L. DYDS EVENING POST.
September 14th, to September the 16th 1796.

LONDON.
Yesterday, Mr. Wapilass one of his Majesty's Messengers, and a Servant of the Marques of Bute, arrived at Lord Grenville's office with Despatches from his Excellency at the Court of Madrid.

They left Comoros on Sunday the 4th Infant, and on the Wednesday following, the Packet, was boarded by a French Privateer, the people of which took out our Messengers; but according to private Letters contained in the above Mails, it appears that the Embargo was laid in Spain on the 24th Ultimo, and not revoked when the Packet left Comoros.

Mr. SILVESTER DOUGLAS, appointed to the GOVERNMENT of the CAPE of GOOD HOPE, Lord Macartney having declined the offer.

The King of Spain sets up pretensions to the re-assertion of the Portugal Dominions.
The following are the pleas on which the Court of Madrid is said to advance its pretensions to the re-assertion of the dominions of Portugal.

I. Jure primitivis Donationis.—By right of the first deed of gift from Alphonso, King of Aragoa, who had furnished Henry the Bastard, of Lorraine, with an army to conquer Portugal, on condition of marrying his Daughter.

II. Jure Successionis.—As the right of Succession is pretended, in the law language of Spain, thence to be indefeasible.

III. Jure Posterioris Donationis.—By right of a second gift, when the Cardinal Sebastian's Brother re-delivered it to Philip 2d.
He, and his Son, Philip 3d. thence held the Crown of Portugal, till it was wrested from them by the revolution of Braganza.

OFFICIAL A. COUNTS.
ARMY OF THE SAMBRE AND MEUSE, GENERAL JOURDAN to the executive,
DIRECTORY.

Head Quarters, Schwabachfurt, 14th Fructidor, (August 31st.)

The 15th the Army was in motion, and by a forced march arrived this day at Schwein-furt, after having forced the passage of Elmanz and post at Lauterbourg.

I shall remain there until circumstances force me to fall back, or allow me to advance having no longer behind such horrible defiles as I have passed, and the power of retreating by fields, along the upper Lahn.

I am going to examine the movements of the Enemy, and you may be assured, that if circumstances permit me I shall march against them, but not in the country that I have traversed, at least without your formal order: for I shall always think it extremely dangerous to place an army in such defiles without having a large body in reserve which might protect its retreat, and keep the Inhabitants of the country in order.

As I have been seven days without being able to communicate with any body, I do not know what has passed towards Manceve or elsewhere, I have only this day received a Letter from General Moreau, of the 8th. who announces his successes on the 7th. over the Enemy.

General Brouss, who had received a dispatch from you for me, was obliged to destroy it that it might not fall into the hands of the Enemy. I think the success of General Moreau will recall Prince Charles to the Danube, and I shall strive to profit by it.

I have the honour to inform you that notwithstanding the great difficulties I have suffered in my march, I have not lost a single Piece of Artillery, that although the Army has been compelled to fight six days together in front and rear, the Troops have not suffered the smallest chagrin.

DIRECTORY.

Hamburgh, September, 4th.

I have the honor to inform you, that the Enemy passed the Mein on the 16th, and marched against Würzburg, the Garrison there being doubtless unable to remain in the Town, retired to the Citadel.

I resolved on an attack upon the 17th, as well to deliver, if possible, the Garrison of Würzburg as to endeavour to compel the Enemy to retreat.

I had in like manner formed the me to me, that they wanted to turn me on my left, I did them to the right, and I might secure Detulbach and Kitzengen their two points of retreat.

The action began at eight o'clock in the Morning, the Enemy, with a numerous Cavalry, appeared to be superior on my left wing, and threatened to cut it off, I thought it necessary to run the hazard of a charge of Cavalry, which procured me the greatest advantages.

The charge was commanded by the General of division Bonnaud, and was executed with courage; some of the Enemy's Corps were wounded, and suffered; but fresh Troops retreated, General Bonnaud was alarmed and retreated; but it became impossible to attempt a second charge, the Enemy receiving fresh Troops every instant.

I have therefore been obliged to retire, the retreat has been effected happily enough.
(Signed) JOURDAN,

Army of the Rhine, and Moselle, General Moreau to the Executive Directory.

Head Quarters at Pfulgen, Hefsen 16 Fructidor, September, 24th.

After the passage of the Lech the Army advanced by different routes, the right to Dakau the center to Bombach. We could by no means advance from that position without the greatest precaution. General Latour's Troops were behind the River, opposite Mernich; those of General Mercator were at Landshut. We expected every moment, the arrival of the re-inforcements of the Archduke Charles; he has several forces upon the Danube; among others that of Ingolstadt, the bridge of which place he commands.

had given orders to push our reconnoiring parties as far as possible, to have news of the Enemy. The result was that they possessed the bridge of Ingolstadt, and had a strong Garrison in the Town they did not occupy, Voburg; and they had been some way on the road to Ratibon, without discovering any of the Enemy.

It was natural to think that the Enemy posted in force at Landshut and Ingolstadt, would first allow us to advance towards Ra-tibon, and then harry our flank.

On the 15th. General Deffach had orders to attack the head of the bridge of Ingolstadt, and force the Enemy to cut down the bridge.

General St. Cyr, was ordered to push his out posts towards Freising, to reconnoitre.

General Froiss was to approach Munich, since the 15th. his van Guard occupied Munich and Veltensheim, in taking this position the 24th. Regiment of Dragons had charged with the greatest bravery, the Cavalry of the Enemy's van guard, and had purified them nea-ly as far as the River, taking from them 80 Horses and as many Men.

At the moment when these attacks were commenced the Enemy, who had marched all night, attacked at day break the out posts of the left wing, they refused long enough to give the Troops who had marched towards Ingolstadt, time to return, they left there only the body of Bankers under the command of General Delnos who was attacked the same Infantry, and who succeeded in repelling the Enemy.

The vanguard fell back in order, as far as Hagenbrunn and the Chapel of St. Garil.
The Troops of the main body, and the reserve being placed, they checked the efforts of the Enemy.

The Cavalry, notwithstanding the dreadful havoc made in their ranks by our Artillery, charged our batteries with light Artillery, which continued their fire with the greatest coolness though the Enemy were not 25 paces distant.

The first Regiment of Carabiniers, and the 8th. Chasseurs charged this Cavalry in front and flank with the greatest bravery. A part of them was driven into a marsh where we took about 100 Horses. Another was obliged to pass under the fire of a Battalion of the 61st. half brigade. A Battalion of the 97th. then attacked with great courage the height of the Chapel St. Garil, took a Howitzer and a Waggon, and dislodged the Enemy, who repelled on all points were obliged to retire which the Night allowed them to do, with other loss than about 500 Prisoners, but leaving the field of Battle covered with Men and Horses, as well as the route they have taken; their loss is at least 1500 men in killed wounded and prisoners.

This body consisted of those of General Latours and Mercator, ten Battalions and three Regiments of Cavalry of the Army of Wartenstein which Prince Charles had sent to check our progress. It is nearly equal to the force we had drawn from the Sambre and Meuse—we expect to see the rest arrive in a few days, when the Army of the Sambre and Meuse may easily resume the offensive.

The centre of the Army could not have any part in this action. The Officer charged to announce the attack lost his way, and came in too late for the re-inforcements to arrive in time, and the contrary winds prevented my hearing the noise of the Cannon-ade—These circumstances were very fortunate for the Enemy—A Body of 10 or 12000 men whom I could easily have detached against their rear, would have entirely dispersed them.

The Troops although inferior to the Enemy have done prodigies of valour—the Corps most distinguished are the first Regiment of Carabiniers and the 8th. Chasseurs, the 10th. half Brigades of Light Infantry, and of the line the 62d. and 97th. The light Artillery was conducted with the greatest bravery—The greatest praise is due to the Company of Citizen Morel, &c. &c.

Provisions are no longer scarce—We have taken here near 40,000 sacks of grain, hay, straw, and the ovens of the Enemy, which they were not able to destroy.

(Signed) "MOREAU."

These papers also contain Intelligence of the breaking out of a CONSPIRACY, which was designed to destroy the Directory and the Councils at PARIS, but which was diverted to an attack upon the camp at Gronelle, and the plot finally frustrated. [Detail in our next.
