ST. DENIS, in FRANCE.

On Saurday the 12th, October 1793, the members composing the Municipality of Franciade, (formerly Sr. Denis), gave the needing ciade, for programs of the carrying into execution the decree of the National Convention relative to the difference of the National Convention relative to the Most St. Denis which were to be firipped of the Sea which they contained, for the purpose of St. Denis Month of the National St. The adminishment of the workmen and others who preflect round the specific preferation, that not a feature of his contenance was altered. The shouthed specific and in the could remain the victor of Turkeinn; was discovered in such a prefet that of preferation, that not a feature of his contenance was altered. The shouthed speciators admired in the could remain the victor of Turkeinn; at they say the state of a mounty, dry, and they will not a grain in sems to defend the rights of France. This copylen, not in the leaf decayed, was in the fate of a mounty, dry, and of a clear brown colour; and perfectly corresponded with the existing portraits and medalisons of this great warrior. Upon the suggistions of several person of distinction, who were present, this mammy was entruded to the care of the celebrated Hour, keeper of the Abbey, whoptefered it in oak box, and be deposited in the little vesting of the church, where he exhibited it to the notice of the curious for more than eight months.

The tomb of the Bourasons was next opered, on the side of the substantial person of the substantial pe

Mr. Common Serjeant flated that this was adjetment against the Defendant, for an affi ment, and as direct pointer law.

Mr. Cammes Serjears fated that this was a indictment against the Defendant, for an affault upon his wife.

Mrs. Jarraet then appeared in the witnefs's box.—she is a very handsome and very general control of the profile of the control of the c vocations, which were great, though perhaps he could not explain them to others.

Mr. Mainwaring, in his charge to the Jury, exclaimed with great indignation against fach dosperous doctrines. The fair fex required our protection; but we were to protect them, not by straps and blows, but by leading them from error by our advice, and shielding them from error by our advice, and shielding them from early by a courage. Whatever might have been the case in former times, the marriage state terrainal, shift onto so faction a breach of the peace. The assult had been clearly proved, and the Defendant could not possible be acquired.—Verdict, GUILTY.

Mr. Jarrat was asked what the would do? He safured the Court that he had ever cherished his wise with great founders, and than the time of the three same. He offered to take he home again.

Mir. J. maintained that he was a safe man, and that the would never live with him more. Some time was granted for arranging a treath of the course of the same that the defendant statisfies the profecutivity, the matter will not be again heard of; but if he will not do what is reasonable, that he must be fent to Bridewell.
