TO THE EDITOR OF THE COURIER.

Sir,

I send you the enclosed Jeu-d'esprit, if possible, to your humour for insertion in your enterprising paper. You will oblige me by giving it a place.

I am yours very truly,
A SUBSCRIBER.

A VILLAGE CONTROVERSY.

A Dutch watch-mender engaged to go on board a ship to pilot her into harbour somewhat at a distance from his place of calling—his real intention was to abscond with his employers watches and amongst the number two belonging to an Artillery Man by the name of Mr. Store—Gundocor—the latter arrested him.

The watch-repairer defends himself in the following letter.

No. 1. "Master Gundocor—you pretending to put a spoke in my wheel and to stop my movements in going on board is very injurious to my works."

I have entered into engagements to keep a watch on board and to regulate the ships movements to "Shelter Bay" if you snap the main spring of my intentions—I trust you will stand to the repair of all damages—I am only to keep one watch on board and paid for the same—But here I keep two for you—a manifest advantage, it is two to one in your favor—you say I am not capable of regulating the movements of a ship—I tell you a ship as well as a watch is set in motion by machinery and the chain of comparison is as obvious as the hour hand at St. Pauls—If you put a stop to my motions I shall make a minute of the same in the log book—which may injure your works in a Court of Law—strike a caution on you and prove a key to set your conduct in future.

Having wound up the chain of my arguments—I have only to add I will not be run down.

I am at all hours yours,
PETER PENDULUM.

No. 2. Captain Hawser's letter to Mr. Gundocor Store on the same subject.

Messmate "As how I hear you without warrant of Impres have clapt a Preventer stopper on Peter Pendulum so that he cannot save tide and bear a hand on board, and have put him under hatches—These dispatches is to tell you shipmate you draw two long a yare: without proper ship papers how dare you overhaul a neutral? None of your palaver with me, or main Top bowling lingo—A land lubber like you is no better than a fresh water pirate and split my timbers if I come aboard your hawse. I'll knock in your dead lights for you—Reef out the slack of your jaws into some other hawse and ungrapple Peter, before 9 A.M. or I'll unship your bullock blocks for you.

SHIP DOLPHIN, Signed BOBSTAY HAWSER.

No. 3. Mr. Gundocor Stores answer to Capt. Hawser—Mr. Sea fifth—your pen burns like wild fire, but I do not care a fig in the pan for any of your random shots—The watch maker has conducted my watches into the chamber of the ship and I'll swear them out notwithstanding your flying Artillery—they may throw your bomb shells at at some other Battery—I don't care a quib for them—I am a match for you any day—come within my lines and I'll give you double headed shot about your breast work, and blow you from your carriage.

So level your piece at some other mark
I am,
GUNDOCOR STORE.

The Son of a Fish and the Son of a Gun having come to an engagement the village folks interfered and the parties agreed to abide the arbitration of the Country Apothecary Doctor Blister—Mr. Ledger—Dr. Methodist an itinerant preacher—Captain Wifacre, and Mr. Charles Brandy Bottle.

Here follow their several opinions.

Doctor Blister gave it as his opinion that the point at issue operates too powerfully on the parties—it is only a consumption of pen ink and paper and has a tendency to inflame their humours and exasperate the parts—that had emollients been applied in due time; and gently brought to a resumption in the Atomic of Amenity—the crudity and effervescence of acrimonious matters would have been purged away—whereas from a different treatment it is brought to an inflammatory crisis—Had the parties felt the pulse of each other, it might have drawn the teeth of contention, which is always preposable to letting of blood in such cases—He entirely disapproved of the practice of ripping up old sores which always fester and may turn to mortification in the end, and perhaps only to be cured by amputating one part or the other; the parties had used too much caustic in their recipes, which tended to produce heat in the bilious ducts and endanger the patient; the only way of properly setting this fracture was by emollient laxatives, a cooling draught and a little of the balsam of religion; which might have the happiest effects in relieving the patients.

Mr. Ledger then said—

That by examining their papers it appeared that the business had vexatiously multiplied into hostile division and the sooner a peaceable resolution was made the better, unless the parties chose to draw upon each other; the instrument thus presented should be honored at sight and a receipt in full granted clear of all demands—But that he could not insure the parties from risque, as the policy of the measure did not balance in his accounts—If they posted each other about this invoice of watches he could only enter it in his day book.

As the Parson was a man of credit and understood the due weight of such things in the scale of justice, and if he would settle a fair exchange of civilities between them—he was ready to sign, seal and deliver in the presence of witnesses.

Dr. Methodist being loudly called for by all parties, appeared like patience upon a tar barrel until he thus solemnly asseverated with an audible voice, which struck conviction to all his congregations.

"Yeaverily thou art all in the right way to be damned—Thou spawn of Judas—thou wretched reptile—thou imp of the devil, thou vile stealer of watches—be unto thee (thou hast impiously broken the 11th Commandment—Thine shall be a sweeping and grasping of teeth—oh thou miscreant you—thou shalt feel the thunderbolt of my wrath."

And thou blasphemous reprobates—thou two sacrilegious monsters—Thou shalt not take the name in vain—The waxen in wrath and will hurl thy ugly souls to the eternal pit of damnation."

By the vehemence with which the worthy parson delivered the latter part accompanied by a violent stamp, the head of the tar barrel gave way, and he got well souped in the tenacious liquid; however he was soon mounted again and continued.)

"But particularly thou, thou vile instrument of Sin and Death—thou in the Garb of—wrath—(meaning the Artillery man) Is it because thou hast left thy watches—thou shouldest also lose thy reason."

No verily I say unto you—for in chapter XXth and 16th verse of— you will find these words—"Watch, Peter, Watch and I will pray for thee"—and I say unto thee Per Pendulum give unto me these two watches and I will pray for thee all for the L—give and the L—take away so blessed be the name of the L—(as he received the watches) and may he have mercy on thy wicked and sinful souls—Amen.

Captain Wifacre said for the first time in his life he was ready to burst with sensibility arising from the divine Truth which fell from the Holy lips of Dr. Methodist.

That he must be an idiot who entertained a doubt upon the subject—His understanding never was so much enlightened in all his life—or so fully stored with ideas as by the discourse of this day—The divine wisdom which fell from lips of ballowed fire, had a very powerful effect upon his intellect; he declared he never heard any thing more to the purpose, or a clearer case in all his life, he in short found his ideas rapidly increasing in divine knowledge.

Charles Brandy Bottle, observed that the spiritual delivery of the Parson's had greatly cheered and warmed his fiber judgement, for before he heard this exhorting discourse his brain was on the racks, and he felt quite rum-ib, until the Parson had poured his spiritual coxial on his mind. His animating discourse had entirely put his stomach in order, from the qualms he first felt on the occasion; and nothing in short would give him more sincere pleasure than drinking a flowing bumper to the speedy reconciliation of all parties, with three times three.

All hands having agreed to the Parson's unanimous decision, the parties separated in full glee!!

Richard Parry, Esq. resident at Fort Marlborough.

Mr. G. I. Siddons, assistant to the resident.

Monday last, the 18th inst. the day usually observed for the commemoration of the anniversary of Her Majesty's Birth, a Royal Salute was fired from the Fort in the Morning; and in the Evening there was a grand Ball and Supper at the Government House, in honour of the day. The Country Dance began about 10 o'clock, and were maintained with vivacity till 12 o'clock when the company sat down to Supper.

The different Gateways of the Government House, and the Northern Sair Cafe were brilliantly illuminated. Stars and Feissons, with the capital C. R. were tastefully displayed in lamps of various coloured glass. [Ind. Gaz. 27th Jan.]

The Honorable Company's ships Cable Eden, Lord Durcan, City of London, Maquis Wellest, Surry, and others, remain at Saugor, as per last Mirror.

We are happy to mention, to the credit of Mr. Surcouff, that he has availed himself of the opportunity of Captain Haig, late of the Sir W. Burroughs, being sent on shore, to forward the whole of the baggage, instruments, Books, and the property of Mr. Nicholl, captured on the 26th of September last, with the ship Mangler, and detained upwards of three months, on board the Privateer; and who made his escape, in consequence of being fired by Surcouff on board the Sir William Burroughs, as more particularly noticed in our Paper of the 30th ultimo.

Although the circumstances under which Mr. Nicholl made his escape, were fair and honorable, they were such as must probably have occasioned Mr. Surcouff a good deal of irritation; yet he would now allow his feelings to interfere with what he considered to be due to propriety and a sense of right. It is but just that such instances of good conduct in an enemy should be made public.

Mrs. Smith's Ball, the last of the series of this Season, will be held To-morrow night. As it is understood that Maques will be received, a numerous and respectable assemblage of characters are expected to be present. [Asiat. Mir. 27th Jan.]

Bombay, —January 27, 1808.

A Correspondent has favoured us with some account of a ceremony, that took place on last Christmas day, in the Synagogue of the white Jews near Cochim; from which we extracted the following few sentences.

"All things being prepared in the Synagogue and the Rabbin, Elders, with the whole of the people, Male and Female, assembled and arranged, each in their allotted places; "The Dewan of the Rajah of Travancore attended by the British Resident, approached in procession and entered the Synagogue at sunset of the 25th December.—They were received by the Elders at the gate of the congregation standing up, and were led to seats, which had been prepared for them, in front of the Ark; and under the extended wings of the Cherubim.—Being seated, the service of the evening commenced.—The Chief Priest, standing before the Altar of the Lord, in the presence of the Congregation, spread forth his hands towards heaven, and with prayer and supplication the whole standing implored a blessing upon his Majesty and the King of Great Britain and Ireland.—All the people

Extra of a Letter from Seringapattam,

"On the 29th January was performed at the Seringapattam Theatre, the much admired Comedy of "the Road to Ruin."—The very able manner in which the principal characters were supported, met with unbounded applause from the Audience:—The gay, fashionable "Gold-finch," was well conceived and supported with all the humour, and vivacity necessary for the character; "John Milford," and "Harry Dornon," were uncommonly well, the latter being a first attempt far exceeded our expectations; the buxom "Widow Warren," and "Sophia Freeclove" were admirably well; former appeared a little en bon point, but "the hesitating No;" "the deep palating fight" were well exchanged for bewitching smiles, languishing looks, and "coquettish glances," that plainly shewed the gay Widow was well skilled in the Language of the Eyes.—"Silky" was well kept up; and "Sulky" appeared quite an original;—but "Old Dornon" I what shall we say of his tender anxiety; and his doating fondness when he found his Son Harry had generally paid Milford's debts! "who would not be a father!" was inimitable! We are proud to say that Goldfinch and Old Dornon would not have disgraced any Stage.

"Our Theatre, though small, is fitted up in a style of peculiar neatness, and taste; the scenery is universally admired for correct and beautiful perspective, and brightness of colouring, and entitles the Artists, and Managers to every praise.

"The Gentlemen who have thus come forward, and so happily increased the amusements of this Garrison deserve our warmest, and most hearty thanks."

BOMBAY DEATH.

On the 29th inst. after a long and painful illness, Mrs. Sarah Fraser, relict of the late Mr. Daniel Fraser.

The words of the favorite air, the King, having been previously high-wrought; were given in a high tone.

to the Resident, and to the Dewan. The Service having concluded, the Dewan of Travancore, in a few words nearly delivered, expressed for his Master, and himself, the high esteem, which was entertained, of the honor and favour conferred on them. And he said to the Elders requested, that Travancore might be permitted to wear a crown of gold, to be the Ark of the Tabernacle, upon the sacred rocks of the law. And requested further, that he himself, might be permitted, to make an offering, of a rich Chandler; to illumina the sanctum. These requests having been gratefully accepted, and suitably acknowledged; the Resident, and the Dewan, retired in the same manner, and with like Ceremonies, as had been observed, on their entrance.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BOMBAY GAZETTE.

Permit me to promulgate through the medium of your valuable Paper, the following observations on a small fell in with in the ship General Baird; should they prove of any public utility, it will afford me much gratification.

I have the honor to be,

Your most obedient Servant,
R. ELMER.

Ship General Baird, Bombay Harbour, January 19, 1808.

Remarks on a small of hard Sand and coarse Shell, lying between Pulo Cecir de Mar, and the main.

On the 26th November 1807, steering S. W. by S. Pulo Cecir de Mar bearing E. by S. 10 fathoms of fine gray sand and small shells, we suddenly at one call, found our water from twenty fathoms to twelve fathoms, when the water and/or was ordered to be ready to let go; at the next call we had shoaled to ten fathoms, when the anchor was ordered to be cast away, and the ship brought up in eight fathoms, on a bottom of coarse sand and shells. A foot as the ship was secured, the boat was hoisted out and founded all round her, the ship bearing East, at the distance of about four hundred yards, they found five fathoms, at the distance of 300 yards 4, 4½ and 4 fathoms, at about seven hundred yards 4, 4½ and 3½ fathoms, being the least water. When the ship bore North, not more than thirty yards distant, they had 26, 24, 22 fathoms, and pulling to the ship shoaled suddenly to 12, 10, and 8 fathoms. The following are the bearings taken on board the General Baird, when at anchor. Pulo Cecir de Mar E. by S. ½ S. distant six or eight miles, the Rock off the N. W. end of do. E. ½ S. the broken land off Cape St. James W. by S. ½ S. the extremes of the land from W. by N. to E. N. E. We shoaled upon the same bank in the Ardfer the 10th of January 1805, the least water at that time was seven fathoms, Pulo Cecir de Mar bearing E. by S. ½ S. distant between two and three leagues.

Latitude by account 10: 10: 33 N. Longitude from M. Greenwich 107: 45 East.

R. ELMER,

Commanding the ship Gen. Baird.

This shoal may possibly be a part of Van Holland's bank, but if it be, that shoal must extend much further to the South, and than laid down in any of the Charts.

In our Extra Gazette of the sixteenth instant we ventured on the authority of some letters from England, of as late a date as the THIRD OF SEPTEMBER, to draw some conclusions which are certainly shaken by the contents of the paper received by the Fyz Rubbance. The Extra Gazette was enabled to give thro' the kindness of our friends were only received at our paper of the twentieth was going to press. They appeared to us to have too much interest to be withheld a moment from the public. And under the necessity of prompt decision, in weighing all the circumstances with dispatch, we came to a conclusion in which we still confide. There is nothing contradictory in the battle of Friedland, a consequent assistance, or even peace, and the resumption of hostilities, occasioned by the war of moderation in France, and the determination of Austria after all her disasters not to forget that the made one among the nations of Europe, and still had some weight in the balance of power.

That the boundless ambition of Bonaparte has have driven him to some new mode of language of some new infringement of anti and acknowledged rights is not only new in this great and perhaps final trial of the new and old order of things. For we never can concede to that principle subversive of all of public as well as private morality, that a critical conjuncture can justify treachery, or that a nation that has been actually spared, is an ordinary circumstance, released from her grasp, either to the moderation or the policy that she has chosen. We soon hope to see the factory materials for the purpose to be well four or five hundred tons of iron and steel are still alive.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 3, 1807.

M. Cochrane Johnson gave notice, that on Monday he would move for a Resolution of censure on the Inspecting Field Officers, and of Lieutenant Colonels and Majors on the half-pay of his Majesty's army.

Lord Milton moved for an account of the wool imported into England since the year 1790, specifying each year.

MILITARY INQUIRY.

Mr. Calcraft moved to put a question to the General in opposition. The Adjutant-General, Mr. Maitland, explained in six weeks from the meeting of this Parliament. He wished to know whether there was any intention on the part of Ministers to continue the commission? If not he would himself move for leave to bring in a Bill for that purpose.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer replied, that the Commissioners had been applied to, to learn what further time they thought their labours would require, and a Bill was in considerable forwardness, pursuant to the answer which they had given.

General Fitzpatrick moved for an Account of the comparative Recruiting in England, Scotland, and Ireland, for the last three years, and the numbers recruited.—Agreed to.

General Fitzpatrick asked, whether it was the intention of the Secretary at War to bring forward the Bill for enabling Half-pay Officers, Officers Widows, &c. &c. to receive their Pay and Pensions at their own houses; which had been lost by the dissolution?

The Secretary at War said, that he had always approved of the object of that Bill, and that it was now in a state of great forwardness.

NAVY, ARMY, AND ORDINANCE, ESTIMATES.

The House resolved itself into a Committee of Supply. The Speaker having left the Chair.

Mr. F. Ward stated, that the Navy Estimates were, with little variation, the same as the last Estimates. He had nothing more to say, therefore, than to move the following resolution:

That 150,000 Seamen be allowed for the year 1807, including 31,400 Royal Marines.

The Secretary at War then rose and said, that he need not trouble the House any farther than moving the following Resolutions:

1st. That 113,795 effective men be allowed for the Land Forces.

2d. That £4,051,623 be allowed for the pay of these troops.

3d. That £2,609,143 be allowed for the troops in the plantations.

ORDNANCE.

Mr. Astor moved the Ordinance Estimates; they were the same as the last.

The Resolutions were put and carried.—Adjourned.

Lord Cochrane gave notice, that on Friday he would move for Copies of letters, representations, &c. from the Commanders of ships on the Rochefort station with the orders under which they acted, between March 1805, and March 1807.

A Petition was presented from the unsuccessful Candidates at Grampound, in Cornwall, stating, that the sitting Members, Mr. Cochrane Johnson and Colonel Cochrane, were not duly qualified to be elected.

BELL'S WEEKLY MESSENGER.

JUNE 21,

THE EXPEDITION.

The embarkation is completed, at the new wharf, expecting to sail immediately. The troops that will sail first will be a foreign—a second embarkation will take place immediately, consisting of the 3d Light Cavalry of the German Legion, and a troop of Horse Artillery; they will reach Canterbury on the 19th.—Several English regiments will also be embarked; amongst them will be the 7th, the 10th, and 15th regts. of Dragoons.—Sailed immediately to their destination. There are already embarked at Stralsund about 7000. Russians and Prussians and a General Ruchel, and 13,000 Swedes. The combined force of British, Russian, Prussian, and Swedish, will be upwards of 40,000 men.

Sir David Baird, General Drexhill, and Baron Alton and Rottenburgh, with an Assistant Adjutant and Quarter Master General, and General Baird's principal Staff, sail with the first division.—Lord Caithness, it is believed, will also go with the first division. The following is nearly the Staff of the Army.

Commander in Chief, Lieutenant Gen. Lord Cathcart, Life Guards; second in command, Lieutenant General Sir David Baird, 54th regiment; Major General Maquis Huntley, 12d regiment; Sir John Stewart, 74th (11th regt.) Spencer, 9th garrison battalion; Lord Page, 10th Drag. Guards; Finch, Guards; Thorne, do; Brigadier General Buresford, 88th regiment; Deputy Adjutant General, Colonel Hope, 6th regiment; Assistant ditto, Lieut. Col. Carey, Guards; Lieut. Col. Tucker, ditto, Deputy Quarter Master General, Col. Murray, ditto; Assistant ditto, Major Coffin ditto; commandant of Artillery, Colonel Harding; second in command of ditto, Lieut. Col. Cookson; chief Engineer, Captain Birch; Inspector of Hospitals, Dr. Slaper; Physicians, D. Buchanan, Morris, Dean, Banister, and Lichen; Staff Surgeons, Messrs. Nicolai, Taggart, Woolwich, Jones, Caque, Bond, Cobb, North, and Brownrigg; Purveyors, Mr. Wainwright, ditto Deputies, Messrs. Aveling, Emerson, and Mappoher; eight Apothecaries, fifty Hospital Males; Deputy Paymaster General, Captain Tucker; Military Secretary to the Commander in Chief, Major Macdonald; Deputy commissary General, Thompson; Assistant commissaries, Messrs. De Bels, Cooper, Gauntlet, Fisher, and Alexander; Provost Marshal, Bryan Cooke, Guards.

Among other corps now on the march are the 2d foot, or Queen's; the 2d Battalion of the 4th, the 2d Battalion of the 38th, the 76th, and the 2d battalion of the 50th, coming over from Ireland.

The Duke of Cambridge and Duke of Cumberland are going to Ramsgate to take leave of the German Legion. The Duke of York is expected at Chatham to take leave of the Guards. General Ludlam, who has been to review them, was splendidly entertained by the officers.

BATTLE OF FRIEDLAND.—JULY 5.

There has been so much delusion upon this subject, that we conceive it our peculiar duty to deliver our just sentiments.—We can see no reason for a system of falsehood.—It is only by viewing our danger on all its sides, and in its real colours, that we can arrive at a just comprehension of its nature and magnitude.—Delusion, indeed, may answer the purpose of a day, but truth is eternal.

It is to be commended in the nature of things that it cannot injure them.—It is evident then from all concurrent accounts, that a General Battle has been fought.—It is equally evident from the same concurrence, that the Russians have been defeated.—It is impossible to remain any doubts upon either the one head or the other.

The point of fact appears to be, that after the fall of Danzig, and the consequent reinforcement of the French line, the Russians, saw they were no longer a match for their victorious enemy.

An immediate resolution was taken to retreat, and on the 5th and following days they began to execute their purpose. To conceal the retreat of the main body, the French line was attacked at different points, and availing themselves of the confusion of the battle, the Russians began to fall back in their strongest divisions.

The skirmishing with the retreating army continued for some successive days—the Russians still fighting with the same determined courage which has ever characterized them. The French, however, appear to have prevailed, and to have broken through the Russian line in several quarters. The Russians being now taken in front and rear, found it necessary to hazard battle, and the main body appears to have blithed at Friedland with this purpose.

The battle commenced in some part of the day of the 14th. The French began the attack. The order of the battle was according to the peculiar system of Bonaparte,—that of preling upon a certain point of the enemy's line with the advantage of numbers.—The Russian centre was thus broken almost in the same moment in which it was assailed.

In the meantime the French wings, having been weakened to give the required superiority to the centre, seemed to have been repulsed and scattered.

Hence, perhaps, the conclusion of the battle. Some of these are only, it is stated, by the reports, that the French have.

The embarkation is completed, at the new wharf, expecting to sail immediately. The troops that will sail first will be a foreign—a second embarkation will take place immediately, consisting of the 3d Light Cavalry of the German Legion, and a troop of Horse Artillery; they will reach Canterbury on the 19th.—Several English regiments will also be embarked; amongst them will be the 7th, the 10th, and 15th regts. of Dragoons.—Sailed immediately to their destination. There are already embarked at Stralsund about 7000. Russians and Prussians and a General Ruchel, and 13,000 Swedes. The combined force of British, Russian, Prussian, and Swedish, will be upwards of 40,000 men.

The manner in which some of the Daily Papers have spoken of this disaster is very reprehensible. They seem to have no purpose but to deceive the public, and to divert the indignation from the late Administration. There is assuredly nothing in any of these disasters which can with any reason be imputed to either the present or the late Ministry, so that upon this point their defence is perfectly unnecessary. The allies themselves, and the allies only, must take the blame or merit of their own exclusive action. It is equally foolish as ungenerous to endeavour to convert these common calamities into party accusations. It was in the same manner that the memory of Mr. Pitt has been unjustly branded with a part of the infamy of General Mack. For our own part, we most fully acquit Lord G. Enville of the defeat at Friedland.

Let us look, however, to the statements of the above Papers, which are made with the purpose of disguising the actual disaster of the battle of Friedland.

The Russians say one have perhaps retreated, but let it be remembered, that they have retreated only to fall in upon their corps de reserve of 60,000 men which happened to be behind them, and of which they now found the want.

We would here demand in the first place who ever heard of this corps de reserve till the present moment. Is it not now brought forward for the visible purpose of popular delusion? There are two methods moreover by which this corps de reserve might have been brought to join the main army.—Why did not the corps de reserve march up to the main body rather than the main body fall back upon the corps de reserve?

In most cases the smaller body should follow the motions of the greater. Yet here an army of one hundred and fifty thousand men is represented as breaking up its encampments and marching fifty miles in a day in order to come up with its corps de reserve of 60,000 men. Added to this, that an army seldom falls back upon its corps de reserve unless under circumstances of the most absolute danger.

Let us put a case on the other hand. Suppose the Duke of Marlborough had brought us intelligence that Bonaparte and the French Army had broken up their lines on the Vistula, and were in hasty retreat towards the Rhine, with the purpose of joining the Army of Observation at Mentz,—that indeed he had been defeated in one or two battles, but that his retreat must not be imputed to these defeats, but to his desire of falling back on his reserve.—Who would be deceived by such a representation? Yet so it is,—we see the full folly of such delusions where it is our interest to see them, and are blind only where we will not see.

The simple truth, therefore, is, that General Benington has been completely defeated by the French Army; that the Prussian Army is flying, and the French pursuing, in all directions; that the King of Prussia is pushed out of his dominions, and the Emperor Napoleon advancing towards Peterburgh. What will be the event?—Peace before Christmas. Russia and Prussia will now sign any terms they can obtain.

Much has been lately said respecting the state of his Majesty's eyes, in which, we are sorry to say, no material alteration has lately taken place for the better. All that is known for certain respecting them is, that Mr. Phipps, the oculist, attends his Majesty regularly every Sunday, at Windsor. He cannot bear a strong light of any description. An object of six yards distance from him he cannot discover—but any person or thing near him he discerns as well as ever he did. As a proof of this, on Sunday evening, when he was walking through the crowd in Windsor Terrace, he discovered several individuals among the company, and spoke to them in his usual manner. No glasses can be got that can be of any service to him. He wears a hat turned up on each side, with a large brim in the front.
