TO

THE KING.

SIR,

I HUMBLY beg leave to preſent to your Majeſty a Dictionary of the Engliſh and Hindoſtan Languages, intended to facilitate the intercourſe of nations, who, though remote from each other, have the happineſs of being united under your Majeſty's moſt auſpicious Government.

The

DEDICATION.

The ſituation of the Aſiatick powers, the naval force of Britain, ſuperior to that of any European ſtate, ſecure the permanence of this fortunate union.

The difficulty in governing thoſe diſtant, and extenſive territories (which ariſes from various cauſes) the wiſdom of the Britiſh legiſlature will by degrees ſurmount. One undoubted cauſe is the difference of language, and whoever contributes to remove that, has reaſon to hope for your Majeſty's royal protection.

That Heaven may long preſerve your Majeſty to protect and to bleſs mankind, is the earneſt prayer of,

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,
Your Majeſty's
Moſt humble
Moſt affectionate
And moſt faithful
Subject and Servant,

JOHN FERGUSSON.

PREFACE.

THE advantages which Great Britain derives from its commerce with Hindoſtan are great and important. Any attempt therefore, to facilitate and promote their intercourſe, deſerves a favourable reception from the public. To render the language of Hindoſtan familiar to the inhabitants of this country is the moſt natural and effectual means of obtaining this end. This is the object of the author in the following work—and, whatever opinion may be entertained of the execution, he flatters himſelf that the intention will meet with the public approbation.

Hindoſtan extends from Cape Comorin to Uſbeck Tartary, and from the bay of Bengal to the confines of Perſia, being nearly 2000 miles every way. Its inhabitants may be reduced to three general claſſes, 1ſt. Hindoos, 2d. Mahomedans, 3d. Strangers.———1ſt. The Hindoos are the original inhabitants of the country. They are by far the moſt numerous, being reckoned an hundred millions. They are divided into tribes, diſtinguiſhed by their deſcent and profeſſion: and theſe tribes are ſubdivided into houſes or families, diſtinguiſhed by a greater or leſs degree of ſtrictneſs in the ceremonial of their religion.———2d. The ſecond claſs is that of the Mahomedans, who have eſtabliſhed themſelves by force. They are ſuppoſed to amount to about ten millions. They conſiſt of four diſtinct tribes, Seyds, Shekhs, Patans, Moguls. The firſt two tribes are of Arabian extraction: fired with the enthuſiaſtick rage of making Proſelytes, they entered Hindoſtan, and finding a rich and fertile country in the hands of an unwarlike race, they ſettled maſters of it. They were overpowered in their turn by the Patan tribe of Tartars, who maintained their authority until vanquiſhed by Timur, and his hardy Munguls, whoſe ſucceſſors now ſway the ſceptre over this extenſive empire.——3d. The Strangers conſiſt chiefly of the different nations of Europe, who have ſettlements in Hindoſtan.

were

In this extenſive continent there are three principal languages, the Shanſcrit, the Perſick, and the Hindoſtan. The Shanſcrit is the language of the Brahmins, preſerved by them, as ſacred from the unhallowed lips of ſtrangers, as the moſt ſecret myſteries of their religion. The Perſick is confined to the court, to public treaties and negotiations, and to the learned. The Hindoſtan is the general language of the country, equally underſtood by all ranks and profeſſions of men, by the learned and ignorant, by the courtier and peaſant, and by the Hindoo and Mahomedan: it is therefore the language moſt uſeful to a ſtranger. Beſides theſe three principal languages there are ſeveral provincial ones, ſuch as the Bengala, the Urriah, the Telinga, the Malabar, &c. but while each of theſe is confined within the limits of a particular province, the Hindoſtan has a much wider range, being underſtood from the one end of this extenſive empire to the other.

A natural turn for languages, improved in the courſe of his education, rendered the acquiſition of the Hindoſtan leſs difficult to the author: but the progreſs which he made in it he owes to the advice of Mr. John Graham, then reſident at Midnapore. This gentleman early recommended the ſtudy of the language to the author, but afterwards laid him under a neceſſity of acquiring it, by employing him on ſervice in the interior parts of the province, where, for fifteen months, he was totally precluded from any converſation except that of the natives. The author cannot omit this opportunity of doing juſtice to the character of that much eſteemed friend, who is diſtinguiſhed for uncommon ability and integrity in the public ſervice, and warmth and ſincerity in his private friendſhips; but above all, for his extraordinary humanity and benevolence towards the natives.

The idea of rendering the author's knowledge of this language of ſervice to the public was originally ſuggeſted by a very worthy friend* of uncommon learning and ingenuity, who, ſurpriſed at the facility with which he ſpoke the language, repreſented to him that he could not employ his time in a manner more honourable for himſelf, more beneficial to that company which he ſerved, or more uſeful to his country in general than in compiling a dictionary of the language of Hindoſtan. The author, convinced at once of the importance and utility of ſuch a work, reſolved to attempt it, and finding his ſucceſs exceed his expectations, he determined to perſevere in the deſign: with this view, in the month of June 1770, he preſented to the court of directors of the honourable Eaſt-India company propoſals for undertaking a work of this kind, and at the ſame time a ſpecimen of the work. Both being approved of by that honourable board, the author proſecuted the work with all the induſtry and application in his power, and has now brought it the length of laying it before the public, concerning whoſe reception of it he muſt acknowledge himſelf to have no ſmall degree of ſolicitude and anxiety. The readineſs with which Sir George Colebrooke, at that time chairman, entered into his plan, deſerves the acknowledgements of the author, and diſcovers in that gentleman a liberality of ſentiment, and an inclination to promote any deſign which may tend to the advantage of the company.

* John Davidſon, Eſq; of Edinburgh, his majeſty's attorney general for Scotland: a gentleman, no leſs diſtinguiſhed, by the acuteneſs of his genius, and by the elegance of his taſte, than by his eminence in his own profeſſion.

Since the author began the following work two different Vocabularies of the Hindoſtan language have been publiſhed, but theſe are not upon a plan ſufficiently large or extenſive. If the author had formed to himſelf, while in India, the moſt diſtant idea of attempting a work of this kind, the following performance would certainly have been much larger and fuller, and in every reſpect more compleat and perfect. But ſuch as it is, he flatters himſelf it may be of the greateſt utility to gentlemen in India deſirous of acquiring a knowledge of the Hindoſtan language; and that it may afford entertainment, and even ſatisfaction to ſuch of the curious in this country as amuſe themſelves with the ſtudy of foreign languages.

The Court of Directors, when they encouraged the author to undertake the following work, recommended to him to write and ſpell the words in ſuch manner, in the Roman character, as to enable an Engliſhman, by following the ſound of the letters, to pronounce them intelligibly to a native. He has accordingly adopted this method, and has followed the ſound without imitating the orthography of the natives: for example, the word for Foot, as the natives would ſpell it, is Panu, but it is pronounced Pauw. In this way a ſtranger may not only learn to read but to pronounce without a maſter.

In executing the work, however, according to this plan, the author has met with conſiderable difficulty. It is no eaſy matter to retain an uniform manner of ſpelling where the ear is the only guide. The powers alſo of the vowels in Engliſh are ſo various that it is very difficult to avoid ambiguity in the uſe of them: To obviate this difficulty, he has been obliged in expreſſing ſome ſounds to have recourſe to dipthongs and double vowels. To vowels, dipthongs, and double vowels, he has given one fixed and invariable ſound throughout the work, of which an explication is ſubjoined.

Of

OF THE VOWELS, &c.

A, this letter has uniformly the ſound of the broad Engliſh and German A, as in the words All, Fall, Wall. Aa lengthens the ſound as Aam, Aar, Baab. Ae conveys the ſound of A in the Engliſh words, ending in Ation, as Precipitation, Donation: It is meant to give exactly the ſound of the Greek long E (η): this diphthong frequently occurs, as in the words Faeſeel, Tſhae, &c.

Ai is adopted to give the ſound of I long, as in the Engliſh Word, Fine, Ivory, Dine: thus Aia, Naia, Kaia, are wrote inſtead of (after the Engliſh manner) Iā, Niā, Kiā.

Ao, both vowels have their diſtinct ſound.

Au runs more upon the latter vowel than the Engliſh, as Auna, Jauna.

Aw ſounds exactly as in Engliſh, as Awwel.

Ay is uſed in the end of words inſtead of Aee: thus Baadſhay inſtead of Baadſhaee, to avoid the concourſe of too many vowels.

E has always the ſound of long Engliſh E, as Dena: If it divides H from a conſonant, eſpecially in the end of a word, it is mute: thus Rengeh, Haateh, &c. ſounds Rengh, Haath, the H likewiſe having a very faint ſound.

Ea is to expreſs a very long E, as in Engliſh: thus, in Dermean and ſuch words you dwell on the E.

Ee as in Engliſh. Ei has the ſound as if ſpelt ēee: thus Teinat ſounds Tēeenat, an orthography not eligible.

Eo

Eo, both vowels have their diſtinct ſound, as Heo, Heoko, Heome. Eu has the ſame ſound it has in Greek and in Engliſh, as Ieur.

Ey has the ſame ſound with ei, being moſt commonly uſed in the end of words, as Barey, Baley, inſtead of Bareee, &c.

I is uſed to convey the ſound in the Engliſh words Thin, Fin, Fit. Ia, here both vowels have their reſpective ſounds independent of one another.

Ie ſounds ee. Iu, both vowels ſound diſtinct.

O ſounds like the ſhort Engliſh O, as Kongie: we have endeavoured to give the ſound of long O by ſubjoining A, as in Noaw, Boa, or E to the conſonant immediately following it, as Bolena. Oe is not uſed. Oi, both vowels have their full and diſtinct ſound, as in Moil, Boil, Moīedan. Oo ſounds the ſame as in Engliſh. Ou, both vowels ſound diſtinct.

U has the ſame ſound which it has in the Engliſh word Uſe, except when a double conſonant follows, when it has the ſame ſound as in the word But.

U coaleſces with A and E, having, as in the Engliſh, rather the force of a conſonant, thus Dua ſounds almoſt Duwa, Hua Huwa, Guala, Jua: in the ſame manner Dhuena, Guena, Dhuwena, Guwena, &c.

Y before or after a vowel ſounds ee, between two conſonants very ſhort, and like the ſhort Engliſh Y. In the begining of words it has almoſt the ſound of hard G, with a gutteral aſpiration like gh in the Celtick language or Scotch pronunciation of the words Tough, Enough. If it is pronounced like Y in the Engliſh word Your, it will be ſufficiently near to be underſtood.

General Rules.

A vowel immediately followed by a double conſonant is always ſhort.

We may obſerve of the conſonants that they are no where mute.

Of the CONSONANTS.

B has in the Hindoſtan an invariable ſound in common with the Engliſh and other languages: it is uſed before H, the H having ſcarce any ſound, and before R as Brabar.

C is excluded in this work, S being uſed for it, before E and I and K before A, O, and U: ch, as in the word Church is of courſe rejected, and tſh uſed to ſupply its place.

D has the ſame ſound as in Engliſh: it is uſed before H in the ſame manner as B, and before Z, DZ, having nearly the ſound of Ja.

F has the ſame ſound as in the Engliſh words Fog, Fade.

G has invariably the ſound of the hard Engliſh G, as in Gag, Gallop. We expreſs the ſound which ſoft G conveys by Ja: it is uſed before H, the H being almoſt without ſound, as Ghaak, Ghazie, Ghootee. There is one exception, however, the word Moghroor, where the gh is ſounded with a ſtrong aſpiration. H is always ſounded in the begining of words the ſame as in Engliſh, but in the middle and end of words it is almoſt mute.

J, conſonant, conveys the ſound of the Engliſh ſoft G. Jh is uſed in the ſame manner as dh, &c.

K has the ſound of the Engliſh K and hard C, as in the words Caſh, Coin. K is uſed before H, Kh having the ſound of the Greek letter (χ) having excluded C. K doubles like other conſonants. We are aware that our Engliſh readers will be apt to confound the ſound of Kh with ſimple K, yet it occurs ſo frequently in this language, that we could not with propriety diſpenſe with a diſtinction. K alſo is uſed before R as Krees.

L ſounds the ſame as in the Engliſh language: words of one ſyllable begining with N and ending with L ſound nearly as if they begun and ended with L: thus Naal has a ſound nearly Laal.

M has the ſame ſound as in Engliſh.

N has the ſame ſound as in Engliſh, and in the end of the word Tſhain, is almoſt mute.

P has the ſound of the Engliſh letter. Ph ſounds almoſt H, it is uſed before R, S, and T, having a faint ſound in both laſt Caſes as, Prees, Pſiel, Ptaza.

Q ſounds harder and nearer K than the Engliſh letter.

R as in Engliſh.

S has not only the ſound of the Engliſh S but alſo that of the ſoft C. Sh has the ſound it has in the Engliſh word Huſh.

T ſounds like the Engliſh T in the begining of words. In the W is almoſt mute, as in Dh, &c. Tſh has the ſound of Ch in the word Chin. T has a faint ſound before Z, as Tzana almoſt Zana.

V has the ſound which it bears in the Engliſh word Vain, as Vakeel.

W ſounds as it does in the Engliſh word Well.

Z ſounds as in the Engliſh word Zeal.

A

OF THE

HINDOSTAN LANGUAGE.

GRAMMAR teaches us to communicate our thoughts in proper expreſſions.

Grammar is either univerſal or particular; univerſal Grammar treats of the principles common to all languages.

Particular Grammar, which is the object of our attention, treats of the prineiples of a particular language.

The HINDOSTAN has been repreſented as an irregular and anomalous language, incapable of being reduced to any ſyſtem of grammar; but the author flatters himſelf, that, in the courſe of the following work it will appear, this opinion has proceeded from a ſuperficial knowledge of the language. He at the ſame time begs leave to acquaint his readers, that he is very ſenſible, that the following treatiſe is defective and much inferior to ſuch a ſyſtem of grammar as the language is capable of, and which even he himſelf, with better opportunities, might have given.

LETTERS.

A LETTER is the leaſt and ſimpleſt part of a word.

In the Hindoſtan language there are fifty-ſix letters or ſounds, for every ſound has a particular mark; twenty of theſe letters are vowels;

and

and thirty-six conſonants. It would be vain to attempt to give an idea of the different ſounds of the vowels and conſonants by Roman letters. It may be obſerved in general, that the Hindoos have not only different characters for the different ſounds, but alſo for the different lengths of time, in which the ſounds are pronounced; thus, the long a and the ſhort a, the long e and the ſhort e, are marked by different characters. From this variety of characters every letter is confined to an uniform and invariable ſound in all words, which makes it more eaſy for a foreigner to acquire the pronunciation, nothing more being requiſite than to make himſelf maſter of the ſounds of the different letters. Hence it appears that the Indians have carried the art of expreſſing ſounds by proper characters to greater perfection than the Europeans have ever attained.

The Nagaree is the proper character of the Hindoſtan language. It is written from left to right in the ſame manner with the European. But the Perſick is the character moſt commonly uſed in this language. It is matter of vanity in India to write and ſpeak Perſick; hence even thoſe who write in the Hindoſtan language make uſe of the Perſick character.

WORDS.

A WORD conſiſts of one or more letters, and is ſignificant by itſelf.

There are in the Hindoſtan language, as in many others, nine ſorts of words.

1. Article, 2. Noun, 3. Pronoun, 4. Adjective, 5. Verb. 6. Adverb, 7. Prepoſition, 8. Conjunction, 9. Interjection. *

ARTICLE.

The ARTICLE is a word, which joined to a ſubſtantive points out the extent of its ſignification. By means of it a common name is made to ſignify an individual object. Thus the ſoldier, as directly conveys the idea of an individual, as the calling him by his proper name.

ARTICLES are of two kinds, either thoſe properly ſo called, which are never uſed but in conjunction with ſome ſubſtantive, as a and the, un and le; or the pronominal articles, as this, that, &c.

* In this work we will follow the arrangement of the elegant and ingenious grammarian Dr Lowth.

The

The Hindoſtan language is poſſeſſed only of the latter kind of articles, in this reſpect correſponding with the Latin; ehe and ooweh in the former are exactly of the ſame import with hic and ille; in the latter thus, ehe gurr ſignifies this houſe, ooweh gurr ſignifies that houſe.

Both theſe articles determine or limit the ſignification of the ſubſtantives to which they are joined; ehe determines it to be an individual thing at hand; ooweh determines it to be an individual thing at ſome diſtance.

As articles theſe words are indeclinable; as pronouns they are declinable, as we ſhall ſee when we come to treat of pronouns.

SUBSTANTIVE.

A SUBSTANTIVE is the name of a thing. The natural accidents of ſubſtantives are number and gender. Number is a natural accident of ſubſtantives, becauſe all ſubſtantives, except proper names, expreſs common things, which contain a number of individuals. Gender is a natural accident of ſubſtantives, becauſe ſubſtances are diſtinguiſhed by that quality.

NUMBER.

The Hindoſtan reſembles the generality of languages in having only two numbers, the ſingular and the plural; theſe two numbers are ſufficient to anſwer all the purpoſes of ſpeech, as whatever is ſpoken of muſt be repreſented either as one or as more than one.

The manner of forming the plural in the Hindoſtan differs according to the termination of the ſingular.

All nouns of the maſculine gender ending in a form their plural by changing a into e in the nominative and vocative, and by changing a into on in the other caſes, as Dada, grandfather, N. P. Dade, G. Dadonka, &c.

Nouns of the feminine gender in a form their plural in changing a into en in the nominative and vocative, and into on in the other caſes, as Boodiea, an old woman, Nom. Pl. Boodieen, Gen. Boodionka, &c.

Nouns of the maſculine gender in i (ee) form their plural by adding on in all the caſes, as Dandi (ee) a boatman, Nom. Pl. Dandion, Gen. Dandionka.

Nouns of the feminine gender in i (ee) form their plural by adding a in all the caſes, as Bhanji (ee) a niece, Nom. Pl. Bhanjia, Gen. Bhanjiaka. Nouns ending in u (oo) form their Plural by adding on in all the caſes, as Balu (oo) Sand, Nom. Pl. Baluon, G. Baluonka, &c. All nouns ending with a conſonant form their Plural by adding e to the Singular, as Ang, body, Nom. Pl. Angé, &c.

In vulgar language, a plural is formed for nouns relating to the human ſpecies, by the addition of the word logg (folk) to the ſingular, as Adami-logg, men-folk, inſtead of adamion, men. Awret-logg, women-folk, inſtead of awreté, woman. Lirka-logg, children-folk, inſtead of lirké, children. Sepoy-logg, ſoldier-folk, inſtead of ſepoyon, ſoldier. Reyat-logg, tenant-folk, inſtead of reyaté, tenants. Koolie-logg, labourer-folk, inſtead of koolion, labourers. Saudager-logg, merchant-folk, inſtead of ſaudagré, merchants.

GENDER.

The Hindoſtan reſembles the Engliſh, in acknowledging no diſtinction of Gender, except where nature has made it. It applies the diſtinction of maſculine and feminine only to the names of animals, all other ſubſtantives it conſiders as neuter.

The difference of Gender is generally marked in the Hindoſtan, by a difference of termination. When the maſculine ends in a, the correſponding feminine commonly ends in i (ee) as Dada, grandfather, Dadi (ee) grandmother; Betha ſon, Bethi (ee) daughter. When the maſculine ends in i (ee) the correſponding feminine ends in in, as Dhobi (ee) a waſher-man, Dhobin (een) a waſher-woman, Mali (ee) gardner, Malin (een) a female gardener; the n having a very ſoft and almoſt imperceptible ſound. The feminines of nouns ending in conſonants, have not ſo regular a variation from the maſculine. From Matr a ſcavenger, we have Matrani (ee) a female ſcavenger: from Herran, a buck, we have Herrin, a doe: from Dhaayn, a ſorcerer, we have Dhaayen, a ſorcereſs: The neuter gender comprehends all inanimate ſubſtances: in termination and inflection, it agrees with the maſculine gender.

INFLECTION.

In the ancient languages, the connexions and relations of things were expreſſed by caſes, or a variation of the termination of the ſubſtantive. In the Engliſh and moſt modern European languages, they are expreſſed by prepoſitions; in the Hindoſtan, they are expreſſed by particles, in every reſpect agreeing with our prepoſitions, except in ſituation. Inſtead of being prefixed to the word, they are ſubjoined to it, and therefore ought in propriety to be called poſtpoſitions. Thus to form the genitive, they add the poſtpoſition ka to the nominative, and to form the dative and accuſative ko, and to form the ablative ſe.

Nouns in the Hindoſtan may be ranged under four declenſions, diſtinguiſhed by a difference in the termination of the nominative ſingular, and in the manner of forming the plural.

The firſt declenſion comprehends nouns ending in a; the ſecond, nouns ending in i (ee); the third, nouns in u (oo); the fourth, nouns ending in any conſonant.

I. DECLENSION.

Nouns of the firſt declenſion end in a, and are inflected in the following manner.

EXAMPLES

Of the Neuter Gender.

Seeti (ee) A Whiſtle, Shadi (ee) Marriage.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Seeti,	A Whiſtle.	N. Seetion,	Whiſtles.
G. Seetika,	Of a Whiſtle.	G. Seetionka,	Of Whiſtles.
D. Seetiko,	To a Whiſtle.	D. Seetionko,	To Whiſtles.
A. Seeti, / Seetiko,	A Whiſtle.	A. Seetionko,	Whiſtles.
V. O Seeti,	O Whiſtle.	V. O Seetion,	O Whiſtles.
A. Seetiſe,	With, &c. a Whiſtle.	A. Seetionſe,	With, &c. Whiſtles.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Shadi,	Marriage.	N. Shadion,	Marriages.
G. Shadika,	Of Mariage.	G. Shadionka,	Of Marriages.
D. Shadiko,	To Marriage.	D. Shadionko,	To Marriages.
A. Shadi, / Shadiko,	Marriage.	A. Shadionko,	Marriages.
V. O Shadi,	O Marriage.	V. O Shadion,	O Marriages.
A. Shadiſe,	With, &c. Marriage.	A. Shadionſe,	With, &c. Marriages.

Nouns ending in y come under this Declenſion, and are inflected in the ſame manner with thoſe ending in i (ee) as Sepoy, A Soldier.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Sepoy,	A Soldier.	N. Sepoyon, Soldiers.
G. Sepoyka,	Of a Soldier.	G. Sepoyonka, Of Soldiers.
D. Sepoyko,	To a Soldier.	D. Sepoyonko, To Soldiers.
A. { Sepoy, Sepoyko,	A Soldier.	A. Sepoyonko, Soldiers.
V. O Sepoy,	O Soldier.	V. Sepoyon, O Soldiers.
A. Sepoyſe,	With, &c. a Soldier.	A. Sepoyonſe, With, &c. Soldiers.

In like manner nouns ending in ie belong to this declenſion, as Batthie, a candle, Bankie, a trumpet, and many others, which ought rather to be ſpelt without the e.

III. DECLENSION.

Nouns of the third declenſion end in u (oo) and the manner of their inflection will be ſeen from the following examples.

Example

Of the Maſculine Gender, Dakku (oo) a Robber.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Dakku,	A Robber.	N. Dakkuon, Robbers.
G. Dakkuka,	Of a Robber.	G. Dakkuonka, Of Robbers.
D. Dakkuko,	To a Robber.	D. Dakkuonko, To Robbers.
A. { Dakku, Dakkuko,	A Robber.	A. Dakkuonko, Robbers.
V. O Dakku,	O Robber.	V. Dakkuon, O Robbers.
A. Dakkuſe,	With, &c. a Robber.	A. Dakkuonſe, With, &c. Robbers.

Example

Of the Feminine Gender, Jooru (oo) a Wife.

Singular.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Jooru,	A Wife.	N. Jooruon,	Wives.
G. Jooruka,	Of a Wife.	G. Jooruonka,	Of Wives.
D. Jooruko,	To a Wife.	D. Jooruonko,	To Wives.
A. { Jooru, Jooruko,	A Wife.	A. Jooruonko,	Wives.
V. O Jooru,	O Wife.	V. O Jooruon,	O Wives.
A. Jooruſe,	With, &c. a Wife.	A. Jooruonſe,	With, &c. Wives.

EXAMPLE

Of the Neuter Gender, Abrú (oo) Honour.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Abru,	Honour.	N. Abruon,	Honours.
G. Abruka,	Of Honour.	G. Abruonka,	Of Honours.
D. Abruko,	To Honour.	D. Abruonko,	To Honours.
A. { Abru, Abruko,	Honour,	A. Abruonko,	Honours.
V. O Abru,	O Honour,	V. O Abruon,	O Honours.
A. Abruſe,	With, &c. Honour.	A. Abruonſe,	With, &c. Honours.

IV. DECLENSION.

Under the fourth declenſion are comprehended all nouns ending with any conſonant. It is evident that a declenſion ſo comprehenſive muſt conſiſt of a very great number of words; but as they are all declined in the ſame manner, a few words of each gender will be ſufficient for examples.

EXAMPLES

Of the Maſculine Gender, Khuſſeem, a Huſband.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Khuſſeem,	A Huſband.	N. Khuſſeeme,	Huſbands.
G. Khuſſeemka,	Of a Huſband.	G. Khuſſeemeka,	Of Huſbands.
D. Khuſſeemko,	To a Huſband.	D. Khuſſeemeko,	To Huſbands.
A. Khuſſeem, Khuſſeemko,	A Huſband.	A. Khuſſeemeko,	Huſbands.
V. O Khuſſeem,	O Huſband.	V. Khuſſeeme,	O Huſbands.
A. Khuſſeemſe,	With, &c. Huſband.	A. Khuſſeemeſe,	With, &c. Huſbands.

Sand, a Bull.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Sand,	A Bull.	N. Sande,	Bulls.
G. Sandka,	Of a Bull.	G. Sandeka,	Of Bulls.
D. Sandko,	To a Bull.	D. Sandeko,	To Bulls.
A. Sand, Sandko,	A Bull.	A. Sandeko,	Bulls.
V. O Sand,	O Bull.	V. O Sande,	O Bulls.
A. Sandſe	With, &c. a Bull.	A. Sandeſe,	With, &c. Bulls.

EXAMPLES

Of the Feminine Gender, Dhoolen, a Bride.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Dhoolin,	A Bride,	N. Dhooline,	Brides.
G. Dhoolinka,	Of a Bride.	G. Dhoolineka,	Of Brides.
D. Dhoolinko,	To a Bride.	D. Dhoolineko,	To Brides.
A. Dhoolin, Dhoolinko,	A Bride.	A. Dhoolineko,	Brides.
V. O Dhoolin,	O Bride.	V. O Dhooline,	O Brides.
A. Dhoolinſe,	With, &c. a Bride.	A. Dhoolineſe,	With, &c. Brides.

Begum, a Princeſs.

Singular.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Begum,	A Princeſs.	N. Begume,	Princeſſes.
G. Begumka,	Of a Princeſs.	G. Begumeka,	Of Princeſſes,
D. Begumko,	To a Princeſs.	D. Begumeko,	To Princeſſes.
A. Begum, / Begumko,	A Princeſs.	A. Begumeko,	Princeſſes.
V. O Begum,	O Princeſs.	V. O Begume,	O Princeſſes.
A. Begumſe,	With, &c. a Prin-ceſs.	A. Begumeſe,	With, &c. Prin-ceſſes.

EXAMPLES

Of the Neuter Gender, Beloor, Cryſtal.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Beloor,	Cryſtal.	N. Beloore,	Cryſtals.
G. Beloorka,	Of Cryſtal.	G. Belooreka,	Of Cryſtals.
D. Beloorko,	To Cryſtal.	D. Belooreko,	To Cryſtals.
A. Beloor, / Beloorko,	Cryſtal.	A. Belooreko,	Cryſtals.
V. O Beloor,	O Cryſtal.	V. O Beloore,	O Cryſtals,
A. Beloorſe,	With, &c. Cry-ſtal.	A. Belooreſe,	With, &c. Cry-ſtals.

Jung, War.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Jung,	War.	N. Junge,	Wars.
G. Jungka,	Of War.	G. Jungeka,	Of Wars.
D. Jungko,	To War.	D. Jungeko,	To Wars.
A. Jung, / Junko,	War.	A. Jungeko,	Wars.
V. O Jung,	O War.	V. O Jung,	O Wars.
A. Jungſe,	With, &c. War.	A. Jungeſe,	With, &c. Wars.

PRONOUN.

A PRONOUN is a word which ſupplies the place of a noun, as the name imports. By means of pronouns, two individuals quite unacquainted with one another, can carry on a converſation; which purpoſe could not be anſwered by ſubſtantive nouns.

Pronouns are of three perſons, correſponding to the three ſubjects of converſation, the ſpeaker, the party addreſſed, or ſome third object. As the ſpeaker is always the principal in reference to his own diſcourſe, and the party addreſſed the next in dignity, the pronouns denoting them are called reſpectively the pronouns of the firſt and ſecond perſons. That which denotes any third object that may happen to be the ſubject of converſation, is called the pronoun of the third perſon, to diſtinguiſh it from both the former *.

Theſe pronouns in the Hindoſtan language are My, Too, Ooweh, I, Thou, He. As the ſpeakers, the ſpoken to, and the ſpoken of may be many, theſe pronouns have plurality or number.

As different relations of theſe perſons may be talked of, they have alſo caſes, and it is curious to obſerve that in all languages, as far as I know, the perſonal pronouns are irregularly declined.

The pronouns of the firſt and ſecond Perſon do not admit of Gender, becauſe the perſons denoted by them being preſent to one another, have an opportunity of knowing each other's ſex from dreſs and other circumſtances. As the Pronoun of the third Perſon refers to an abſent object, whoſe ſex may be unknown, it admits of Gender, thus, Ooweh jatta, he goes, Oowehee jatta, ſhe goes, Ooweh jatta, it goes.

* Harris's Hermes.

PRONOUN

Of the firſt Perſon.

My, I.

Singular.		Plural.
N. My,	I.	N. Humm,	We.
G. Myka, / Merra,	Of Me.	G. Hummka, / Hummara,	Of Us.
D. Myko,	To Me.	D. Hummko,	To Us.
A. Myſko,	Me.	A. Hummaré, / Hummko,	Us.
V. O My,	O Ms.	V. O Humm,
A. Myſe,	With, &c. Me.	A. Hummſe,	From Us.

PRONOUN

Of the Second Perſon.

Too, Thou.

Singular.		Plural.
N. Too,	Thou.	N. Toom,	You, or Ye.
G. Tearra,	Of Thee.	G. Toomarra,	Of You.
D. Tooko,	To Thee.	D. Tooko,	To You.
A. Tooſko,	Thee.	A. Toomarre, / Toomko,	You.
V. O Too,	O Thou.	V. O Toom,	O Ye.
A. Tooſe,	With, &c. Thee.	A. Toomſe,	With, &c. You.

PRONOUNS

Of the Third Perſon.

Ooweh, as an Article, is indeclinable; but, as a Perſonal Pronoun it is declined in the following manner.

Ooweh, Oowehee, He, She.

Singular.

N.	Ooweh, / Oowehee,	He, She.
G.	Iſſeeka, / Ooſka,	Of Him, Of Her.
D.	Iſſeeko, / Ooſko,	To Him, To Her.
A.	Iſſeeko, / Ooſko,	Him, Her.
V.
A.	Iſſeeſe, / Ooſeeſe,	From Him, From Her.

N. Ooweh, It.
G. Oowehka, Of It.
D. Oowehko, To It.
A. Ooweh, It.
V.
A. Oowehſe, From, &c. It.

The Plural of all Genders.

N. Inne, They.
G. Inneka, Of Them.
D. Inneko, To Them.
A. Inne, Them.
V.
A. Inneſe, With, &c. Them.

Beſides theſe Perſonal Pronouns which have the nature of Subſtantives, there are ſeveral others which have the nature of Adjectives.

The Poſſeſſive Pronouns denote poſſeſſion, and are formed from the poſſeſſive caſe of the Perſonal Pronouns. Thus, Merra, my, Tearra, thy, Ooſka, his, Ooſkee, hers.

Merra, My.

Singular.

Sing.		Plural.
N. Merra,	My.	N. Hummarra,	Our.
G. Merraka,	Of My.	G. Hummarraka,	Of Our.
D. Merrako,	To My.	D. Hummarrako,	To Our.
A. Merra, Merrako,	My.	A. Hummarra,	Our.
		V. O Hummarra,	O Our.
V. O Merra,	O My.	A. Hummarraſe,	With, &c. Our.
A. Merraſe,	With, &c. My.

Tearra, Thy.

Sing.		Plural.
N. Tearra,	Thy.	N. Toommarra,	Your.
G. Tearraka,	Of Thy.	G. Toommarraka,	Of Your.
D. Tearrako,	To Thy.	D. Toommarrako,	To Your.
A. Tearra, Tearrako,	Thy.	A. Toommarrako,	Your.
		V. O Toommarra,	O Your.
V. O Tearra,	O Thy.	A. Toommarraſe,	From, &c. Your.
A. Tearraſe,	From, &c. Thy.

Ooſka, his, admits of no variation of caſe.

The three poſſeſſive pronouns are declined, with reſpect to gender, in the ſame manner with adjectives. Thus, Merra baab, my father, Merree maa, my mother, Merra tſhees, my thing; Tearra baab, thy father, Tearra maa, thy mother, Tearra tſhees, thy thing; Ooſka baab, his father, Ooſkee maa, his mother, Ooſka tſhees, his thing.

The other pronouns are ehe, this, ooweh, that, duſera, other, quoy, ſome, quoyney, none, kutſh *, any, wejo, who, koun †, who, which, keha, what, jieuquoy, whoſoever, jieukutſh, whatſoever, ſukkel, every.

Of theſe pronouns, ehe, ooweh, duſera, quoy, quoyney, wejo, koun, keha, are declinable; the reſt are indeclinable.

Ehe, This

N. Ehe, This.
G. Eeſska, Of This.
D. Eeſsko, To This.
A. Eeſsko, This.
V. Caret.
A. Eeſſe, From, &c. This.

* It may be obſerved that quoy ſignifies any, in relation to perſons, kutſh, any, in relation to things.

† Wejo ſignifies who, in a relative ſenſe, koun, who, in an interrogative ſenſe.

Ooweh, that. Vid. Ooweh, it.

Duſera, other, is declined like adjectives, of which we will treat in their proper order.

Quoy, Any.

N. Quoy, Any.
G. Kiſſeeka, Of Any.
D. Kiſſeeko, To Any.
A. Kiſſeeko, Any.
V. Caret.
A. Kiſſeeſe, From Any.

Quoney, none, is inflected by adding ney to the different inflections of quoy.

Wejo, Who, Relative.
N. Wejo, Who.
G. Wejoka, Of Whom.
D. Wejoko, To Whom.
A. Wejoko, Whom.
V. Caret.
A. Wajoſe, From, &c. Whom

Koun, Who, Which, Interrogative.
N. Koun, Who, Which.
G. Kiſska, Of Whom, of Which.
D. Kiſsko, To Whom, to Which.
A. Kiſsko, Whom, Which.
V. Caret.
A. Kiſſe, From, &c. Whom, from, &c Which.

Keha, What.

N. Keha,	What.	Alſo
G. Kehaka,	Of What.	Kaika.
D. Kehako,	To What.	Kaiko.
A. Kehako,	What.	Kaiko.
V. Caret.
A. Kehaſe,	From What.	Kaiſe.

In

In the Hindoſtan aap and aapna are two words, correſponding exactly with ſelf and own in the Engliſh. Aap, ſelf, coaleſces with the perſonal pronouns, my, too, and ooweh; apna, own, coaleſces with the poſſeſſive pronouns merra, tearra, ooſka, or iſſecka.

My aap gurr me rega, I myſelf will remain at home; Too-aap jau, Go you yourſelf; Ooweh-aap leekhta khutt, He himſelf writes the letter.

Merra-appna gorra hey, It is my own horſe; Tearra-apna kaam hey, It is your own buſineſs; Ooſka-apna lirrka beſdeha, He ſent his own child.

It will appear from theſe examples, that the uſe of theſe words is to give a peculiar force to the perſonals and poſſeſſives to which they are ſubjoined.

Aap and aapna are regularly declined like ſubſtantives and adjectives of the ſame termination.

ADJECTIVE.

An ADJECTIVE is a word joined to a ſubſtantive to expreſs its quality. It agrees with a verb in expreſſing an attribute, it differs from it in not containing any aſſertion, and in not having any reference to time.

All Adjectives in the Hindoſtan language are indeclinable in reſpect to caſe. Thus, it is,

Bala adami (ee) a good man, Bala adamika, of a good man; Bali (ee) beebi (ee) a good woman, Bali beebika, of a good woman; Bala tſhees, a good thing, Bala tſheeſka, of a good thing.

Adjectives are declinable in reſpect to number, and form their plural in the ſame manner with ſubſtantives of the ſame termination. Thus, Bala, in the ſingular, has Bale in the plural; Bari (ee) heavy, in the ſingular, has Barion in the plural.

Adjectives ending in a admit of a variation to mark the gender, as Bala betha, a good ſon, Bali (ee) aia, a good dry nurſe; Atſha adami (ee) a good man; Atſhi (ee) beebi (ee) a good woman. The variation of gender does not extend to Adjectives of any other termination.

Qualities admit of different degrees; Adjectives therefore are ſuſceptible of compariſon to expreſs theſe different degrees. When a quality is mentioned without any reference to its degree, it is then, though improperly, ſaid to be in the Poſitive degree. When the relation of ſimple exceſs or defect is expreſſed it is called the Comparative degree. The relation of the greateſt exceſs or defect is called the Superlative degree. Perhaps the moſt natural way of expreſſing theſe degrees of compariſon is by the aſſiſtance of comparative adverbs; but in many languages they are expreſſed by an alteration in the form of the Poſitive; thus, ορθος, ορθοτερος, ορθοτατος, rectus, rectior, rectiſſimus, right, righter, righteſt. In the Hindoſtan, they are expreſſed by particles prefixed to the Adjectives, which are in fact, I am apt to think, comparative adverbs; theſe are iſſoo and ſubbſoo. The comparative of all Adjectives is formed by prefixing iſſoo to the poſitive, and the ſuperlative by prefixing ſubbſoo to it. Thus, Burra, great, Iſſooburra, greater, Subbſooburra, greateſt.

VERB.

If we analize a VERB we will find it to contain an ATTRIBUTE, an ASSERTION, and TIME. Thus in the expreſſion, Ulyſſes loved Penelope, is contained an aſſertion with regard to an attribute referred to paſt time; ſo on in every complete ſentence.

Adjectives are expreſſive of the attributes of ſubſtantives as well as verbs; but they contain no aſſertion and have no reference to time.

Participles alſo are expreſſive of attributes, and farther imply time, but do not contain an aſſertion. The difference then between theſe three parts of ſpeech conſiſts in this, that a VERB implies an attribute, aſſertion, and time; that a PARTICIPLE implies an attribute and time, without an aſſertion; and that an ADJECTIVE implies an attribute, without time or an aſſertion *.

All Verbs neceſſarily imply an agent and an object acted upon. When the agent takes the lead in the ſentence and is followed by the object then the Verb is ACTIVE; when the object takes the lead and is followed by the agent, then the Verb is PASSIVE; when the agent and object coincide, then the Verb is NEUTER; as, My peearta dooſhtko, I love a friend, Myſe dooſht peiarra hey, a friend is loved by me, My ſooeta, I ſleep. The paſſive voice is formed as in Engliſh by joining the perfect participle with the various tenſes of the ſubſtantive Verb Huna, to be; as, from the perfect participle, Soona heard, is formed the paſſive voice, My ſoona hey, I am heard, My ſoona hua, I was heard, and ſo on.

* Harris's Hermes.

In Verbs are to be obſerved the number, the perſon, the tenſe, and the mode. The Hindoſtan Verbs have two numbers and three perſons. The different perſons of the ſame number are not diſtinguiſhed by any variation of the Verb in this language; for it is, My auta, I come, Too auta, thou comeſt, Ooweh auta, he comes. My hey, I am, Too hey, thou art, Ooweh hey, he is. Verbs and tenſes ending in a are changed into e in the plural number; but thoſe of any other termination do not admit of any change with the number. Thus it is, Humm aute, we come, but Humm hey, we are.

All tenſes muſt refer to time, either paſt, preſent, or future. But as theſe times may be conſidered in different views, there may be a variety of tenſes to mark their different points. Thus we may conceive preſent time either as beginning to be preſent (as, I am going to ride) or as continuing to be preſent (I am riding) or as ending to be preſent (as I have ridden) in the ſame manner we may conſider paſt and future time, as beginning, as continuing, or as ending.

Accordingly we find that in all languages there are different tenſes to mark the different points of time, though ſome are much more perfect in this reſpect than others, and none at all have attained to the perfection of marking all theſe different points of time by diſtinct tenſes.

In Engliſh Verbs there are only two tenſes inflected in their terminations, the reſt are formed by the help of auxiliary Verbs. In this reſpect the Hindoſtan is more perfect than the Engliſh, having ſix tenſes diſtinguiſhed by a difference of termination. Theſe tenſes are the preſent, the imperfect, the perfect, the pluperfect, and two futures. The preſent denotes preſent time indefinitely; the imperfect denotes the continued, preſent, or paſt; the perfect denotes paſt time indefinitely; the pluperfect denotes time juſt paſt; the firſt future is applied to events that will probably happen; the ſecond future to events that will neceſſarily happen.

As the meaning of a verb may be repreſented in different ways, there muſt be a variety of moods to mark theſe. The moods in the Hindoſtan are four; the indicative, the potential, the imperative and the infinitive.

By the indicative mood ſomething is ſimply declared either to be or not to be. By the potential mood ſomething is aſſerted not as certain certain, but as poſſible, or within our power. By the imperative mood ſomething is ordered. By the infinitive mood ſomething is barely expreſſed without limitation of perſon, number, or any circumſtances. There is no variation in the Hindoſtan to mark the potential mood; it is formed by the infinitive, and the auxiliary verb ſikkna, to can, or to be able.

The auxiliary verb is inflected to form the different tenſes; thus, my leekhnaſikkta, I can read; my leekhna ſikktata, I could read.

The infinitive of all Hindoſtan verbs ends in na.

The Hindoſtan reſembles the Engliſh in joining the prepoſition ko (to) to the infinitive mood; but with the difference that it is placed after, not before that mood. Thus, feerna ko, to walk; huſſna ko, to laugh; but this prepoſition in the Hindoſtan, though a common, is not a neceſſary attendant of the infinitive.

The infinitive may be made to have the ſenſe either of a participle or a noun by adding the prepoſitions ſe from, with; me, in; kawaſteh, on account of, for, as. My purna ſe aia, I am come from reading. My feerna ſe heyran hey, I am weary with walking. My leerna me zukhmee paia, I received a wound in battle. Ooweh notſhna me girrpurra, He fell in the dance. My mulook ute ſoudagree kurrna kawaſteh aia, I am come into the country on account of trading.

Hindoſtan verbs may be reduced to two conjugations, diſtinguiſhed by the manner of forming the perfect and pluperfect tenſes. The firſt conjugation conſiſts of the verbs ending in auna. The ſecond comprehends the verbs of all other terminations.

We will firſt inflect the auxiliary verb ſikkna, to be able, as other verbs cannot be inflected without it, and the verb huna, to be; and then give an example or two of each conjugation.

CONJUGATION I.

The firſt conjugation conſiſts of verbs ending in auna, as Launa, to bring.

The principal tenſes of Hindoſtan verbs may be deduced from the preſent imperative, from which in this conjugation they are formed in the following manner.

The infinitive is formed from the imperative, by adding na, as Lau Launa. The preſent of the indicative, by changing u into ta as Lau Lauta. The perfect, by changing u into ia as Lau Laia. The firſt future, by adding nga, as Lau, Launga: and the ſecond future by adding ega, as Lau Lauega. The imperfect is formed from the preſent, by adding tha, as Lauta, Lautatha: and the pluperfect from the perfect, by adding tha, as Laia, Laiatha.

We have already explained the manner of forming the potential mood.

The preſent participle is the ſame with the preſent of the indicative: as My lauta hey, I am bringing; and the perfect participle is the ſame with the perfect of the indicative, as My laia hey, I am brought.

* The verb Huna, to grow, is regularly declined like verbs of the ſecond conjugation, vid. infra.

ADVERB.

AN ADVERB is a word joined to a verb or an adjective, to modify its ſignification Verbs and adjectives are ſuſceptible of various modifications, viz. of degree, of quality, of relation, of quantity, of time, and of place, and ſo on. There muſt therefore be a great number of adverbs to mark theſe different modifications. The Hindoſtan is abundantly ſupplied with adverbs of time, of place, of interrogation, of affirmation, and of negation: but to anſwer the purpoſe of thoſe which are expreſſive of degree *, of quality †, of relation §, of number ‡, it either makes uſe of the correſponding adjective in an adverbial ſenſe; or turns the phraſe ſo as to render the uſe of an adjective the proper manner of expreſſing it. Thus, inſtead of ſaying he is greatly diſtreſſed, they ſay, he ſuffers great diſtreſs, or he is in great diſtreſs: and this form of expreſſion may be looked upon as a general idiom of the language.

ADVERBS OF PLACE.

Kaha, where; Kahaney, no where; Heo, here; Huo, there; Beeterme, Unnderme, within; Baar, without; Kidder, whither; Idder, thither; Oodder, hither; &c.

ADVERBS OF TIME.

Abee, now; Aje, to day; Tubb, Tudd, then; Agoo, heretofore; Eteever, preſently; Baad, by and by; Ago abbtukk, not yet; Tilluk, until; Kubb, Kudd, when; Kubbee, Kuddee, ſome times, ever; Kuddyney, never; Beetſhme, in the mean time; Feer, again; Hemeeſha, always.

---

* As exceedingly, tolerably, vaſtly, greatly, &c. † As honeſtly, bravely, boldly, elegantly, ſpeedily, &c. § Leſs, equally, &c. ‡ Once, twice, &c.

Adverbs of Affirmation, Negation, and Interrogation.

Albettah, abſolutely, certainly; Hirrgees, aſſuredly; Ney, no; Na, no; Mutt *, not; Keuw, Kiſſwaſteh, wherefore, why; Kehawaſteh, for what; Kiſſtreh, how. Se, than is added to the word with which it is connected, and anſwers to the comparative degree: thus, Adamee gorraſe atſha hey, a man is better than a horſe, inſtead of Adamee gorra ſe iſſoo atſha hey.

PREPOSITION.

A Preposition is a part of ſpeech which ſerves to connect words with one another, and to ſhow the relation between them. Though the name prepoſition, implies that it is placed before the word to which it refers, yet as this name is received and underſtood in our language, we have thought it improper to alter it, though in the Hindoſtan language it ſtands after not before the word with which it is connected.

The principal uſe of prepoſitions is to connect ſubſtantives together which refuſe to unite of themſelves. A ſubſtantive readily unites with a verb or an adjective, but not with another ſubſtantive. Prepoſitions make them unite, though naturally repugnant, by expreſſing relations in which they ſtand to one another. This purpoſe was in part ſerved in the Greek and Latin languages, and ſtill is in ſome modern languages, by caſes: but in the Hindoſtan as in Engliſh, prepoſitions ſupply the place of caſes. Moſt prepoſitions ſeem to have originally expreſſed the relation of place, and their tranſition from theſe to their figurative ſenſe, is in many caſes founded on a natural analogy †.

The prepoſitions moſt commonly uſed in the Hindoſtan, are

Ka, of.
Ko, to.
Me, in, into.
Se, from, with.
Kawaſteh, for.
Agoo, before.

* Mutt is never uſed but in conjunction with the imperative mood. Hermes 266, Lowth's Grammar 85.

† Harris's

Paſs,

Paſs, at, near.
Eeſteriff, on this ſide.
Baar, without.
Beeter, within.
Unnder, within.
Uper, above.
Per, upon.
Petſhee, after, behind.
Baad, after.
Saut, along with.
Juddſe, ſince, after.
Mokudduma, concerning.

CONJUNCTION.

A CONJUNCTION is a part of ſpeech which connects two or more ſentences into one. Prepoſitions connect words. Conjunctions connect ſentences, as, My aur too Calcuttame Jawunge, you and I will go to Calcutta; Soees ea ghariewaan bullau, call the groom or coachman; which contains two ſentences, Call the groom, Call the coachman.

In theſe examples, one may obſerve two different kinds of conjunctions, the one copulative and the other disjunctive.

The copulative conjunctions connect both the ſentences and the meanings. The disjunctive conjunctions, while they connect the ſentences, mark an oppoſition in the meaning.

The principal copulative conjunctions in the Hindoſtan are, Aur, and; Jieu, if; Eeſwaſteh, becauſe; Waſteh, for; Juſſa, as. The principal disjunctive conjunctions are, Ea, or; Ugger, but; Leckhen, although.

INTERJECTION.

INTERJECTIONS are parts of ſpeech, thrown in, without affecting the conſtruction or ſenſe of the ſentence, to expreſs the natural ſentiments and emotions of the ſpeaker. As interjections are natural ſounds, there is commonly a greater reſemblance between theſe parts of ſpeech in all languages than between any others.

There are generally different interjections to expreſs the different emotions. Thus in Hindoſtan, we have waah, to expreſs joy; oh, to expreſs ſorrow; aareh, to expreſs wonder; balareh, to expreſs admiration; baabreh, to expreſs fear; tſhee, to expreſs diſguſt; tſhoobreh, to command ſilence; and aureh, to call upon a Perſon.

OF DERIVATION.

It is an eſſential part of grammar to point out the general rules, by which a language proceeds in the formation of its derivative and compounded words. Nothing can contribute more to facilitate the acquiring of a language than this; and nothing can tend more to give an inſight into the genius and ſpirit of the language. On this account, it appears ſurpriſing, that this part of grammar ſhould be entirely overlooked by ſome of the beſt grammarians.

Subſtantives are derived from adjectives.

Abſtract ſubſtantives are formed by a natural analogy from their reſpective adjectives:

1 By adding ee: thus from Khoob, good; is derived Khoobee, goodneſs; Khraab, pernicious; Khraabee, perniciouſneſs; Sukht, ſtrong; Sukhtee, ſtrength; Surd, cold; Surdee, coldneſs, and ſo on.

2 By changing a into ey, as Bala. beneficial; Baley, benefit; Surra, rotten; Surrey, rottenneſs; Pittla, thin; Pittley, thinneſs; Yuſſa, angry; Yuſſey, anger, &c.

3 By adding kee, as Zehada, abundant; Zehadakee, abundance; Mandha, debile; Mandhakee, debility, &c.

SUBSTANTIVES are derived from SUBSTANTIVES.

ABSTRACT SUBSTANTIVES are often derived from the natural, by adding ee, as Allah, God; Allahee, deity; Dooſht, friend; Dooſhtee, friendſhip; Duſhmeen, enemy; Duſhmeenee, enmity; Noker, ſervant; Nokeree, ſervice; Yoolam, bondman; Yoolamee, bondage; Soudager, Merchant; Soudagree, Merchandize, &c.

A ſort of PERSONAL SUBSTANTIVES are ſometimes derived from the ABSTRACT, by adding ee, as Aibon, rebellion; Aibonee, rebel; Bepaar, trade; Bepaaree, trader, &c.

PERSONAL

PERSONAL NOUNS are formed from the natural ſubſtantives, to which they refer in different ways:

1. By adding daar, as Zemeen, land; Zemeendaar, landlord; Neeſhaan, ſtandard; Neeſhaandaar, ſtandard-bearer; Beeld, hoe Beeldaar, hoer or Digger, tſhokkee, ward, tſhokkee-daar, warden, Khirz, debt; Khirzdaar, debtor.

2. By adding gaar, as Goona, crime; Goonagaar, criminal; Khedmudd, duty; Khedmuddgaar, duty-man or ſervant, &c.

3. By adding waar, as Tuxeer, offence; Tuxeer-waar, offender.

4. By adding burdaar, as jahaas, ſhip, jahaas-burdaar, ſhip-maſter, Neeſhaan, ſtandard; Neeſhaan-burdaar, ſtandard-bearer; Hooka, an inſtrument for ſmoaking tobacco; Hookaburdaar*, the ſervant who has the charge of that inſtrument, &c.

5. By adding perdaar, as Hookem, order; Hookem-perdaar, orderer.

6. By adding aar, as Soona, gold; Soonaar, goldſmith; Tamba, copper; Tambaar, copperſmith; Looha, iron; Loohaar, blackſmith.

7. By adding walla. This is a very frequent formation of theſe derivative ſubſtantives, as Bandookh, muſket; Bandookh-walla, muſketeer; Bankie, trumpet; Bankie-walla, trumpeter; Jeur, oppreſſion; Jeur-walla, oppreſſor; Bieddſee, ſpear; Bieddſee-walla, ſpear-man; Panee, water; Panee-walla, water-man; and many others.

8. By adding ſee and baas. This is an uncommon formation, but inſtances of it do occur, as Sahana, a pipe; Sahanajee, piper; Dagha, a plot; Daghabaas, plotter, and ſome others.

PERSONAL SUBTSANTIVES are derived from verbs, by adding walla, as Kurrna, to make, Kurrn-walla, maker; Jeur-kurrna, to oppreſs Jeurkurrn-walla, oppreſſor, Lerna, to fight; Lern-walla, fighter; Kolena, to open, Kolen-walla, opener.

SUBSTANTIVES, that expreſs containing, are formed from their primitives by adding daan, as Kollum, pen; Kollumdaan, penner; Shey, ink, Shey-daan, inkholder; Tſha, tea, Tſha-daan, teapot.

ADJECTIVES are derived from ſubſtantives.

Adjectives are often derived from their correſponding ſubſtantives:

1. By adding ka, as Aibon, rebellion; Aibonka, rebellious; Baab, father, Baabka, paternal; Baadſha, king; Baadſhaka, regal; Balazatt, gentility; Balazatka, gentle, &c.

* The termination burdaar denotes a perſon having ſomething in cuſtody and charge,

2. By adding minnd, as Doulet, riches; Douletminnd, rich; Sulat, bravery; Sulatminnd, brave.

We ſometimes meet with derivative adjectives formed in a different manner; as, Neen, ſleep; Neen-lagga, ſleepy; Dool, duſt; Dool-lagga, duſty.

Privation and contrariety are expreſſed in this language:

1. By prefixing the particle be to ſubſtantives, adjectives, and verbs, as Abroo, dignity; Beabro, indignity; Ahebgaar, fallacious; Beahebgar inerrable; Araam-kurrna, to accommodate; Bearaam-kurrna, to diſcommode.

2. By prefixing the particle na to ſubſtantives, adjectives, and verbs, as Lazemee, decency; Na-lazemee, indecency; Lahek, becoming; Nalahek, unbecoming; Paak-kurnna, to purify; Na-paak-kurrna, to pollute.

3. By prefixing the particle yire to ſubſtantives, adjectives, and verbs, as Kubbool, confeſſion; Yire-kubbool, denial; Akkle, wiſe; Yire-Akkle, fooliſh; Hazer-huna, to attend; Yire-hazer-huna, to be out of the way.

4. By prefixing the adjective Budd, evil to ſubſtantives, adjectives and verbs, as Boa, ſmell; Budd-boa, ſtink; Bukht, lucky; Budd-bukht, unlucky; Khirz-kurrna, to ſpend; Budd-khirz-kurrna, to miſpend.

The VERBAL TERMINATION is na. Verbs are derived from ſubſtantives. Many verbs are formed from their correſponding ſubſtantives:

1. By adding na as mar, ſtroke; marna, to ſtrike; tſhel, peel, tſheelna, to peel; tſheek, taſte; tſheekna, to taſte, &c.

2. By changing the termination into na, as Huſſee, laugh; Huſſna, to laugh; Pauwee, acquiſition; Pauwna, to acquire; Gullee, fuſion; Gullna, to fuſe; Ganta, knot; Ganta, to knot, &c.

There is a formation of verbs very common in this language, and I believe peculiar to it. It is to convert the ſubſtantive into a verb by the addition of certain auxiliary verbs of general ſignification, as in the following inſtances. Mool, value; Mool-kurrna, to value; Mokoof, ceſſation; Mookoof-huna, to ceaſe; Gallee, reproach; Gallee-dena, to reproach.

Almoſt all Hindoſtan verbs are capable of being thus compounded with a ſubſtantive, but Kurrna, Jauna, Huna, Dena, and Luggauna, are moſt frequently uſed for this purpoſe.

The idiom of the language in theſe compounds, is to ſay, to give reproach, inſtead of to reproach; to make warm, inſtead of to warm; and to commit ſin, inſtead of to ſin; and ſo on. We have a ſimilar idiom in our own language, but it is not ſo general. Thus we ſay, make haſte as often as haſten.

These compound verbs are conjugated exactly in the same manner with the simple verbs of which they are compounded, the addition of the substantive not making the least variation.

VERBS are derived from VERBS.

There is a particular species of verbs in the Hindostan, for which it is difficult to find a proper name, but whose character is to express not an action, but the causing of an action; thus, Dena, to give Delauna, to cause to give.

It will occur to any person acquainted with the Greek language, that these words answer one purpose of the middle verbs of that language, which is to express the causing a thing to be done; thus, Διδασκω, I teach, Διδασκομαι, pass. I am taught, Διδασκομαι, mid. I teach myself, also, I cause to be taught. It is no small advantage in the Hindostan to have a particular species of verbs to express this particular meaning. These verbs are all of the first conjugation, and are generally formed from the corresponding verbs:

1. By adding auna to the imperative, if it end in a consonant, as Luggna, lugg, luggauna; Kurrna, kurr, kurrauna.

2. By adding launa, if the imperative end in a vowel, as Dena, de, delauna; Piena, pie, pielauna.

Some others are irregularly formed, as Kauna, kau, kelauna; Lena, le, leauna.

SYNTAX.

It is unnecessary to enter into any very particular detail in regard to Syntax. In the general rules of it, this language agrees with our own, and the other languages with which we are acquainted.

1. Every verb has its nominative either expressed or understood, with which it agrees in number, as My jatta, I go, Humm jatte, We go.

2. An active verb takes an accusative after it, as Adamiko besde, send the man.

3. A verb takes a dative after it in the same cases as in the English, as Myko khutt de, give the letter to me *.

* Nouns in this language have two accusatives, the accusative with the article is used when there is no dative in the sentence, the accusative without the article when there is a dative.

4. A ſubſtantive verb takes a ſubſtantive or adjective in the nominative caſe after it, as Ooweh hey ſepoy, he is a ſoldier; Sepoy hey ſorawer, the ſoldier is valiant.

5. One verb governs another in the infinitive, as Ooſko jauna hookem kurr, order him to go.

6. The relation of poſſeſſion is expreſſed by the genitive, as Sahebka hookem, maſter's order.

7. The adjective agrees with the ſubſtantive, as Atſha adamee, a good man, atſhee beebee, a good woman, bale gurre, good houſes.

8. When one ſubſtantive is intended to explain more fully the meaning of another, they agree in caſe, as Timurbeg futteadaar, Timur the conqueror.

In regard to arrangement, the Hindoſtan ſomewhat reſembles the Greek and Latin languages. The word governed always goes before the word that governs, and the verb is thrown into the end of the ſentence. The adjective is always placed immediately before its ſubſtantive. The perſonal pronouns commonly begin the ſentence; the relative pronouns come immediately after the ſubſtantives to which they refer. Adverbs go before the verb (ney, not, muſt be excepted, as it ſometimes follows the verb). The prepoſition always follows the word with which it is connected.
