560 and 561 contd....

Tamil words are entered with French meanings. An important and special feature is that all pages whow only verbs and their various changes in conjugation and other grammatical forms. This shows that the author had made a special study on Tamil Literary verbs on an elaborate scale; for example, the verbs are such as and, alm, balo, ognowin, alm, balo, etc., etc., This work seems to be only a spade work and no philog logical conclusions are arrived at or indicated anywhere in the work.

 - A NOTE ON NOS. 203 AND 209 (TAMOUL)

The Manuscripts pertaining to the above two numbers are the I and II Volumes of the same Digtionary.

An interesting fact in respect of these volumes is that this Dictionary had two sets of copies each set consisting of 2 volumes. No.209 is Vel.I and it has lost its partticular copy of Vol.II, No.208 is Vol.II, but it has lost its particular copy of Vol. I. Further these two volumes are written in mutually different hand-writing.

Though it is deficient in the beginning the end is complete.

A Comparative study of Nos.213-214 (Tamoul) with 208-209 (Tamoul) may reveal more truths.

This may be a revised version of the some Rev.C.J. Boschi's French-Tamil Dictionary, described under No.216 (Tamoul). If not, it should be one which closely followed R_ev. Beschi's Dictionary with a few changes.

The dictionary contains about 1000 entries more than those of No.216 (Tamoul) above.

The Tamil Sixty-year Cycle is illustrated with the corresponding Christian Years as follows :

55

,	•	•	•	•	•	•	•	1687.
•	•	•	•	•	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•	•	1746.

Such indication of the Christian Years will be helpful to discover the original dates of th texts concerned. This aid is applicable to all texts, containing similar date.

The translation is complete, done neatly and faithfully. Dictionary and grammer go together in General Examples to constitute a Language, and the European D.e., of Foreign Languages mostly contain a supplement part a Grammer toe.

The above French Translation of OBAGBABY is a new fact and is not known hither to to the Tamil world.
