Wert thou like me in life's low vale, With thee, how blest! that life I'd share: With thee I'd fly as far as gale Could waft, or swelling ocean bear. But parted by severe decree, Far different must our fortunes prove: May thine be joy! enough for me To weep and pray for him I love. To weep and pray for him I love. The pangs this foolish heart may feel, When hope must be for ever gone, No fruitless sorrow shall reveal, No sul - len murmur e - ver own, No sullen murmur e - ver own. Nor will I thro' my weary years, As a pale drooping mourner rove, While I can think my secret tears Are not forgot by Him I Love.
