ver and accompanying them; but Examinant was seized the following day with a severe attack which confined him for several days. The one who confessed the murder Baboo came in the morning, and stated to Examinant that Appa was dead. Examinant said he would go to Appa, as soon as he had taken his meal, and accordingly went to Lucherman's house. When he reached the house, he desired Appa to get up, and he went to the door. Appa said he could not then advance him any money, but would do it the following day. There were present on that occasion Appa, Lucherman, and Examinant. About one o'clock the thin Shalte came in the house and went in to the left with Appa. Lucherman remained below. The two continued alone about an hour, and on coming down the Shalte asked Appa if he should continue the following day. Appa said "yes, about twice or one o'clock." Examinant remained at Lucherman's about half an hour more, and then went home but was seized with a fever again in the evening. The following morning about eight o'clock Appa and Anna came to Examinant's lodging, and after questioning him with regard to his father, Appa observed that Lucherman was the man who would receive the money, and he would leave Bombay the following day. Appa asked Examinant would he go along with him, Examinant said his fever was upon him, but would, notwithstanding accompany him, if he, Appa, would take him or otherwise remain where he was. Appa desired Examinant to go, he said he would follow. Appa accordingly left Examinant, who proceeded about 11 o'clock to Lucherman's house, while there, being again seized with the fever, he left himself down on a Bench in the Veranda; in the mean time Anna and Appa went and watered something, which they took to the Bungalow and returned to Lucherman's house; Appa then said something to Lucherman, who went immediately to Anna. He returned in about an hour, and made some communication to Appa. They then remained at Lucherman's about half an hour more, Appa and Anna went over to the Bungalow, Anna followed them, Lucherman went next, Examinant did not join them, till Anna had arrived, accompanied by the Sumner, when he was called to by Anna to bring some fire, which having taken over Anna and Examinant smoked a cheroot, while Anna went into the Bazar to get some attendant. On his return, the whole ate the Panisette and were conversing together, when Anna got up, and taking Examinant aside, desired him to go and fetch some more fire. Examinant accordingly went to Lucherman's house for that purpose, and having remained there a short time to smoke a cheroot, and in conversation with Lucherman a while, some delay occurred; as he was returning he observed people standing in front of the house, and the trap door shut, the by standers asked Examinant what was the occasion of the noise, he said he did not know, having come over to bring fire. Examinant called out to Anna to open the door. He did so and upon Examinant's going up stairs, he saw Anna, and Appa pressing down the great Shalte with their knees; Examinant observed Baboo and Lucherman sitting imperfectly; they were, however, near the thin man, near the wall. Examinant then seeing this, immediately ran down the fire by Anna, who was standing in the outer Veranda, and descending the ladder, ran away thro' fear, without knowing what afterwards occurred; and further this Examinant said not.

Juggoba being brought in, the prisoner is asked whether he knows him, in reply he declares he never saw him before.

Q. Do you know Ragoo Shaite.

A. I do. I have seen him once or twice at Lucherman's house, when he has been called there by Appa.

Q. When you returned with the fire from Lucherman's house, did you observe a Kutlar in your pocket in the Room.

A. I did not.

Q. Did you see any money or Jewels.

A. I saw nothing of the kind.

Q. When did you first see Anna Agree.

A. I saw him for the first time, when he came with Appa to my lodging that morning, between seven and eight o'clock.

R. T. GOODWIN,
Justice of the Peace.

The prisoner when called on to make his defence relied on what he said in his examination.

The Recorder in summing up the case to the Jury made the same observations as he did in the preceding, with regard to the Jury's taking the whole of what the prisoner said in his examination into their consideration as well as that which made for him as against him.

His defence by that seemed to be that although he admitted he had been in the first instance in the Bungalow with the murderers, yet that he had left it at the moment the deed was perpetrated, being sent to Lucherman's house for fire, where he said he smoked a cheroot and had a conversation with Lucherman; the Recorder however put it to the Jury to say whether they were not of opinion that it was a false account, inasmuch as he saw him at the window of the Bungalow after he came from the fire, and inasmuch as the prisoner had that conversation with him which he relied on.

The Recorder also observed that as the prisoner stated in his examination that he saw many persons in front of the Bungalow when he passed from Lucherman's house, to it, after he had been sent for the fire, it was a circumstance against the prisoner that he did not call some of those persons to confirm that part of his story.

The Jury found the prisoner guilty and sentence of death was immediately passed on him.

Yesterday morning His Excellency the Lieutenant General the Honorable John Abercromby, in aid Staff, landed under an appropriate salute.

The following are the melancholy particulars of the Death of Captain Phelan of his Majesty's 27th Regt. of Foot, who was killed in the course of the execution of his brother Officer, who was a brave friend and gallant Soldier.

On the 24 February he went on a shooting party, with an Officer of his corps; they had proceeded but a short distance from the Camp near Gung, when an inhabitant of the country complained to them of having been robbed, & requested assistance in recovering his stolen property, and pointed out the situation occupied by the supposed thieves.—With all the assistance of the Officer, the late Officer was known to possess, he sprang forward in the pursuit, and being better mounted, soon overtook his companion, who for a time lost sight of Captain Phelan and the complainant, but followed the track and hearing a gun fired, the first sight which struck him, was his Friend and Horse both on the ground.

The Horse shot surrounded by about twenty men cutting at him in a most barbarous manner, and one of the most active in this diabolical Seng was the very villain who had aided the complainant.

The Friend instantly returned to Camp, gave the alarm and the body still breathing was rescued; this happened about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and at twelve that night Captain Phelan expired universally regretted by those who knew him.

MADRAS.—FEBRUARY 23, 1812.

This morning the Commander in Chief, SIR SAMUEL AUGHRIM, arrived at the Presidency, having inspected the Troops at the different Military Stations, during the tour which he has taken since his landing from the conquest of Java.

A Salute of 17 Guns from the Mount, at about 7 o'clock this morning, announced that he had left that Cantonment. At the Military Officers office collected about this hour at the Cenotaph. At this spot, consecrated to the memory of the noble & much loved, they awaited the arrival of their respective Chief. Every Soldier's heart was glad to behold his Commander returned from the perils of the fight, in health and spirits.—He, whose bold achievement had wrested the last Colony from the Enemy in this part of the world. In the monument before him he might see a proof that heroic deeds can never die, and that when consequences are considered, the noblest of men are not forgotten.

The Commander in Chief arrived at this place about 8 o'clock, accompanied by Colonel Hare and his Staff, the Adjutant and Quarter Master Generals, and Staff of the Army.—He was here received by Major General Weatherall and Staff, Major General Purcell, and a large body of Military Officers.—His Excellency, after the usual compliments had passed, proceeded on horseback along the Mount road, and was met near the House of Colonel Blacker, by Major General Pater, Major General Traupel, Lieutenant Colonel Barclay Town Major, the Staff of the Honorable the Governor, and the Body Guard under Lieut. Patullo. Sir George Barlow's Carriage attended, but Sir Samuel did not get into it; he proceeded on horseback followed by the whole body of Officers, the Body Guard, &c.

On arriving near the Government Garden, His Excellency entered a street formed by the Troops, consisting of H. M. 33d, 86th and 89th Regiments, the 1st Bat. 7th, 2d Bat. 16th, 2d Bat. 24th N. I. and the Volunteer Battalion; The whole commanded by Colonel Gore. The Commander in Chief was saluted by each Corps as he passed, and on his arrival at the Government Garden, he was received by the Honorable the Governor, the Hon. Sir Thomas Strange, Chief Justice, Hon. Sir F. Macnaghten, the Members of Council, and a large portion of the Gentlemen of the Honorable Company's Civil Service, and other principal Inhabitants of the Settlement.

The party sat down to breakfast about nine o'clock, and about ten His Excellency left the Government Gardens, in the Carriage of the Honorable the Governor, attended by a part of the Body Guard, amidst the congratulations and good wishes of every person present.

The Honorable the Governor gives a grand dinner this day, at which, we understand, His Excellency the Commander in Chief, will be present.

The Union Flag was hoisted at the Fort, and a Salute of 17 Guns fired from the Ramparts, when His Excellency reached the Presidency.
