dekh ki sub uchhee turuh saf ruhen.

Take care that the supernumerary arms are cleaned every day, khuburdar ki surunjam jo oobaroo (ya ufzood) hue roz roz mula jawe.

Bring me a written report of the company daily, kumpunee ka ulwal roz roz humare pas likhi-laya kuro.

When were you enlisted? toom kub nuokur hoo,e?

Press the butt well to the shoulder, koonda
monḍḍhe pur uchhee ḫuruḥ dubao.

Pull the trigger strong with the middle finger,
beech kee unglee lublubee pur zor se dabo.

Tell off the company into three sections, kum-punee ko teen ṭolee kuro.

The company will wheel in echelon of sections, pultun tirchhee ṭolee hoja egee, or pultun seerhee ka kam kurega.

At what time does the battalion march tomorrow morning? fujur kis wuqt pultun kooch kuregee?

How many men are for picquet? aj rat ketne
juwan ṭilaye kee nuokuree ke waste huen?

Articles of War.

Article IV. Section 2.

Any officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, who being present at any mutiny or sedition, does not use his utmost endeavours to suppress the same, or coming to the knowledge of any mutiny, or intended mutiny, does not without delay give information thereof to his commanding officer, shall be punished by a court-martial with death, or otherwise, according to the nature of his offence.

IV. 2.

Chuothee a,een dcosre bab kee.

Jo ko,ee chho,ta bu,ra cohdedar ya sipahee, ki-see dunga ya fusad men hazir hoke, upne muqdoor bhur cosee ko mulmet nu kure; ya kisoq dunga ya cos ke irade se waqif hoke, troont upne surdar ko iskee khubur nu puhconchawee, tuo suza coskee court-martial kee tujweez se qutl hogaa, ya uor turuh kee tumbeeh upnee tuqseer ke la,ijq pawega.

Article V. Section 2.

Any officer or soldier who shall strike his superior officer, or draw, or offer to draw, or shall lift up any weapon, or offer any violence against him, (being in the execution of his office) on any pretence whatsoever, or shall disobey any lawful command of his superior officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall, according to the nature of his offence, be inflicted upon him by the sentence of a court-martial.

V. 2.

Panchween a,een dcosre bab kee.

Ko,ee cohdedar ya sipahee, jo upne se bu,ra ya qudeem cohdedar ko mare, ya tulwar cos pur khuenché, ya khuencha chahe, ya kisoo hut-hiyar ko ḡothawé, ya kisee ṭuruḥ kee zuburdus-tee numood kure, kisoo ḥoɔjjut se; ya upne se buṛe ya qudeem ḡohdedar ka koee wajibee ḥoɔkm nu mane tuo wcoh mardalaja, ega, ya uor koee uesee siyasut jo cos ke gɔnah ke moowa-fiq hogee, so court-martial kee tujweez se cos ko deeja, egee.

Article IV. Section 5.

Whatsoever officer or soldier shall be convicted of having advised or persuaded any other officer or soldier to desert the service, shall suffer such punishment as shall be inflicted upon him by the sentence of a court-martial.

IV. 5.

Jo koee ḡohdedar, ya sipahee, kisee uor ḡohdedar, ya sipahee ko nokree se bhagne ko kuhe, ya sikhawé, uo yih cos pur ṣabit ho; tuo ḡosko uesee siyasut milegee juesee court-martial kee tujweez se ṭhuhra, ee ja, egee.

Article III. Section 10.

Every non-commissioned officer or soldier, who shall be convicted at a court-martial of having sold or lost, or spoiled through his neglect, his horse, arms, clothes, or accoutrements, shall undergo such weekly stoppages (not exceeding the half of his pay) as a court-martial shall judge sufficient for repairing the loss or damage, and shall suffer imprisonment, or such other corporal punishment as his crime shall deserve.

III. 10.

Teesree aseen duswen̄ bab kee.

Hur kōee huwaldar, ya uor kōee ch̄hotā coh-dedar, ya sipahee, jo upne ghōre, huthiyaron, kupron, ya sipahiyane surinjamon̄ ko beche, khōe, ya upnee ghuflut se bigare, uor yih court-martial men̄ cos pur sabit ho ; tuo uesa dand̄ hur aṭhware coskee adhee tulub se liya jāega, juesa ki court-martial ḥuhrawe, cos nooqsan uor kumtee ke poora kurne ko ; uor qued bhee hoga, ya etnee mar khāega, jetnee coskee tuq̄seer ke laj̄q hōegee.

Article I. Section 11.

All non-commissioned officers and soldiers, who shall be found one mile from the camp, without leave in writing from the commanding officer, shall suffer such punishment as shall be inflicted upon them by the sentence of a court-martial.

I. 11.

Puehlee aseen egarwen̄ bab kee.

Sub koee huwaldar, ya uor koee chhotē cohdedar, ya sipahee, jo lushkur ke maoqam se adh kos pur paē jawen̄, upne surdar kee rookhsut kee chithee bina; tuo con ko uesee tumbeeh milegee juesee court-martial kee tujweez se tuhhraee jaēgee.

Article II. Section 11.

No officer or soldier shall lie out of his quarters, garrison, or camp, without leave from his superior officer, upon the penalty of being punished, according to the nature of his offence, by the sentence of a court-martial.

II. 11.

Doosree aseen egarwen̄ bab kee.

Chahiye ki koee cohdedar, ya sipahee upne surdar kee purwangee bina, kuheen̄ bahur rat bhur nu ruhe, upne dere, qilue, ya lushkur ke maoqam, ya chhuonee se, nuheen̄ to, suza pawega, upnee tuqseer ke mowafiq court-martial kee tujweez se.

Article III. Section 11.

Every non-commissioned officer and soldier shall retire to his quarters or tent at the beating of the retreat; in default of which he shall be punished, according to the nature of his offence, by the commanding officer.

III. 11.

Teesree aseen egarwen̄ bab kee.

Hurek ḥuwaldar, ya uor kisoo chhoṭe cohdedar o sipahee ko chahiye, ki sham kee top ya tumboor bajne pur, upne upne dere men̄, ya thikane pur jaruhe, nuheen̄ to upnee tuqṣeer kee see suza wuhaṇ̄ ke surdar se pawega.

Article IV. Section 11.

No officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, shall fail of repairing at the time fixed, to the place of parade, of exercise, or other rendezvous appointed by his commanding officer, if not prevented by sickness, or some other evident necessity; or shall go from the said place of rendezvous, or from his guard, without leave from his commanding officer, before he shall be regularly dismissed or relieved, on the penalty of being punished according to the nature of his offence, by the sentence of a court-martial.

IV. 11.

Chouthhee aseen, egarwen̄ bab kee.

Ugur ko ee chhoṭa ya bura cohdedar, ya sipa-hee qōsoor kure bur wuqt puhconchne men̄ quwāidgah pur, ya uor jugih jumū hone kee, ki jo surdar ne thuhraee ho, bughuer beemaree, ya uor kōee zuroorut zahiree; ya cosee jugih se ya kisee chukee puhre se upne surdar ke kuhe bina, ya mōowafiq dustoor upnee budlee ya chhooṭtee ke age oothjawe; tuo court-martial kee tujweez se juesee coskee tuqseer thuhregee wtieseehee suza cos ko milegee.

Article V. Section 11.

Whatever commissioned officer shall be found drunk on his guard, party, or other duty under arms, shall be cashiered for it; any non-commissioned officer or soldier so offending, shall suffer such corporal punishment as shall be inflicted by the sentence of a court-martial.

V. 11.

Panchween āeen egarwen̄ bab kee.

Jo kōee buṛa cohdedar, upnee chukee puhre pur, ya tūenatee, ya kisoo uor khidmut pur, huthiyar bandhe hoōe mutwala paya jawē; tuo is bat ke wastē burṭuruf hogā, uo kōee chhoṭa cohdedar, ya sipahee jo uesa gōonah kure, etee mar khāega jetee court-martial kee tujweez men̄ thuhraee jāegee.

The 6th Article of the Regulations relative to Native Recruits, published in Minutes of Council of the 8th of August 1796.

Prior to enrolment, the following Articles of War shall be read and explained to him, (the recruit) viz. the 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th Articles of the 2d Section; the 1st, 3d and 4th Articles of the 5th Section; the 2d and 3d Articles of the 10th Section; and the 1st, 2d, 6th, 13th, 16th and 20th Articles of the 11th Section.—At the same time, the following Declaration is to be made to him, and the following Oath administered to him, in the front of the colours of the battalion, according to the tenets of his belief.

Chhuthween babut hookmon se jo nikle the ungrezee fuoj ke niye sipahiyon ke waste, August kee athween tareekh, sutruh suo chhe anwe sal ungrezee.

Hur ek nu'e sipahee kee ismnueesee ke age chahiye ki os ko scona ee uo boojha ee jawen ungrezee fuoj kee yehee aeeneñ; yuñne doosree, teesree, chouñhee, o panchween aeeneñ doosre bab kee; puehlee, teesree o chouñhee aeeneñ panchwen bab kee; doosree o teesree aeeneñ duswen̄ bab kee, puehlee, doosree, chhuthween̄, terhween̄, solhween̄, beesween̄ a eenen̄ egarwen̄ bab kee. Tis pur bhee pultun ke nishan ke samne chahiye ki ḡosko age ka shurt̄ namu zahir kiya jawē, uor age kee qusm cose khilaee jawē ḡos ke deen o dhurum ke iutiqad ke moowafiq.

Declaration.—“ In time of peace, after having served three years, on making application for your discharge, through the commanding officer of your company, it will be granted to you, in two months from the date of your application, provided it will not cause the vacancies in your company to exceed ten, in which case you must remain until that objection be removed ; but in time of war, you have no claim to a discharge, but must remain, and do your duty, until the necessity of retaining you in the service shall cease.”

Shurt̄ namu.—şooluh ke wuqt teen burus kee khidmut kurne ke buud, nokree se juwab mangne pur, upnee company ke surdar kee muurifut, toomharee durkhwast se do muheene ke beech men̄ toomko milega : is shurt̄ se, ki toomharee company men̄ dus admee se ziyadu kum nu hon̄ ; nuheen̄ to, toom ko ruhna hoga, jubtuk yihee rooka, o jata nu ruhe; pur Iuṛā ee ke wuqt tōm-hara koochh duṣwā nuheen hue burturfee ka, bulki tōm ko khwah nu khwah ruhna hogā, upnee khidmut pur, jublug tōm ko nokree men rukhne kee ghuruz muoqoof nu ho.

Oath.—“I, A. B. inhabitant of village Pergunnah Subah son of

do swear, that I will never forsake or abandon my colours, that I will march wherever I am directed, whether within or beyond the Company's territories ; that I will implicitly obey all the orders of my commanders, and in every thing behave myself as becomes a good soldier, and faithful servant of the Company, and failing in any part of my duty as such, I will submit to the penalties described in the Articles of War, which have been read to me.”

Lushkuree qusum namu.—Muen fulanu, ruhne wala bustee fulanee ka, Purgune fulane ka, soobu fulane ka, beṭa fulane ka, qusum khata hoon ki muen hurgiz upne nishan ko nuheen chhorja, oonga, o kooch bhēe kuroonga juhaṇ kuheen ka ḥokm pa, oon, ya Company ke umul b̄hur ho, ya bahur, uor upne surdaron ke sub hookm tun o mun se manoonga, o hur ek bat men, upne tu.een nibahoonga, juesa bhule sipa-hee, uor Company ke wufadar nuokur ko phube; uo wuesahee hoke jo kisoo thoreesee upnee khid-mut men qrosocu kuroon, tuo muen qubool ku-roonga suza.en jo likhee hoo ee huen a.een lush-kuree men uor mere rooburoo pu.hee gu.een huen.

In the passage to India, as the subsequent Collection, however imperfect, may prove highly useful to the Hindoostanee scholar, it is here at his service, under the title of—

A Naval Vocabulary, English and Hindoostanee.

It must be well known to every person, that in the high state of perfection to which naval tactics have been brought among Europeans, and the very low state in which they have always been among the natives of India, (or I may perhaps say, Asia) we must have a great many different articles, which they knew nothing of when they came into our ships at first. The conclusion I mean to draw from this is, that an immense number of English, Portuguese, and other names, are still used for many parts belonging to a ship. Many of these words even are mutilated, sometimes so much as to render it difficult to say whether they be mere corruptions or not. As an example, though bumba be a very different sound from pump, still I have little doubt of its being the latter word, only sounded ever after, according to the impression it first made on the ears of the natives; because b and p are not only congenial consonants, but the Indians are fond of affixing the final a to many words corrupted and adopted from other tongues. That mumbu signifies a spring, fountain, or gush of water, in Arabic, the Compiler will allow, without in the least invalidating thereby his own conjecture. Another remark worthy of attention is, there are many parts of a ship which a British officer seldom, perhaps never, has occasion to speak of to a native of India, hence there are no Hindooostanee names used for such parts. This last intimation was necessary to prevent the Compiler from being blamed for leaving out the names of many, otherwise essential, parts of a ship.

He claims very little merit to himself, but cannot forbear mentioning, although unauthorized to do this, how much he is indebted to Captain William Ramsay, of the Country Service, who was so kind as to give him verbally, not only the English part of this Vocabulary, but also the Hindostanee, pronouncing the whole of the words exactly as he had been accustomed to hear them used in actual practice. Notwithstanding all our care, many of the names must be rather incorrect, from the impossibility of learning, with sufficient precision, any language by the ear alone; but I am confident, from the experience of Captain Ramsay, that any person, pronouncing the words as they are here spelt, cannot fail to make his hearers understand him. He, of course, must not expect this desirable consequence, until he knows the key to the orthography.

It was the intention of the Editor of the present Work, to insert it in his East Indian Guide, had the papers reached him in sufficient time for that purpose. To the friend from whom he at last received them, the British Indian naval world are indebted for the present Vocabulary, which has long been one desideratum among the many sea-faring people of all nations who frequent India. They will not only find these pages highly useful from port to port in that country, but also when necessity forces mariners, in distant voyages, to avail themselves of the peoples services from that part of the world, no man can doubt of this small work producing the most beneficial consequences. At all events, it may serve as the foundation of something much more useful, in this hitherto neglected department of the Indian tongue. The few phrases which have been given, will be no bad specimen of the rest which are still wanted to render the Work a complete guide at sea, as well as on shore, wherever the Hindoostanee language may be concerned in the safety of vessels and their navigators.

Sir Home Popham was some years ago at the trouble of compiling a naval vocabulary for the use of the fleet under his command in those seas; we cannot therefore well despair of seeing some valuable work yet published, expressly upon the subject in question. Though no body will dispute that the language of Indian sailors is at best a medley of jargon, still any man may assert, that bad as it is, and nothing can well be worse, it is nevertheless better than no medium at all. When we recollect, that all sciences must be rude and crude in their first outset, we shall not too severely censure this Vocabulary. Besides, if the lives of people depend on prompt orders, it signifies very little how barbarous and ungrammatical the language of such instructions may be. Indeed we have a very popular lesson in our own speech, in matters of this kind, in the story of "Extinguish that nocturnal illumination aloft." "No such rope, am I please your honour, in the whole top." "Douce the glim, Jack!" "Aye, aye, Sir." After these few preliminary observations, we shall leave the praise-worthy Compiler to speak for his self.

A.

Aback	Baksee.
Abaft,	Peechhil.
Able-bodied,	Bhula bhaee.
Aboard-ship,	Juhaz pur.
main-tack,	Bordoo buṛa moora.
About,	Pher, pherke, ghoomke.
Aburton,	Ara.
Acorn,	Kalsur kee ṭopee.
Adrift,	Chhoota.
Afore,	Agil.
Aft,	Peechhil.
After,	Peechhil ka.

Aground,	Chheetā, luga, sookhe pur chur̄ha.
Ahead,	Agil.
A-lee,	Bordoo.
Allowance,	Resum. from ration .
Aloft,	çpur, dol pur.
Along-side,	Bordoo men, bhirke.
— shore,	Kinare kinare.
— lying,	Kurwuṭ hoke.
Aloof,	Door, tufawut.
Amain,	Ek dum, sub milke.
Amid ships,	Beecha beech, beech men.
Ammin (for the lead)	Proom kee churbee.
Anchor,	Lungur.
— shank,	— kee dundee.
— eye,	— ke anile ka chhed.
— ring,	— ka anila.
— nut,	— ka kan.
— crown,	— ka nok.
— stock,	— ka dangā.
— bill,	— ke soopre ka nok.
— sheet,	Sheet lungur.
— best bower,	Bura lungur.
— small bower,	Chhotā lungur.
— kedge,	Kedge lungur.
— stream,	Stream lungur.

Anchor, to cast,	Lungur-dalna or chhor-d.
— at,	— pur.
— comes home,
— drags,	— kusar kurta.
— is foul,	{ men bolta pura hue.
— a-trip,	— cotha.
— an end,	— khuṛa.
Anchorage,	baree or lungur kurne kee juguh.
A-peek.	Peek.
Astern,	Peechhil.
Ashore,	Kinare.
Athwart-hause,	Samne aṛa pura.
Avast,	Bus.*

* In my passage home I commenced a regular vocabulary myself, and would have finished it completely, had not the requisite application and study menaced my constitution with a relapse to the very complaint in my head that drove me from India. This unpleasant sensation, during the voyage, deterred me from prosecuting the work farther than a few of the first letters, which have all been lost since, but the first, or A, above, and even it on board is capable of still greater extension, and that improvement which cannot be obtained on shore. A task of this nature may yet serve to beguile the tedium of a long passage, and furnish the nautical world with a work of great utility, something on the plan of the

Awning,

Chhuturee.

B.

Backstay, (breast) (after)

Pet fruedee.

Ballast,

Peechhil fruedee.

Belaying pin,

Neelam.

Bell,

Folit.

Bentick shrouds,

Churee.

Between decks,

Yalta arvil.

*Bill boards,

Tootuk ke beech.

To broach to Phir-jana.

Bight,

Goobba.

To bale,

Panee-nikalna.

Bends,

Kumur bund.

Birth,

Juguh, mukan.

Barnacle,

Kaloolona keera.

Boarding-netting,

Bordoo kee jalee.

Bay,

Ghop.

only part to which I was capable of devoting my time and attention, now published in the expectation of thereby stimulating some other person fairly to finish what I had just begun, when bad health arrested my career in the outset.

* Those which have no Hindoostanee, occur here in Italics, to show they are used by the natives, as it would be unnecessary to repeat the same word. These and other blanks, every person can fill up, when he finds better expressions than the mere English for them.

Beacon,	Buota.
To Bilge,	tooṭna, torna.
To belay,	Bandhna.
Bank or shoal,	Chur, khurabu.
To break bulk,	Khan kholna.
Binnacle,
— lamps,	Sheeshee.
Bitts,
— stopper,	Dit ka boorsa.
Block,	Koopee.
— shelve,	Koopee ka rada.
— pin,	Koopee kee chabee.
Boat,	Muchwar.
— long,	Bura muchwar.
— hook,
Boatswain, &c.	Surhung, tundel.
Bobstay,
Bolt,
Boom, Bowline,
— cringle,
— bridle,	Bowline ka mat.
Bow,	Agil.
Bowsprit,	Subdura.
— cap,	— ka took.
— shrouds,	— labran.
— gammoning,	Boee bandh.

Brace,

Brail,

Broken backed,

Break-water,

Bucket,

Bull's eye,

Bunt,Buntline,Buoy,

Stringee.

Kumree.

Pooshtu.

Baltee.

Lada.

C.

Cabin,

Cable,

—— sheet,

—— best bower,

—— stream,

—— bits,

Camboose,

Canvas,

Carpenter,

——'s mate,

Cap,

Cape,

Cargo,

Carronade,

Capstern,

—— bar,

Kumra.

Umar.

Sheet umar.Bura umar.Stream umar.Umar ka bit.

Choldan.

Seer ka kupra (lit. sail's cloth)

Mistree, sootar.

—— ka mate.

Took.

Sees, tek.

Bhurtee.

Tumboora top.

Duor.

—— ka bar.

Capstern pall,	Duoṛ ka pall .
Cat block,	Cat koopee.
Cat block fall ,	_____ ka fall .
_____ harpings,	Arvil.
_____ head,	Cat .
_____ stopper,	— ka borsa .
_____ hook ,
Caulker,	Kalputee.
Caulking mallet,	_____ ka moogra .
_____ iron,	_____ ka loha .
Chain board,	Mez or Mej.
_____ plate,	— ka loha or putta .
Charnel,	Mej.
Chissel ,
Cleet ,
Clew,	Koonya.
Clewgarnet,	Stringee.
Clewline,	Stringee.
Coil, (of rope, &c.)	Sankla.
Coir , (ditto)
Compass ,	[and gatley .]
Cooking place or galley,	Choldan, v. camboose
_____ kettle,	Bura handee.
Coop, (for stock)	Moorghee ka kapera .
Colours,	Nishan.
Creeper,	Chhotā grapline , v. grapline .

Cross-jack,	Shag-seer.
Cross-trees,	Koorsee.
Crow,

D.

Davit,
Deadeye,	Mutam.
Deep sea lead;	Buṛa proom, v. hand lead.
— line,	— kee russee.
Deck,	Tootuk.
— Orlop,	Neeche ka tootuk.
— Gun,	Beech ka tootuk.
Dog-stopper,	Agil ka boorsa.
Dolphin-striker,
Downhall,	cotara.
Driver,	Goosee.
— boom,	— boom.
Dock,	Godee.

E.

Earing,	Mutwur.
Ensign,	Nishan, v. colours.
Eye-bolt,
Eye-let-hole,

F.

Fall,
Fidd, Fish-fall,
— hook,

Fish-pendant,	Fish ka mat.
Foot-brails,	Neeche ka stringee.
Fore (mast , &c.)	Trinkut.
Foreward	Agil.
Funnel ,

G.

Gaff,	Goosee purwan,
— top sail,	— gavee.
Galley,	Chcoldan.
Gasket ,
Glass,	Sheeshee, v. log , half-hour glass .
Grapline,	Bura grapline , v. creeper .
Grapnel ,
Gun-room,	Gunner khanu.
Gunwale ,
Guy ,

H.

Half-hour glass,	Ek ghuree kee sheeshee.
Haulyards,	Hunjes.
Hammer,	Martel.
Hammock,	Joolee.
— stauncheon,	— ka 'stauncheon.'
— netting,	— kee jalee.
Hand-lead,	Hath ka or chhoṭa proom.
— line,	Chhoṭa proom kee russee.
— pump,	Chhoṭa bumba.

Handpike,
Hanks,	Kura.
Hatchet,	Kralee.
Hatch-bar,	Falka ka loha.
Hatchway,	Falka.
Hawser,
Hawse-hole,
Heart,	Mutam.
Helm,	Sookkan, putwar.
—'s man,	Sookkanee, a seacunnie!
Hold,	Khanu, khan.
Hook,
Horse,	or Thana.
Hose,	Kebee.
	J.
Jack,
Jeer,
Jib,
	K.
Keel,	Ural.
Kelson,	Falta ural.
Kentledge,
Knee,	Kurva.
Knight-head,	Moot.
	L.
Landyards,	Goola.
Larboard,	Duwa.

Leasling,	Seezador.
Lee-side,	Barugee turuf.
Lift,	Muntel.
Log,	Top.
— line,	— kee russee.
— reel,	— kee churkhee.
— glass,	— kee sheeshee.
Lower,	Neeche.
Lower trussel trees,	Koorsee.
M.
Magazine,	Baroot khanu.
Main (as mast, &c.)	Bura. *
Mallet,	Moogra.
— serving,	Fral ka moogra.
Man-rope,	Boordoo kee russee.
Marlin-spike,	Pasad.
Mast,	Dol.
— top,	Kavee dol.
— top-gallant,	Subur dol.
— royal,	Tubur dol.
Mast-stopper,	Dol ka boorsa.
Middle-stay-sail,	Falta suvo,ee.
Mizen,	Kulmee.

* By placing the native words for mast, sail, stay, &c. &c. after fore or mizen, in this way, many compound words may be left entirely to the reader's own ingenuity.

Mizen vangs, Turnal.

— peak, Kulmee peeka.

N.

Netting, Jalee.

O.

Oakum is called stop,

but mangled to — Estop.

Oar, Hesa.

P.

Pasline,

Peak-brails, Pulung.

Pendant, Lumba ma ee.

Pirate, Dukuet.

Pinnace,

Pitch, Damur.

Point, Reef ka sooe.

Port, Khirkee.

Pump, Bumba.

— stauncheon, — ka stauncheon.

— bolt, — ka keble.

— brake, — ka lath.

— spear, — ka lumba jooj..

— box, — ka chhoṭa jooj.

— leather, — ka chumra.

— tacks, — ka preg.

— hook, — ka hook.

— sounding-rod, — ka seekh.

Pump hose,	Bumba ka kebee.
Puttock shrouds,	Puttock labran.
— plates,	— ka loha.

R.

Rail,

Ratline,	Eesket.
Reef-band,
— cringle,	[robin.]
— point,	Mutwur kee seekee, v.
Ridge-rope,
Rigging,	Labran, v. shrouds.
Ring-bolt,	Khura.
Ring-rope,
Robin,	Mutwur kee seekee.
Rope yarn,
Royal,	Tubur.
Rudder,	Sookkan, v. helm.
— pendants,	— ka mat.

S.

Sail, corrupted to	Seer.
— fore,	Trinkut.
— main,	Bura seer.
— mizen,	Kulmee.
— top,	Gavee.
— top-gallant,	Subur.
— royal,	Tubur.
— sky-scraper,	Bubur.

Sailors plates (for eating off)	Tœopra.
Scupper-hole,	Burnul.
Scuttle,	Chhor khirkee.
Service,	Fral.
Shank painter chain,	Zunjeer bosu.
Sheet,	Duman.
Side-rope,	Boordoo kee russee.
Shrouds,	Labran, v. rigging .
Slabline,	Pulung.
Slings,
Snatch-block,	Gul kuṭa koopee.
Spring, (stay, &c.)	Falta (suvo,ee).
Sprit-sail,	Subdura, v. bowsprit .
Spunyarn,
Standards, &c.	Kurva.
Starboard,	Jimnee.
Stay, (the rope)	Tie.
Stay, (the sail)	Suvo,ee, or suva,ee.
Stay-tackle,	Suva,ee ka eree.
Stopper-bolt,	Boorse ka loha.
Studding-sail,	Dustur.
lower, &c.	Neeche dustur, &c.
	T.
Tack,	Mora.
Tackle,	Eree.
Truck,	topee.

Truck fore,	Trunkut-eree.
— yard,	Purwan ka eree.
— stay,	Suva,ee ka eree.
— block,	Eree ka koopee.
— pendant,	— ka mat.
Taffrail,
Tail block,	Sat wala koopee.
Tar,
Thimble,
Throat-brails,	Gulle kee stringee.
Tie,
Tiller,	Sookkan ka lat̄h or bukra.
— rope,	— kee russee.
— wheel,	— kee churkhee.
Timber-head,	Moot.
Top,	Panjra (perhaps pinjra, as it is something like a cage).
Top-maul,
Top-rope,
Tow-boat,
Tow-line,
Trusses,	Sar.
— fall,	— ka fall.
Try-sail,	Goosee (and I believe) kulmee.
Twine,	Sootlee.

V.

Vessel,

Juhaz.

W.

Waist-cloth,

Boordoo ka purdu.

Wales,

Kumurmund.

Water-cask,

Panee ka pipe (misnamed
ed peep).

— hose,

Kebee.

— scoop,

Scoop (mistermed koop).

Weather-side,

Bapur turuf.

Windlass,

Duor, v. capstern.

Windsail,

Y.

Yard,

Purwan.*

— arm,

——— ka lash.

The following are a few necessary words of command in working a ship, without any regard to their order, as every sailor understands that perfectly well.

Ready about,

Tueyar ja,ega ja,ega.

Helm's a lee,

Gos bordoo.

Main-sail haul,

Phira burā seer.

* By placing the words for main, fore, mizen, main-top, &c. &c. all the yards will be found, which it would have been superfluous to insert here.

Haul forward,	Phirao agil.
Haul aboard the fore-tack,	Tan neeche trinkut mora.
Brace up and haul aft,	Lag* brace, tan duman.
Haul the main top bowline,	Tan agil bura gavee bowline.
Haul aft the fore sheet,	Tan peechhil trinkut duman.
Hoist the jib,	Hoonkar jib .
Back the main top sail,	Booksee† bura gavee.
Fill the main top sail,	Bhur bura gavee.
Square the yards,	Purwan yuham burabur.
Flat in foreward,	Haleloo agil.
Let go the top sail haul-yards,	Chhor do gavee hunjes.
Clew up the main-sail,	Stringee bura seer.
Let go the top-gallant braces,	Chhor do subur brace .
Furl the mizen top sail,	Bandh kulmee gavee.
Reef the fore top sail,	Reef bandh trinkut gavee.

* I am apt to think, this should be lug or luga, from lugana, and meaning that people should fix upon the brace; however, this is mere conjecture.

† This word (booksee) may be from our own word back.

Let go the anchor,	Chhord̄o lungur.
Heave, or hoist,	Anesh.
Hoist away,	Hoonkar.
Moor under fours,	Char lungur kuro.
Lower,	Aniyo.
Avast,	Hoho.
Belay,	Bandh.
Heave the lead,	Proom dal.
— log,	Top dal.
Our ship does not answer the helm,	Humara juhaz s̄okkan ko nuheen manta.

The following Officers Names could not with propriety come into the body of the Vocabulary.

Ship's owner,	Juhaz ka malik.
Captain, and if a Native,	Na-khoda.
Pilot,	UrkaTEE.*
Mate,	Malum.
Boutswain,
Purser,
Steward,

* It is supposed they got this name from the only pilots, formerly, in this part of the world, being in the service of the Nuwwab of Urkat (Arcot) which, I think, seems very probable.

The foregoing sheets of this useful Work, were kept in type for several months, in the fruitless hope of receiving some little assistance from the seafaring gentlemen in India, among whom the Editor distributed a number of copies for correction and enlargement. Want of leisure, or a dread of appearing in print, has probably been the cause of failure on this occasion, among those who were invited to aid the undertaking. Now that it is before the Public, we may be more fortunate, by the time a second edition is called for, and every intermediate communication will be printed, with or without acknowledgment, as the parties concerned may desire. The orders which appeared most essential in a work of this kind, were such as might tend, when promptly obeyed, to save the lives of people who fall overboard, or to prevent the loss of a vessel and crew, perhaps, in particular emergencies. I could not with propriety venture to give these in the grammatical language of Hindoostan, lest men long accustomed to a corrupt dialect might not instantly comprehend what may be communicated in that way, by people still more ignorant of the language than those they address, amidst dangers which admit of no delay. Were a Lushkuree (Lascar) in a dark night to say, Muen muoje ko nuzdeek phootte sconta hoon, I hear the breakers not far off, a vessel might be upon the rocks, merely because the officer did not understand the poor fellow's lingo, time enough to put about and preserve the lives and ship under his charge from instant destruction. Dead men tell no tales ; if they could, we would probably learn, that many fatal accidents, by sea and land, originated in ignorance of the popular speech of India, which is every day becoming more important to those at all connected with the British interests in that part of the Empire. In this point of view, I cannot help recommending the completion of a Naval Vocabulary to the serious attention of good Orientalists, either on the passage from or to the East Indies, as they only can then accomplish so desireable a Work.

BEFORE we close this Volume, it is my wish fairly to try the learner's real progress in the syntax and etymology of the Hindooostanee ; for, without some share of etymological acumen, and no small adroitness in the application of general principles in grammar to any one language, he never can become a great proficient in Oriental tongues. That no excuse for ignorance may now remain, it seems just, before we proceed to the intended ordeal, that I should indulge the reader with the following digression.

The derivation and composition of words in this language cannot well be very difficult to those who have studied the significant particles and words, from page 62 to 103, in the beginning of the present Work; I shall nevertheless resume the subject here, that as little as possible of this momentous portion of the Hindoo-stanee may be omitted by me or neglected by the diligent student. Much will depend on the interchangeable letters being well recollected, with a facility of accounting for the suppression or addition of certain letters, either to prevent a disagreeable hiatus or monotonous repetition, of which instances in abundance have been produced, when treating of the Orthoepigraphical Hindee-Roman Alphabet.

Ee is the most common final significant particle, and applicable to so great a variety of meanings, often contradictory in themselves, that practice alone can enable the scholar to handle it with much dexterity in the ninety-nine instances of a hundred, where it occurs etymologically in this tongue. Be-eeman, faithless, udhurmee, dishonest; be-eemanee, faithlessness, udhurm, dishonesty,—is one proof of a thousand, being in fact an inconsistency which must pervade every language derived from several such opposite sources as the Hindooostanee, viz. the Sanskrit, Arabic, and Persian.

Tee, nee, gee, o_{ee}, a_{ee}, on some occasions, usurp the place of ee: Kum, deficient, kum-tee, deficiency, chand-nee, moon-light, lachar-gee, helpless-ness, nek-o_{ee}, good-ness, udhik-a_{ee}, over-plus, gurm-a_{ee}, heat, toorsh-a_{ee}, sour-ness, acid fruits, &c.

Gee is the ordinary adjunct of Persian participles in du, or adjectives in u, nu: Zindugee, life, living, murdanu-gee, manli-ness, and in some words it is applied adjectively, whence khan-gee, domestic, pesh-gee, money advanced. Lest the reader might still miscall this particle as jee, let him now learn that deewan-gee, from deewanu, mad, signifies mad-ness, while deewanjee, denotes a respectful address to a factor, steward, &c. equivalent to our Master Factor! &c.

Anu, applies to adjectives, places, and things: murd-anu, manly, or the men's apartments, dust-anu, gloves, or hand-covering, ungooosht-anu, a finger-ring, tulub-anu, dunage, muh-eenu, a month, moon-course. Consult page 95.

U seems to bring khan-u, a house, domus, from khan, dominus, a lord,—pesh-u, a trade, from pesh, before,—and hurkar-u, a messenger, &c. from hurkar, every business; but, on the whole, little can be added on this head to pages 64, 65, &c.

The imperative plural of many causal verbs is used as an abstract noun; thus, buna,o, management, duba,o, influence, churha,o, ascent, mila,o, concord, bika,o, sale, muna,o, persuasion, from bunna, to do, be made, &c. bunana, to make, manage, dubna, to be squeezed, dubana, to squeeze, press down, churhna, to climb, churhana, to raise, mount, milna, to meet, milana, to conciliate, join, unite, manna, to mind, munana, to advise, &c.

Buchu, may now and then be met with for chu, &c. of page 89, chuh-buchu, a trough, &c. from chah, a well, Mooghul-buchu, or Moogh-buchu, a young Mooghul.

The old infinitives which terminated in un or wun, are still used as verbal nouns: Julun, heat or burning, dhowun, washing, kulturun, pa-ring, munjun, scouring, or tooth-powder; so are the ancient present tenses, lugut, expence, bur- hut, increase, &c.

Wa, a, wo, ya, &c. are diminutives, &c. in murd-wa, a mannikin, Peera, Peerwa or Pirwoa, for Peerun of page 82, and yaroo, from yar, friend, khet-iya, a little field, bhoomiya, a land- lord, mukhun-iya, a butter man.

Loo, ora, eroo, iyara, oṛa, are mere deviations of wal, war, in page 96: Punkh-eroo, a feather'd animal or fowl, jhugra-loo, a wrangler, dunt-aloo, a biter, oo-loo, an owl, from its cry, oo oo, i. e. the oo oo wala, or howlet, ghus-iyara, a grass-cutter, bhutiyyara, a cook, hunsora, a laugher, lurkora, lurkoṛee, a parent, &c.

In khul-ṛee, the foreskin, pug-ṛee, a turban, dum-ṛee, half a farthing, guṭh-ṛee, mot-ṛee, a bundle, ḫee marks them as diminutives of khal, skin, pug, a large turban, dam, a piece of money, ganṭh, and mot, a bale.

Uwul, implies frequency or excess of any action: Lur-uwul, mutual blows, pil-uwul, copious and social potation, khel-uwul, romping, &c.

A, applies to weights, numbers, &c. so,— udh sera, ek sera, doo sera, by which they weigh things of half a ser, equivalent to our pound, as the ser is nearly two of our pounds, sometimes more. Ekka, the ace, doo a, the deuce, &c. Hath, the hand, sur, the head, moonh, the face, mouth, ankh, the eye, &c. thus express hand-ed, hutha, headed, sura, faced, moonha, unkha, eyed, applicable to a great many words in this way. See page 63, &c.

Wala, besides its meaning formerly noticed, expresses both the present and future participle: Jane wala, a man going, jane walee, a woman going, bhagne wala, fugiens, fugiturus, bhagne walee, fugitura. It also means able, in words like khane walee rotee, eatable bread, likhne walee bat, a speech proper, or fit to be written. Kuonsee ghoree laoon, which of the mares shall I bring? kalee walee la,o, bring the black one.

Ala, and war, are local particles in sew-ala, the temple of Jupiter, huwar, a burial place. The last, as war or bar, denotes a day, as in page 207.

Ar and r, are evident in chum-ar, a currier, sona-r, a goldsmith, loha-r, an iron smith, lon-ar, a salt pit, deed-ar, sight, vision, gooft-ar, speech, from cham, hide, sona, gold, loha, iron, lon, salt, &c.

Uet, ueta, ueṭa: ḍukuet, a robber, bhuluet, a spearman, kurkuet, a bard, chur̄hueta, a rider, bughueṭa, a young tiger,—respectively from ḍaka, robbery, bhala, a spear, kurka, a war song, churhna, to mount or ride, bagh, a tiger.

Ukuṛ, wukuṛ, a particle of agency in the following examples: kood-ukuṛ, a leaper, peewu-kuṛ, a drunkard.

Ban, mihr-ban, friendly, &c. from mihr, friendship, bad-ban, a wind-catcher, or sail, deed-ban, the sight of a gun.

Dost, friend, and dooshmun, foe, are thus used; wuṭun dost, a patriot, zun dost, fond of women, zun dooshmun, averse to women,—resembling our words philo and anti, in composition.

Yab, and ran, obtaining, found; whence kum-yab, scarce, kam-yab, or -ran, obtaining one's wishes, fortunate.

Goozar, rendering, shookr-goozar, grateful, mal-goozar, paying taxes.

Goostur, distributing, ȳdl-goostur, administering justice.

Shikun, breaking, ȳhd-shikun, breaking a promise.

Bar, shedding, &c. ushk-bar, shedding tears, ghur-bar, household, dur-bar, levee, court, guran-bar, heavy laden.

Put, suena-put, commander of an army.

Dookhtu, pierced, stitched, jigur-dookhtu, heart-pierced, chushm-dookhtu, hood-winked.

Rus, rusan, jooz-rus, penetrating, parsimonious, fuez-rusan, generous.

Pizeer, affecting, able, &c. dil-pizeer, touching the heart, turbiyut-pizeer, tractable, murummum-pizeer, repair-able.

Mal, trodden, beat down, &c. pa,e-mal, ruined, roo-mal, dust-mal, a handkerchief, towel, &c.

Bundee, jumuū-bundee, a rent-roll, zuban-bundee, an affidavit, danu-bundee, an appraisement of grain.

The adjunctive and prepositive form of composition may even give an opposite meaning to the compounds, as sal-khoord, stricken in years, khoord-sal, of tender years.

Roo, rookh, face, &c. puree-roo, fairy-faced, gool-rookh, rose-cheeked.

Ha, at, gan, an, jat, present themselves as Persian plural signs in the Hindooostanee: bar-ha, times, murdan, men, buch-gan, children, bagh-at, gardens, zilu-jat, provinces.

Kuha kuhee, altercation, mara maree, mutual blows, is a form occasionally thus used.

Many verbs are formed by adding na or ana to adjectives or nouns, whence moṭa, fat, moṭana, to fatten, kulee, a bud, kuliyan, to bud, unglee, the finger, ungliyana, to finger, hura, green, huriyana, to grow green, kuchcha, raw, timid, kuchchiyana, to flinch, &c.

Besides the verbs enumerated in page 195, there are several others used in the same way: marna, to beat, strike, crack, bore, try, &c. with other verbs, it means to fill, moot-marna, to be-piss, b̄hur-marna, to bedaub.

Muchna, muchana, coṭhna, coṭhana, to rise, raise, excite, &c.; ghool-muchana, to kick up a dust, make a noise.

Bandhna, to form, invent.

Dourana, to exert, &c. to which a great many others may be added, with meanings obvious enough from their own signification, in the Vocabulary.

Some causals are formed, by la or al instead of a: khana, to eat, khilana, to feed, peena, to drink, pilana, to cause drink, buet̄hna, to sit, buet̄halna, to set, dena, to give, dilana, to cause give.

Bikna, to be sold, has bechna, to sell, chhoot̄na, to get loose, chhoṛna, to let loose, and phut̄na, to crack, has phaṛna, to burst, tear, &c.; but such irregulars are comparatively very few, and all the others are readily discriminated and acquired from practice.

A reduplication of the neuter or active preterite, with the causal, denotes any thing ready done, as buna bunaya, ready made, seekha sikhaya, ready taught, pukka pukkaya, ready cooked.

A few infinitives spring, as Hindoostanee verbs, regularly from the Arabic or Persian; they are chiefly the following, and subject to the same formation as other verbs in the causal.

Azmana, *to try.

Buhuṣna, to argue.

Budulna, to change.

Khuruchna, to expend.

Kufunana, to shroud.

Luruzna, to shake.

* Several of these may be arranged under the classes they appertain to, being so far assimilated with the rest, as to possess their various neuter, active, and causal forms. Besides these in the text, there are some others, in which the coincidence with the Persian verbs is very great; kurna, kurdun, to do, churna, chureedun, to graze, tupna, tupeedun, to heat, or grow hot, mūlna, maleedun, to rub, murna, moordun, to die, dena, dadun, to give,—all of which probably spring from the same origin with the Suñskrit, as the list might be easily increased, had we leisure to select more.

Bukhshna, to grant.	Nuwazna, to present, to offer.
Daghna, to mark.
Dumna, to spring.	Nuzuranna, to give.
Dufunana, to bury.	Quboolna, to agree.
Furmana, to order.	Qurzna, to borrow.
Furrana, to snort.	Runjana, to vex.
Goozurna, to pass.	Rungna, to colour.
Gurdanna, to inflect.	Tuhseelna, to collect.
Khumna, to bend.	Turashna, to pare.
Khureedna, to purchase.	Ungezna, to bear.
Khurkhurana, to snore.	Wurghulanna, to whee-
Khurashna, to scrape.	dle.
Khuradna, to polish.	zidna, to wrangle.

An extensive class of attributes results from the junction of adjectives (participles included) and nouns, or adjectives with adjectives; as another also does from two nouns repeated or conjoined, thus :

Kooshadu-dil, open-hearted.

Shikustu-khatir, } broken-hearted, &c.
Mun-muleen,

Zur-must, } purse-proud, &c.
Dhun-mudhee,

Tihee-dust, } empty-handed, &c.
Chhoochha-hath,

Tun-doorost, healthy, well.

Kul-jeebhā, } foul-mouthed.
Siyah-kam,

Pust-boolund,

Nusheb-furaz, } rough, rugged, uneven, &c.
Ooncha-neecha,

Bhula-chunga, } sound, safe and sound.
suheeh-salim,

Docabla-putla, slender.

Moṭa-tazu, plump.

Door-duraz, distant.

Chuora-chukla, spacious.

Khurab-khustu, ruined.

colta-poolta, } topsy-turvy.
Zer-zubur,

Gao-doom, taper, sloping, a cow tail.

Moonh-zor, } headstrong, hard-mouthed, un-
Seenu-zor, } ruly, obstinate, &c.

Ahoo-chushm, } fawn-eyed, timorous, bashful,
Miry-nuen, } &c.

Goolab-chushm, meek-eyed, &c.

Mahee-paosht, convex, fish-backed.

Sug-sifut, currish.

Bun-manoos, savage.

Murd-mizaj, manly.

Poombu-duhn, mealy-mouthed.

Nouns of reciprocation, &c. are formed in this manner :

Kuha-kuhee, altercation.

Chooma-chaṭee, dalliance.

Mara-maree, scuffle.

Dekha-dekhee, emulation.

Duṛa duṛee, hurry, flurry.

Mookka mookkee, } fisty cuffs.
Ghoosum ghoosa,

Bat cheet, }
Goft o goo, } chit chat,
Qeel o qal, } conversation,
Gup shup, } tittle tattle.

Galee giluoj, a brawl.

Ghol ghupara, } uproar, hubbub, noise,
Shor shur, } hurly-burly.
Dhoom dham,

Peech-panee, wish-wash.

Saz baz, }
Cheez-bust, }
Kul kanṭa, } furniture, baggage, gear.
Deru ḍunda, }
ṭunt ḡhunṭ, }
Ugur bugur, }
Bula'e booghma, } stuff, trash, trumpery.

Ghur bar, }
 Khan o man, } family, household.

Mukur-chukur, deceit.

Khord-boord, embezzlement.

Jhooth mooth, a lie, fiction.

Pech pach, evasion.

Heelu-huwalu, } prevarication.
 tal muṭol,

and generally by a kind of alliteration that seems quite congenial with a Hindoo stanee ear, there being few motions or accidents connected with sound, hurry, &c. which are not accurately discriminated by a large class of imitative verbs for this purpose that may properly be styled reiterative; whence jhun jhun, jingle; thun thun, clink; bhin bhin, buzzing; sun sun, simmering; phoos phoos, whispering; khul khul, undulation; kilbil, a peristaltic motion; dhuk dhuk, palpitation: Besides these, we often meet with the colloquial repetitions which prove at first so disgusting to strangers, viz. rotee-otee, chhooree-ooree, chukee-uokee, basun-wasun, rusee-wusee, whose reiterated syllables are not always, in my opinion, wholly useless; on the contrary, they may occasionally possess a very comprehensive meaning; such as bread, or any thing of the kind to eat; a knife, or any cutting instrument, wanted in a hurry to cut with; a chair, stool, bench, seat; a plate, dish, vessel, basin, &c. and rusee-wusee, probably means a rope, cord, string, or in short any thing to tie with, when in great haste. To the foregoing may be added, lurke-purke, lurke-bale, kuch-buch, the young ones, brats, &c. with many more, which cannot be enumerated in this work.

Personal and other nouns, over and above those already inserted, are likewise expressed by the present and perfect participles; as the following all spring from infinitives, bukna, to speak, dhurna, to place, &c.

Bukta, eloquent, &c.	Bolta, the soul.
Dhurta, a debtor.	Lugta, expence.
Kurta, doer.	Data, a giver, &c.
Rumta, a pilgrim.	Mungta, a beggar.
Khata, a granary.	Chuheeta, darling.
Chhata, an umbrella.	Khoolta, open, &c.
Purta, average.	Janta, knowledge.
Manta, sway, influence.	Sookha, drought.
Multa, worn coin.	Pooja, worship.
Phirta, rejected, &c.	Ghera, a circle.

Many are also the same as the infinitive: rona, weeping, tearful, sona, sleepy, mootna, a pisser, nuchna, a dancer, sikh, a scholar, jan, a conjuror; especially in composition, burbol, a boaster, dil-chul, brave, unkhmoond, inexperienced; and to this form by adding ee, we have bolee, speech, muree, mortality, pheree, a circuit, khojee, a searcher, joree, a pair.

For words numerically compounded, consult pages 203, &c. observing that several names of places, &c. are thus formed, viz. chihil-sitoon,* bara duree, puch-muhla, tirpuoliya, tirsoolee, chihil-pae, char-pae; which are so obvious, that the least attention will make the learner master of this mode of composition.

The following proper names (with many more that cannot be enumerated here) are much used among the Moosulmans :

Buhadoor Ulee, the Warrior of Ulee.

Khooda bukhsh, the Gift of God.

Ubdollah, the Slave of God.

Gholam Moohummud, the Slave of Moohummud.

Kulb Husun, the Dog of Husun.

* Forty pillars, a palace at Ghazepoor, so called, which our countrymen, who attend little to true pronunciation, very easily convert to Chelsea-tomb!

Uzeez collah, Dear to God,
 Mooueycon ood deen, Defender of the Faith.
 Usud Ulee, the Lion of Ulee.
 Sher Moohummud, the Tiger of Moohummud.

And as few names in this language are not derivatives compounded, the Hindoos also have their Krishcon-dueal, Gunesh-das, Ram-singh, &c. though it must be admitted, that the natives of every description are apt to give their children, on particular occasions, the most humiliating appellations, from a superstitious notion, that this will appease, or propitiate an offended diety: Whence—Koorkoot, sweepings, Phenkoo, outcast; Koela, charcoal, Kookur, dog, Kale, blackey, Chhekuoree, six cowries, Chirkit, dregs. Some names have their origin in the time or place of the person's birth: thus Mungulee, Boodhoo, Etwaree, Ramzanee, Jungulee, Lushkuree, Muedanee; while others are in fact a kind of titular compellation assumed by or conferred on individuals or particular classes of men; such are—

Mirza,	Mooghuls, &c.	sir, lord, master.	Meer, sueyuds.
Beg,			Shekh, shekhs.
Agha,			Khan, puthans.
Khaja,

Muha raj,	prince,	Sah,	bankers,
Koonwur,	highness,	Seth,	mendi-
Rana,	&c.	Shali,	cants,
Moolla,		Gosa een,	monks,
Muoluwee,	doctors,	Gooroo,	teachers,
Pundit,	&c.	Peer,	and holy
Rae,	rajpoots,	Bhugut,	men.
Singh,	and sikhs.	soofee,
sahib,		Pande,	titles of
thakoor,		Tiwaree,	various
Baboo,	lord, sir,	Misur,	classes
Lala,	master,	Dhoobe, &c.	of Brahmuns.
Jee,	worship,
Ruora,	&c.
Miyan,

Khoodawund, huzrut, ap, junabi ale, qiblui alum, moonee, and some others are used for worship, highness, saint, &c. but they are best acquired by practice; yet we must not omit here those conciliatory appellations that are so commonly used in Hindoostan for people in humble stations, since it clearly shows to what lengths the natives carry their flattery and politeness to each other.

Mihtur, a prince,	a sweeper, (called also hulalkhor) weaver, vintner, &c.
Khuleefu, a caliph,	a tailor, cook, shoemaker, tradesman, &c.
costa, a master,	a barber.
Chuodhuree, } chief,	various people, such as buniyas, dealers in grain, koerees, gardeners and bearers.
Muhto, } head, Muhra,
Bihishtee,* divine,	a waterman.

The names of places may in general be traced by attentively considering what I have already said in page 102 on this subject; and the learner will recollect, that besides their founders, the Indians also use the names of the different divinities, prophets, saints, &c. compounded with abad, poor, nugur, &c. formerly enumerated, (and sometimes with ganw, whence Chut-ganw, Bura-ganw, Kuhlganw, more familiarly Chittigong, Buragong, and Colgong). When any occur, without one or other of these particles, they may in general be considered as primitives, or compounds involved in impenetrable obscurity, to those who are not well versed in the Sunskrit language.

* Too often degraded, by bad pronouncers among us, to beasty!

A sort of mechanical table of the Arabic forms, most common in the Hindoostanee, may be now submitted to the learner, who will hereafter reap advantages from it, proportioned to the pains he may bestow on the whole of the examples below, as they all apply to the Persian and Arabic languages, both of which he may yet find it his duty and interest to acquire, as well as the Hindoostanee.

There are certain letters termed servile, viz. u h y ee n w oo m t l s, because they alone assist in all the changes and inflexions to which words are subject in Arabic; the rest, including also the serviles, are all found as radicals, or such letters as must always remain in the vocabulary under discussion, in whatever state it may be found.

To distinguish the serviles in each example, they and their short vowels will appear in Italic, but the intermediate diacritical points, or short vowels of the roots, u i o, though constantly changing their position, may be generally retained as Roman, since one or other of them must exist in every word, which is not the case with respect to the serviles, whose relative position and peculiar effect, however, will best appear from inspection.

Fuul, act, and its branches, fail, agent, mufol, object, &c. are the standard forms in Arabic grammars, but from the equivocal letter u, were so troublesome to the Hindoostanees, that they have for a long time preferred zurb, &c. below, as a much easier model than fuul. I have therefore followed their example in this respect, though, in syllabbling words, they generally call the first, fa kulimu, the second, uen kulimu, and the third, lam kulimu, from the component letters of fuul, viz. fa f, uen u, and lam l, the u being merely a short letter, not counted as a radical, but so essential to the pronunciation of each root, that I have marked those vowels only in Italics, whose appearance depends entirely on the serviles in each, as in zurbut, the t being a mere servile letter, whereas the radicals z r b, will be traced in the remotest branches, moozaribut, &c. In some of the various inflexions, the learner will discover a reduplication of the radical letter, and should recollect this circumstance, along with the different positions of the shorts u i o, the long a ee oo, and the serviles t m, &c. these being, in fact, the grand pivots whereon the whole scheme of the Arabic conjugation, declension, &c. hinges, the general mechanism of which will appear perfectly simple and evident in the annexed Hindee-Arabic Prospectus. This tabular view will answer almost every useful purpose of the practical Hindooostanee, Persian, and Turkish scholar, while it will, at the same time, greatly promote the study and knowledge of Arabic, so essential for the profound Orientalist, that it ought, sooner or later, to be acquired by every person who wishes to cut a capital figure in the Moosulman department of Eastern learning.

Hindee-Arabic Mirror, or Prospectus.

zurb	These are termed simple triliteral roots, or infinitives, which serve as a model for the inflexions of all such Arabic words, whose active participles become like zarib , and the passives muzroob ; the local nouns muzruba ; instrumentals mizruba ; increments uzruba ; hyperbolicals zurrab ; the concretes often are the same as some of the roots or radi-
zirb zoorb zurub zirub zoorub zurib zurab zirab zoorab

zurbut zirbut zoorbut zurubut zuribut zurabut zirabut zoorabut zurba zirba zoorba zurban zirban zoorban zuruban zuroob zooroob zoroobut zureeb zureebut zurboobut zurabiyut muzrub muzrib muzrubit
 muzroobut

calls here, viz. zurub, zcorab, &c. or resemble the incrementals uzrub; but the most common in the Hindooostanee are zureeb and zoorob. From any one of these forms in the margin, similar examples might be produced, and may occur in every page of the Turkish, Hindooostanee, and Persian tongues, but two or three only must suffice as a specimen of the whole: Qutl, slaughter, qatil, a slayer or slaughterer; muq- tool, slain; muqtul, place of execu- tion; miqtul, instrument of death;
uqtul, not in use; quttal, murder- ous; quteel, &c. not in use. For the two forms of this word not used,
 we may produce uksur, general,
 from kuşrut, frequency, of the form zurbut, and uzlum, tyrannical, from zolm, oppression, like zoorb; ghu- reeb, humble; ghoorbut, (zoorbut) hu- mility; and as few radicals in Arabic are ramified through every form in that language, the scholar therefore must not wonder at roots occasionally being defective in some one or other of their branches, or at his being now and then puzzled with certain changes, until, as an accomplished Orientalist, he can acquire the information respecting the tuyleelat from Arabic grammars, that will ultimately obviate every difficulty.

We have now reached the augmented trilateral infinitives, whose active and passive participles occur thus:

izrab	moozrib	moozrub	The qua-
tuzreeb	moozurrib	moozurrub	driliterals,
moozarubut	moozarib	moozarub	as they are
iztirab	moozturib	moozturub	called, from
inzirab	moonzurib	moonzurub	zurbubut to
tuzurroob	mootuzurrib	mootuzurrub	tuzuorroob ,
tuzarcoob	mootuzarib	mootuzarub	make their
izribab	moozribb		appearance
istizrab	moostuzrib	moostuzrub	so rarely in
izreebab	moozrabb		either the
zurbubut	moozurbib	moozurbub	Persian or
tuzurbaoob	mootuzurbib	mootuzurbub	Hindoosta-
izrinbab	moozrunbib		nee, that
izribbab			we might have easily dispensed
zurnubut			with their insertion, had I not
zuorubut			wished to exhibit a general view zurwubut of these curious forms, many of zuerubut which will aid the scholar in the zurueubut derivation and composition of inzurbat numerable vocables in the four tuzurbob grand languages of the Moosul-tuzurnob mans, by a slight attention to the tumuzroob mechanism of zurb alone, through tuzurboot every stage of its various transformtuzuoroob. ations in the present sketch.

Plurals in Arabic are divided into regulars, duals, paucals, and multitudinous, thus: The duals are all known at once by the addition of uen to any form, whence zidduen, opposites, waliduen, parents, and turufuen, both parties.

moozrib	moozribat	These are termed per-
moozurrub	moozurrubat	fect plurals; at is the
tuzurrob	tuzurrcobat	most common of them
moozrib	 { moozrib-een moozrib-oon 	In Hindooostanee.*

* When the noun ends in ut, this at once becomes at, as halut, a condition, halat, afut, calamity, afat, &c. Een is more used than oon, though neither are very frequently met with in the Hindooostanee.

żarub		turuf, side, utraf, shureef, well-born, ushraf,
żureeb	{ uzrab	gentry, is the only form
żorib		of these very familiar żurab	uzribut	in the Hindooostanee,*
żirub	uzroob
żorab	żirbut	though not, as in Arabic, restricted to nouns of paucity ; ghoolam, a slave, has ghilmut in the plural, like żirbut, also ghilman, but they seldom occur.
żurb	żoroob	thus khooṭoot, letters, hooq, rights.
zureeb	żoruba	shoorufa, gentry, hookuma, physicians, &c.
żaribu	zuwarib
żirabu	żuraib	risalu, troop, rusa'il, troops.
żreeb	uzareeb	uqaleem, climates.
żirb	żirab
żurb	uzriba	nubee, a prophet, umbiya.
muzrub	muzarib	munşub, a post, munaşib.

* Plurals of the form uzrab, may belong to radicals like żorib, żurub, and some others, as well as żureeb ; an observation that may be extended to the rest, kumal, kumalat, perfections ; and some have two plurals depending upon one or different singulars, though their signification be the same.

muzroob	muzareeb	mushhoor, notable , mushaheer.
zurb	zurabee	uhl, a person , uhalee.
zurba	zuraba	futwa, a decree , futawa.
zoorban	zurabeen	soltan, a king , sulaṭeen.
uzrub	uzarib	ukbur, great , ukabir.
tuzreeb	tuzareeb	tuşweer, a picture , tuşaweer.
uzrubee	uzaribut
zirbub	zurabib	dirhum, a drachm , durahim.
zirbut	zoorub
zoorb	zoorb
zirab	zooroob	kitab, a book , kootoob, books .
zarib	zurubut
zarib	zoorrab	jahil, ignorant , joh-hal.
zirab	zirban	ghizal, a fawn , ghizlan.
muzreeb	zurba
uzreeb	zooraba
tuzribu	tuzarib	tujribu, experiment , tujarib.
zirbab	zurabeeb	qırṭas, parchment , quraṭees.
zurbeeب	zurabibut

Some of the forms, especially those left blank, are of no great use in the Hindooostanee. Words having medial a or uo in the singular, are often thus formed in the plural, like uzrab, hal, state, uhwal; bab, chapter, ubwab; mal, wealth, umwal; fuoj, army, ufwaj; muoj, wave, umwaj; in which the radical letter corresponding with r of uzrab, is converted, by a process peculiar to the Arabic, to w, as in the foregoing examples, and in yuom, a day, ueyam, days; which may serve, in the meantime, as a model of all the rest.

Reduplicated final consonants were formerly omitted by me as inconvenient and uncouth; yet, as their mere appearance can do no harm, but rather some good, in the Arabic department of the Hindoostanee, I have endeavoured to preserve them in the Roman character also; whence huqq, right, khutt, epistle, hudd, boundary, hiss, sense, rudd, rejected, diqq, vexed, especially as these now prepare us to meet with khootoot, epistles, hooqooq, rights, hoodood, boundaries, muhdood, bounded, mohuqqiq, having a right, muhssoos, sensible, murdood, condemned, mudqooq, hectic, agreeably to the standard for each respectively, viz. zurb, zirb, zo-roob, muzroob, mozurrib, to which the reader may refer, contrasting the three radicals of zurb with those of huqq, hudd; of zirb with hiss, diqq, and so on with all the rest, as they may yet catch his eye in the Hindoostanee, Persian, Turkish, and Arabic languages; to the whole of which my present ne plus ultra scheme of Hindee-Roman Alphabet, will apply with the greatest ease and perspicuity; nay, with two or three slight additions, it may be extended as a universal character to every tongue under the sun. By way of exercise, let us suppose the existence of a word, such as huld, varied through all the radical forms, as hild, hōld, hulud, &c. as far as tuhuolōd, corresponding with tuzuorōb, we have nothing more to do than to frame from these in rotation thus: halid, muhlood, muhlud, mihlud, uhlud, hullad, huleed, mōhlid, mōhlud, mōhullid, mōhulud, mōhalid, mōhalud, mōhtulid, mōhtulud, mōnhlid, mōnhulud, mōtuhullid, mōtuhullud, mōtuhalid, mōtuhalud, mōhlidd, &c. &c.

It may be said, that many of these forms, in any given word, are not in use; be it so, but they may all occur in half a dozen of examples, and it signifies nothing to the expert scholar whether ışaf, justice, mōnsif, just, tuşneef, composition, mōşunnif, an author, be the examples under inspection, or their prototypes, iżrab, ıhlad, mōzrib, mōhlid, tuzreeb, tuhleed, mōzurrib, mōhullid, or any other conformous vocables. Some instances like ilm, knowledge, ålīm, knowing, muşloom, known, &c. uql, rea- son, aqil, wise, muuqool, reasonable, &c. may, at first sight, seem more intricate than they will prove in reality, as the knack of forming them also is very readily acquired by the attentive student.

In page 288, the diligent reader will recollect what was observed on the transposition of poetry to prose; for his sake, therefore, we shall exhibit the exercise in that easy prosaic dress, which I have recommended, taking the natural order of construction for our guide, without paying great attention to that idiomatical collocation of the whole, to which due deference would otherwise have been paid on the present occasion.

1.

Jub tuk juwanee ke ueyam (huen tub tuk) buhar
hue,

Jo peeree a,ee (hue) to khizan phir ashkar hue.

2.

Ugur (too) hoshyar hue goshi jan se pund soon!
Ghuslut khoob nuheen hue, yih wuqt (too)
ghuneemut jan!

3.

Ikhtiyar ubhee hue, jub mooe soofued ujul ka puegham

Lawega, tub koochh (toom se) nu hosukega.

4.

Yar gur (tøojhe) tumeez hue, kur (too) furq
soofued o siyuh men
Gurdishi luel o nuhar eksan̄ nu hue.

5.

Too uch-chhe umul kur, ijm̄ kee tuhseel kurke,
Isee se admee ka wuqar alum men̄ hue.

6.

(Too) puela kur kumal ugur chahe ho uzeez (hone ko)

Uor be kumal chushmi khula iq̄ men̄ khwar hue.

7.

Na murd jo keene kee zooban duraz kurte huen̄
conhon̄ kee tegh o qulim̄ ka shiur tcohmut hue.

8.

Hur ek con men̄ ghathee hue uor nabukar hue
Nek namee ko husud ke dum se qutl kurte huen̄.

9.

Ub kuon hue, Nuosheerwan o Hatim o Roostum se?

(Ta hum) conhon̄ ka nami neko suda yadgar hue!

10.

(Too) ikhtiyar kur udl o sukhawut uor shuja ut.
Ek ek kee bina juhan men̄ paedar hue.

11.

Tera dil bequrar hue hoosni arizee pur
Muhwe jumal ho oska, jisko zuwal nuheen̄,

12.

Mue ghoroor peekur budmust nu hoojiyo
 Uor koochh coska khoomar nu hue jooz duri sur.

13.

(Ue) juwan coska dil, aeene kee numut be ghoo-bar hue
 Jisko koochh kudoorut kisee se nuheen hue.

As the learner may readily find the meaning of every word above in page 323, he shall be left to his own industry to collect them at leisure, if now necessary, to enable him, without consulting mine, to give a good idiomatical English version of this admired poem, previous to the perusal of a still more celebrated moral ode, by Qoodrut, which I shall translate as literally as possible, and at the same time analyse agreeably to the rules of construction, in order to instruct the reader effectually how to do so himself with any piece of writing in this dialect, that he may hereafter wish to attend to, as a student, translator, or Oriental linguist. As such, however, should he aim at a very distinguished place, he will find it advisable to dip also occasionally in the sources themselves, viz. the Arabic, Persian, and Hindoo-wee tongues.

Is ḫuruḥ se kul huwus turgheeb detee thee mojhe
 Kya-hee mookl e Room, kya-hee surzumeen e Roos hue.

In this manner, ambition was yesterday giving me encouragement, how very charming the country of Greece! and how truly grand the empire of Russia!

Is, the proximate demonstrative pronoun, yih, he, this, &c. in its singular oblique, and governed by the postposition se, with, of, and here meaning in; ḫuruḥ, manner, way, modus; a feminine noun from the Arabic, and like the Latin word, or the Hinduwee kur, ḫhub, ḫuol, very useful in the composition of many pronominals or adverbials, kyoon-kur, kisṭuruḥ, how, already explained in page 111. Is ḫuruḥ se, therefore means, in this manner, thus, so; ḫuruḥ, though ending in uh, is little subject to inflection in the singular, and belonging as it does to some nouns noticed in the declension, we may now venture to assert, that those of this class terminating in h, called ha'e hoottee, seldom or never admit of such a change in writing, as altogether to warrant the pronoun-

Gur mco yussur ho to kis үshrut se keejiye zin-dugee

osturuf awaz i үtbl eedhur suda e koos hue.

If they could be acquired, then with what delight one might enjoy life; on that side the melody of the lyre, on this the cheering sound of the warlike drum :

ciation that is observed in speaking them; for instance, is tureh se, seems too full, and is turih se, even is not just the thing required. Kul, (or, according to the Hindoos, kulh) yesterday, is here an adverb, though with our own word likewise a noun, but, unlike it, signifies to-morrow also. Huwus, ambition, desire, is an Arabic word of the feminine gender, as is turgheeb, instigation, encouragement to evil; it here forms with dena, (and hona, as the auxiliary sign, was) a compound verb, to instigate, in the imperfect of the indicative and feminine gender, detee thee, was giving, from the nominative huwus, being, as above observed, feminine. Turgheeb, is an Arabic infinitive or verbal noun, and feminine by page 159, q. v. It comes from rughbut, desire, which forms raghib, de-

Sconte-hee ibrut yih bolee yek tumasha muen
toojhe

Chul dekha con too jo qued e az ka muhboos hue.

Hearing which, wisdom thus addressed me,
come along that I may show thee a spectacle,
O thou who art a captive in the bonds of desire.

sirous, murghoob, desirable, like several of the Arabic vocables, enumerated in pages 414, &c. Moojhe is the inflexion of the personal pronoun muen, I, with its affixed postposition e, and in this state it greatly resembles the Latin dative mihi, while moojh ko bears a similar relation to ad me, being the oblique of muen, with the postposition ko, but used indiscriminately as a dative with moojhe above. Kya-hee is a sort of neuter pronoun of kuon quis, who, like quid, quod, what, with the energetic adjunct hee: it is on the whole a curious, but very useful little vocable; in the oblique it seems to have at times kahe, but this in general is so blended with or lost in the masculine and feminine inflexion kis, that it is not an easy task to discriminate the one from the other. Kya-hee ap-

Leguee yek bargee gor e ghureeban̄ kee turuf
Jis juguh jan e tumunna suo turuh mayoos hue.

She conducted me at once towards the graves of the lowly dead, in which place the restless spirit of avarice is every way frustrated.

pears to be used as an interjection of praise, kya-hee moolk, what a charming country! the hee conferring an energy on the expression, that I have tried to preserve in, how very charming! and how truly grand! for, in fact, we shall frequently be obliged to translate this word kya, by how, in many parts of our progress through the language. Moolk e, a country, an Arabic noun, with the Persian genitive sign, called izafut, attached to it, that here exactly corresponds with our of, and is long by page 52. Room, the name which the Asiatics confer on Greece, whence, Sikundur Roomee, Alexander the Grecian, though they certainly extend it beyond the limits of that empire. Kya-hee surzumeen e Roos hue, the first, and the e of the second, have been before explained: this is a Persian feminine word, compounded of sur the head, surface,

Murquden do teen dekhla kur lugee kuhne
mojhe

Yih Sikundur hue yih Dara hue yih Kuekaoos
hue.

Having pointed out two or three tombs, she began to tell me, this is Alexander the Great, here lies Darius, and there the mighty Mede:

or here, probably, the whole; and zumeen, land, ground, &c. Sur, in composition, perhaps confers some kind of precedence or superiority on the compound; whence I would consider zumeen, as the object of tillage, culture, &c. sur-zumeen, that of government or philosophy, as a kingdom, climate, &c. Roos, the Oriental name of Russia, which though till lately little known in Europe as a great empire, has long held an elevated rank in the annals of Asia; for indeed this Roos, Roosee, must be the country or people we now call Russia, &c. Hue is the irregular auxiliary in the present tense of the indicative, and answering to the Latin est, is, the infinitive of which, hona, greatly resembles esse, to be. Gur, if, contracted from the Persian conjunction ugur. Mojussur is an Arabic

Poochh to in se ki jah o muknut e dooniya se aj Koochh bhee conke sath ghuer uz husrut o uf-soos hue.

Well, ask of these, whether at present even any part of the magnificence and splendour of their worldly possessions be left with them, excepting their sad repentance and lasting regret.

My friend, Colonel D. T. Richardson, (whose extensive knowledge of the Oriental languages and poetic talents are far surpassed by the goodness of his heart) obliged me with the above word, much used to express attainable, procurable, &c.; with hona, it forms the very useful verb, to be got, procured, had, found, &c. Ho, the contracted aorist of hona, in the third person singular, and governed by gur; the nominative of which must either be each of the countries taken separately, or a wish to get them may be understood to ho, as a sort of optative mode: thus,—Gur (yih arzoo) mo yussur ho; could this (wish) be accomplished; and, what is equally probable, the singular aorist is compatible enough with two nominatives. To, is a translation freely versified, which I have now the pleasure of submitting to the public in his own words.

Once on a time Ambition fir'd my mind,
And to its grasp the realms around consign'd.
Behold! she urg'd, there Greece displays her charms ;
Here Russia great, amid the clang of arms.

sort of expletive indeclinable particle, but may be here rendered by then, well, truly, &c. See page 85. Kis, the inflexion of kuon or kya,* what? governed by se, with, mentioned

* Kya, what, has, like our word, various applications that use only can demonstrate. Kya is se kya cos se akhir humara dil oödas hoguya, what with this, and what with that, my spirits became dejected; but for which, if we substitute koochḥ, partly, something, the meaning is considerably altered. Muot kisee ko nuhēen chhortee kya ghureeb kya comde pur kis kis husrut se ye murte huen bu nisbut ghureebon kee, death spares no one, neither (and whether they be) the low (and or) nor the high, but with what (how much) anguish these die, compared with the poor.

There the sweet music of the lyre is found;
And here the warlike drum's inspiring sound.

above. ushrut, delight, pleasure, an Arabic noun of frequent occurrence in the Hindoo-stanee, uesh-ushrut generally expressing the luxury, dissipation, enjoyed by the rich, the idle, and the gay, while they freely gratify their several passions for wine, women, &c. Keejiye, is one of the irregularities of the active verb kurna, to do, which ought properly to be kuriye. This form may be called its impersonal, potential, precative, or optative mode, and seems, in some respects, analogous to the Latin subjunctive tenses in em and sem, which we express by might, could, would, should, &c.; but it appears to agree with the third person only, and is, on the whole, one of those peculiarities of a language which experience alone can make the learner fully master of. Consult pages 282, &c. recollecting that this strange impersonal tense, (to which ap, ko, ee, or some other agent must be understood) in all regular verbs, is formed by adding iye to the contracted infinitive: suk-iye, la-iye, rola-iye, ho-iye, ja-iye, mar-iye, chul-iye, kuh-iye: The whole assume

Regions like these the conq'ring sword invite,
And such, subdued, would every toil requite.—

ga, with little or no alteration in their meaning; whence keejiye, in the present quotation, might have been kee-jiyega, and furma-iyega, a-iyega, though this ga, like o, perhaps at times confers a future signification, maniyo, ruheiyo. Zindugee, is a Persian word expressive of life, as a state or condition, connected with the means thereof; thus, zindugee-kurna, to live well, enjoy life, is very different in its application from zindugee-katna, to spend one's days. The irregular Persian verb zeestun, to live, gives zeest, life, mere existence, the participle zindu, alive, living, assumes the gee, noted in page 394, to form the noun in question, zindu-gee. os, is the oblique case of the remote demonstrative, woh, he, that, &c. which must be governed by one or other of the postpositions, pur, men, &c. understood; os, in its remote capacity, applies to Room, and stands contrasted with eedhur, is turuf, as applicable to Roos. turuf, is an Arabic feminine noun, (pl. utraf) meaning a side, right or left, party, &c. whence turuf-dar, partial; few vocables are of greater

With that she ceas'd.—Then Wisdom forward came,
And said, Oh! captive in the bonds of fame,

utility in the Hindooostanee than this, as may be seen by referring to the adverbs of place, where, there, those ending in ward, and so on; adverting, at the same time, to the reason just assigned for its pronominal component parts appearing inflected; kis-ṭuruf, is-ṭuruf, &c. supply ko, pur, men, se, &c. Awaz-i, voice, sound, melody, a Persian feminine noun, with the iza-fut i, standing in construction with the next word ṭubl, a small drum, but which I termed a lyre, in contradistinction to the next instrument, and as more characteristic of Greece. The word is Arabic, and better known here by tublu, which seems the Persian mode of pronouncing and writing it, for they call the performer upon it, ṭublu-nuwaz: the diminutive ṭublik is also in use among the poets. Idhur, (for the measure's sake, eedhur) isturuf, on this side, is an adverb of place, pronominally compounded with dhur, some old word like the Saxon and our ther, in hither, idhur; oodhur, thither, kidhur, whither, jidhur, whithersoever.

Ah! quit Ambition's call, and with me tread
The cypress grove, where lie the lowly dead!

tidhur, thithersoever, which I have now exhibited in their relative and correlative relation to each other, and the pronouns yih, woh, kya, jo, to. See pages 76 and 107. şuda-e, a Persian-Arabic noun, feminine, which means, sound, echo, the affixed e, is the izafut i, (under the form it acquires, when attached to words ending in a vowel) that here joins suda-e with koos, the large kettle-drum, a word from the Persian, which the learner must pronounce very long, that he may not confound it with koos. Hue, having been noticed already, we come next to Sonte-hee, the inflected present participle of the verb sónna, to hear, resembling the case called absolute in Latin, and which signifies, on hearing, having heard, to which the hee gives the force of, the very moment she heard. ibrut, an Arabic feminine, signifying terror, example, &c. which I have personified also as a female, under the name of wisdom,

We court fair wisdom, that celestial maid. YOUNG.

to preserve the consistency of the feminine

There all the restless passions of mankind
Quiescent sleep, "nor leave one trace behind."

verbs that follow, which would have had an uncouth appearance with ībrut, translated death, or the king of terrors, as it certainly might have been done, and perhaps with more propriety. ībrut ke waste, occurs very often for in terrorem, and I think may occasionally stand for conscience, virtue, religion, death, &c. as monitors to mankind; for I do not yet know one good common word to express what we mean by conscience, so little are the natives apparently acquainted with this monitory guard on their actions. Yih, this, and though rendered thus in the translation, we need not enlarge on it now. Bolee, is the preterite feminine from bolna, to speak, say, tell, agreeing with ībrut, as the subject, and englished by thus addressed me, that is, said what follows. Yek, ek, the Persian numeral one, representing our indefinite an, a, preceding the noun tumasha, a sight, scene, sport, show, spectacle, from the Persian, whence tumashbeen, a spectator, idler, &c. Muen, I, the first personal, and applicable to the aorist a little farther on. Toojhe, has the very same relation

See Philip's son, Darius, or the Mede,
And ask, that now, from life's vain bustle freed—

to too, tuen, that moojhe, formerly explained, has to muen, and cannot therefore require any farther illustration; it is governed by the following active verb. Chul, the imp. singular of chulna, to go, come, walk, &c. in the second person, expressed by too, thou, which is just at hand. Dekhaoon, the present of the subjunctive, first person, (agreeing with the foregoing muen) from the causal verb dekhana, to show, from dekhna, to see, though this generally has dekhlna. Jo, who, is the relative after its antecedent too, neither of which can possibly be difficult in the present sentence, since the nearest verb hue, takes the relative as its nominative. Qued e, an Arabic feminine vocable, with its izafut e, to express captivity, bondage, bonds, prison; whence quedee, a prisoner, qued-khanu, a prison-house; it is now and then in use, with its original plural, thus, qued qoodood-kurna, to imprison, throw into gaol. Az, a Persian word for desire, passion, but little used, except in poetical composition; it has the genitive or possessive sign ka after it, agreeing in gender and

If aught, except remembrance sad remain,
Of former greatness and its faithless train?

number with the masculine singular. Muḥ-boos, an Arabic participle, signifying imprisoned, a captive, &c. from ḥubs, imprisonment, prison, and from this also ḥubs-khanu. Hue, the substantive verb art, to which jo is one nominative, and muḥ-boos the other; because the line could run thus, too chul jo hue muḥboos, &c. come thou who art a prisoner. Leguee, the preterite feminine of lejana, to transport, carry, with its inherent pronoun she: this verb is compounded of lena, to take, and jana, to go; the conjugation of which last it very naturally follows. *Yek bargee, instantly, a Persian adverb,

* These compound verbs in poetry, as well as in conversation, have their component parts sometimes transposed and disjoined, and might puzzle the learner where he is not put on his guard as to this circumstance, in such cases as,

Le deedu,i tur jidhur gu,e hum

Dubṛe jo the khōshk bhurgu,e hum.

SUODA.

Wherever I carried these gushing eyes of mine, I filled the puddles, that were drying up, with my tears.

resembling our at once, all at once, being composed of the numeral yek and bar, a time, turn, with its affixed particle gee, mentioned in pages 95 and 394. Gor e, is the Persian for a grave, and of the feminine gender; the e connects it with the following word, gor e ghureeban; which last seems applied much in the way as we do poor to a deceased friend, only in a more extended sense, and generally to the dead; expressed here by the humble, lowly, poor, ghureeban being the Persian plural of ghureeb, an Arabic word that means a traveller, stranger; but in India it is mostly applied to express harmless, inoffensive, quiet, humble, meek, poor, wretched; thence ghureeb-purwur-nuwaz, kind to the poor, cherishing strangers, and on the contrary, ghureeb-mar, oppressing or oppression of the poor. ujeb ghureeb, and their plurals ujaib-ghuraib, apply to any thing wonderful, rare, strange, rarities, &c. Ghoorbut, is the noun, and signifies humility, meekness, indigence, like the abstract ghureebee. Gor-istan, is a burial place, gor-kun, a grave-digger. Kee-turuf, to-wards: this has been in a great measure pointed out above under turuf, and as it is a feminine noun, the reader will recollect why kee is in that gender also. Jis, the inflexion of the relative jo, which, with a postposition understood to it, and juguḥ, a place, a word that like turuf, turuḥ, and some more, is very useful in the composition of adverbs, and on the same principles. Jan-e, is a Persian word, and generally feminine, it means life, soul, beloved, and I have here expressed it by a restless spirit, as the best calculated for the subject, since the author means to say, that a life spent in ambitious pursuits is every way frustrated in the grave. Tumuna, a feminine Arabic noun for avarice, covetousness, whence mootumunnee, covetous. Suo, a hundred, but used here, with turuḥ, to express every way, many ways, the numerals often occurring indefinitely and hyperbolically. Mayoos, Arabic participle, signifying disappointed, from yas, despair, disappointment, which may also be rendered by mayoosee. Hue, is, to which jan is the nominative, and mayoos its participial adjective. Murquden, is the Hindooostanee nominative plural of a feminine Arabic noun of place, murqud, a tomb, monument, a place of rest, from ruqd, rest, not used in this language. Do teen, numerals, expressing two, three, a few; with which murquden stands in concord plurally, but from the want of a postposition not in the oblique, though governed by the following active verb in the preterperfect participle. Dekhlakur, having shown, after showing, when she had shown, from dekhlana, noticed already under dekha-on: No part of the verb seems so useful as this participle, which, like the other sconte, above, resembles the absolute case, and produces, in many sentences, a conciseness and force that we cannot always imitate; besides elegantly suspending the meaning, through several members of a period, till it is finally closed by some other tense. Lugee, the feminine perfect of lugna, to begin, commence, get, have recourse to, fall, set about, &c. which has its inherent pronoun, lugee, she began. Kuhne, the inflected infinitive kuhna, to say, tell, governed by lugee, or the postposition ko, understood, as we sometimes hear, rone ko luga, he began to cry, or fell a-crying; though rone luga be more common, as all the infinitives here can more easily dispense with ko, in that mode, than ours can with to; but this may be partly owing to ko being synonymous with for, and na with to. Lugee kuhne, is probably an idiomatical expression, peculiar to the Oriental tongues; whence we may account for the Scriptural phrase, " And the Lord spake unto Moses saying," i. e. The Lord began to say. Mojhe, me, to me, governed by kuhne, in the dative, which has been treated at large in the foregoing pages. Yih, this, agreeing with the verb hue, is, and Sikundur a proper name. Yih Dara hue, exactly as the last member, but, for the sake of variety, I have translated it, here lies Darius, i. e. Codomanus, who was conquered by Alexander. Yih Kueka^{oos} hue, Kueka^{oos} being another Darius, the son of Hystaspes, I have changed this part of the sentence also, thus, "and there the mighty Mede." As objects of analysis, they both correspond with Yih Sikundur hue.* Poochh, is the imp. singular of poochhna, to ask, enquire; to, well, the exple-

* From the obscurity and confusion that have now shrouded the names of those once illustrious kings, it is very difficult indeed to discriminate one potentate from another, whence we shall find, that this same Kueka^{oos} is called also Nimrod, and Pharaoh, in other works; but whether with more propriety, than by the name of Darius above, I cannot determine; a circumstance, however, that so far coincides with the moral of the text, and the words of the wisest of men, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity and vexation of spirit."

tive; in se, the plural oblique of yih, this, with its governing postposition se, from, of. Ki, is a troublesome equivocal particle, that is at one time a conjunction like ut, at another it becomes a relative pronoun like qui, and, as in this place, it often appears almost to be a mere expletive to us. I imagine that it is intended to fill up the vacuity left, when the speaker pauses at the words he is about putting into another person's mouth; whence it is called the (kaf bue aniyu) explanatory ki, and may be englished by that, or whether, &c. according to circumstances, as in the following examples. Jao malee se kuhdo ki wuqt bone ka apuhoncha, go tell the gardener that the season for sowing is set in: Poochho to cos se ki too ne ub tug beej kyoon nuheen bo,a uor poochho to ki beej aj bo,ega ki nuheen, also ask him why he has not yet sown the seeds, and enquire whether he will sow the seeds to-day or not. Jah, a Persian noun; it means grandeur, pomp, dignity, and is much joined with other similar words, jah o julal, pomp and splendour; jah o hushmut, grandeur and state; aleejah, of exalted dignity; sahib jah, praeditus dignitate; sahib muknut, praeditus potestate. O, is the conjunction et, and; it occurs two times in these lines as a copulative of similar words, but requires no farther elucidation here. Muk-nut i, an Arabic word, power, potency, puissance, &c. see jah, above. Dooniya, Arabic, the world, universe; it is feminine, and indeclinable, as this will account for its not being inflected, though ending in a, by the postposition se that immediately follows it. This word is of the most frequent occurrence in Hindoostanee, with the same signification nearly that world has in our language, and its various derivatives preserve similar affinity. Dooniyawee, worldly; dooniya-dar, dooniya-purust, a layman, worldly, wedded to the world. Se, of from, it may be understood to all the three singular aptotes preceding it, as the Moralist wishes to inculcate, that not even the shadow of glory, nor a single vestige of all these heroes' wealth remained, except the bitter reflection, that their former power and riches were now no more, or that these were not applied to nobler purposes. Aj, hodie, jam, nunc, to-day, at present. Aj rat, and aj kee rat, to night, are, by the Hindoos, used like our word, meaning, this night; while the Moosulmans generally understand by these very words last night, and express to-night, this night, by rat ko, i. e. at night, indefinitely, vide page 207. Koochh, a pronoun like quodquam, which has apparently the same relation to ko_{ee}, qui, quisquam, that kya bears to kuon, quis, it means any, some, &c.; there are many compounds from it and ko_{ee}, that greatly resemble those formed from quis, qui, in Latin. Bhee, is a sort of conjunctive syllabical adjection, which means also, even, very common in the Hindoostanee, but at times, perhaps, it may seem to us a superfluous, though convenient expletive, like to, hee. con, is the oblique plural of wooh, that, governed by the compound postposition ke sath, with, along with. Ghuer uz, a Persian preposition, preceding the aptotes, husrut and ufsoos, which signifies, b-sides, except, save, &c. husrut, sorrow, regret, anguish, an Arabic noun, and agreeing in most respects with the Persian word ufsoos, repentance, &c. which in some places may be met with as an interjection. Hue, the singular auxiliary est, to which koochh is the nominative, and conke sath the governed case, like the Latin, apud illos quidnam sit, cum illis quodquam est, or perhaps, illis quicquid sit. And with this hue closes our analysis, which has been considerably amplified, not only to give the scholar an opportunity of seeing how fully this can be done, with any portion of the language he may yet analyse himself, but also to allow of the insertion of several useful particulars, that were not before sufficiently discussed.

In page 393 were some observations about an ordeal, which the thoughtless pupil has probably forgotten, and may therefore refresh his memory now with a little retrospection, before we proceed one step farther.

The prosaic exercise, mentioned in page 420, will form as good a theme as any for our etymological essay; the reader will therefore commence, and go regularly through the whole, before he attempts to compare it with my efforts below, which have been confined, as his must be, rather to a deduction of derivatives and compounds, than to a regular grammatical analysis, as we have already had enough of mere construction, in various parts of this Work.

Juwān-ee, youth, from juwan, young, juvenis, giovanee, yeong, jong, iong, in several tongues; ueyam, season, days, the plural of yuom, a day; peer-ee, old-age; a-ee, the fem. of aya, came, hath come; khizan, seems a participial word to express falling, fall, viz. autumn; ugur, gur, if, probably from gurdeedun, to revolve, pass, and formed as our if is from give, gif, according to the ingenious reasoning of Horne Tooke in his philological works, which deserve the serious attention of every scholar; hosh-yar, attentive, from hosh, senses, and yar, for which mund is also used, and ee may be added to both, hosh-yar-ee, mind-ful-ness; gosh, ear, whence gosh-u, a corner, khur-gosh, a hare, ass-eared, gosh-goo-zar, whispering, and many others; gosh-bu-gosh, cheek-by-jowl; goshi-jan, the ear of the soul, savours too much of materialism for our ears, though we do not scruple to talk of the mind's eye, perhaps from this organ being deemed the spy-glass or mirror of the soul, whence she looks abroad, or may be reflected with more animation than by any other medium, for one glance of the eye will often express unutterable things, and shed light on a countenance, in other respects, of a dreary complexion; pund, counsel, whence pum-namu, ethics; ghuflut, inattention, an Arabic word of the form zurbut, whence ghafil (zarib), inattentive, tughafoul (tużarōb), affecting indifference, and any others with which the reader may meet in his studies, having the radical letters gh f and l, such as ghuffal, ghu-feel, moatughafil, &c.; yih wuqt, this time, in the nominative, instead of is wuqt ko, the accusative of the verb jan, consider; uoqat, times, life, is the Arabic plural of wuqt, like those in page 418, and wulud, offspring, uolad, race, with many more of this form; ghuneemut (zurreebut), plunder, gain, blessing, from ghuneem (zurreeb), enemy, foe; ikhtiyar* (iztirab) choice, power, from the root khar (zurb), he was well, whence khuer (zurib), well, khueriyut (zurreebut), welfare, and mookhtar (moozturub), free, absolute, &c.; moo'e scofued, the inverted form requiring the izafat e, which scofued moo, white hair, would not, by page 68; moo-miyan, hair or slender-waisted, moo-shigaf-ee, hair splitter, -ing, may yet appear, also scofued-u, white lead, and scofued-ee, whiteness, &c.; puegham, message, pueghum-bur, messenger, prophet; hosukega, the third person singular masculine of the compound verb hosukna, to be able to be, to can be, in which there can now be little intricacy to the reader; yar-ee, friend-ship, in the vocative, ue, O! being understood, yaran, friends,

* This being one of the tuyleelat, stated in page 415, is given here rather as an imperfect key to the rest, than an accurate account of it even, and the same difficulty will occur wherever a ee oo w uo y are met with, as in the root khar above.

in common use for my lads! &c.; yawur-ee, likewise means friend-ship, help-er, aid, &c.; tumeez (tuzreeb), discrimination, distinction, from maz,* he separated, whence imtiyaz (iztirab), respect, and moamtaz (moozturub), distinguished, illustrious; moetumueyiz (mootuzurrib), sagacious, discerning; furq (zurb), difference, firaq (zirab), separation, absence, moofaruqut (moozarubut), distance, &c.; tufreeq (tuzreeb), discrimination; tufaroq (tuzaroob), difference, mootufuruq (moottuzurrub), different; siyuh, siyah, black, dark, siyah-ee, blackness, ink; gurd-ish, turning, revolution; gird, gurd, gurdee, gurdan, all denote something rotary, like gird-ab, a whirlpool or water, gird-bad, a whirlwind, sur-gurdan, a vertigo, shub-gurd, a night-watch or patrole; luel o nuhar, night and day, Arabic words often introduced in Hindooostanee poetry; ek-san, uniform; umul (zurb), act, amil (zarib), actor, muumool (muza-roob), habit, mo'amulut (moza-rubut), transaction; the plural mo'amulat, is used, though in the singular; this, and many others in this form, drop the final t entirely, whence moōamulu, &c.; īlm (zirb), knowledge, âlim (zarib), knowing, mūloom (muzroob), known, yleem (zureeb), omniscient, tūleem (tuzreeb), teaching, moūllim (muzurrib), teacher, moōullum (muzurrub), taught, mootūllim (mootuzurrib), a pupil, tūseel (tuzreeb), acquisition, from hoōsool (zoroob), gain, hāsil (zarib), advantage, mūhsool (muzroob), collection, tax, moōhūsil (muzurrib), collector, dunner; admee, properly adum-ee, a man, from Adum, Adam; murdi adumee, a gentleman, is in great use among the Hindoostanees, though the derivation be a little obscure; isee, is yihee, this very, inflected; wuqar (zurab), honour, from wuqr (zurb), the root also meaning weight, dignity, &c. whence tuqeer (tuzreeb), honouring, mowuqqur (muzurrub), honoured, and tuwuqqor (tuzurrub), &c. should they appear; âlum, world, universe, whence âlum-geer, epidemic, also a conqueror; pueda, created, made, and pueda-k. to create, pueda-iši, creation, produce, &c.; kūmal (zurab), perfection, kamil (zarib), perfect, ukmul (uzrub), very perfect; chahe ho, the aorist or subjunctive of chahna, to choose, which comes nearer our verb than the reader suspects, unless he recollects that h and s are sometimes interchangeable, ho is the auxiliary sign, which the aorist can take as well as the indicative ; uzeez (zureeb), dear, esteemed, from izzut (zirbut), honour, iuzaz (izrab), honouring, mouzzuz (mozurrub), honoured, honourable; uor in this place implies, I think, for, because, since ; chushmi, eye, chushm-u, fountain, spectacles ; khula*iq* (zura*ib*), plural of khulq (zurb), created being, &c. khaliq (zarib), creator, mukhlooq (muzroob), creature, plural, mukhlooqat ; khwar-ee, despicable-ness, &c. perhaps connected with khar, a thorn ; na-murd, unmanly (people) ; keene, the infl. of keenu, spite, whence keenu-kush-wur-ee, spite-ful-ness, shooor-keenu, rancorous, having the spite of a camel, which generally bites the piece out ; zooban, zuban, tongue, speech, language ; zooban-ee, verbal ; zooban-duraz, long or foul-tongued, abusive ; toohmut (zorbut), calumny, ittiham (iztirab), slandering, moottuhim (mozturib), slanderous ; ghat-ee, wily, from ghat, a snare, ambush ; a very different word from ghat, a narrow pass or defile, which, by a bad military linguist, might be mistaken for each other, and thereby occasion, in critical situations, a great deal of mischief to our arms ; na-bu-kar, not for use, worthless, good for nothing, also expressed by nukaru, nikumma, useless, waste, &c.; nek-nam-ee, good-name, reputation; ḥusud (zurub) envy, ḥasid, envious, muḥsood, envied; dum, breath, dumu, asthma, dum-bund, speechless; dum is much used in composition for moment, &c. dum-i murg, at the point of death, dum bu dum, constantly; qutl was explained in page 414; moqatulut (mozarubut), carnage, is likewise in use. Nuosheerwan, &c. the names of a king, a generous man, and a hero renowned in Persian history; ta hum, or tuobhēc, nevertheless, still; nami neko, good name, the o is redundant; yad-gar, memorial, assisting the memory; ağl (zurb), ağalut (zurabut), justice, ağil, just, iştidal (iztirab), moderation, moğutudil (moğturib), moderate; sukhawut (zurabut), generosity, sukhee (zureeb) generous, but one of the most difficult tuğleelat, not easily explained here; shujaüt (zurabut) courage, shoojaü (zorab), brave; bina (zirb) foundation, banee (zarib), founder, another of the tuğleelat; juhan, the world; pa-e-dar, stable, from pa, the foot, and dar, holder; be-qurar, restless, qurar, (zurab) rest, stability; iqrar (izrab), promise; moğarrur (możurrub), certain, tuqurcor (tużrrob), certainty; tuqreer (tużreeb), declaration, mooqir (moɔzrib) declaring, affirming; ḥoṣn (zcorb), beauty, husun, huseen, (zurub, zureeb), beautiful, uḥsun (uzrub), very beautiful; tuḥseen (tużreeb), praising, beautifying, melioration; whence tuḥseeni tuluffcoz, the euphony of speech; əriżee, fleeting, from үrz, representation, &c.; muṣrooz (muzroob), represented; əriż, accident, &c.; muhw, muho, absorbed in; jumal (zurab), beauty, jumeel (zureeb), beautiful; tujummīol (tużuricob), lustre; zuwal, decay, be zuwal, in-violate; mue, wine, mue furosh, a wine merchant, ghoroor (zoroob), pride, mughroor (muzroob), proud; bud-must, intoxicated; zur-must, purse-proud; as must means drunk, lascivious, proud, &c.; hoojiyo is the future or precative of hojana, to become, resembling those noted in page 122; khoomar (zoorab), crop-sickness, from khumr (zurb), leaven, ferment, khumeer (zureeb), fermenting; mukhmoor (muzroob), drunk, and some others not much used; jooz, except, but, a sheet of paper, whence probably jmzwee, a little, few, and joozrus-ee, penetrating, parsimonious, unattentive to minutiae; dardi sur, headache, dil, heart, mind, breast, &c. whence dil-dar, a beloved object, and a vast quantity of other such compounds; aeene, inflected by kee from aeenu, a mirror; numut, manner, used here as a fem.

* Another of the tuyleelat, discussed in the last page, to aid the student mechanically through such forms, as they cannot be properly explained within the compass of a Hindooostanee grammar.

postposition; ghubar, dust, gloom, ghobar; aloodu, dusty, gloomy, dismal, dreary; jis ke, jo, or juon, who, in the dative singular; kudoorut, impurity; kisee se, the ablative of ko ee, any person.

The scholar has no doubt by this time acquired a tolerable notion of Arabic roots and their derivatives, which will help him forwards with all the rest, whether he may yet study the Arabic regularly or not, since, as a military officer merely, he never may find it so very essential as the Persian and Turkish must prove to those in civil and diplomatic situations in Asia. I hope the learner can give an English version of Hadley's Hindoostane story from the Arabic, which was introduced in the preface merely to be contrasted with his jargonic farrago, under that title, at leisure, if the reader still preserve patience enough to look at so curious a production, ungrammatical and absurd in the extreme, but one that continues, somehow or other, to be palmed on unexperienced youths annually, to a considerable amount, by men interested in keeping up the deception as long as possible. The only tolerable part of Hadley's Grammar of Jargon, as he calls it, having been purloined from my labours, I have a better right than any man to speak out and expose the imposition in the Preface to public notice, which will, I trust, at last prove effectual.

Though the materials of the present Volume be not perhaps arranged in the best possible manner, I believe they will be found so full and distinct, that any man, with adequate talents for such an office, may form from the whole a very complete course of lectures on the Hindoostanee language. If every word, with its meaning, in the foregoing pages, be diligently collected and formed into a regular vocabulary, to be reversed also at leisure, the learner will thus be in possession of a most useful collection at his first outset, without the disgusting drudgery of conning the whole by heart; and as learning the languages of the East, on the principle stated in page 62, will be attended with the best effects, the practice cannot be too frequently inculcated.

By way of winding up this Volume, I shall now present the student with a wild plaintive ode from Yuqeen, which has always been admired as the most happy of that poet's effusions.

Kya fajdu jo ghuer se wooh hum kunar hue,
 Mojh se to ubtulak woehee dar o mudar hue.
 Ek roz sueri gori ghureebon ko muen guya,
 Yuñne wuhan boozorgon ka uksur muzar hue.
 Dekha muen ek qubr pu nurgis hue surnigoon, Poochha muen ne cose ki too kyoon shurmsar
 hue?

Kahne lugee ki yar! too nurgis mojhe nujan,
 Ankhen hoon muen cosee kee yih jiska muzar
 . . . hue.

Tub muen kuha ki meree turuh chashm wa hue kyoon?

Ané ka kis ke tere tu een intizar hue?

Ashiq tha ek kafiri be ruhm pur yih shukhs, ~~Ubak~~ cosee ka is ke tueen intizar hue.

Tubse mojhe Yuqeen hoo a hae yihee ki ah!
 Ashiq ko buud murg ke bhee iztirar hue.

What doth it avail, if while she is kind to another, the same deception as before is still continued to me. One day I went to visit the mansions of the dead, where the tombs of slighted lovers abound; there I beheld a dairo-dil pensive on a grave, and I thus addressed it: Well, why art thou dejected? To this it returned, O, friend, do not thou mistake me for a narcissus, I am the eyes of his self who owns this shrine ! I then said, But why do they seem longing, like mine? whose arrival dost thou expect ? This mortal was the admirer of a relentless maid (replied the flower), and he still waits in fond expectation for her. Thence it appeared evident to me, that, alas ! a lover's soul is distracted even after his decease.

END OF VOLUME FIRST.