Captive of a ruffian crew, startled at each sound I hear, shuddring at each face I view, in dread I pass the gloomy day, and weep the sleepless night away; in

E're I mourn'd a Fate so dire,
 Sorrow was an inmate here,
 Still her beams of heav'nly fire
 Hope display'd my breast to cheer,
 The gladd'ning ray she now denies,
 For dim'd is hope when freedom dies.
